But this is a terrible mistake, and it has, alas! to many proved a fatal mistake. It is not by works of righteousness that we can do, that we can in any wise secure God's saving grace, but through the blood of the Lamb, and that alone, we have abundant redemption, even the remission of all our sins. Good works, at best, by which we may approach God and find favor with him, are as a rotten plank across a river, which will surely let us down to perish in the deep waters. It will not do to depend upon good works in any wise for present or final salvation. If we do, when God has provided us a sure, safe, and glorious way of salvation, we must irremediably perish.

We are saved by grace through faith, not of works, lest any man should boast of working his way safely up to heaven. Good works are good in their place, as we have said, but they are good for nothing for purchasing pardon for the guilty. Good works must accompany our faith, in walking acceptably before God in this probationary state. But for any man to be justified in God's sight by good works is what has never been since the world began, and never can be in the economy of grace. It is God that justifieth and cleanseth from all sin, and not we ourselves. It is God's province to save, and not ours. Let us then give the more earnest heed to the only certain way to approach God, and find salvation. Let God have all the work, all the praise, while we share by faith the boundless joy! Thanks be unto God who giveth us the victory, and saves us freely and fully by grace!—Guide to Hoilness.

AFFIRMATIVE TEACHING.

Teachers are seldom justified in formally stating to their classes the objections urged against the Bible and Christian experience. It is believed by many that Dr. Chalmers's brilliant "Astronomical Discourses" suggested ten doubts for every one they removed. A gentleman recently found a questionable book on the table of a friend. He expressed great surprise. The answer was, "Our minister bitterly denounced that book last Sunday. My curiosity was excited, so I bought it." Almost all that the great mass of church-going people know of Darwin, Huxley, and others of their class, they have learned from christian teachers. We know well the reasons which these teachers would give for calling attention to the scientific and infidel objections to the truth. Nevertheless, we affirm that they have other work than to teach, even for the purpose of disproving the guesses of so-called science. Surely we can afford to wait until theories are so demonstrated we shall have neither occasion nor right to oppose them.

Too often the valiant knight of truth succeeds only in giving prominence to his hitherto unseen foe. To be fair with an opponent, his arguments must be clearly and forcibly stated. In many cases these arguments are carried away while their refutation is entirely forgotten.

A lady who had long been struggling with doubt in her efforts to answer the question, "What is truth?" went to hear a series of sermons preached by a minister of our city, on "Popular Objections to the Bible." The result was that her old objections were confirmed, and several of which she had not previouily heard, were suggested. The objections stated were strong, the refutations given were weak. The former were remembered, the latter were forgotten. What she needed was truth; of error she already had too much. Even the habit of criticising our translation and appealing to the original, or of informing immature minds that certain passages are not found in the best manuscripts, is dangerous and may be fatal. The results of the highest learning can be given without this carping criticism. No one has a right to pull down the roof which now is over a child's head, even though it be a thatched one, except he immediately replace it with a better one. Negatives are poor food for the young or old.

Teachers have better work than to advertise the devil's nostrums. The best way, as a rule, to preach down error, is to preach up truth. Fill the mind and saturate the soul with the truth of God's word, and there shall be no room for error. Seldom attack error directly; but if you do throw down the gauntlet to the devil, be sure you give him a deadly lunge. Error is a plant of such prolific growth, that the more you try to pull it up by its roots, the more you will cause them to sprout. Sow "the good seed of the kingdom" in every spot of the ground, and you will choke out and keep out error by the presence of truth. We have paid too much respect to Satan. We owe him nothing but contempt and disobedience. Let us stop abusing the devil and the Pope, and begin in good earnest to teach God's word. If that word abide in us richly, if we teach it fully, we shall have little occasion to mourn over the power of error.

Let the success of men like Moody and Varley teach us skill in using "the sword of the Spirit which is the word of God;" then shall the slain of the Lord be many. Never before has God more signally honored his own word. Never before was the Bible more bitterly opposed; never before was it so tenderly loved and widely read as now. Never before was prayer more questioned; never before was prayer more graciously answered. Truth is mighty; as God lives it will prevail. Let us believe it, teach it, and live it. Let us fill the minds of the children with the truths of God's word; and, by his blessing, new trophies to redeeming grace shall be won in every class.—Rev. R. S. Macarthur, in the Sunday-school World.

THE RE-CONVERTED MAN.

THEODORE L. CUYLER.

On a certain evening, in the olden times, a man of resolute look was sitting by the fire, amid a group of talkers, in a high priest's hall. During that day, his Master had startled him by saying to him, "When thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren." Was he not already a converted man? Was he not already a disciple of Jesus? The remark was well calculated to surprise, and to give him pain.

Perhaps, revolving the startling words in his mind, the man sits by the fire, waiting to be "sifted." Satan, the sifter, sees him there, and steals in to sift him. He comes through the lips of an impertinent serving-maid: "Thou wast also with Jesus of Galilee," sneers the garrulous girl. What an opportunity for the boastful Peter to stand up for Jesus! With craven tone, the lie sticking in his throat, he stammers out: "I know not what thou sayest." He goes out into the porch, and again the sifter sifts him. How the wheat is running away, and leaving the empty chaff!

In the porch, another maid is loitering, who no sooner sees him, than she sets the rabble upon him, by exclaiming: "This fellow was also with Jesus of Nazareth." The mob took up the jeer, and cry out: "Surely thou art also one of them; thy brogue betrayeth thee." This is too much for the poor, irritated, hounded disciple—the man who chafed so under a taunt, and with swaggering oath, he flings back the jeer: "I know not the man."

Ah, Peter, methinks thou needest! What shall keep thee from going clear to the ranks of the persecutors of that man of sorrows in the judgment hall? Stop! Judge him not too harshly. The difference between a bent tree and a broken tree is, that oue springs back to its place when the pressure is removed; but the other never rises from the dust. Peter's is a bent faith, not a broken; for no sooner does the cock-crow smite upon his ear, than in a moment, his cowed and brow-beaten loyalty to his Master leaps up, and asserts its presence in an honest outgush of blinding tears. Out into the solitudes of the garden he goeth, not to hide his sin with the rope of the suicide, but to be re-converted; to turn back again, with genuine contrition, to that Savior whom he had wronged and denied; to do once more his first works, and give afresh his heart to Jesus. And from that garden, whose deep shadows made a fit "closet" for his secret outbreak of penitential grief, the weeping man comes out an humbler, wiser, better man than he had ever been before. That baptism of tears was a needed baptism for his high apostleship. Better fitted to sympathize with the tempted; better fitted to warn the presumptuous; better calculated to deal tenderly with the erring, and every way better able to "strengthen the brethren," must the disciple have been for his melancholy lapse, and for his merciful reconversion.

But what is re-conversion? It is certainly not regeneration. The Bible gives no hint of a second, or a third, or a fourth new birth of the soul. We recognize no such thing in our spiritual experience. Re-conversion is not the awakening of the sinner for the second time. It is simply the return to God and to duty of a backsliding believer. Peter's religious character was not wholly swept from him in that sad, shameful hour of his denial of the Redeemer. Nor does any true Christian lose his faith entirely, during his seasons of spiritual declension. He is not a happy man, nor a healthy man, nor a heaven-honored man; but he is alive. As the benumbed Alpine traveller, who has foundered among the whirling snow-drifts, soon "comes to" again, when laid before the fire of the St. Bernard Hospice; so a frozen backslider may thaw out and recover under the warmth of Christ's restoring grace. It is a terrible experiment to try; a terrible risk to run. Let no man tempt God's love by trying the perilous step. Peter would probably have ended just where Judas ended, had not one been a true christian and the other an impostor. Christ prayed for Peter, that his "faith might not fail" utterly; and but for that timely intercession, he could not come forth from that garden a re-converted man.

The process through which Peter passed, during his recovery, was partially similar to the process of his first conversion. There must have been repentance deep and sincere. There must have been faith in Jesus exercised anew. The sorrows of his contrition, too, were aggravated by the recollection of his first state of grace, and of his late disgraceful fall. Now, as conversion is made up of repentance, faith, and a new obedience to God; so Peter's recovery was in every sense a re-conversion. It was a turning unto God; and differed from a first conversion in only two things; namely, the point set out from was a different point, and the distance travelled over was vastly less.

Who the reader of this paragraph may be, we do not know, but he must be a remarkable christian, if he never needed a re-conversion. Every act of disloyalty to Christ; every disgraceful lapse into sin, should call forth Peter's tears and Peter's penitence. Even without looking back for some specific, flagrant offence against christian consistency, it will do you no harm, my professing friend, to "repent and do first works" afresh. If you have grown cold in heart, and indolent in duty; if prayer is a penance, and the Lord's table an irksome formality; then you need a new conversion. If, after a searching scrutiny, you are not satisfied with your present hope, give it up. Ry all means give it up, and seek a better. Nothing would sooner bring a genuine revival into our churches, than for lukewarm, inconsistent members to come forward by platoons and abandon the worthless hope of by-gone days; and with thorough repentance, to dig down deep and lay anew their foundation on the Lord Jesus Christ. Multitudes of church members, we fear, are barely living on the memory of the religious experiences of ten or twenty years ago. John Wesley would call such a state a falling away from grace. John Owen would call it a spiritual declension. But both would agree in the remedy needed, and both would agree in the exhortation with which we close: "Remember, therefore, from whence thou art fallen, and repent and do thy first works!"—Selected by E. P. Robinson.

OUR MESSAGE.

WM. SHELDON.

We have a distinctive message which makes us a distinctive people; and that message must be delivered by the people who believe it, without waiting for its enemies to endorse it before they hear it, or without seeking to purchase their friendship by our silence.. Never ask, "Have the rulers believed?" But if the message is of God, deliver it—"cry aloud; spare not." Shall we, at this late hour, be swerved by the praise of men, or the hate of devils? Shall we now split the difference between truth and popularity, by belittleing the truth? Shall we keep back part of the price, for the purpose of purchasing the favor of men? We must deliver our great message without compromise. Be radical, but not rash; always "speaking the truth in love"—never censoriously.

Messiah is soon to assume the reins of government on our globe, and blot out sin and sorrow. This is our special message. The Life-giver is coming to obliterate death, and we must give the stirring proclamation, or the stones will cry out. Never be ashamed to show your full sympathy with this great announcement. What if some have exhibited extravagances who have been identified with the proclamation? Shall we abandon a divine message because some of its unwise and indiscreet friends have shown human weakness in its promulgation? Never! but rally to present it in its true light. We will not throw away a good article because of its bad reputation. We know its value, and will seek to rightly represent it, instead of eulogizing a worthless one because of its popular gloss.

FAITH can stand still. There are times in the christian's history when the greatest thing to do is to do nothing, and the grandest stand that can be made is to stand still; and faith is strong enough for all this. When we see how nobly, how grandly faith can act, and the blessed results that follow, we are not surprised that the inspired apostle should say of faith, that it is the gift of God. The power calmly, quietly, patiently, confidently to wait and to endure, could come from none other than the all-patient and Almighty God.—The Wayside.

The World's Crisis
AND
SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Aug. 30, 1876.

TAKE NOTICE.

All subscriptions for the "CRISIS," issued from this time forward, are at the rate of

$2.25 a year, payable IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE FREE TO ALL within the United States, the Canadas, and the British Provinces.

Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of Drafts, Bank Checks, and Postal Money-Orders, should be made payable to the Business Agent, GEO. T. ADAMS.

THOSE who send articles for the "CRISIS," should direct them to the "EDITORS OF WORLD'S CRISIS," Boston, Mass.

PLEASE READ, REMEMBER, AND ACT ACCORDINGLY.

The brethren, sisters, friends—one and all—whoever may write to this office, sending articles for insertion in the Crisis, or subscriptions for the same, notices, appointments, reports, or orders for papers, books, tracts, or anything of the kind, will confer a favor and do the right way by directing their letters in either one of the following ways:—

"EDITORS OF WORLD'S CRISIS, Boston, Mass."

"WORLD'S CRISIS, Boston, Mass.," or

GEO. T. ADAMS, Agent, Boston, Mass.

Those who send articles for the Young Pilgrim should address—

"EDITOR YOUNG PILGRIM, Boston, Mass."

In no case address letters on business connected with the papers, or office, to any of the clerks, compositors, or helps in this office.

AGENT.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

We purpose to have an Agent in attendance at the various Campmeetings to be held in New England this season, to receive sums due on the Crisis and Pilgrim. Bro. Frank Burr will receive dues for this Office at the Western meetings he may attend. We will also receive subscriptions for the Advent Times.

We hope our subscribers will make it a point to pay at the meetings, as it will be more convenient for them to do so than to send by mail, and less expensive for us than to send an Agent to the homes of our patrons.

AG'T.

BEHOLD HE COMETH.

"Behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him."—REV. 1: 7.

The coming of an absent one often becomes an event of great interest to those whose happiness and safety depend upon that coming. The approach of a friendly ship to a wrecked crew, perishing with hunger, thirst and exposure, would be a glorious event to the sufferers. The coming of a father to a lost child in the wilderness, dying with fatigue and fright, would produce indescribable delight. The coming of a skillful surgeon to a man dying from a fearful wound would be a delightful event to the sufferer and his friends. The return of a husband and father to a distressed but loving family, would be hailed with acclamations of great joy.

But the opposite experience results from the coming of persons under different circumstances. The approach of an officer to a thief produces dismay. The coming of a creditor to a poor debtor demanding his dues causes distress. The coming of a king might be joyful to his loyal subjects, while it might be overwhelmingly fearful to the disloyal.

All events are desirable or undesirable to us according to our understanding of their results, affecting our welfare and happiness. It is impossible to desire that which we esteem as detrimental to us, and as impossible not to desire that which we understand will improve our condition.

But whose coming is announced in the text? The coming of the "Alpha and Omega," "the Almighty," the one that "liveth and was dead," Jesus Christ. This coming must be his second coming, and not the first, for all "kindreds of the earth" did not "wail because of him" at his first advent. Every eye did not see him when first upon the earth, but they will at his return.

Two classes are represented by the text as beholding this coming; the class of which every eye shall see him, and "they also which persecute him." The word "also" shows that an additional, distinct class from the one first presented will see him. The second class includes all the kindreds of the earth; that is, those who are earthly, wedded to earthly interests, who seek only for earthly treasures and happiness. This class will wail because of that coming; therefore the event must injure their interests, take away their earthly treasures and destroy their worldly happiness. This class cannot therefore anticipate the great event with delight and earnest longings, but with dread will "put far away the evil day." The "evil servant" will say "where is the promise of his coming," and so hide the evidences of its nearness as to "say in his heart" my "Lord delayeth his coming." To such he will "come in a day when he looketh not for him; and in an hour that he is not aware of, and shall cut him asunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." Terrible doom to those who shall not be in a condition to be greatly benefited by that coming, and so be led to put it far away.

But the faithful church of Christ is represented by inspiration as a loving, truly wedded bride, mourning and fasting on account of the Bridegroom's absence, and earnestly longing and praying for his returning and presence. The ancient prophet was inspired with her loving spirit, and in his prayerful ejaculations said, "Oh, that thou wouldest rend the heavens, that thou wouldest come down, that the mountains might flow down at thy presence." Isa. 64: 1. So also the inspired messenger of God on Patmos, who by the light of the prophetic lamp saw the radiance of eternal day, like a sea of glory, sweeping the darkness of the curse away into everlasting oblivion, cried, in holy extacies, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus."

The coming of earth's Deliverer is the grand event of the ages, made most conspicuous, and painted with brightest colors on Heaven's chart of earth scenes. It will be the crowning event of infinite mercy, the perfect vindication of eternal justice, the execution of Jehovah's covenant with man, the perfect and everlasting overthrow of the Prince of darkness, the reconstruction of the divine government on earth, the complete ending of angelic and human rebellion, the establishment of Messiah's everlasting kingdom "under the whole heavens," and the final end of evil.

Before it death reigns triumphant over all; beyond it dwell the deathless tribes. Before it the curse mars and blights all things; beyond it is fadeless, blooming. Before it earth's groan sounds mournfully from every continent and island, river and ocean; beyond it echoes the melodies of eternal jubilee. Before it fearful and bloody war fills the world with woe and anguish; beyond it no battle cry or wail of dying warriors wakes the echo from the mountain or the plain.

It will be the grand transition point in the Divine administration, from chastisements, scourgings and judgments, to everlasting benedictions and infinite blessings; from Jehovah's "forbearance" and "long suffering," to his unmingled and eternal joy in the redeemed; from Messiah's earnest and long intercessions to his endless and glorious reign on David's throne; from calling men to labors, tears and death, to crowning the faithful with everlasting life.

It will be Jehovah's signal for the ending of sin, and the introduction of universal holiness; the termination of earth's barrenness, with "the thistly curse," and the manifestation of the promised New Earth, in its Edenic glories; the closing of the Gospel, and the commencement of the Messinac age; the ending of the Bridal Church's weeping and temptation, and her perfect deliverance from tears and sorrow.

O wonderful epoch in God's administration. The sublime event in the economy of infinite love. It has long been desired by the good of all nations, and devoutly prayed for in the closet and sanctum, in tears, and with hallelujahs. He will come, robed with the royal garments of Deity's court, escorted by a celestial cohort shining in the glorious radiance of heavenly livery, as the matchless echoes of angelic trumpets, sounding through the vast concave, shall awaken a slumbering world from the sleep of sin. Then the life voice from Immanuel's lips shall sound above the angelic harmonies, and its undulating tones shall sweep through the silent chambers of death's charnel house, and call to life the countless millions of the slumbering dead. Then shall the sainted myriads arise from their cold pillows, and receiving the touch of immortality will be suddenly translated from a convulsed world to meet their triumphant King in the grand reception chamber of the Prince of princes.

This event will be the grand focal point at which will meet the glories of the God-head; the regal majesty and divine excellencies of the Messiah; the manifestations of the Gospel's triumphs, the deliverances and blessings of the eternal jubilee. It will be the grandest event of the sublime, and the most terrific of the fearful.

"THE COMING REVOLUTION."

Under this head we find a leading editorial in a London daily. The Bishop of Guildford and Dr. Utterton have spoken out plainly concerning the signs of the times. They see unmistakable omens that we are about entering a very perilous situation. Men are fast waking up to see that we are near the heavenly shore. Like mariners who have lost their reckoning, they now see bright tokens that their voyage is near its end, and cry out, "Land O!" One evidence, among the many, is the increasing perils caused by the sight of rocks, shoals and quicksands, thus demonstrating that land is just ahead. The reporter says:

"Never before did a bishop's charge contain such startling thoughts, or such burning sentences. He tells the pampered, over-opulent, self-indulgent, indifferent, easy-going, pleasure-seeking upper class denizens of this modern Babylon, certain matters which to them are of the utmost consequence. Here are his words: 'The wide and ever-increasing chasm which exists now-a-days between the rich and the poor, the laboring population and their employers; the sufferings and hardships to which the poor—notwithstanding the generally improved condition of many—are subject, that remain unredressed because they are not seen or known; the moral evils attendant on their physical condition; all these demand instant and most conscientious attention.

That a vast number of our people, the very sinews of the body politic, not merely possessed of an incalculable amount of brute force, but every day obtaining a more preponderating influence in the affairs of the State, not ignorant but half-instructed and ill-instructed—that they should be allowed to grow up destitute of those principles, and removed from those influences which alone can direct them aright—that they should be growing up with a natural antipathy to, or at least, jealousy of, those who are above them, and stand aloof from them, while they are alike the dupes of subtle and inflammatory demagogues, Chartists, Communists, and infidels, as well as the victims of that blasphemous, seditious, and altogether demoralising literature which is so abandantly and diligently circulated among them—I say we do not realize the outcome of all this, nor yet the fact, unless it be met by some greater efforts than are being made now, that this outcome must be disastrous beyond all conception. The mine is being dug by countless hands, the explosive materials are stored, the trains of gunpowder are being laid in all directions, and presently, while we are indulging in utopian and fanciful dreams of social progress, the volcano will burst at our doors, and beneath our very feet, tearing up the ground on which we stand, and spreading horror and ruin around us. I am no visionary alarmist, but I say such a state of things cannot long continue without an adequate corrective."

Dr. Utterton takes up the theme, and says:

"Notwithstanding all the wealth, luxury, gaiety, and so forth, which obtains in this mighty metropolis, still there is danger ahead. Political and social discontent abound. People are becoming educated enough to perceive that they are being wrongly and unrighteously ruled—that the marked inequalities in society are too egregious to be borne—that selfishness preponderates to the injury of the common weal—and that in many instances right is simply what might has made it. While the ruling classes and well-to-do people cry, 'Peace! peace!' yet is there no peace. Nay, we are told that a disastrous outcome is at hand, an outcome disastrous beyond description. Countless hands dig the mine, explosive materials are stored, trains of gunpowder are being laid in all directions, and whilst the country is idly dreaming of security, and some are thinking of social progress, notes of alarm startle the senses, as the forerunners of that terrible upheaving which will burst at our doors and beneath our very feet, tearing up the ground on which we stand, and spreading horror and ruin around."

Still it grows worse and worse, as declared by the pen of inspiration. Dangers increase. Let us be ready to "land on the ever-green shore."

SPRINGFIELD CAMPMEETING.

The Springfield Campmeeting closed last evening (Aug. 20th), after a continuation of nine days. This morning's Springfield Republican says:—

"Our city Advent camp of the old school in the picturesque spruce grove on the Chicopee road, that closed its week's session last night,—despite counter attractions at Seabrook and Wolfboro, N. H.,—has been attended and visited by more people than for four years, and from a wider territory than ever before. Spiritually, the meeting has growingly prospered, and the first fruits have been satisfactorily harvested."

There were one hundred and sixty-two tents and cottages on the ground, besides four large tents, in which meetings were held. Fifteen States were represented, besides Omaha. There were a goodly number of conversions. Twelve were baptized. The order was excellent. The Springfield chief of police watched the interests of the meeting with fatherly care, and justly deserves the thanks of the encampment for his kind attention. The meeting has been a glorious success. All whom we heard express an opinion, said it was the best they ever enjoyed. It was truly a feast of heavenlies.

As our English correspondent has given an interesting account of the meeting, we refer our readers to his article for further information.

"THE LIBERAL LEAGUE."

An association has been formed, called "The Liberal League." Its object may be known from the following announcement:

LIBERALS OF AMERICA.

The hour for action has arrived. The cause of freedom calls upon us to combine our strength, our zeal, our efforts. These are the demands of Liberalism.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempted from just taxation.

2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.

3. We demand that all public appropriations for sectarian, educational and charitable institutions shall cease.

4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text book, or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.

5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States, or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease.

6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.

7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.

8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality, shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.

9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The foregoing indicates the nature of the boasted progress of these last days. It is a departure from all that holy men hold sacred.

M. G.

"HARD TIMES."

"Hard times" seems to be a saying in every body's mouth. It is a common theme for conversation among business men. They are perplexed to find the cause, or the remedy. For many months they have been saying that business would soon be improved, but like a consumption, it is continually declining. There may be an occasional increased animation, but each week shows that strength is departing. This is now true of the financial interests of the world. Says the Chicago Interior:

"The bottom has not fallen out of business, but it proves to be much further down than we anticipated when the grand avalanche started three years ago. Wheat went to 87 cents on change last week, a tumble of nineteen cents in a few days. That is considerably below the average of the twenty years next preceding the era of inflation. Dry goods never were so cheap before. The business failures for the first six months of 1776 were 4,600; over a thousand more than for the corresponding period last year. The amount involved in these failures was $107,000,000, or $31,000,000 more than for the first six months of 1875. This method of squaring accounts has evidently had its day, and there will be less of it for the next six months. Meantime the banks are full of currency, and its holders anxiously inquiring for good paper. We hear of one broker who turned a $10,000 loan for five dollars, and congratulated himself on his fee. If that is not touching bottom then there is no bottom. The Prairie State Bank—savings and commercial—threw out its commercial accounts on the first of July, and required depositors to take their money away. The President of the bank could find no responsible borrowers, and he would not be bothered with any more. We have touched bottom—that is clear, and it is only a question how long we shall lie there."

The writer in the Interior thinks business matters will not lie at the bottom very long. It is a question whether business men have yet reached the bottom of distressing perplexity. We are inclined to think they are yet upon the surface, comparatively. We shall see and know more about it in a little while.

ADVANCE OF TRUTH.

The subject of "Conditional Immortality," through Christ alone, is receiving special attention in Europe, as well as America; and the belief in the final destruction of the wicked is spreading rapidly. We are in correspondence with an able and successful English Evangelist, of the Methodist denomination, who has written several valuable works, and to whom we have recently sent the Crisis, who writes as follows:

"I scarcely ever read a paper so thoroughly as I do the Crisis. I like it very much, and find it profitable reading. I am happy to inform you that the truth respecting conditional immortality is spreading. At almost every Methodist chapel in which I preach, I find some who are beginning to see the error of the common doctrine; and others who have given it up. And there seems to be a greater readiness than I had expected to inquire concerning the second advent of our Lord."

A London Congregational minister, who is known as a strong defender of the doctrine of eternal misery, said to another minister who believed in the destruction of the wicked: "I know I am among the minority." He said the belief in the end of sin and sinners was spreading rapidly, but the believers in the doctrine had not yet made their views public, but thought they would soon.

M. G.

SENSIBLE.

At a meeting of Methodist ministers in New York, the obstacles in the way of revivals were considered. Among them it was truthfully said "that ministers failed to hold up Jesus." This fault is becoming alarmingly common. Men preach themselves while Jesus is left in the background. The report of the meeting goes on to say:

"In some localities the churches are working against each other. In other places there are too many churches. Revival interests are thwarted by the means used to secure those who will assist in removing the large indebtedness under which many of our churches labor; yet some churches think it an advantage to be in debt. The methods used in collecting money are demoralizing. Some of the Sunday-schools were the very nurseries of folly, because of the means used to attract the children. Again, he said, our people are not sufficiently sociable. Lastly, he hoped that the Lord would raise up some great organizer to remove some of the difficulties in the way of the progress of the church."

Another speaker said:

"The church had forsaken its original simplicity. We have become a church, and are absorbed in the sustenance of an ecclesiastical organization, but in earlier times there was less organization, while the gospel of Jesus was preached in simplicity and power. In those days the preaching was adapted to the masses, and not as much as at present to the educated.

The poor and uneducated cannot be made to feel at home in the handsome churches we worship in now. We have got out of using David's simple sling, and have stepped into Saul's armor. We think too much of making our different church organizations a success. We have the simple gospel, but are overborne by the cumbrous machinery of the church. Our great churches stifle the pure evangelical spirit of the ministers. It is better, as far as possible, to get rid of this enervating influence."

It is fortunate that many begin to see the perils of these last days. This may lead to escape from the snare of Satan.

THE AMERICAN PLATFORM.

There are many who think the time has come for some radical reforms in political matters. Various "platforms" have been laid, as a basis of an improved government; among the rest the following, by "the American party:"

"We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That charters of all the secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discountenanced.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency, and a return to specie payment as soon as practicable.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And finally we demand for the American people the abolition of the electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States."

We can see but little prospect of any permanent reform before the coming of Jesus. He is the one who will reign in righteousness. His will be the best government ever enjoyed by human beings, because it will be divinely administered. "Come quickly."

THE EASTERN WAR.—The war between Turkey and Servia is increasing in importance. The Russians are becoming involved in it more and more, and are providing men and means to assist the Servians. The present prospect indicates that Turkey in Europe must be killed. Her case looks hopeless. This being true, important events are at hand. Every student of prophecy must feel a deep interest in the progress of the war. The omens are growing brighter in favor of the speedy coming of Jesus. Many new ones in the various churches are becoming specially interested in the subject, and are receiving the eivdence of the Lord's coming joyfully. Praise the Lord.

SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS.—Bro. Asa Mahan, in a letter from London, June 2nd, to the Guide to Holiness, says:—

"You are no doubt aware of the wonderful progress which the doctrine of the higher life is making in all evangelical churches in this country, and on the continent. Never had this doctrine such a hold upon christian hearts as now.

Christian conferences are being held in all directions, and all attended with special effusions of the Holy Spirit. Everywhere the subject is the leading theme of thought and discourse. In all denominations it is being preached by ministers of the greatest influence. Among its ablest advocates are leading ministers of the established church.

You are no doubt aware of my connection with the Banner of Holiness, a weekly paper, wholly devoted like the Guide to this one subject. One individual, an elder in a leading Presbyterian church in Scotland, has just given one thousand pounds to have the paper sent weekly to all missionary stations in the world."

NOW READY---A NEW BOOK.

The book entitled, "Mormonism Examined and Refuted," is now ready for delivery. It is a 12 mo. work, of 184 pp. Owing to the increase of its size, it will be sold at 50 cts. per copy hereafter. Send orders to the Crisis Office, or to Wm. Sheldon, Brodhead, Wis.

AG'T.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

I have published two thousand copies of my second serial of "The Significance of the Great Prophetic Symbols of Daniel and John" for distribution among those interested in prophecy. I design to have a quantity on the camp-grounds of Springfield and Alton Bay, at the Crisis stand. Let every minister call and receive a copy, and all others who desire light and truth. This is a tract of 48 pages, and is free to all who want light. Those of our brethren who feel the importance of publishing the great facts on prophecy in tract form, proving the immediate coming of Christ, will please correspond with the writer, at Newton Upper Falls, Mass.

These tracts can be had at the Crisis Office, 144 Hanover St., Boston. Time is short. Let all arouse to immediate action.

L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

THE Health Reformer maintains its excellence as an instructor of the people on health topics. It treats the subject in an exceptionally candid and liberal manner, though it may be considered somewhat radical. Extreme positions are avoided, however, and there is no family which may not be benefited by the perusal of this instructive and interesting journal. The August number is a good one. Specimen copies can be obtained free by addressing the publishers at Battle Creek, Mich.

CORRECTION.—In the last Crisis, we published the marriage of Bro. Downs at Great Falls, N. H. We have just learned that the notice sent was a counterfeit, as no such marriage has taken place.

CORRECTION.—The author of the piece of music in the last Crisis is F. S. Stanton, instead of Stauton.

THE INTENTIONS OF THE "CATHOLIC UNION."

1. I saw in print, awhile ago, in England, that a christian man happened by chance to drop into a large, well-filled mission room, in an Irish part of London, where a Jesuit priest was holding forth to the congregation. He was talking about the work of the Union, and he said that at that time they had 30,000 persons in England in training for a future pontifical war.

2. A brother in Liverpool (H. J. Ward), who owns a lot of steamers, one day told me that two of his sailors had a quarrel, one a Protestant, and the other a Catholic. The Catholic gnashed on the Protestant, and said he would have his revenge; for one day the streets of Liverpool would run with Protestant blood. They only waited the word from their priests.

CHANGES IN ROME.

1. The religious houses have been suppressed, the property taken by the State, and the tenants driven away.

2. A palace has been set up in Rome, and a court (the Quirinal), the Vatican, being by the act made but a private residence.

3. The young men, who were being trained for the priesthood, have been taken for soldiers; and the Pope has recently mourned, in an encyclical letter, that he will have no priests to supply the place of those who die.

4. The splendor of the Papal court has faded, and the courtiers are reduced to a miserable mininum.

5. There has lately been a proposition before the Italian parliament to tax the Pope.

W. KELLAWAY.

A SPIRITUAL SWINDLER DETECTED.—The Portland Press will soon publish a full exposure of a spiritual medium who has attained a great reputation in Portland, and in Spiritual circles throughout the country by successful materialization. So many intelligent people have believed that they saw and touched departed friends, that great interest had been excited on the subject.

It says: "On Tuesday night five of our leading physicians exposed the imposture by drawing a spirit out into the room, who was found to be the medium, Mrs. Robert I. Hull. The denouement was complete and irrefutable, and she could only plead that this was her first attempt at imposture. The discovery of the fraud has occasioned great distress to some families, whose feelings have been cruelly trifled with."

The gentlemen who indorse the statement are Prof. Wm. Warren Greene, Prof. Frederick Henry Gerrish, Dr. H. N. Small, Dr. Augustus S. Thayer, Dr. G. P. Bradley of the U. S. Navy, Dr. W. A. Wheeler and Mr. Chas. O. Bancroft.—Ex.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 11th, 1875, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

CHEERING FROM ALABAMA.

TO THE A. A. M. SOCIETY.

Dear Brethren:—I have some good news to communicate to the dear readers of the Crisis. You remember in my last letter I stated that I was preparing to start next day, twenty miles, to hold a meeting. Well, I started with quite a crowd, fifteen in all, including my own family, Bro. & Sr. Carlton, and Sr. Chandler, formerly of New York. Bro. Livingston was also in the company. We had an ox wagon, a good horse, and my little paddy—a mule just four feet six inches high—with our straw beds, and a box of rations. We rode and walked by turns, to rest each other. We ferried Tenn. River, at two boat loads, and all walked up Sand Mountain, except Bro. and Sister Carlton, who rode horseback, and Sr. Chandler, and three little ones in the wagon. Everything was happy and cheerful till about 8 P. M., when Sr. Chandler fell from the back of my little missionary mule, and was seriously hurt, breaking one of her ribs. Bro. Livingston and Bro. Carlton assisted her into the wagon, and while she suffered much pain, we drove to Shilo Church, which we reached at eleven o'clock at night. While we neared the dwelling of Bro. Wilkinson, my wife, her two sisters, Sr. Melinda Smith, and our own little daughter, Odessa, sang,

"The kingdom is coming, O tell ye the story."

It was really sweet to hear singing in the silence of the beautiful moonlight night.

Saturday, July 8th, we began meetings with good interest. Sunday, A. M., at half past four, I started and rode three miles, and I married Thomas Avans to Sarah Page. At ten, we had a blessed social meeting, and then Bro. Houts (Meth.) preached. At one P. M., I baptized two; then, while Bro. Swain (Meth.) preached, wife and I rode six miles to Trenton, Ga., where at half past six P. M., I married George W. Maxwell to Lizzie C. Gifford. Monday morning I went back to the church, where, with Brn. Swain, Darr, Houts, and Payne (Meth.) Livingston (Baptist), and Brn. Avans, Smith and myself, we continued the meetings till Thursday, July 12th, during which time just twenty confessed the Lord, and started for the kingdom. Here we had the most glorious meeting ever known in that community, and the only one in which social meetings were held every morning. Here we met preachers of different sects, with hearts full of the love of Jesus, and willing to labor for the glory of God, and the salvation of sinners. Here we daily enjoyed the outpourings of the Spirit in mighty power. Here we had ministers and brethren of different sects embraced in each other's arms, and their souls knit together in love, like that of Jonathan and David. At the close, we advised the newly converted ones to read, pray, and join the church of their choice; showing to the world that our greatest object is to have them saved when Jesus comes.

Bigoted sectarians blush with shame when they hear of the glorious result of this union meeting. One minister said, by way of sarcasm, that he believed some of his members would wade a river of tar to go to Cargile's meeting. But still God blesses, and to him be all the glory. God's kingdom will afford room enough for all his saints; but I do not believe he will have a single mansion for sectarian bigots, who are too full of prejudice here to worship with others of different views.

Monday, I went to Goosepond church, where Bro. Livingston had gone on Saturday before, to begin meetings, while I rested at home two days to recruit my strength, which had become well nigh exhausted. I am sorry to say that I found the church at Goosepond in no readiness to meet the Lord. Satan had sown discord in the body; they had but little love; but we gave them the plain teachings of the gospel. Bro. L. was so worn out he could not preach after Sunday; so I spoke twice on Tuesday and Wednesday, and on Thursday. I have reason to hope I left the church in better condition.

Thursday night I was at Pleasant Hill, five miles below Goosepond, where I spoke to an attentive audience, and also on Friday, at eleven A. M. Bro. C. C. Word (a Presbyterian minister), also a Bro. Miller (Meth.), were present, and took part in the service like brethren.

Friday night I went back near Goosepond. I preached at the dwelling of a Bro. Clarke, of the Christian church. I rode to Bellefone, and tried to preach at night, in an empty dwelling, about two miles from the village. Here a skeptic, claiming to be a Universalist, disturbed me very much, by speaking to me repeatedly, and asking foolish questions to the disgust of all present.

Sunday, July 23rd, I preached to a large and attentive audience in the village hall. I gave them the signs that the Lord is near. The people seemed much interested. Here Bro. Geo. W. Crawford has done a good work by scattering tracts which have been sent him by Bro. Adams. Bro. Crawford is teaching in this community, and doing much good toward spreading the truth, and killing out the prejudice which has heretofore existed against our views. He has been with me, and assisted in the meetings in this community with much zeal. Any tracts or papers sent to him, at Stevenson, Ala., will be judiciously used. Just about six o'clock, P. M., in Mud Creek, I baptized a Bro. A. J. Armstrong. Then at Baker's school-house I tried to preach again, Bro. Crawford and Bro. Fraley both taking part in the service. I reached home on Monday, the 24th, to prepare for the general meeting to form a conference. July 28th, in my own cottage home, we organized the Southern A. C. Conference, which our Secretary will report soon from Atlanta, Ga. Tuesday, Aug. 1st, wife and I rode on horseback to Shilo, where we enjoyed such a glorious meeting in July. Wednesday, the 2nd, Bro. F. R. Bankson preached to a full house, after which, I baptized five dear souls, who had started for the kingdom. Here I had one of the hardest trials of my life in trying to get the dear brethren and sisters to speak for Jesus. O! how hard it is to get professors to arise and speak for Jesus in a community where it is unpopular to do so. But God being my helper, I shall never let the churches rest till they drop me off, or take up the cross. I feel to rejoice and praise God for his goodness, when I remember that only a short time ago, Bro. Smith and myself were alone battling for truth here; and then think of the immense crowd at our conference last Sunday, where we had a dozen Advent ministers from N. C., Ga., and Ala. Pray for us, that we may be kept humble, and work for God's glory, and that he will still crown our labors here with success. Some of the Orthodox champions refuse to debate these views; but at their own meetings tell the people we will lead them to idolatry within two generations, unless they resist our teachings. God blessed, and truth is spreading rapidly. I start to-morrow for campmeetings in New England. Pray for us.

J. A. CARGILE.

Stevenson, Ala., Aug. 4th, 1876.

Correspondence.

From Bro. D. N. Chadsey.

Dear Editors:—I am very happy to say the Lord is at work up here among us. He is blessing such poor unworthy creatures as we, such small instrumentalities in doing his will. The interest has been gradually increasing since last fall. Bro. M. Herrimond and myself held some meetings in Pittsburg last fall, and some interest was manifest. But since the writer has gone, and spring-time has dawned, and summer fully come, there is a new interest and a new start. Yesterday, the first Sunday in August, I had the pleasure of leading down into the water sixteen candidates, both young and old, in the presence of a large concourse, who looked on with calm solemnity. Husbands and wives, mothers and daughters, went down together into the liquid grave, and were buried in the likeness of Christ's death. Some waited on the shore with outstretched arm to help the new comer from the water's brink, while others seemed to have nothing to do. While some were careless and unconcerned, others were weeping to see their children go down into the water, as did Christ, and they far away from God. The work is still going on. In the evening we had a very profitable inquiry meeting. Two more started on the way to God. Pray for us, dear brethren and sisters, that we may do the will of God in sincerity and in truth.

Colebrook, N. H., Aug. 7th, 1876.

From Bro. B. Spaulding.

Dear Bro. Editors:—I am on my way home from the Aroostook Co., having been gone about five months. In that time, I have visited seven towns, giving lectures and visiting families in them all. I will say for the credit of the people, I have been kindly used, and hospitably treated in every place. I have been heard with respect and attention in every place, and I was sorry to leave them. The people generally are of a religious character, and the Advent doctrine has taken root there, and bears fruit. It stands on an equal footing with other denominations. There is not so much prejudice and opposition as in most popular places. There is a willingness to hear everywhere. Quite a number of converts have been baptized this season. I can recommend the people to any who wish to go there to preach. They are not able to give so much as in some other places; but they will use a preacher very kindly. I found good schools there. The people are intelligent, industrious and moral. They have good farms, and crops look very promising. Wheat, oats, peas and potatoes, all are uncommonly good. The hard times don't affect them so much as it does in the manufacturing places. Many have good frame houses, well painted, and well fitted too; and large barns well stored with hay and grain. They have good roads and bridges; good school-houses, and children are as thick as bees, well trained too.

The women are very smart, and good to work. They spin and weave their own dresses, and cloth for their husbands' and sons' clothes. They can make their own sugar and molasses, and so live mostly off of their own lands.

Norridgewock, Me., Aug. 20, 1876.

From Sr. F. Sargent.

Dear Brn. and Srs. scattered abroad:—I wish to tell you that the Lord has done great things for me. Not long ago, my Savior called after me, for I was lost; but Jesus found me, and spake peace to my poor heart; and now I can sing from the bottom of my heart,

"How sweet the name of Jesus sounds
In a believer's ears;
It soothes his sorrows, heals his wounds,
And drives away his fears."

What a wonderful change the grace of God makes in the hearts of poor fallen humanity. It makes him "a new creature" in Christ Jesus. I can truly say, the things I once loved I now hate; and the things I once hated I now love. I believed that men could be christians, and love Jesus, without letting the world know it. My father would at times try to persuade me to read the Bible; but I did not love it. One day, when he was out, I got my Bible, and opened to Matt. 5: 16,—"Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." My Savior has learned me to love the Bible, and its precious truths; and now I stand on the Lord's side; and I wish to be led just where he pleases to lead me, and to do his holy will. I am weak, but the Lord knows all about it, and I am glad of it. Will all the lovers of Jesus pray for me, that I may sing more fully,—

"Am I a soldier of the cross,
A follower of the Lamb;
And shall I fear to own his cause,
Or blush to speak his name?"

Stowe, Vt.

From Bro. Otis King.

Dear Editors:—As it has been some time since I have written anything for your valuable paper, I will say a few words to the dear ones in this wide world of trials and disappointments. My dear wife and I left our home in Iowa, the second day of May last, to visit our relatives in Maine, and to see if it would not improve our health, which has been very poor for some time.

Dear Brn. and Srs., what we need is a full consecration to the Lord; then we shall enjoy the divine light of life; and then we can point sinners to Christ, who is ready and willing to save all such as will come unto him. Bless the good Lord for a present salvation, which is to be obtained by repentance and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, who died for our sins, and was raised from the dead by the power of God, ascended to his father, and will come again to redeem all of his faithful and tried ones, that will be on this earth when he comes to raise his sleeping saints.

Extracts from Letters.

Bro. D. Crouch writes from St. Louis, Mo.:—"For the last few months the Crisis has been greatly and steadily improving. It has been very interesting to me for six months or more. Indeed, it seems to me that without it we should be without a general alarm-bell, sounding the tocsin of alarm, and ringing out the notes of warning to a slumbering church and giddy world. Bro. Joy's experience, as published in the Crisis, is about as nigh inspiration as anything I have seen in the modern developments of God's grace to man."

Bro. J. W. Thomas writes from Fulton, Mo.:—"I am still holding on to that blessed hope, once delivered to the saints, and looking for the speedy coming of the Lord. There are but a few here of like precious faith, and they are scattered over a large territory. We have no one to preach for us. I do what I can for the cause by giving them the Crisis. If I had some tracts to distribute, I think they would do much good."

Obituaries.

Shatto. At her home in Sherman Township, Washington Co., Kan., July 28th, 1876, Sr. Martha J., wife of W. L. Shatto, aged twenty-one years and five days.

When but eight years of age she was impressed with the necessity of living a christian life. At eighteen she was baptized, and united with the M. E. Church. About one year ago she embraced the doctrine of the soon coming of Jesus to raise the dead, and judge the world; and soon after, with her husband, united with the A. C. Church. Her meek and quiet spirit, and consistent christian life, endeared her to all who knew her. God bless the bereaved husband and little babe, also the parents and brothers and sisters of the dear one who has gone. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, from 1 Thess. 4: 13, 14.

S. Shriner.

Shatto. Also, August 13th, 1876, Benjamin William, infant son of W. L. Shatto and M. J. Shatto deceased, aged seventeen days.

Sermon on the occasion from Jer. 31: 16, 17.

S. Shriner.

Durgan. In Springwater, N. Y., July 20th, of enlargement of the spleen, Sr. Belle Durgan, wife of Dr. J. C. Durgan, aged twenty-four years.

Sr. D. was a woman of very amiable qualities. She possessed much personal beauty, and a high order of intellect; the whole being crowned with a "meek and quiet spirit." She earnestly desired the Master to come that she might not taste of death; not that she dreaded to sleep a little while in Jesus, and rest; but her bodily sufferings were so acute, she wished to avoid the physical pangs of the last enemy. But when the hour arrived, an angel ministered unto her, and she sank to rest as quietly as a child in its mother's arms. Words were spoken by the writer, from Matt. 28: 6.

R. H. Bateman.

Smith. In Oxford, Maine, June 11th, 1876, Harriet L. Smith, wife of Bro. Frank Smith, aged fifty years.

Sister S. embraced Christ some years ago, and was one of those who seemed to enjoy religion, instead of enduring it. She was highly esteemed. May God sustain the afflicted ones, and bring them to meet the sleeping ones in a deathless world of tearless joy. Funeral sermon by the writer, from Ps. 17: 15.

Jared Whitman.

Harding. In Strafford, Vt., Aug. 17th, Nellie M., eldest daughter of Bro. J. H. and Sr. Drusilla W. Harding, aged eighteen years and four months.

Our young sister Nellie suffered a painful and lingering sickness of about seven months, which wasted her form and once blooming features to a skeleton. She bore her sufferings with the utmost patience and christian submission, and never murmured when suffering most, but was ever cheerful and happy. She embraced the Savior when quite young, and ever adorned her profession with a well ordered life and a godly conversation. She gave unmistakable evidence that all was well, and sweetly fell asleep in the triumphs of the christian's hope. Just before she departed she took her friends by the band, and said: "Be faithful; in a little while we will meet in the kingdom."

Words of comfort were addressed to mourning friends by the writer, from John 16: 16.

O. Beckwith.

Howard. In Harrison, Me., Aug. 5th, 1876, Lenora Myrtie, the only daughter of Henry and Adeline Howard, aged four years, five months, and seventeen days.

Although so young in years, God was pleased to warn the neighbors by her, and we think her death may be for the salvation of some. The night before her death, when suffering extreme pain, she said, "Papa, pray for Birdie." Her father arose and prayed. She said, "Pray again, papa." He prayed again. When he said, Amen, she said, "Please pray just once more for Birdie, papa." Her father said, What shall I pray, dear child? "Oh, pray the same over again." He prayed again, and asked the Lord, if it was not his will to restore her, to let her pain stop. She suffered no more pain, but quietly breathed her life out. The blessed hope sustained the afflicted parents and friends. Sermon by the writer, from 1 Cor. 15: 59.

Jared Whitman.

Morse. In South Livermore, Me., June 25th, 1876, Bro. David Morse, aged forty-eight years.

Bro. Morse was a believer in the near approach of the day of the Lord. He was buried in baptism about two weeks before his death. He leaves a wife and family of children, who deeply mourn his loss. May the sorrowing ones be comforted by the promises of God. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer.

FOREIGN NEWS.

The Eastern War.

London, Aug. 21. A Reuter telegram from Semlin says that 40,000 Turks, Kerim Pasha, commanding, met the Servians between Supovatz and Alexinatz on Sunday. They made several attacks, but were everywhere repulsed. One wing of the Servian army even successfully assumed the offensive. The battle will be renewed on Monday. It is considered probable that the Servians will fall back to Alexinatz, and a decisive battle will be fought there. If the Servians win that fight the war will be continued. If the Turks are victorious the Servians will be willing to conclude peace.

Aug. 22. A despatch from Semlin says: It is stated in well-informed circles that the Servian Prime Minister, Ristics, interviewed M. Kartzoff, the Russian representative at Belgrade, on the 11th inst., and appealed to the generosity of the Russian Government to permit Russian officers and soldiers to enter the Servian army. He also asked for pecuniary assistance, as Servia had determined to continue the war. The Russian Government has replied, granting the above request under certain conditions. In consequence of this arrangement the Sclavonic Committees in Russia have commenced sending funds in large amounts. Russian officers and sub-officers in parties of ten reach Belgrade almost daily, passing through Roumania unhindered. The officers give their services gratuitously. A number of officers are expected shortly.

Belgrade, Aug. 22. The Servians have recaptured Gurguzovatz after a severe fight and have occupied the heights of Tressibahd. The battle around Alexinatz continues. The fighting has been desperate. The Turks claim a victory and the capture of the chief redoubts.

Aug. 23. Gen. Tchernayeff on Tuesday sustained the repeated attacks of the united forces of Eyoub Pacha and Kerim Pacha, who were endeavoring to take Alexinatz. The Turks, to the number of 50,000, were repulsed in all directions. The battle was recommenced early Wednesday morning, and to the present moment the Servians maintain their positions.

Aug. 24. A dispatch from Belgrade says the Turks yesterday made three desperate attacks on the Servian position at Alexinatz, and some of the Servian battalions lost more than quarter of their strength. Several Russian officers were killed. The Turks also lost heavily, being exposed to a cross fire of artillery from the entrenchments. Gen. Tchernajeff, who commanded the Servians in person, succeeded in repulsing the Turks on each occasion. The Turks renewed the attack early this morning, and were repulsed along the whole line, and fell back a distance of two kilometres.

Vienna, Aug. 24. The Prince Imperial of Austria will start next autumn on a two years' tour through Europe and America.

Paris, Aug. 24. The news from Rome received yesterday gives no hope of Cardinal Antonelli's recovery.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

New York, Aug. 21. All the conductors, engineers, brakemen and trackmen in the employ of the New York and New Jersey Railroad Company struck yesterday, and since that time no trains have been run over the road. The cause of the strike is alleged to be non-payment of wages. The men say they have not been paid for the past four months and for the four months previous they were paid off in notes which have gone to protest. The grocery-men and other dealers have declined to extend further credit to the men. A gentleman formerly connected with the company states that some of the families of the employes are in actual starving condition, and living on bread and water. The week before last the trackmen threatened to tear up the track, and were then paid one month's wages. Four heavy passenger trains are run on Sunday, and yesterday a great number of people were disappointed by the stoppage of the trains. The strikers, however, have the general sympathy of the people living along the line of the road.

Leavenworth, Aug. 21. A terrible wind and rain storm passed over a portion of the Western Missouri, especially along the Chicago and Rock Island Railroad, on Saturday evening. At Edgerton depot several dwelling houses and shops were destroyed and two or three occupants injured. Several bridges on the railroad were badly damaged. Large trees were uprooted or twisted off like pipe-stems, and the crops, particularly corn, laid flat on the ground. The damage within about thirty miles square is estimated at over one hundred thousand dollars.

Chicago, Aug. 23. The Chicago and Rock Island and Pacific Railroad reports that the grasshoppers settled down so thickly on its tracks near Avoca, Iowa, on Monday, that it was next to impossible for the freight trains to get along. The tracks became as if soaped on account of the wheels crushing them, and the train men were actually obliged to go forward and shovel them off the rails. Trains were delayed eight hours on account of the pests. They are reported as flying from the west to the southeast from Colorado and Kansas, and some have settled down because of some peculiar condition of the atmosphere.

— A native Chinese church of 142 members on the Island of Hong Kong, under the care of the London Missionary Society, supports its two native preachers, and also another mission church of one hundred members.

— It is said that during the past year two thousand and forty-three French Catholics in Montreal abjured the Papal religion.

— It has been fearfully hot in Spain this summer. At Madrid the people have slept in their balconies, and at Seville people began to sleep in the streets to such an extent that the city authorities had to prohibit the practice.

— Small-pox is raging to such an extent in San Francisco that a health inspector attends every funeral to exclude all save near relatives from the house and cemetery.

— A convocation of Cardinals is to be held at Rome to consider modifications in the method of electing a Pope.

— More Spanish troops are to be sent to Cuba.

— The King of Dahomey has shut up all the Europeans at Whydah, and threatens a general massacre.

A. W. Sibley.

Pittsfield Campmeeting.

The Annual Campmeeting of the East Maine Missionary Association will be held, if the Lord will, on the ground occupied last year at Pittsfield, commencing Sunday, Sept. 10th, and hold over Sunday, Sept. 17th. The present owner of the grove is willing we should occupy it the full term of the lease, which is seven years more.

The new Maine Mission Tent will be pitched in the grove Sept. 9th, and will afford lodging for friends who cannot put up tents, but all must provide bedding for themselves. Good board will be furnished at the boarding tent as follows: Breakfast or supper, 30 cents; dinner 40 cents, except the last Sunday, when it will be 50 cents. Horse keeping per day, for hay 25 to 35 cents, near by the grove.

The fare over the M. C. R. R. and all its branches is reduced one half. Call for Campmeeting Tickets for Pittsfield and return, as there will be none given at Pittsfield. Tickets good from Sept. 6th to the 21st. Let all who can, come over the R. R.

Committee: Jer. Carr, O. S. French, A. M. Harris, Oscar Farnum, Wm. Clark, Paul Ames, Wm. Banton, Owen Wincapaw, G. L. McKinney.

The R. I. Campmeeting, at Coventry Centre, R. I., on the H. P. and Fishkill R. R., will commence Wednesday, Sept. 6th, and close Friday, the 15th. To those in the business circles of life, that are anxiously looking for the return of former prosperity, with fearful forebodings of the future; and those that are watching coming events, waiting the promised return of the Savior, in like manner as he went away to give life and immortality to the faithful, this meeting will be one of unusual interest. Preachers will be expected to show from the Bible the first named class, the position they occupy, as plainly as did Noah's preaching the antediluvians, and the absolute necessity of getting ready to meet the things soon coming on the earth; and cause the second class to lift up their head, and rejoice that their redemption draweth nigh. The signs of the times are as unmistakable omens of the final doom of man, as the putting forth of the buds of the fig tree are of the approach of summer. Being obliged to reduce our expenses to meet liabilities, that we owe no man, free boarders, not active spiritual laborers, will be expected to labor in any position assigned them, to save expense of former meetings. By this arrangement, we do not exclude our aged sisters, who with anxiety have cared for and made happy the home of him whom the woe has been upon if he preach not the word. Come, every one of you, and know that the Lord provides for the Marthas as well as the Marys. Those willing to volunteer their services to reduce the expense of the meeting, will please write J. P. Hazard, Greene, R. I., that there be no confusion at the commencement of the meeting, or unnecessary trouble in hiring help. Board 80 cts. per day. Horse keeping 75 cts. per day, ample room being provided on both sides of the road for horses and carriages. No teams or carriages will be allowed to stand within the limits of the highway. Railroad fare reduced as usual. By order of the committee,

J. P. Hazard.

The Lake View Campmeeting, Magog, P. Q., Canada, will be held, as per vote of conference, immediately after the Alton Bay meeting, to commence Sept. 2nd, and continue over two Sabbaths. The business of the conference will be attended to during the meeting, at such times as will least interfere with the regular services of the campmeeting; and we trust an effort will be made to wisely harmonize our campmeeting and other interests, so as best to subserve the interests of the cause of God among us. We expect able ministers to be present to preach the word, and trust the Lord of the harvest will send so many, and such ones, as will be for the best. Ministers will have free passage through the beautiful Lake Memphramagog from Newport, Vt., and return; all others half fare, as also on all the lines of the Passumpsic, and on other roads, of which more hereafter.

Let all come who can, especially those interested in the cause of our coming Savior. Come early. Provide yourselves with bedding, straw ticks, etc., and shelter will be provided. Board and horse keeping to be had at reasonable rates.

C. P. Dow, for the Committee.

York Co. Conference.—Our County Conference is to meet at South Hiram, Me., in the Union Chapel, Thursday, Sept. 21st, at two o'clock P. M. The friends there desire a large attendance from abroad, and we hope they will be gratified. Those coming over the Portland and Ogdensburg R. R. should leave the cars at Baldwin station, and get on board Stanley's stage. Request to be left at Captain Randall Libby's. Bro. L. will see that you are provided with a comfortable home while you remain. Those coming with teams had better call on Moses Norton, or George Mason, Kezar Falls. All letters should be directed to Kezar Falls, Me.

C. H. Sweet, Secretary.

Annual Conference.—The next annual session of the A. C. Conference of Northern Pa. and Southern New York will be held with the church at Westfield, Tioga Co., Pa., commencing Thursday evening, Sept. 21st, and hold over the following Sunday. By rail from Corning to Elkland, then stage to Westfield.

E. C. Cowles, President.
H. Riegenfuss, Secretary.

Notice.—There will be a quarterly meeting at the church of North Fairfield, Ohio, Saturday, Sept. 2nd, and the Lord's day following. Brethren and friends are cordially invited. Come and let us have a season of refreshing.

L. C. Kerr, Pastor.

Connecticut Campmeeting.

The Lord willing, the Connecticut Campmeeting will commence on the ground, near Plainville, Saturday, Sept. 2nd, and continue over Sunday, the 10th. Last year we had no boarding table and no free board, and the result was so satisfactory every way, that we shall adopt the same method this year. Provisions will be furnished at reasonable rates, as before. We are having calls for places to pitch tents in the first circle, and wish all who had tents in this circle last year, would write the Secretary immediately whether they intend to occupy their places this year. If they are not occupied by Tuesday noon, Sept. 5th, the committee will feel at liberty to use the ground. Write before you forget it, and save us trouble. We have one or two tents, 14×14, to rent. Price $5.00. Those coming by R. R. will find conveyance from Plainville to the campground, as usual. Bring tents, bedding, and come early to the meeting.

Seth Woodruff,
O. D. Woodruff, } Committee.
O. M. Gilman,
Wm. Reynolds,
O. D. Woodruff, Secretary.

Mechanic Falls Campmeeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a Second Advent Campmeeting at Mechanic Falls, Me., to commence Saturday, Sept. 2nd, and continue over the two following Sundays. Bro. J. S. Moulton will have charge of the boarding tent, where good board and family groceries can be obtained at reasonable rates. Board can be had for horses at the camp-ground stable, or in pastures in the vicinity. The fare on the Grand Trunk road will be one half the usual rates from all stations between Island Pond and Portland, and also on the Portland and Ogdensburg, between Baldwin and Portland. All going over this road will find tickets at Baldwin. The Portland and Rochester roads will give the same rates of fare. Pay full fare, and receive return pass at the meeting. The G. T. trains will stop at the G. T. and P. and R. transfer station, to take passengers who come to that depot over the P. and R. road. The Maine Mission tent will be on the ground as usual, affording good shelter in stormy weather, and good lodging room at night for those not otherwise provided for; but all such should bring comfortable bed covering, if possible.

Tickets over the G. T. road good from Aug. 30th to Sept. 11th. R. R. York, for the Com.

Bethel (Vt.) Campmeeting.

The Annual Campmeeting at Bethel, Vt., is appointed to commence Thursday, Sept. 14th, and hold till Friday, Sept. 22nd. Fares will be reduced on all roads controlled by the Central Vt. R. R., reaching from New London, Ct., to Montreal, P. Q., Montpelier and Wells River R. R., and probably on the Cheshire R. R., running from Fitchburg, Mass., and connecting with the Central Vt. at Bellows Falls. Trains will stop opposite the grounds, as heretofore, during campmeeting week, commencing with Tuesday. If no campmeeting tickets at the station where you start from, buy regular tickets, and get free return passes back, on the grounds, from our Secretary.

Board can be had on the grounds at low rates. All will please come provided with tents and bedding who can. Teams can be kept near the grounds at reasonable prices. Lodgings will be provided for preachers in the stand, and we hope each tent's company will invite one or more preachers in to board with them, so as to reduce the number of free boarders.

Efficient help is engaged to preach the word, also to keep order on the ground. We hope all will come praying that God may direct and bless the meeting to the glory of his name, and the salvation of the perishing. A. A. Hoyt, for Com.

Vermont Annual Conference.—The Vt. Conference will hold its annual session Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 12th and 13th. It has been requested that we further amend the Constitution, and consider the idea of a change of the location of our camp-ground. We hope all churches will be represented, as all our business for the year is to be done at this meeting.

A. A. Hoyt, for Com.

Tent Meeting.—There will be a tent meeting at North Danville, Vt., commencing Sept. 4th. Bro. P. G. Bowman and the writer will be present to preach the word. All are invited to come.

A. A. Hoyt, for Com.

A Proposition.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—An effort is being made, by myself and two or three other willing souls, to hold a grove meeting in Medina, N. Y., and we want the earnest prayers of God's dear children in behalf of its success, and that he will control the elements in its favor; for we shall be without shelter from wind and storm during its progress. Any preaching brethren, whose sole object in preaching is to save sinners, and not to ride hobbies for their own selfish ends; who can come without any thought of reward, and lay hold of this work for the Master, will be welcomed. Such will please address the writer, and I will inform them of the time of the meeting. A neat and commodious place for holding such a meeting is promised us, and a lumber merchant promises the use of lumber for seats, etc.; therefore, as soon as we can secure the services of a requisite number of speakers to address the various meetings, the arrangements will be completed. We want to commence the latter part of the present month, and hold them as long as good can be accomplished. Pray for God's presence with us in power. A. Parmelee, Medina, N. Y.

Quarterly Conference.—The A. C. Quar. Conf. of Central Kansas will hold its next session at Arvonia, Osage Co., Kansas, Saturday, Sept. 30th, and continue over the Lord's day, Oct. 1st. In connection with this meeting, it is thought best to have a State Campmeeting, commencing Sept. 27th, and continue as long as thought best. We hope all of our brethren and sisters in the State and elsewhere, who can come, will prepare for this meeting. Let fervent prayer be offered that we may have a rich season in the Lord. Those that can, bring tents. Now, brethren and sisters, let us make a general rally to this meeting. Bro. Burr, Editor of the A. C. Times, we trust will be there to preach the word.

J. C. Smith,
Aaron Preston, } Committee.
M. McGuire,

Dist. Campmeeting and Quar. Meeting.—There will be a campmeeting at or near West Salem, LaCrosse Co., Wis., commencing Monday, Sept. 18th, to continue over the following Lord's day. Elds. Thurber, Hough, Howard, Sr. Rowell, and others, are expected to preach the word. Let there be a general rally of all the ministers and churches of the district, and all others who can. It is your meeting. Come and enjoy it, and make it a success. Let every church send one or more family tents. Churches that wish quarterly meetings, or protracted meetings, come up and make arrangements for them. Several ministers will be present with whom you can confer. This will be an important meeting for this district.

Committee: L. W. Wood, L. F. Bowles, A. Mosher, James Hewitt, Jno. Pettingill.

Philo Hitchcock, Dist. Evangelist.

Campmeeting.

The Kansas and Nebraska Campmeeting will be held at Peach Creek, Washington Co., Kansas (at the same place as last year), commencing Thursday, Sept. 21st, and hold over two Sabbaths. We expect a glorious meeting. Let all contribute to the interests of the meeting by their presence filled with the Spirit of the Lord. All who possibly can, bring tents, plenty of bedding, etc., etc. Do not stay away because you have not tents; provisions will be made for all who come, as far as possible. A large attendance of ministers will be present to preach the word. The large tent brought from the East by R. F. and M. J. Clark will be used for the occasion. There will be no side issues, or hobbies, and we expect to have perfect harmony. From present indications, it will be the largest meeting ever held in the State.

Committee—Geo. P. Boutwell, Clifton; C. D. Potter, Peach Creek; Wm. H. Shriner, Washington; W. T. Pilcher, Glen Elder, Kansas. H. Kissel, Blue Springs, Neb. For further particulars, address as above. R. F. Clark, Sec.

A New Edition.

The first edition of "Berean's Casket" is exhausted. A new edition, revised and improved, is now published on excellent paper, and beautifully bound in cloth, ready for all who wish such a help in the study of the Scriptures. Price $2.00. In leather, 2.50. Sold at this office, and by the author.

I. C. Wellcome, Yarmouth, Me.

Notice.—My health having considerably improved, I am willing to devote a portion of the Sundays each month to preaching, if the Lord will. Any church or community wishing my labors, please write me at Lawrence, Mass., No. 10 Fulton Street, as that is my present address.

F. M. Drake.

The Northern Kansas A. C. Conference will commence Sept. 9th. S. K. Knox, Pres.

Appointments.

☞ Appointments must be received as early as TUESDAY MORNING (as our paper goes to press about noon) to insure insertion for the coming week.

☞ The following Resolution was passed at the late meeting of the A. C. P. Society:—

"Resolved, That no appointments be published in the Crisis henceforth for persons unknown to the Editorial Board (by which is understood the Editors, Editorial Committee, and Business Agent), unless satisfactory reference shall be given."

The Committee appointed by the Adv. Chris. Association, at its last Annual Meeting, to advise with the Editorial Board "in relation to the publication in the World's Crisis of the appointments of men unworthy of recognition as preachers," having attended to the duty assigned them, recommended, and the Editorial Board have adopted, and ordered to be published, the following resolution:—

"Resolved, That when the Editorial Board is properly notified by any of our Churches, or Ministers, or responsible persons, by a written allegation that a certain minister, or ministers, lack moral character, that they be instructed to notify such minister, or ministers, of the information received as a reason for withholding their appointments till after a proper trial and acquittal."

All communications in relation to this matter should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board—Geo. T. Adams, Boston, Mass.

HYMNS OF THE ADVENT.—No. 3.

THE WORLD IS GROWING EVIL.

The world is growing evil,
And times are waxing late;
Be sober, and keep vigil,
The Judge is at the gate.
The Judge, who comes in mercy,
The Judge, who comes in might,
To terminate the evil,
And vindicate the right.

Prepare we then to meet him,
Let right to wrong succeed;
Let penitential sorrow
To heavenly gladness lead.
So may we sound his praises,
Who from destruction saved,
Bore with us in defilement,
And from defilement laved.

Though far, far we have wandered,
And deep has been our fall,
His mercies never failed us,
Who freely pardons all;
Who bids his grace, abounding,
Love's mightiness display;
And David's royal fountain
Purge all our sins away.

Oh! sing we then his praises,
Our glorious coming King,
Till heaven's high blue arches
With songs melodious ring.
Sing how the royal Magnate,
David's both Lord and Son,
Hath over sin and evil
A wond'rous victory won.

Long, long have we been watching,
Until our eyes are dim;
And waiting for the morning
That brings us unto him.
And now, at last, he cometh
To give his people rest;
For grief, to give them gladness;
For weary toiling, rest.

Rest in his peaceful kingdom,
Which cannot be destroyed;
Nor shall it be by evil,
Forevermore alloyed.
His throne shall be unrivaled
By thrones of orient kings;
Though golden-laid and purpled,
And jemmed with costly things.

That kingdom under heaven,
That throne outrivaling all;
Oh! how the Spirit longeth
To hear the Master call,—
"Come ye into my kingdom,
Ye waiting ones, come in;
Come sit with me all life-crowned,
Redeemed from death and sin."

Oh! hallelujah! glory!
We come now to the hour
When He shall reign forever,
Our king, in all his power;
And we will cast before him
Our crowns, bow and adore,
With all the heavenly harpers,
And praise him evermore.

—Brenard, with additions.

SPRINGFIELD CAMPMEETING.

WM. KELLAWAY.

In these days of fleet locomotion, it is a small event in a man's life to cross from the shore of the Old World to that of the New. Many lines of well-equipped and clipper-built steamers move like birds over the bosom of the broad sea, and but a few days pass ere one finds himself landed on the opposite coast. Our passage over the Atlantic was made in the tried and trusty Hindoo, of the Wilson line of steamships, from Hull to New York. We got on board at Southampton, a port touched by this line on its outward voyage. We saw the usual sights of the Atlantic,—porpoise chasing one another as children at play, jumping out of the water and diving in again, racing with and even beating us in speed. Whales were at their old employment spouting water towards heaven; and sharks followed in our track with no good disposition. The gorgeous sunsets of the Atlantic were the same as ever, one evening being, as far as our experience extends, unprecedently grand. There in the sky was an islet of gold—O such gold!—that made us think of Long Island celestially reproduced. There, in that island, stretching away in marvellous perspective, were forests of heavenly trees. There were harbors and bays in the broken shore line. And the clear sky all around, with here and there a tiny cloud in its clearness, served admirably to represent the water inset with an occasional rock. We gazed a long time on the gorgeous sight, and worshipped the Being who spread before us a scene of such surpassing beauty, our thoughts going forward to the time when the world shall rest under a cloudless sky in the serenity of God. A part of the voyage was cold and misty, but the last days were full of brightness and comfort. And to make our condition still more pleasant we had an affable captain (Capt. Mills), with attentive and respectful officers, the steward deserving mention by himself for his unwearied and successful endeavors to make our voyage one of delight.

We arrived in New York in thirteen days. We had come for a purpose—it was to hold fellowship in worship with the dear and loved of years gone by; to encourage the hearts of our brethren and sisters by rehearsing the spread of the truth of God in England; to ask their kind assistance in the onerous work in which we are engaged. The campmeetings—Springfield and Alton Bay—loomed in our vision. There, we knew, for many years, the children of "our Father" had met in sweet accord; had mingled their hearts and voices in sacred melody; had indicated the events of the day betokening the approach of the King of the house of David; had exhorted each other to continue in the faith, hope and love that are in Christ; had united their prayers for Divine blessing; had rejoiced together, and wept, and sought to save sinners, and initiated believing men by baptism into the communion of the church.

But our vision was indistinct. We tried to see the trees, and the preaching-stand, and the tents and wooden houses in all their reality; but the many impressions made upon our mind during the years of our dwelling in our own country had partly obliterated the sight, and only dimly could we take in the meeting-ground of days gone by.

A brief stay in New York, and we are on our way to campmeeting. We shall see now the much-loved spot. We shall see many with whom we have corresponded. We shall be restored to the society of loving, earnest, thorough friends of Jesus. For a while, the isolation of our position will be lost in the gladness of christian fellowship. Thank God for such a meeting as that of Springfield—and we add by anticipation, as that also of Alton Bay. Hither the tired, worn laborer repairs to gain strength. And not in vain does he, in unison with godly hearts, seek his Father's and Savior's benediction.

Five hours are gone, and we are drawing near to Springfield; we shall soon be there. Here is Thompsonville Station, and here Longmeadow; we are now only four miles from Springfield. It is near eleven o'clock at night. Will there be any campmeeting conveyances in waiting at the depot? We question within ourselves; and while we do so, the cars move into the terminus, and we find ourselves in the town which produces that marvellous standard of ideas and philology—Webster's Dictionary.

Here at last! But there is no wagon in waiting to carry passengers to the campground. If we get there we shall have to go afoot, for we have not sufficient means to hire one of the four-wheelers standing close to the depot, that we are importuned to avail ourselves of by the drivers who call out to us. Our money has come down to a very few cents; we must tramp it. We have forgotten the way, and the distance to be traveled. But with a good tongue, and clear eyes, and a heart full of hope, and physical strength improving, we can do the distance whatever it be. To our delight, we find it to be less than two miles.

We are on the way—alone. No, not alone; the Lord Jesus Christ is with our spirit. "The best of all is, God is with us." Now our thoughts thicken. Who shall we see first? How shall we be greeted? Lord, let us be of use to our brethren. We would not be so selfish as to ask for blessing for ourselves only; be pleased to make us a blessing. May our fellowship in the gospel be more thorough and profitable than we have ever yet experienced. How shall we know which is the turning we must take to get into the woods where the tents are pitched? There is no one on the road to direct us. We will peer through the hedge to discover by the lights its situation. We look. While we do so, we continue our meditation. When we find the place, will the community have retired? Will our brethren and friends be asleep? Where shall we lay our weary selves for rest? Will any one invite us to take shelter with them? What will be the events of the morrow? and the next day? and the whole week? Bro. Grant has wrttten us that we shall have the privilege of giving an account of the growth of the word of the Lord in England, and tell of the work. How will we do it? We will do it so faithfully and exactly that any one coming to England shall see that no color has been placed upon the facts. Our mind goes home. We remember our wife and child and other relatives, and a hearty prayer ascends on their behalf.

Our meditation is broken; for here on the right is an opening. Is this the road to the grounds? We decide it is not, and pursue our course. Presently we come to another opening. That looks like it. But the entrance is now more of a road than it was four years ago. Can it be that we are right? Shall we shout out, to arrest if possible some straggler that may have come outside the camp for a stroll, and a smoke, after the services of the day? What are we thinking about—a smoke! How is it we do not remember that the Adventists, as a people, are set against this filthy, wasteful, injurious habit? Probably there is no such straggler about. We look to discover the lights. Yes, there is one; and further on I see another. We determine to go down the road at all hazards. Our heart is big; for if it is the camp-ground, then we shall be there.

Every step is now taken with care. Caution says, Look out that you do not stumble. A flag,—"THY KINGDOM COME!" Surely, that is an Advent sentiment. We must be there. Yes, we are. We see it to be so. The same entrance as of old. Dear, dear spot! Meeting-place of God's dear children. Hallowed locality! "Ebenezer!" Four years ago we stood in thy grounds; many are the changes we have seen since we left thee, and great is the work that God has done by his own vessel of mercy; but now we are back again to rest awhile in thy arbor of delight. Who shall we first take the hand of?

We enter the sacred enclosure. What a deeply solemn sight! How still are all things! There in the centre circle is the preaching-stand and house, and displayed on its front is a banner, with this motto painted upon it—"THE LORD COMETH!" while just above it over the gable and the roof is the bell that says at half-past five in the morning, "Come to prayer"; and at ten at night, "Go to bed"; and that frequently during the day summons the encampment to devotional or preaching exercises. Before this stand there is a semi-circle of slanting forms with backs, providing seats for about six thousand persons. Tall trees of oak and pine and chestnut of about a hundred feet high, with their umbrageous foliage, stand up amid these seats. Circling this house and stand are the camp houses and tents, a pretty sight indeed. We are in the midst of it all. Can this people, buried in such deathly silence, be the people who of all others are most interested in life? There are only two lights burning, and yet it is said they have the most light of any society in the world. No one is about. The place is deserted and solitary. It is midnight. We think of the passage, "At midnight there was a cry made, Behold the Bridegroom cometh!" O, if Jesus came now! Now, this minute!

We encompass the circle, looking to find a place of repose, but none offers. Every tent is silent. Finally we repair to the stand-house, and are challenged by "Who's there?" We grasp by the hand a dear fellow-laborer, our brother Morrill. Bro. Grant shows himself from above, and inquires, Who speaks? We reply, and want to know who it is we address. "It's Miles," is the word, and we are led quietly up stairs and assigned a place of rest, our brother remarking that in the morning, at the waking-up of the brethren who are asleep in the room, there will be a surprise at our presence as at the birth of an unexpected child.

Day comes. We are out early. And now comes the pure pleasure anticipated. Warm and thorough are the greetings we receive. Our hand is pressed in such a manner as leaves no doubt that our brethren still cherish toward us the christian feelings that we once knew. Friendships are again renewed. Ejaculations are as plentiful as blackberries in their season. One says, "Why, Bro. Kellaway, is that you? God bless you." Another says, "When did you come? I am glad to see you." Another, "I feel I must shake hands with you, although you do not know me." Another, "I know you by your writings; I have often read your articles. You seem like an old friend. Give me your hand." And thus, and with many another kind expression of welcome, we are received by both old and new friends. We try to stammer out thanks to all. We assure them that it gives us as much pleasure to be present, as it does our friends to have our company. And we feel that indeed we can utter what we have ever confessed, "I believe in the communion of saints." We are loved; and we like it well. We are indeed grateful for such a christian reception, the brethren say, "for our works' sake."

The meetings to-day are full of life. But we must confess that our chief pleasure is to go round and renew the acquaintances of the past. We scan the tents one by one, and the dear faces that beam upon us love. We give a word here and another there. We revive our impressions of the faithful. We pray for peace and beatitude upon the children of God, and are wished prosperity in return. Heaven, look down upon this sight. Earth, see how christians love one another. A sweet harmony prevails upon the ground. Every one breathes after a more submissive trust, and a full satisfaction with God.

FROM J. C. & S. E. SMITH.

To the scattered ones in Jesus, Greeting: Again I would let you know of the goodness of God shown toward us, and of the prosperity of the work of the Lord in Kan. At our annual conference in Franklin Co. the Lord blest as ever. Brethren and sisters from afar came to worship the Lord in spirit and in truth. Bro. Lapham and wife and Bro. Preston and wife came a distance of a hundred and thirty miles or more, notwithstanding the very muddy traveling. Others came a long distance. Bro. Cate and companion, from Mo., came nearly a hundred miles, fording streams, and surmounting heavy obstacles, that they might meet with those of like precious faith in the gospel. And he did us actual service, and the cause was greatly benefitted by his being with us. I pray the Lord may raise up men like unto him, who shall go forth in the all-prevailing name of Jesus to declare his unsearchable riches, which have been revealed to the lost race of Adam. At this meeting the Spirit of truth was manifest, and many testimonies from overflowing hearts told what the Lord had done. Surely it was a rich season of rejoicing to the waiting band.

Our brethren and sisters from Ottumwa, Coffey Co., added greatly to the interest of the meetings by their songs and words of cheer. Bro. Klock, their Elder, gave a heartfelt, thrilling discourse from Num. 23:19—"God is not a man that he should lie, neither the son of man that he should repent. Hath he said, and shall he not do it? or hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good?" It was meat in due season. He spoke of the history of the past, and the fulfillment of the many predictions of God's holy prophets. Truly God will not lie. His words are immutable. His word has been settled in heaven, and soon will be on the earth. Let us all abide by it. The church in Franklin Co. were greatly blest. They showed their love for the truth by opening their houses and providing so liberally for all who came. Five went forward in baptism. The meeting commenced and closed with love and good will toward men. Our hearts were sad on parting, yet we parted expecting to meet ere long in Eden restored.

After this meeting we returned to our brothers' home, and stopped with them over the Lord's day. The work of the Lord has been going on in this place from the time of father's first arrival in this State, eight years ago. Father's and mother's prayers have not been in vain. Mother's dying testimony was that she expected to meet us all in the kingdom of God. Father died soon after he arrived. His last hours were peaceful. He rests in Jesus. Before he died, he sung, "We shall walk through the valley in peace."

Some three years after my brothers and sisters came, the Lord directed us to be with them. Since then we have hoped and prayed for what we now see. My youngest brother and sister have given themselves up to the dear Savior to follow him. It is blessed indeed to see what a noble stand they have made for Christ. And while at home, on the Lord's day mentioned, we buried them wth six others in baptism,—one being a volunteer at the water's edge, who had formerly been a Quaker. Another young Bro. had been sprinkled, but the Spirit and the word taught him differently, and so he obeyed the command of the Savior, rather than to sanction the command of men. The Lord blest in a special manner, and we all had a rejoicing season in him.

The 6th of June we started for Vernon Co., Mo., taking with us books, tracts and papers, to scatter by the way. The first night we stopped at Burlington, with Sister Cole. Found her still contending for the truth; also Bro. Bear, who takes the Crisis. June 7th we passed on to Leroy, and from thence to Geneva, where we were obliged to call at a public house on account of a heavy shower. While there, we had the privilege of scattering the blessed seed. While passing through this country three years ago we stopped at a man's house and took dinner, and he made charges which we paid. Some time after we called again, and they invited us to dinner, making no charges, and invited us to come again and have meetings. Thus the Lord leads to his own glory. All praise be to him.

From this place we passed on to Iola, where we put up for the night. The next morning we went to the mineral springs. The water tastes very peculiar, and after drinking it one desires more. It comes gushing up some seven hundred feet under ground. It rises in alternate gushes. It is said it does many wonderful cures. While at this spring, a Bro. Loomis made himself known to us, and invited us at once to his home. He was there for his health, and stated that the water had done him much good. The gas that comes from the water will burn like liquid. They use it to heat their water to take for baths. A number of buildings are erected already for invalids. Many come or send for the water all through Kansas. We took dinner with Bro. Loomis, had a season of prayer with him, and then passed on to Humbolt, where we met Bro. Beeman and wife. Went with them to their home, had a good rest over night, and a good season in the Lord. From this place we passed on to near Dayton, and stopped with a Bro. Chown, and had meetings over Lord's day. Some started for the kingdom.

On Monday, we went on our journey. We had not gone far before a heavy rain came pouring down, and we were obliged to call to a Friend's home, and were treated kindly; partook of the bounties of earth with them, and as the rain ceased we moved on to Marmaton, and tarried at Bro. Himes' over night. Bro. and Sr. Peake called to see us, and we had a good season in the Lord with them. In the morning we started for Memphis; called on Bro. Clark, and stopped all night. On the 14th we went through Ft. Scott; stopped with a sister near that point, and scattered some of the precious seed. We then had some over twenty miles to travel. We did not go but a few miles before we had to call at a house to get shelter from a heavy shower. I got wet through, and my clothes were very muddy, after taking books, tracts, bundles and valises to the house. We stopped an hour or more with them, showed our chart, gave them tracts, and when the rain abated we passed on. It was a hard time for the horses on account of the mud, but we reached Bro. Shepler's at three or four o'clock P. M., tired, hungry, and worn. But Sr. S. soon had some of earth's bounties placed on the table to supply our wants.

The 16th, at night, we met for worship. The Lord helped in speaking from the words of our Savior, found in Luke 20:35, 36—"But they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage. Neither can they die any more, for they are equal unto the angels; and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection." Conference met the 17th. We continued with the church over Lord's day, and had a blessed season with the children. We found some of the brethren and sisters wide awake and at their post of duty. Bro. Fry and wife are firm in the blessed hope, with others of like precious faith. A large church has been raised up in Nevada through the instrumentality of Bro. Cate and his co-workers. We found brethren and sisters in Mo. warm-hearted and kind. It was a visit by us long to be remembered, and we parted with them with reluctance. We returned to Kansas, a distance of over a hundred miles, in three days time. Passing through Pleasanton, we saw Sr. Crowell. She is looking forward to the glorious resurrection, when her hopes will be realized. The 28th we went to Ottumwa, fifteen miles, and on the 29th pitched the tent, and had a meeting in it at night. The report will be seen in another place.

Thus far the Lord has led us on, and we have seen his guiding hand in many things. Many dear saints have been encouraged to press on toward the kingdom. Some too, we trust, have been convicted of sin, and we hope they will repent and find mercy ere it is too late. The gospel field here is too large for a few. O that a strong band may come forth and labor for Jesus. We need more help. May the message fly, and the kingdom soon come. Pray for us, that we may war the good warfare, and overcome all things that are not according to the divine will of God, and stand at last before the Son of man blameless.

THOMAS FOOTE.

"The Lord pardon thy servant in this thing."—2 KINGS 5:18

This was the petition of Naaman the Syrian, for the liberty of indulgence in a point where God and conscience condemned him. He had received a blessing from the Lord, and he would express his gratitude for the same; only said he, "when my master goeth into the house of Rimmon to worship there, and he leaneth on my hand, and I bow myself in the house of Rimmon, . . . the Lord pardon thy servant in this thing." Though it be idol worship, and condemned by his own conscience, yet since it appears so essential to me, "the Lord pardon thy servant in this thing." It is the prayer of many professed christians thus desiring some forbidden indulgence. It is the petition of tobacco-using christians.

Dear brethren, notwithstanding many have undertaken to set forth the evils that come upon the mind, as well as the body, from the use of tobacco, it seemeth good to me also, having had a long experience in this matter, to write some things which may be a benefit to some who have a desire to be freed from the influence and effects of this poisonous weed.

From early life I learned to use tobacco, and used it for forty years or more, and shall carry its effects in my system while I remain on earth. I many times resolved to leave off the use of it, being satisfied it was injuring me both in body and mind; but as often would say with Naaman, "The Lord pardon thy servant in this thing." Now, brethren, I will tell you how I gained the victory over it. I had been trying in my own strength, and as often failed. When I would get revived in the spirit of my mind, then I would see the evil of it and cry, "The Lord pardon thy servant in this thing." Such texts of Scripture as these would force themselves into my mind: "Thou that preachest a man should not steal, dost thou steal?" "Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." "Keep thyself pure," etc. I never did have confidence to ask a man to leave off the use of intoxicating drink, while I was a slave to tobacco.

At last I began to reason with myself in this manner: Is it not the will of the Lord that I should now and forever quit the use of tobacco? and if so, will he not help me do it? I answered at once, He surely will. I now divested myself of the least and last remains of the vile stuff, and asked the Lord to help. He did, bless his name; and he not only gave me strength to resist, but took the desire and love of it from me. I did not need Gentian, or any other substitute, thank the Lord. Nothing short of the power of God enabled me to do it; and I rejoice to-day that I am free from the bondage of Satan in this respect. And now let me say, that if there is a person on earth that I can sympathize with, it is the man, the brother, that would be free, but has not strength of his own to resist its power.

Dear brethren, let me say, you can not succeed in your own strength. Ask God to help you, believe he is faithful that has promised; that in Jehovah is everlasting strength; and he will make you every whit clean.

I have been prompted to write on this subject now, because I find many professed Advent people who are addicted to the use of this vile weed, and who are paying ten or fifteen cents a week for it; who cannot afford to pay for a paper, or pay anything towards the support of those who are publishing the glad tidings of the kingdom. "My brethren, these things ought not so to be." We profess to be the people of the living God, having Christ in us the hope of glory, and looking for him to come the second time, without sin, unto salvation. If so, "what manner of persons ought we to be." The way is a narrow one; there is nothing to enter it "that defileth . . . or maketh a lie." I desire to see the way in all its narrowness. I have been wandering a long time, and do consider eternal life worth all the sacrifice we can make. Now, brethren, accept this in the spirit in which it is written. God knows I love my brethren, and want them saved. I see the time is short. Jesus is coming soon.

SUFFERING AND WAITING WITH THE GROANING CREATION.—Rom. 8: 17-25.

L. K. LOMBARD.

This truth I see where'er I go,
That earth's a wilderness of woe;
And yet 'tis well that it is so,
Lest we should hold it dear.
If "few and evil" are our days,
And fortune rarely sheds her rays
Upon our earthly walks and ways,
We would not linger here.

When we compare this life so brief,
Where friends are fading like the leaf,
And pleasures all seem mixed with grief,
With that bright world to come;
We feel that here we would not stay,
Nor even linger by the way;
But hasten toward that joyful day,
When all the saints get home.

What though my frame is racked with pain,
And wandering thoughts disturb my brain;
And other things occasion pain
Along the pilgrim way;
Yet all my path is cheered with hope,
Which lifts my drooping spirits up,
And takes the pain from sorrow's cup,
And points to dawning day.

Hope comes with healing in her wings,
And counteracts life's bitter stings,
Assuring us of better things
In store for all the blest;
And when I hear its welcome voice,
My heart is ravished with its joys,
And soars above earth's tears and toys,
And waits the promised rest.

This hope both purifies and saves,
And bears us o'er affliction's waves,
And brings our loved ones from the graves,
No more to fade and die.
It points us to a home that's bright,
Where we shall find no clouds nor night,
And wrong can't triumph over right;—
I'm glad this time is nigh.

I long to see that day appear,
So full of joy and heavenly cheer;
And even now I wish 'twere here,
To end all sighs and tears.
My heart is yearning to get home,
Within the New Jerusalem,
And prays, Lord Jesus, quickly come,
And close these weary years.

SPOTS.

E. MOSS.

There are many who charge the advocates of holiness with carrying their "pet idea" too far; of being too extravagant and exacting in their demands. We believe too much importance cannot be attached to this precious doctrine. The work of sanctification, which has been agitating the church during the last few years, has been the means, to a large extent, of rescuing it from its Laodicean state. It has led thousands to the fountain of cleansing, who had never tested the power of Christ to save them fully. It has been the salt that has saved the church from corruption and decay. It is the fnlfillment of the prophecy contained in Daniel 12:10: "Many shall be purified, and made white, and tried." The Lord will have a pure and tried people. Wherever this blessed doctrine has been taught, and duty made plain, great is the responsibility of those who reject it.

We, as christians, believe that the taint of sin upon our garments will exclude us from a place in the kingdom; and yet we permit known defects and blemishes to exist in our christian character, which give us moments of uneasiness and disquiet; are in the way of our usefulness, and a stone of stumbling to others. Paul in his letter to the Ephesians 5:27, describes the kind of church that Christ wants. "A glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish." As the church nowhere in the Bible means a building, but always a society of true believers, without regard to nnmbers or locality, hence it is a body of which we form a part.

Again, Paul in his first epistle to Timothy 6:14, says, referring to the commandment contained in the 11th and 12th verses, "That thou keep this commandment without spot, unrebukable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ." This means a willing and perfect obedience—unrebukable—that admits of neither criticism nor censure; and this purity must be maintained until the coming of Christ. In 2 Peter 3:14, we find these words: "Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless." The such things, to which Peter refers, are described in the preceding verses: the sudden coming of the Lord, the dissolution of all material things, and the creation of the new heavens and earth. The assurance of the Lord's coming again, its suddenness, and the great events to then transpire, should incite us to so live as to be found "without spot and blameless," in that day. There are thousands today claiming a place in the church, who, if their robes were carefully scanned, would be found to contain spots that would exclude them from the society of saints.

About fifteen years ago, a most estimable christian lady related to me a dream, which made a lasting and salutary impression upon my mind. The lady in her dream was caried to the judgment scene. The Judge was seated upon his throne, with a large company before him; and as they received their sentence, and went to the places assigned them, the great procession kept moving up and taking their places. It was observed that among those who went to the left hand to be punished, there were many who had on white robes. This was a matter of surprise to our friend, and led her to inquire into the cause of their destruction. She was informed that the Judge discovered spots upon their otherwise white garments, which, though they tried carefully to conceal within the folds of their dress, yet were detected and punished.

Is it true that one spot uncleansed will shut us out of the kingdom? and that death may suddenly close our existence here, or that the Judge may come at any moment? Yes, these things are true. Is it not important then that we live without condemnation; saved from all sin; ready, and gladly waiting to obey the summons when called?

WORKERS FOR THE LORD.

ALBERT S. BURNHAM.

What we need is more female workers. Women can reach the young. They have finer sensibilities than men, and more affection. There are hundreds of young women among us, who could do a world of good in getting a few of the young about them, and instructing them in the word. They could go about carrying tracts and papers, and thus win their attention. They that win souls are wise. God has wonderfully opened the way for me. To him be all the glory. Through the great kindness of Dr. Cullis, of the Consumptives' Home, office 16 Somerset St., Mr. Springer, No. 2 Tremont Temple, Mr. Magee, of the Zion's Herald, office, Bromfield St., Mr. Gilman, of the Tract Society, and Mr. Orrack, 46 Kneeland St., and the Bible Society, 15 Cornhill, and the Crisis Office, I have given to the poor 11,000 papers and tracts, 150 bound books, 150 Bibles and testaments, 900 loaves of bread, 600 lbs. of meat, 70 pairs of boots and shoes, besides other things; and thirty dollars in money.

I want others to get papers and tracts, and go about doing good. They can get some at these places.

I meet with scorn and hatred among the Irish, that is, some of them; but after long labor, an impression is made, as they see I do not do this for money. I have been assaulted twice, and have been guarded by the police.

The papers and tracts have gone to Florida, and other parts of the south; N. H.; Maine, Boston, Lawrence, in the House of Correction, Bradford, Groveland, Wakefield, Hamilton, and Essex. If you have any papers or tracts, and will send them by Ayer's Express, 10 Court Square, Boston, I shall be very grateful.

I wish every one knew how easy it is to be happy. As I went this morning with loaves of bread, and a bright silver half dollar given me, and put the half dollar in a loaf of bread, I was happy as a king.

Haverhill, Mass.

STAND STILL.

Strength often manifests itself in impatience, but the greatest strength is that which can be patient. In quietness and confidence (or faith), lies our truest strength. Though the Red Sea be before us, and there be no bridge, no sail, nay, not a raft nor a plank on which to float over, when on either side of us are mountains that we cannot climb, and behind are Pharaoh and his avenging hosts; then to stand still and see the salvation of our God, simply because God hath bid us do so, that is the sublimest exercise of faith, for it is the most complete renunciation of self, and the most thorough dependence upon God. Such faith as that shall not have long to halt. For such faith God will open up a way, even though it be across the bed of the sea, and "go forward!" shall be the cry. Whatever the night may be, in the morning faith will start the timbrel and the dance, calling joyously for a song unto the Lord, who so gloriously hath triumphed on behalf of his own.

HOME AND HEALTH.

DEBILITY.

Among the causes of debility, the first and principle ones are referable to dietetic errors. The alimentary function was instituted for the sole end that the wasted tissues of the living organism might be replenished, and the normal standard of strength and temperature maintained. To subserve such an end it is absolutely indispensable that the aliment be of a proper quality and quantity. If of an improper kind, its introduction into the organism will be attended with injurious consequences; for what the system cannot appropriate, must be retained in the organism until it can be expelled by the enunctories, through the bowels, skin, and respiration. This extra effort on the part of the living organism to rid itself of improper or foreign substances introduced within its domain, is necessarily attended with a large expenditure of vitality, and induces constipation and congestion of the abdominal and pelvic viscera.

A persistent practice of improper and excessive alimentation, it is evident, conduces to a permanent congestion of the liver, by imposing upon this important organ more labor than it can perform, in the resulting disease of which a sure foundation is laid for a very large number of the "ills to which flesh is heir." To mention specialities in diet, flesh-food, salted provisions, condiments, and stimulating or nervine beverages—tea and coffee—which tend constantly to produce an inflammatory condition of the whole system, as well as a preternatural excitement of the animal propensities. All constipating food is objectionable, whether in the form of fine flour bread, short-cakes, butter-biscuits, doughnuts, old cheese, or in any other shape. Swine-flesh in every form—pork, ham, sausages, lard or gravy—is especially abominable, and not to be for a moment tolerated, being a prolific source of foul humors, erysipelatous eruptions, scrofulous swellings, and other morbid conditions of the living structures.

That all the bodily functions may be performed normally, it is especially important to preserve the purity of the blood, by introducing into the living system only those articles of food which will not deteriorate it. Hence, when we supply the necessary materials, which go to build up healthy structures, and thus lay a sure foundation for constitutional vigor and long life—the best and surest safeguards against disease. Let human beings subsist on wholesome articles of food instead of the prevailing abominations of popular cookery—highly seasoned foods, sweetmeats, rich pastries and gravies, animal food in every shape, and a multitude of other articles—the present fearful tide of disease would be in a great measure checked, and physicians would find comparatively little to do in the capacity of medicating ailments.

More than this, very many of the besetting sins of mankind—those demons in the shape of perverted combativeness, destructiveness, licentiousness, acquisitiveness, anger, hate, jealousy, revenge, etc.—by which the fairest portions of the earth have been converted into dead and dreary wastes, and the noble gifts of man prostituted at the shrine of ambition, power and oppression—would largely disappear. What untold misery and misfortune has fallen to the race in consequence of foul, inflamed blood, dyspeptic and overburdened stomachs, diseased livers, congestions of the brain, and preternaturally excited propensities, induced by obstructed and foul conditions of the organism generally! A healthier, stronger, better developed race, with pure blood, clear heads, quiet nerves, and normal functions generally, can only exist upon the earth when these laws of nature and of God are known and obeyed.—Herald of Health.

PEEL PEACHES.—The furz or down upon the outside of the peach should all be rubbed off before eating them, or what is better, the peach should be peeled. We have seen many persons with a troublesome rash which was caused by eating peaches with the skins on.—Herald of Health.

SUMMER DRINKS.

"What are the best and most healthful summer drinks?" The immediate object of drinking is to satisfy thirst. There is but one thing capable of doing this, and that is water. The principal ingredient of all the different kinds of drinks used is water, and the purer the water, and the less quantity of other substances mixed with it, the more perfectly does it supply the wants of the system. This being the case, pure water is the best and most healthful of drinks, not only for summer, but for all seasons of the year. The manner in which it is drank is very important. If it is swallowed rapidly and in large quantities, it may produce undue distention and pressure of the stomach, and interfere with its functions and those of the surrounding organs. If the water thus swallowed be very cold, and the system at the same time be suffering from heat and fatigue, very serious results are apt to occur from the sudden shock. Water should always be drank slowly. By sipping, the desire for drink is more effectually gratified, and any desirable quantity at any temperature may be drank wtihout any injurious effect. Ice water in summer is not objectionable if taken in this way. Water should not be drank at or soon after meals, as it interferes with the process of digestion.—Herald of Health.

CARE OF THE TEETH.

The teeth are covered with a thin, hard enamel, like glass, and anything which cracks this enamel, will cause the teeth to decay. Excessively hot or cold drinks will do this. Any housekeeper knows better than to pour hot water into a glass dish. Remember that your teeth are your glass ware, and use them carefully. Powerful acids will also destroy the enamel on the teeth. Most of the patent tooth powders and washes contain acids; and although they give the teeth a pearly appearance, they quickly eat through the enamel and destroy the teeth.

The teeth are designed to last as long as any part of the body, and it is only the neglect and abuse they receive which cause them to decay thus early. After each meal the teeth should be thoroughly cleansed, and every particle of food removed from between them. Never use pins, needles, or jack-knives for tooth-picks; but some substance which is softer than the enamel of the teeth, like wood, goose-quill, ivory, or gold. For cleansing the teeth, nothing is better than a good tooth-brush and warm water. The frequent use of the tooth-brush hardens the gums and keeps them healthy; and usually this is all the care necessary to keep the teeth clean and bright.—Health Reformer.

SOWING LITTLE SEEDS.

Little Bessie had got a present of a new book, and she eagerly opened it to look at the first picture. It was the picture of a boy sitting by the side of a stream, and throwing seeds into the water.

"I wonder what this picture is about," said she; "why does the boy throw seeds into the water?"

"Oh I know," said her brother Edward, who had been looking at the book; "he is sowing the seeds of water-lilies."

"But how small the seeds look!" said Bessie. "It seems strange that such large plants should grow from such little things."

"You are just sowing such tiny seeds every day, Bessie, and they will come up large, strong plants after a while," said her father.

"Oh no, father; I have not planted any seeds for a long while."

"I have seen my daughter sow a number of seeds to-day."

Bessie looked puzzled, and her father smiled, and said, "Yes, I have watched you planting flowers, and seeds, and weeds today."

"Now I know that you are joking, for I would not plant ugly weeds."

"I shall tell you what I mean. When you laid aside that interesting book, and attended to what your mother wished done, you were sowing seeds of kindness and love. When you broke the dish that you knew your mother valued, and came instantly and told her, you were sowing seeds of truth. When you took the cup of cold water to the poor woman at the gate, you were sowing the seeds of mercy. These are all beautiful flowers, Bessie. But I hope my little girl has been planting the great tree of "love to God," and that she will tend and watch it until its branches reach the skies, and meet before his throne.

"And the weeds, father?"

When you were impatient with baby, you sowed the seeds of ill-temper. When you spoke crossly to Robert, you planted anger. When you waited some time after your mother called you, you sowed disobedience and selfishness. These are all noxious weeds. Pull them up. Do not let them grow in your garden."—Children's Friend.

EFFECTS OF WINE.—Sir Henry Thompson, who is very high medical authority, wrote a letter to Lady Ellice, in which he says:—

"Do not take your daily wine under any pretext of its doing you good. Take it frankly as a luxury—one which must be paid for; by some persons very lightly, by some at a high price, but always to be paid for; and mostly some loss of health, or of mental power, or of calmness of temper, or of judgment, is the price."

Dr. B. W. Richardson, another noted physician, sent answers to a series of questions, all of them rebutting the idea that alcohol can produce any other permanent effect than that of impairing the powers, both physical and mental, of the human body.

These facts we gather from the London Christian. M. G.

HYMNS OF THE ADVENT.—No. 4.

JESUS COMES.

Jesus comes to souls rejoicing,
Bringing news of sins forgiven;
Jesus comes in sounds of gladness,
Lifting up our souls to heaven.
Hallelujah!
Now the gate of death is riven.

Jesus comes, our joy and sorrow,
All our gloomy doubts and fears,
Banished are, like midnight darkness,
When the glowing morn appears.
Hallelujah!
Ended are our toilsome years.

Jesus comes on clouds triumphant;
Lo! the heavens "pass away";
Jesus comes, in power and glory,
Let us all our homage pay.
Hallelujah!
Sing we of that glorious day.

THE SEVEN CHURCHES.—Rev. 2nd and 3d chapters.

F. W. CLOUGH.

There are several views held concerning those seven churches of the book of Revelation. The first is, that the seven local churches of Asia only are referred to. The second, that they have both a local and prophetic application. The third, that they are prophetic only. The writer of this article takes the view first referred to; namely, that those messages were directed to, and intended especially for, the seven churches in Asia Minor; and that they never were intended to portray seven divisions of the gospel dispensation. Please notice one peculiarity, however; that the message properly extends only to the statement after each message—"He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches." Then follows what the Spirit saith,—some promise to overcomers, equally true with respect to every believer during the gospel age. For instance, after the message to the angel of the church at Ephesus, the Spirit saith to all the churches, "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God." Was that directed only to the Ephesian church, be it local or prophetic? Will Ephesian believers only eat of the tree of life, in the paradise of God? Then, please do not call that which the Spirit saith a part of the message to the angel of the church, having only an application to that church.

The first proof we shall offer in favor of the position that those seven churches are not prophetic, and do not have a prophetic application even, is in the statement made in Rev. 1: 4, 11: "John, to the seven churches which are in Asia,"—"What thou seest write in a book, and send it unto the seven churches which are in Asia." Were there seven churches in Asia? There were, as follows: Ephesus, Smyrna, Pergamos, Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia, and Laodicea. Did they bear the characteristics specified regarding each? They did. But the objector may say that the book of Revelation is a prophecy. So it is; and that foretold in the second and third chapters, concerning what should come, except the promises that only can be fulfilled when Jesus comes, were events that transpired in the history of those local churches. For instance: he says to those at Smyrna, that "the devil shall cast some of you into prison," and so they were in after years. The objector may say again, Why were the churches at Rome, at Corinth, at Philippi, or Galatia, left out? The reason is plain, when we consider that those seven churches had, previous to John's banishment, been the churches over which he had a care. How long John had been in Patmos before he received the "Revelation" from his Lord is uncertain; neither does it help or hinder the argument that the "Revelation" was something made known; and Jesus, knowing the exact condition of those seven churches in Asia, over which John had exercised a special care at the time when he was among them, and now that he is far away in an inhospitable island, gives him information concerning their condition, and also what to write to them for their spiritual edification. The prophetic expressions that occur in the messages apply only to them, and were fulfilled in their subsequent history. John then meant what he said when he used this language: "John to the seven churches which are in Asia." He did not mean to be understood as addressing all the believers during the gospel age made up of seven periods.

The next proof we offer in favor of the local application only, is in the direction of the message: "Unto the angel of the church of Ephesus write." The word angel does not necessarily apply to celestial beings, but is often applied to men. An angel of God is an agent of God; hence an eminent writer has truly said the word angel "signifies office rather than personality." It was a custom among the apostles, when they had been sufficiently long enough in a city, and had gathered together a congregation (church) of believers, to appoint over them men called elders, whose office it was to "feed the flock of God." Relative to the church at Ephesus, we find the apostle Paul, some thirty years before John was banished, at that place, and he called "the elders of the church." How many churches were there in Ephesus when Paul was there (Acts 20: 17–38)? One. What composed it? All the believers in Jesus Christ. How many elders were there? More than one; probably several; perhaps quite a number. When Jesus comes to give John the "Revelation," he directs him to write unto the angel of the church. The word "angel" referred to the Presbytery, made up of several elders, at the head of which was one individual; and sometimes the messages were directed to the leading elder; sometimes to the whole; more particularly to the bishop. Timothy once held the office.

The third proof we offer is in the internal evidences of the messages. In the message to the church at Ephesus, we find there was a class called Nicolaitans. We find the same party in the city of Pergamos; and ancient historians tell us that there was just such a party, and give an account of their doctrines. Clement, of Alexander, speaks of them as existing in his day, and records their unbridled, excessive lust. Various opinions have been expressed regarding their origin, but we know from the account given of them in Rev. 2: 6, 15, that they were evil doers, and that they held some peculiar unscriptural doctrines. But it serves our purpose that there was the same party in two different churches at the same time, proving that the church at Pergamos existed cotemporary with that of Ephesus. Again, we find that the church at Smyrna had a class of opposers who called themselves Jews, and that the Philadelphian church had the same class to contend with. The word synagogue is never used in connection with believers in Christ, but is always used referring to a body of Jews. Then those opposers with which the Presbyters and churches of Smyrna and Philadelphia had to deal with were professing Jews.

The fourth proof we offer is in the character of the book of Revelation. While John was on the island of Patmos, he had two visions; the first one in chapter one, where he sees "one like the Son of man" (Jesus), and about him seven golden candlesticks; in his right hand seven stars, and hears the messages to those same churches. The mystery of those candlesticks and stars was that they represented seven churches and their messengers. The question no doubt will be asked here, How is it that John saw only seven churches associated with our Lord; were no others his? Certainly they were; but John's charge was those seven churches, and this first vision and messages in chapters 1, 2, 3, were a revelation concerning them. When Jesus said, God was the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, did he mean to be understood that they were the only ones to whom he was God? Certainly not. No more in this case, because John saw but seven churches with our Lord, does it prove that he did not have others, or that they did not represent seven periods.

The second vision John saw contained things to be hereafter (ch. 4: 1), which includes the entire book after the third chapter, and which is made up of scenery portraying the principal events to transpire from John's day to the restitution of all things spoken by the prophets. John says he saw heaven opened (Rev. 4: 1). What did he mean by that expression? That he saw the theatre of action opened, in which he saw things to come. If he saw heaven "opened" in chapter 4: 1, it had not been "opened" to his view when he saw the first vision in chap. 1, and the seven churches do not form a part of the prophetic scenery of the book of Revelation. This appears true when after chapter three not a single reference is made to the seven churches, their messages, or messengers. The "Emphatic Diaglott" renders Rev. 1: 19, "Write therefore the things thou sawest, even those which are [present tense, seven churches in Asia], and the things which are about to transpire after these [seven churches]." Also Rev. 4: 1, "And I will show thee what things must occur after these things" (seven churches).

In Rev. fourth and fifth chapters, John was shown the outline of the gospel dispensation. First, he sees the throne, or government of God. Round about it were four and twenty thrones, and upon them were as many elders. If the one throne represented the government or authority of God, then it follows that the twenty-four thrones are associate agencies, who exercise authority in harmony with him (God). Then John saw four living ones. Who are they? Evidently worshipers of God, for they say—"Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come." No doubt they portray four phases of the church of God during the gospel dispensation. As the four living ones represent the four phases of the church of God, then it follows that seven are not portrayed. Who are the four living ones, and what is their chronology? The first one from John's day, or more properly Christ's ascension, A. D. 34, lasting until 313. The second from 313 to Justinian. The third from Justinian to Charlemagne; the fourth the Protestant era, beginning in the early days of the protest against Roman Catholicism, and will last until that system is destroyed by the brightness of His coming.

Of the seven churches, Edward Irving says in his prophetic works, vol. 1, p. 178: "After the vision of Christ, the Revealer, and his commission to the apostle, come the epistles to the seven churches, which relate to the things which are; yet not so strictly confined to the things which are; but that they look forward to certain experiences of trial which these churches were to have in the time approaching, even down to the ten years of persecution under Diocletian, which is threatened upon the church of Smyrna, and averted from the church of Philadelphia, under the name of 'the hour of temptation.' It is not until the fourth chapter that we come to the distinct revelation of the things that are to be; those great events of prime importance to the church, which occupy the remainder of the book."

Bishop Newton says, in Prophetic Dissertations, p. 450:—"The second and third chapters contain the seven epistles to the seven churches of Asia. . . . . These seven are addressed particularly, because they were under St. John's immediate inspection; he constituted bishops over them." In the first vision Jesus Christ, or his angel, speaking in his name and acting in his person, appears amid the seven golden candlesticks, meaning the seven churches. St. John, at the sight of so glorious a person, fell down senseless. He is raised, and commanded to write the things he had seen, contained in this first chapter; and the things which are—the present (then) state of the seven churches, represented in the next chapters; and the things which shall be hereafter—the future events which began to be exhibited in the fourth chapter, as it is said in the first verse—"Come up hither, and I will show thee the things which must be hereafter."

Having noticed briefly the proofs showing that those seven churches were local, and not prophetic, we will now notice some things concerning them.

EPHESUS. More is known of the Ephesian church than any other of the seven, because the Acts of the Apostles contain information concerning it; also Paul's epistle to them, and also his epistles to Timothy. "Unto the angel of the church of Ephesus write. . . . I [Jesus] know thy works [presbyter or elders], and thy labor, and thy patience. . . . Nevertheless, I have somewhat against thee [presbyter] because thou hast left thy first love. Remember therefore from whence thou [presbyter] art fallen, and repent, and do the first works; or else I will come unto thee [presbyter] quickly, and remove thy candlestick." Now it seems clear that the language is addressed to the "angel" of the church, and not to the church itself; and except they repent, Jesus would visit them and remove their (elders) candlestick (church) out of its place. The elders of the Ephesian church had left their first love. The cause of it is apparent. When we refer to Acts 20: 17–30, we find that Paul labored among them personally three years, faithfully preaching the word of life to them. Paul went from Ephesus into Macedonia, but appointed Timothy bishop over the Ephesian church. See 1 Tim. 1: 3. It is evident however that Timothy was not alone, for when Paul returned from Macedonia he called "the elders of the church"; showing that there were others associated with Timothy, thus constituting the office of "angel" or "messenger." The charge thirty years afterward against them is that they had "left their first love." When Paul was about to leave them finally, he said to the elders whom he had called, "For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock; also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse thtngs, to draw away disciples after them." Acts 20: 29, 30. No doubt those men which arose afterwards among the presbytery, "speaking perverse things," are just that class referred to in Rev. 2: 6 as Nicolaitanes. It is said that John made Ephesus his chief residence.

SMYRNA. Nothing is known of the church at Smyrna from the Scriptures; but from the description given of the eldership of that church (Rev. 2: 8–11), we infer that they were a class of men faithful to their Lord, with whom Jesus finds no fault. "I know thy works [elders], and tribulation, and poverty (but thou art rich), and I know the blasphemy of them which say they are Jews, and are not, but are the synagogue of Satan. . . . The devil shall cast some of you [elders] into prison, that ye may be tried [proved], and ye shall have tribulation ten days." The "tribulation" came from Jewish and heathen opposers; "poverty" from the spoiling of their goods.

PERGAMOS. "And to the angel [elders] of the church in Pergamos write; . . . I [Jesus] know thy works, and where thou dwellest, even where Satan's seat is ["Satan's seat"—Pergamos—is reported to have been the very headquarters of those who opposed the Christians]. . . . But I have a few things against thee [presbyter], because thou hast there them that hold the doctrine of Balaam." Balaam of old "loved the wages of unrighteousness," and prophesied of Israel to Balak for his money. So in the little church at Pergamos, A. D. 96, there were men among the eldership who sought the money advantage, rather than the good of the flock. So also the Nicolaitanes existed among the eldership of the church in Pergamos.

THYATIRA. "Unto the angel of the church in Thyatira write; . . . I know thy works and charity. . . . Notwithstanding, I [Jesus] have a few things against thee [presbyter], because thou sufferest that woman Jezebel . . . to teach." The original Greek reads "thy wife to teach." Whose wife? The leading elder, or presbyter. One item of proof, showing that the elder of the church was addressed, and that his wife was a false teacher. The charge against the eldership of that church was, because they allowed that woman, a false teacher, to teach. "But unto you [presbyter] I say, and unto the rest in Thyatira, as many as have not this doctrine, . . . I will put none other burden." It must be evident to the thinking mind that the "you" by no means includes "the rest" in Thyatira; hence proves that the church are not addressed or referred to even, until the expression "the rest" is used, which includes the remnant who adhered to the true teachings.

SARDIS. "Unto the angel of the church in Sardis write; . . . Thou hast a name that thou livest, and art dead. Be watchful, and strengthen the things which remain, that are ready to die." What things were ready to die? The church over which he was placed; which, on account of a want of vigilance on his part, was lacking in vitality, consequently about to die, or be no more.

PHILADELPHIA. "To the angel of the church in Philadelphia write." This elder and his associates are highly commended. They had an open door set before them, just such as Paul had opened to him. 1 Cor. 16: 9, and 2 Cor. 2: 12. Jesus promised them that "the synagogue of Satan" (which said they were Jews, but lied) should come and worship before their feet; and it certainly follows that promise demanded the conversion of those professed Jews who bitterly opposed the faithful preaching of the presbyter of the Philadelphian christians. To come and worship at his feet would be to receive his teachings; to know that Jesus had loved him would be to experience the power of the divine Spirit themselves. And because he kept Jesus' word he now, A. D. 96, promises to keep him (presbyter) from the hour of trial about to come upon the whole world; referring probably to heathen persecutions coming. Not an item occurs in this message which shows that it has a prophetic application to any particular church in these last days.

LAODICEA. "Unto the angel of the church of the Laodiceans write. . . . . I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot." This is an indifferent, lukewarm elder in the church of Christ, whose reliance was in the fact that he was rich, and increased with goods, and knew not that he was "poor, and blind, and naked." He is counseled to buy gold (real riches), and white raiment, that his nakedness appear not.

One thing seems clearly brought out in these messages to the messengers; viz., that a large part of the prosperity of the Lord's church is due to the kind of men who minister to their spiritual wants; and in rebuking or encouraging, as the case demanded, of those men over the church of God. The church was benefitted in proportion as they heeded the admonitions. Five out of the seven are admonished. The other two are commended for their faithfulness. For the promises thrown out as an inducement for all, as well as the seven churches, I have no local application.

But, says an objector, the names of each have a mystical meaning. Of this French says: "So much has been idly written upon the names of these seven churches, and the mystical meanings which they contain, that one shrinks from any seeming fellowship in such foolish and unprofitable fancies." If the seven names have a meaning, the territory where they were (Asia) must symbolize the gospel age. The word Asia means muddy. How can muddy express the gospel age? Let the Romish church deal in supposed mysteries, but let us have plain, square truth.

"IT IS FINISHED."

W. C. TOWNSEND.

The creation of man was one of the sublimest actions ever performed by the supreme ruler of the universe. Man, created in the image of God, with endowments and attributes which were possessed by no other earthly object, was placed in a spot where everything tended to ennoble, and satisfy the cravings of his higher nature. Possessed with the gift of language, given rule over the fowls of the air, beasts of the field, and fishes of the sea; having a companion who could share his joys and pleasures, and situated in the loveliest region of the whole world, it would seem eternal happiness would have been his portion. But no; in an evil hour, listening to the voice of the tempter, he fell, and lost forever his natural birthright, also entailed death upon all the human family, who succeeded him. After having done so much for the object of his love, Jehovah would, in the eyes of all the race, have been justified in leaving him to the punishment which he so richly deserved; but with a love which never has been and never can be equalled, he at the moment of Adam's fall provided a remedy whereby he could escape the consequences of his sin. Simultaneous with the thought that the image of his own personality might yield to the subtle influences of the fallen Lucifer, was the idea which finally terminated in the offering of his only son for man's redemption; and in the same sentence, which condemns him to toil and sorrow upon earth, is promised a Messiah who should establish a kingdom and put under his feet the power of Satan.

Time passed on, and ever and anon the voice of prophets, echoing through the ages, was heard proclaiming the tidings that a Savior should be born, who would rule God's people. The law of Moses typified in all its forms the coming Messiah, who was to be offered for the race, which had partaken of Adam's sin. David and Solomon join in the glad refrain, and the prophets, from Isaiah to Malachi, tell with wondrous sweetness the welcome news. Centuries upon centuries pass away, and the time seems to draw near when the welcome messenger shall appear to announce Christ's coming. About this time John the Baptist is heard telling of one that should come after him, who should fulfil the prophecies of inspiration, and rescue a perishing world from eternal ruin. Do they hear and believe the news? No, the spirit and power of Elias does not come upon a man of the wilderness, is their cry, and so the larger part of them speak out disdainfully that such a man should proclaim Christ's coming. Why, the Messiah is coming with power. He is coming as a king. He is to restore Israel to their former prosperity, and we are to be his subjects, cried they. But still that voice kept warning the people, and finally points with absolute distinctness to the person of Christ in the following words. "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world;" and then consummating his work as forerunner, baptizes Him in the river Jordan for the priestly mission he is about to accomplish. From this time, John gradually recedes from view, and the work of Christ is commenced.

It is not our purpose to dwell at length upon his labors of love. For three long years he preached faithfully to the lost Jews, who almost in a body, rejected his offers of pardon and mercy. "We will not have this man to reign over us," is the universal cry; but with a loving thoughtfulness, which could originate only from God himself, he spends the allotted time in doing good to all who come into contact with him. Healing the sick, giving sight to the blind, cleansing the lepers, causing the lame man to leap as an hart, and even giving back some from the chains of death, was the work to which he devoted his precious life. The Jews still scornfully rejected his endeavors to prove himself the Messiah, though they could not answer the arguments presented to them. But the universal idea of a Savior, to come with earthly pomp and grandeur, had taken such a powerful possession of their mind that only a few saw in Jesus the one to accomplish the world's salvation. The plan of redemption is nearly completed, and that base arch-fiend, who had received from his Master nothing but loving kindness, sells him for thirty pieces of silver, and betrays him with a kiss. Oh, the utter depravity of the human race untouched by the finger of God's love! The rulers have a mock trial, and condemn him to be crucified. For what? Nothing. Not one thing can be proven against him. But amidst the most cruel scourgings, mockings, and buffetings, he is led out to Calvary to die. There hanging between heaven and earth, on either side a thief, slowly ebbs his life away. One of the last tender offices of mercy is to forgive the penitent sinner who hangs at his side. Oh, the agony of that hour! Think of the torture that could wring from the lips of a being so all-powerful as Jesus, the soul-piercing cry, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

But in a few moments another sound broke the sudden stillness which had fallen over the assembled company. In accents loud and piercing, reaching throughout the length and breadth of the assembled multitude, and filling the land with its exultant cry, were heard the words, "It is finished!" What is finished? The redemption of the race, the salvation of the lost, the atonement for sin promised four thousand years ago, in the garden of Eden. Sinner, do you hear that? Take up the glad refrain, oh earth, and tell the joyful news. Let the hilltops of Judea, and all her valleys be filled with the sound. Give ear, oh ye people, and let the cry resound throughout the land. Now do you understand what it means? A Savior has been crucified for you. Christ has died for you. No wonder the vail of the temple rent in twain, and the earth shook to her very foundations. No wonder the dead arise, and appear upon earth. Good reason that darkness should cover the land after such a deed. The Son of God has expired upon the cross, and the long-looked for sacrifice has been made. The debt is paid. Adam's transgression is covered, and the world is redeemed. "It is finished." How much those words convey. Can you grasp the idea, wretched one? Why Christ has died for man? Can you comprehend it? No! nothing but infinite love ever can.

"Well may the cavern-depths of earth
Be shaken, and her mountains nod;
Well may the sheeted dead come forth
To gaze upon a suffering God;
Well may the temple-shrine grow dim,
And shadows veil the cherubim,
When He, the chosen one of heaven,
A sacrifice for guilt is given."

That was your Savior, who suffered upon Calvary, and each sin you commit helped to nail him there.

"It is finished." The sacrifice is complete; the atonement is made; and a new era is ushered in upon fallen man. For what purpose was this offering made? Simply to redeem one man, one nation, one people? No! The whole race may be saved, and Christ, in those words which completed the Jewish dispensation, has given free access to the Father through faith and prayer. Fellow christian, our redemption is complete, and to us, "It is finished," has a precious meaning. That agonizing death upon the cross has saved us. We are redeemed and purified through the atonement of a sinless Savior; and by patient continuance in well doing, we may by and by receive the crown of righteousness, which Christ shall give to his faithful ones. You who have never given heed to the truths of the gospel, but are running down the road which ends in being banished forever from God's presence, give ear to the thought contained in these words. Christ's part is done. The rest remains with you. Do you wish to reign with Jesus, as heirs and joint-heirs? Then come to the Savior. Do you wish to join in the songs of the redeemed ones, and receive a crown of life that shall never fade? Then by faith accept of the atonement. Do you wish to render honor and praise to the Lamb that was slain? Then flee to Christ your refuge, and Rock of Salvation. There will be a time when this lowly one shall present himself in power. When the rocks and the mountains shall flee away at his presence; when the thunderings of Sinai shall seem but dim mutterings compared with the awful voice of our Judge. In that day how glorious to have that Judge for our friend, and hear the welcome "well done," as our accounts are presented at the great white throne. Oh, sinner, the plan is finished, wholly completed; all that remains is for us to accept the offering so freely given. Will you do it? Will you yield to that blessed One who loves you so well? May the glad response be, Yes. And amid the angels of heaven shall be joy sublime, that one more lost one has returned to his Father. And you with all the ransomed shall shout Hallelujah! "It is finished," and I too am saved.

THE CRY GOING FORTH ON ALL SIDES.

THOS. FITZSIMMONS.

Is it not very remarkable that just at this time, there is a cry going forth of alarmed Christendom through its high representatives, in church, state, and press, that there is a rapidly approaching world's crisis, of an unparallelled nature upon us, and that it will affect, and change the governments and nations of the earth in a manner never before witnessed? Whence this unanimity on one question? from what does it proceed? its rise, origin and meaning? The following article from the "Church of England Quarterly Review," we send to the Crisis for publication, no less for its strong and terse treatment upon present questions, as for its high and learned authority upon all matters it treats:—

THE PRESENT SITUATION.

"We are living in times when the christian and the infidel, the statesman and the divine, seem to agree in the expectation that some great crisis is at hand. The public mind, both at home and abroad, is held in the calm of a feverish suspense. New and strange blasphemies are coming to the birth; the foundations of the state are loosening, and the church of God is beset and assailed on every side. Amid these thick clouds, all eyes are fixed with an eager gaze on the dark and coming future. But who shall unravel its mysteries? who can decipher its solemn roll of fate? who can unlock to the world and church, these dark shadows of the things to come? It is here that the wisdom of the world stands rebuked, and its idols are all mute and silent. The research of its historians here proves in vain; the policy of its statesmen is baffled and confounded. The future continues veiled from every worldly eye, in deepest mystery; and every effort of human pride to decipher the solemn hand-writing proves utterly in vain.

Divine prophecy is the only light that can remove this impenetrable darkness. There God himself reveals to his own servants the great outlines of his providence, and enables them, by patient search, to trace through the past and future, the grandeur and majesty of his great designs. Here nature, providence, and grace, are all combined for their comfort and instruction in the faith, in glorious harmony. The providence of God in times past thus becomes one continued pledge of his abiding stand by his people in time to come; and whatever the trials of the church may be now, and however mighty the enemies that assail her, let her remember that the same great Captain is still leading his people on in the pathway he has declared, to a sure and final victory.

These trials seem now fast approaching. Those enemies are now active, boastful and strong. The vessel of the church seems almost ready to be hurried by the profligate tide into fresh waves of the deep; and what shall she do in this hour of peril? Could our feeble voice reach her ears, the words of the Roman poet to his storm-tost country would be our language also, 'Fortiter occupa port um.' Let her beware of losing the firm anchor-hold of the word of prophecy. Then let her secure a knowledge of her peace in the safe harbor of Divine Providence. Let the church of God follow this course, and she will not fail to trace in the word of prophecy in unbroken line God's work and mercy, through all the days of her widowhood, till her Lord shall return.

While the children of this world walk in darkness, and all the foundations of the earth are being broken up, she will then dwell in a Goshen of heavenly light, and blessed knowledge. And as the last perils and gloom thicken around her, she will be able to lift up her head with joy and gladness, and will know the more assuredly that her redemption draweth nigh."

THE TRUE CHRIST.

J. D. CAREY.

There are many false Christs in the world, but there is but one true Christ, and that is the Christ of the Bible. And whenever this Christ is invested with character, attributes and purpose essentially different from that of the Bible, the true Christ is displaced, and a substitute is put in his place—another Christ which must of necessity be a false Christ.

It may be well to draw a few comparisons between the true and the false, that some misguided soul may be led to see the true, and give up the worship of the false one. The difference between the true and the false is wide. The more we examine into the character and purpose of each, the greater the difference appears to be.

1. The true Christ was born of the Virgin Mary in the town of Bethlehem, in Judea, and was the incarnation of the Father Deity.

2. The true Christ died for the salvation of men—the whole Christ. But the papal Christ never did die; but only an earthly house in which he lived for a few years, died; when the living Christ went out alive without ever tasting death at all. Note well this difference, for it is an all-essential difference.

3. The true Christ of the Bible went directly from the cross, as a dead Christ, to Joseph's tomb, carried there by other hands, and remained there in that tomb three days and nights, to fulfil certain prophecies; but false Christ went directly from the cross to heaven, or rather this is claimed for him, and that his "outer garment" only went to Joseph's tomb.

4. On the third day, the Christ of the Bible came out of Joseph's tomb alive, to die no more; but the Papal one never did die; and during the three days and nights that the true Christ was lying "silent in the grave," this false Christ, it is claimed, was alive in heaven, or making missionary tours to hell, holding revival meetings to try and get damned immortals out of punishment, that he himself says shall be everlasting. How such an absurd and totally false notion could obtain among enlightened people, with the Bible in their hands, cannot be accounted for upon any other hypothesis, than that the prophetic declaration that "the time will come when men will not endure sound doctrine, but will turn away from the truth, and be turned unto fables," must be fulfilled. It is also claimed for this false Christ, that he returned from the paradise of God, and from his revival meetings in the prison of hell among the damned, to Joseph's tomb, where lay his cast off garment, or body, and reinhabited it, and came out and made pretence that he had been dead; and gave people to understand that he had not been to heaven, by saying, "Go tell the brethren now I ascend to "my Father and your Father, and to my God and your God," thereby deceiving them just as any deceiver would do.

5. The true Christ walked the earth forty days after he was restored to life, and then went to his Father saying, "Whither I go ye cannot come; but if I go away, I will come again and receive you to myself, that where I am ye may be also."

6. The true Christ brings to view a future life on the basis of a resurrection of the dead, or the re-living of those who have died, and are still dead; while the false view offers life on the basis that man is naturally immortal, and never dies, and that the life is received at the death of the body, instead of at the resurrection.

7. The true Christ has body, form, and parts, such as hands, feet, eyes, mouth, etc.; while it is claimed for the false Christ, that he has neither body, form, nor parts. This is a wide difference indeed. Such a Christ will never "come again," for he never was here in the first place, nor anywhere else.

8. The true Christ says he will sit upon the throne of his glory, when he comes the second time with all his holy angels, and reign in his kingdom "under the whole heaven," and "from the river even to the ends of the earth."

Reader, which is your Christ? Which do you love and obey? If you have been believing in this papal Christ, may the God of mercy help you to seek the true Christ, who alone can save. You will very soon meet him. Be sure that you know him.

PREPARE TO LIVE.

A. PARMELEE.

Nowhere is it recorded that the apostles of Christ ever taught men to prepare to die; yet, in these days, we hear on all hands the solemn appeal, "prepare for death." I do not say so. Every body is prepared for that event in a moral sense; but how many are prepared to live. There shall be a resurrection, "both of the just and of the unjust." The revelator saw in vision this event. "I saw the dead small and great stand before God; and the books were opened; and another book was opened, which is the book of life; and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works." Rev. 20: 12.

Are we prepared to live and stand before God? This should be the all important query with every soul. If we are living here as we should—as it is our privilege to live—then are we prepared for any event in God's providence. If we have not the "life of God," from which the natural man is "alienated through the ignorance which is in him;" then we may well tremble at the thought of meeting the Judge.

I often hear people talk of being fearless of death, and this feeling seems to be to them an assurance that they are all right with God. There are many who demonstrate that death has no terror for them, by taking their own lives; but even this fact proves nothing in favor of their readiness for the world to come.

This preparing to die, merely, is a fraud upon the God who made us. Men seem to entertain the idea that if they only stop sinning before they die, it is all God asks of them. If they can just barely escape punishment, it will be all satisfactory in the court of heaven. Oh, how dishonest is man with his Maker. What a privilege it is to live for no other purpose than to serve God with all the heart. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the spirit shall of the spirit reap life everlasting."

If I were a preacher of Christ's gospel, I would never exhort men to prepare for death. Death is a state that man has no business with; but with life; that perfect life which begins here in the heart, and never ends, but will "quicken our mortal bodies. It is the part of wise men to see well to it that we "fail not of the grace of life." "To them who by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory, and honor, and immortality, eternal life."

The World's Crisis
AND
SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Sept. 6, 1876.

TAKE NOTICE.

All subscriptions for the "CRISIS," issued from this time forward, are at the rate of

$2.25 a year, payable IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE FREE TO ALL within the United States, the Canadas, and the British Provinces.

Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of Drafts, Bank Checks, and Postal Money-Orders, should be made payable to the Business Agent, GEO. T. ADAMS.

THOSE who send articles for the "CRISIS," should direct them to the "EDITORS OF WORLD'S CRISIS," Boston, Mass.

PLEASE READ, REMEMBER, AND ACT ACCORDINGLY.

The brethren, sisters, friends—one and all—whoever may write to this office, sending articles for insertion in the Crisis, or subscriptions for the same, notices, appointments, reports, or orders for papers, books, tracts, or anything of the kind, will confer a favor and do the right way by directing their letters in either one of the following ways:—

"EDITORS OF WORLD'S CRISIS, Boston, Mass."

"WORLD'S CRISIS, Boston, Mass.," or

GEO. T. ADAMS, Agent, Boston, Mass.

Those who send articles for the Young Pilgrim should address—

"EDITOR YOUNG PILGRIM, Boston, Mass."

In no case address letters on business connected with the papers, or office, to any of the clerks, compositors, or helps in this office.

AGENT.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

We purpose to have an Agent in attendance at the various Campmeetings to be held in New England this season, to receive sums due on the Crisis and Pilgrim. Bro. Frank Burr will receive dues for this Office at the Western meetings he may attend. We will also receive subscriptions for the Advent Times.

We hope our subscribers will make it a point to pay at the meetings, as it will be more convenient for them to do so than to send by mail, and less expensive for us than to send an Agent to the homes of our patrons.

AG'T.

A HUNDRED YEARS AGO.

We often involuntarily turn our thoughts back, and anxiously inquire after the condition of the world, the status of society, the position of the governments and the faith, hope and spiritual standing of the church a hundred years ago. We often do this for the purpose of learning how the present differs from the past, and whether the change is a retrograde or an advanced movement.

We may always know when the social status is rising or falling, by comparing it with an established social standard. In the State the standard of social life is expressed by the laws and requirements of government. In the church the standard of christian life is expressed in the Word of God. Social life is most perfect when it approaches nearest a correct rule. As the divine Scriptures were given for a rule of christian life by an infinitely perfect God, it follows, as a fact, that those whose lives correspond most perfectly with their teachings, rise highest in the scale of moral perfection.

It is a fact patent to every unprejudiced Bible student that the New Testament clearly teaches that the varying standard of religious life would fall and not rise in the last days, showing that there would be a departure from "the faith once delivered to the saints," and a want of genuine Bible holiness. It will be safe therefore for the children of the present time to look back to the fathers of the past generations, who belonged to the true church, and learn how their faith and experience compared with the divine standard, and how ours differs from theirs in this regard, and labor to turn the hearts of "the children to their fathers, lest" the Lord come and find no faith in this generation, and so "smite" all "the earth with a curse."

As there are at the present time a great variety of religious standards, and all claim that they find proof for their distinctive positions in the history and experience of the fathers, we would therefore enquire after the acknowledged faith of the Protestant church a hundred years ago, on the nearness of Christ's second advent, and the signs indicating its approach. We quote from the sublime verse of Cowper, who echoed the voice of the English pulpit and faith of the Protestant church as taught a hundred years ago:—

"The groans of nature in this nether world
Which Heaven has heard for ages, have an end,
Foretold by prophets, and by poets sung,
Whose fire was kindled at the prophet's lamp,
The time of rest, the promised Sabbath comes,
Six thousand years of sorrow have well nigh
Fulfilled their tardy and disastrous course
Over a sinful world; and what remains
Of this tempestuous state of human things,
Is merely as the working of the sea
Before a calm that rocks itself to rest.
For He, whose car the winds are, and the clouds
The dust that waits upon his safety march,
Whose sin hath moved him, and his wrath is hot,
Shall visit earth in mercy; shall descend propitious,
In his chariot paved with love,
And what his storms have blasted and defaced
For man's revolt, shall with a smile repair."

Of the restitution he says:—

"Oh, scenes surpassing fable, and yet true,
Scenes of accomplished bliss! which who can see,
Though but in distant prospect, and not feel
His soul refreshed with foretaste of the joy?
Rivers of gladness water all the earth,
And clothe all climes with beauty; the reproach
Of barrenness is past. The fruitful field
Laughs with abundance, and the land once lean,
Or fertile only in its own disgrace,
Exults to see its thistly curse repealed.
The various seasons woven into one,
And that one season an eternal spring.
The garden fears no blight, and needs no fence,
For there is none to covet, all are full.
The lion and the libbard and the bear
Graze with the fearless flocks.
All bask at noon together, or all gambol in the shade
Of the same grove, and drink one common stream.
Antipathies are none. No foe to man.
Lurks in the serpent now. The mother sees,
And smiles to see, her infant's playful band
Stretched forth to dally with the crested worm.
* * * * * * * * *
All creatures worship man, and all mankind
One Lord, one Father. Error has no place;
That creeping pestilence is driven away,
The breath of heaven has chased it. In the heart
No passion touches a discordant string,
But all is harmony and love. Disease
Is not. The pure and uncontaminate blood
Holds its due course, nor fears the frost of age.
One song employs all nations; and all cry
'Worthy the Lamb, for he was slain for us.'
The dwellers in the vale and on the rock
Shout to each other, and the mountain tops
From distant mountains catch the flying joy."

Let all read carefully the great poet's description of the signs of the end of the world, as he read them upon the prophetic page, and compare that description with the most noted events which have excited the public mind for the last fifty years.

He foresaw, through the glass of inspiration, just what we have seen with our eyes, and the historians of the present time record on the page of remarkable events. The poet gives the following graphic description:—

"Benevolence and peace and mutual aid
Between the nations, in a world that seems
To toll the death-bell to its own decease,
And by the voice of all its elements
To preach the gen'ral doom. When were the winds
Let slip with such a warrant to destroy?
When did the waves so haughtily o'erleap
Their ancient barriers, deluging the dry?
Fires from beneath, and meteors from above,
Portentous, unexampled, unexplained,
Have kindled beacons in the skies, and th' old
And crazy earth has had her shaking fits
More frequent, and foregone her usual rest.
Is it a time to wrangle, when the props
And pillars of our planet seem to fail,
And Nature with a dim and sickly eye
To wait the close of all? But grant her end
More distant, and that prophecy demands
A longer respite, unaccomplished yet;
Still they are frowning signals, and bespeak
Displeasure in his breast who smites the earth
Or heals it, makes it languish or rejoice."

Pollock also, another English poet, thoroughly learned in the Biblical literature of his day, sublimely expressed the sentiment of the church thus:—

"The prophecy for confirmation stood;
And all was ready for the sword of God.
The righteous saw, and fled without delay
Into the chambers of Omnipotence;
The wicked mocked, and sought for erring cause
To satisfy the dismal state of things:
The public credit gone; the fear in time
Of peace; the starving want in time of wealth;
The insurrection muttering in the streets;
And pallid consternation spreading wide;
And leagues, though holy termed, first ratified
In hell, on purpose made to underprop
Iniquity, and crush the sacred truth."

It seems to us that no living poet could more truthfully express the events of the last twenty years, than these men have done by the light of prophecy.

THE SITUATION.

When we look over the religious field, especially that part occupied by those who are looking for the coming of Christ, we are forced to admit that there is a lack of christian zeal; or in other words, too much of the human, and too little of the divine element. This produces religious weakness, and gives the enemy an opportunity to introduce division wedges, coldness and formality. When the present lukewarmness, is compared with the living vitality manifested thirty years ago, it must be admitted that there is a sad departure, not from the truth, but from vital godliness.

There are many noble exceptions, but the low state is alarmingly prevailing. To deny it is to deny abundance of facts. Faithful watchmen are groaning over the situation, and are beginning to lift the warning voice. This lethargy is not caused by giving up the truth, but through a lack of the Spirit of Christ. We see no remedy, short of entire consecration to the Lord. He who makes the consecration secures the keeping power which is so much needed in these last days of peril. "The whole armor of God" is needed in order to stand against the wiles of the devil. He who conforms to the world becomes an easy prey for the arch deceiver.

It appears that the Spirit of God is moving all truly justified persons to seek the fulness there is in Christ. This is needed to fit us for the marriage of the Lamb. We cannot be ready for that glorious event unless our hearts are pure, and our lives in harmony with the teachings of Jesus. All his lovers delight to do his will.

The church is now at the point where she should be preparing to meet the coming of her Lord. There is no time to be lost. The great day of the Lord is impending. Our situation is one of thrilling interest. Are we ready to welcome our returning King? If not, let there be a full and unconditional surrender to him, and let him direct in all things, then we shall be ready to hail his coming with joyfulness.

ALTON BAY.

The campmeetings held at Alton Bay have become noted on account of the large attendance. There are now some four hundred plain cottages and tents on the ground. Quite a number have been added the past year, and other improvements have been made which add to the comfort of those in camp. The ground is easy of access by boats and cars.

We arrived on the ground Saturday P. M., Aug. 26th, the day of commencement, and found quite a large number present, some of whom had been there for several weeks.

Up to the present time (Tuesday noon, Aug. 29th), the meetings have been good, and many are stepping into the deep waters of salvation, where they may continually enjoy "perfect peace," and live in heavenly sunshine. The preaching has been earnest, and thoroughly practical. The prospect is encouraging, and indicates that much good will be accomplished before the close of the meeting.

STRANGE TIMES.

These times are peculiar—unlike any before them. Business men are exceedingly perplexed in relation to financial matters. Those who have money know not what to do with it. They see no safety anywhere. The following, from an able New York correspondent of the Boston Journal, gives a very correct idea of the present financial condition of the world:

PERILS OF INVESTMENT.

"Among the troubles of the hour is what to do with one's money. It is not safe in the bank. The Trust Companies turn out to be vain things for safety. The more real estate a man has the worse he is off. There have been a great many times in the last fifty years, when people could not make money unless they had money to make it with. But there has never been a time till now when people could not make money with money to make it with. The peculiarity of this panic is that you can do nothing with money. No investment seems safe, and millions are lying idle. The recent flurry in Wall street shows this. Everybody who could, have taken out their money from real estate and put it into stocks. A certain line of stocks was considered as good as gold. This was especially true of coal stocks. All along the line of the Lackawanna and kindred roads, stock was held by well-to-do families. Last week famillies with incomes from $2000 to $20,000 a year were made penniless. It is said if the great railroad men were obliged to realize at once, a larger part of the so-called millionaires would be as poor as their neighbors. Nearly all our heavy companies, if obliged to throw their real estate on to the market, would find themselves in a bad way."

This corresponds very accurately with the prophetic picture of the last days.

THE POPE'S RESIDENCE.

The Pope's palace is the most magnificent in the world. How unlike the homes of the apostles, and of our divine Master, who had not where to lay his head. Whatever wealth could prepare has been freely used to make the home of the Popes superior to to all other palaces. The following from the Irish Ecclesiastical Gazette will give some idea of the Vatican:

"The word "Vatican" is often used, but there are many who do not understand its import. The term refers to a collection of buildings, on one of the seven hills of Rome, which covers a space of twelve hundred feet in length, and one thousand feet in breadth. It is built on the spot once occupied by the garden of the cruel Nero. It owes its origin to the Bishop of Rome, who, in the early part of the sixth century, erected an humble residence on its site. About the year 1,600, Pope Eugenius rebuilt it on a magnificent scale. Innocent II., a few years afterward, gave it up as a lodging to Peter II., King of Arragon. In 1305, Clement V., at the instigation of the King of France, removed the Papal See from Rome to Avignon, when the Vatican remained in a condition of obscurity and neglect for more than seventy years. But soon after the return of the Pontifical Court to Rome, an event which had been so earnestly prayed for by poor Petrarch, and which finally took place in 1376, the Vatican was put into a state of repair, again enlarged, and it was thenceforward considered as the regular palace and residence of the popes, who, one after the other, added fresh buildings to it, and gradually encircled it with antiquities, statues, pictures, and books, until it became the richest depository in the world. The library of the Vatican was commenced 1,400 years ago. It contains 40,000 manuscripts, among which are some by Pliny, St. Charles Boromeo, and many Hebrew, Syrian, Arabian, and Armenian Bibles. The whole of the immense buildings composing the Vatican, are filled with statues found beneath the ruins of ancient Rome; with paintings by the masters, and with curious medals and antiquities of almost every description. When it is known that there have been exhumed more than 70,000 statues from the ruined temples and palaces of Rome, the reader can form some idea of the richness of the Vatican.

It stands directly against the side of St. Peter's church, under the guns of the castle of St. Angelo; and it is the most extensive castle in the world. In a building on this site Charlemange had quarters when in Rome. The larger part of this palace was built about the time Columbus was seeking America. The edifice is a vast block, shaped like the letter L, and contains about twenty courts open to the sky, and eleven thousand hails, chapels, saloons, and apartments. The main entrance portal of the Vatican is under a mighty Doric colonnade, which cost 850,000 sendi. One of the halls in the Vatican is 2,131 feet long and twenty-seven feet wide. The library of the Vatican possesses 24,000 manuscripts, 50,000 printed books, and over 2,000 volumes of papal archives, which last comprise the written history of this great branch of the nominal church. An armory, a mint, a magnificent collection of pictures, a still more wonderful collection of ancient sculpture and inscriptions, and a government manufactory of mosaic, are included in this palace. There are no less than ten thousand different shades of colored glass used in the mosaic factory of the Vatican. Michael Angelo and Raphael executed their great works upon the walls of the palace.—Selected.

BORROWING OF THE EGYPTIANS.

We have frequently heard skeptics find great fault with the children of Israel for borrowing Egyptian treasures when they were about to leave the land of Egypt, as directed by the angel of the Lord. It is said to be equivalent to stealing, and consequently, the true Lord was not the Lord of Israel. We think the following exposition of Exodus 3: 21, 22; 12: 35, 36, from the Guide to Holiness, sets this matter in its true light:

BORROWING OF THE EGYPTIANS.

1. The word "borrow" which is shaal in Hebrew, means "to ask," "request," "demand," "require," and is not used to signify the act of loaning a thing. In the Greek text it reads, "She shall ask," and in the Latin it reads, "She shall demand."

The same word, shaal, is used in Deut. 10: 12, in regard to the requirements of God: "What doth the Lord thy God require [shaal] of thee." Also in Joshua 15: 18, where Caleb's daughter was moved to ask (shaal) of her father a field. It is also found in Judges 25: 23, where Sisera asked a drink of water. It also occurs in 1 Sam. 30: 22, when speaking of property that David recovered from those who had violently removed it. In none of these passages could that word be understood to mean "borrow," as we understand that word.

2. The Egyptians had been enriched by the labor of the Israelites, and God, who judges rightly, now constrains them to refund a part of that which was justly due to to them as wages.

3. The Lord inclined the Egyptians to remunerate them willingly. "The Lord gave the people favor in the sight of the Egyptians."

4. The Eyptians felt it to be a forlorn hope, and esteemed it a good bargain to repay them; to settle up with them in full, in order to secure their departure.

It is recorded that an Egyptian prince came to Alexander the Great, soon after the conquest of Syria, and said to the conqueror, "Our nation has heard that you are so benevolent that you pay all the just debts of your poor subjects, and of those whom you have conquered. I am sent to inquire." Alexander replied that he did pay all lawful claims. Then said the prince, "The Jews, a long time ago, borrowed jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and costly plate, and never returned them. I demand, in behalf of my nation, both principal and interest." Alexander inquired as to the evidence supporting his claim. The prince referred him to the Jewish Scriptures, and to Egyptian records. Alexander asked three days to examine the evidence, and called in his secretary and treasurer, a learned Jew, named Mordecai. The secretary assured the parties that he was quite willing to entertain the case, but that the Egyptian prince must promise three things:

1. To take the Jewish Scriptures and the Egyptian records as the only evidence for or against his claim.

2. To answer whether Egyptian law allowed servants a just and equitable compention for services rendered, and how much?

3. To pay the balance, if due on the other side.

To this the prince agreed. Mordecai then produced Gen. 46: 6, where Jacob took their cattle and their goods, with their wealth and their familes. They were there two hundred and fifteen years, and gave their labor and their service, and received no return of lands or cities, save only their bread. Egypt owed its existence, its laws, its policy, and its opulence, to Joseph, and yet they did not so much as furnish him with a grave. He then requested the prince to value the property taken down to Egypt; the flocks and the herds; to count up the wages; to calculate the interest; to double the sum for the time they did double work; to value the materials for the time that Pharaoh refused to furnish them; to find the total amount due the Jews, and from that sum deduct the small amount they received on their departure; then tell the balance. In this way, at very low wages, he brought the young prince immensely in debt. He also reminded Alexander that the prince did not understand the language of the Jews; that they did not borrow the gold and silver plate and jewels, but that they demanded it as a small installment of the amount long since due as wages. The young prince made his best bow and retired.

A VALUABLE BOOK.—Dr. Dio Lewis, of Boston, has lately issued a book entitled "CHASTITY," or "Our Secret Sins," which everybody should read. We are acquainted with no other uninspired book, that we think would be of more practical value than this work on "chastity." We have no personal interest whatever in recommending the book. Had we the means, we would like to present a copy to every man and woman in Christendom. It is sold only by agents, but every one should become an agent. This work will be found of special value to those who wish to live pure a life, and preserve their vital forces for noble work. To many, the book would be of more real value than thousands of gold and silver.

CORRECTION.—In the last Crisis, it is said fifteen States were represented at the Springgeld campmeeting, besides Omaha. It should read, besides Canada.

PREACH THE WORD.

E. BELLOWS.

The whole word is given to us to proclaim. "Preach the word," is the charge of the apostle to his son Timothy. It needs wisdom to know how and when to present different parts of his word, and rightly divide, and give meat to all in due season, or in its proper time and place, where we are, in new or old fields of labor. Sometimes, practical subjects will come up in the mind first to present; at other times, doctrinal, or prophetical, will be impressed. It requires wisdom from above to direct rightly, and meet the demands of the people. It will not do to compromise the truth to please any parties, or to get a dollar more money from some body. Let the eye be single, and the whole body is full of light.

How is the faithful preacher to live? Paul says the Lord ordained that those who preach the gospel shall live of the gospel. Where is the authority for this? We may see it in these words (Matt. 10: 10)—"The workman is worthy of his meat." They did not ask the Master, when he sent them out, how much he would agree to give them a week, or month. They went forth trusting in what he had said to them—"The workman is worthy of his meat," or hire, as it is in Luke. When they had finished that first work for him, preaching the kingdom of God to the Jews as a nation, without purse, scrip, or shoes, he asked them if they lacked anything? They said, Nothing. But now he said unto them, Take to yourselves these things, forbidden before. Why? Because their work was done under that commission, and they went to their old occupations. There was no more preaching to be done until they got a new commission, and this they did after his resurrection. Just before he left them he said to them—"Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." How shall they now be sustained? The answer is the same as before, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." This covers the whole ground of care, protection, and support.

It will not do to compromise the truth in preaching the word to make converts, or to steer clear of persecution; nor for controversy, to gain the mastery over anybody; but for the truth's sake, in the love of it. The effect of preaching the whole truth is the same now as of old time. Some will be pricked in the heart and say, What shall we do to be saved? while others will be cut to the heart, and gnash on you with their teeth. Some have got the truth, it is to be feared, only in the head. Such are more or less bigots and sectarians. Let the whole word of God be sanctified in both the head and heart; the result of which will be manifest in all our lives and actions, making us fully ready for translation at any time.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground. August 11th, 1875, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

ADVENT CAMPMEETING AT SPRINGFIELD.

August 14th, 1876, found us, for the ninth year, on the old camp-ground. The weather was hot and dry, and the dust intolerable; yet the meeting was in good progress, over a thousand people already occupying tents, and more coming in on every train.

As we walked through the "main entrance," and passed under the floating banner bearing the inscription, "Thy Kingdom Come," we heard the songs of praise and shouts of gladness on either hand, and felt that it was good to be there; the very atmosphere seemed teeming with peace "and good will to men." Ministers of different denominations were gathered there, and among the first to whom we listened, was Rev. Dr. Ives, of Yale College, who gave us a good sermon. There was preaching from the "grand stand" three times each day, and prayer meetings at all hours of the day in the large tents, four of which were capable of seating a thousand people each, and from half-past five in the morning until ten at night, the voice of prayer or praise might be heard from all parts of the encampment; and it seemed to us, as we went from tent to tent and listened to the services, that true worshippers were gathered there.

One pleasing feature of the whole, was the children's meeting. From one o'clock to half past two every afternoon, the children were assembled in the Mission tent, under the leadership of Elder E. Morrill, assisted by others, and it might have been said of them, as of One "who ever liveth," that they were "sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them and asking them questions," and one who heard them was astonished at their understanding of the scriptures.

There were young people's meetings, and meetings for old people as well as meetings for all. The public singing, which is always a leading feature of a campmeeting, was under the direction of a Mr. Shorey, a second "Sankey," who made the welkin ring with his melody. Among the leading preachers of the Word were Elders Miles Grant, H. L. Hastings, Bowman, Hemenway, Couch, Leslie, Goodrich, Potter, and some twenty others.

Thursday, the 17th, we enjoyed a fine rain, which laid the dust, and revived the whole camp literally and spiritually, for who can be very spiritual when smothered with dust? The meetings through the day were held in tents. The spiritual interest of the meeting was deep; several conversions were reported, and some twenty persons baptized. The best of order prevailed on the ground, one single policeman keeping all quiet day and night, through the week.

Sunday, the 20th, the last day of the feast, brought in the crowds from all the country round about, and some from the regions beyond; and while many came to see and enjoy meeting friends, thousands came to hear and treasure up the good.

Eld. M. Grant, of Boston, anticipating the wants of the coming crowd, prepard a rich treat by placing on exhibition a chart of the world's history from the creation to the present time. The original of this chart was designed by one Sebastian C. Adams, of Oregon, at a cost of $20,000, who spent six years in arranging the history of the world, chronologically from Bible prophecy, showing a literal fulfillment of the same, from secular history. From the original, or model of Mr. Adams, Geo. W. Burnham, of Farmington, N. H., greatly enlarged and painted it in fast colors on canvas. This chart, which measures sixty-eight feet in length, and seven feet in width, presents a panoramic view of events, covering a period of six thousand years. As you gaze upon it, your mind is brought from the scenes in the garden of Eden all along the stream of time, until the present hour, and beyond, for the artist has happily sketched an imaginary picture of the "Celestial city," upon which one cannot look without the wish "to be there."

This chart requires study, which Elder Grant has given it, and was fully prepared to explain to the thousands who listened to him morning, afternoon and evening, as, armed with a long pointing rod, he traversed the platform erected for the purpose, and pointed out and explained the great chain of history, past and present, with solemn exhortations to prepare for coming events, proving to his hearers that he still adheres to his maxim that "time is short," if in his teachings he does give prominence to the doctrine that "without holiness no man shall see the Lord."

Elder Grant is an old pioneer in the Advent cause, an able advocate of the doctrine. H. L. Hastings of Boston, drew large crowds to the tents on Sunday, where he discoursed, preaching four times in different tents. He is one of the most eccentric, yet popular preachers of the day, and it always pays to hear him. We met with several of the good people of Pittsfield, who seemed to enjoy the meetings much, and we wish more had been there.

Monday, Aug. 21st, the meeting dissolved amid shouts of victory, golden hopes for the future, as well as farewell tears, and sad hearts at parting. This session has been as good, if not the best, in every respect as any ever held on the ground; and if it prove the last we ever enjoy on this earth, we have the assurance that the benediction of heaven rested upon the encampment this centennial year.—*Berkshire Co. THE SPIRIT AND THE BLOOD.

O. E. MERRILL.

The Spirit is a reprover. It reproves of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment. The blood cleanseth. "If we walk in the light, as he is in the light; . . . the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." Should we go into a dark room, we would be unable to see spots or blemishes on the wall; but turn on the gas, or light a lamp, and they would be easily seen. Now the light may shine on and on, it matters not how long, it never could erase or take away those spots or blemishes. Something else besides the rays of the light must be brought to bear upon them. The lights only bring them to view, and shows them to us. Water, or something else, must be used to remove them; and so with the Spirit. While it shows us our sins, and the defilement and awful corruption of our natural hearts, it never purifies, cleanseth, or takes them away.

"The blood, the blood, the precious blood,
That was shed on Calvary," is what cleanseth, purifies, washes, and takes away our sins, and they become removed from us as far as the east is from the west.

I thank God for the Spirit to enlighten our minds, and show us the defilement of our hearts, the spots and blemishes, and for the blood to cleanse them all away. Precious blood! There is power in it to wash and cleanse the vilest, and make him clean; every whit whole. None have been so low but what Jesus could reach them, and make them pure. Like the Syrian leper, they may wash and be clean. "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin." "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and cleanse us from all unrighteousness." Blessed promises! Jesus saves now from sin. He is coming soon to save physically, and give life perfected to all who are saved from sin here.

THE SOUTHERN ADVENT CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE.

Pursuant to notice in the World's Crisis, the ministers in Alabama, Tennessee, North Carolina, and Georgia, met on the 28th ult., at Edgefield, Ala., (near Stevenson), to organize a "Southern Advent Christian Conference."

The following ministers were present: J. J. Smith, W. W. Livingston, A. M. B. Graham, G. W. Crawford, J. A. Bryan, J. M. Stewart, Geo. D. Sherrill, F. R. Bankston, F. M. Avans, J. O. Gray, D. B. Waldrap, J. A. Cargile.

After singing "Rock of Ages," prayer was offered by Eld. A. M. B. Graham, of Atlanta, Ga. Eld. Graham was then called to the chair, and Eld. J. A. Cargile, of Stevenson, Ala., was chosen Sec'y. pro tem.

The President pro tem, in a few appropriate remarks stated the object of the meeting, after which a committee was appointed to draft, and present for adoption, a Constitution and by-laws.

After the adoption of the Constitution and By-Laws, the Conference proceeded to elect officers for the ensuing year, which resulted as follows:—President, Eld. J. A. Cargile, of Stevenson, Ala.; Vice President, Eld. J. J. Smith, of Long Island, Ala.; Sec'y. and Treas., Eld. A. M. B. Graham, of Atlanta, Ga.

Bro. Cargile was elected Evangelist and Representative to the national S. A. C. Association.

Moved and carried, that we tender a vote of thanks to Bro. R. D. Shook (Presbyterian minister), Editor of the N. Ala. "Observer," published at Scottsboro, Ala., for consenting to publish the proceedings of our body.

Voted, That Eld. O. F. Goodwin, of Fort Mills, S. C., at his request, be received as a member of this Conference.

The following resolution, which met the approval of the Conference, was offered by Eld. Geo. D. Sherrill, of Lenoir, N. C.

Resolved, That the members of this Conference offer their hearty thanks to, and prayers for, the families of this vicinity, who have shown kindness and hospitality to us during its sittings.

Voted, That the Sec'y. prepare a synopsis of our deliberations for publication in the World's Crisis and A. C. Times.

Moved and carried, that the next session of the "Southern A. C. Conference" be held with the Berean Church, in N. Carolina, (sixteen miles north-west of Morganton), commencing July 25th, 1877.

Meetings were held over one Sunday. They were well attended, even the night meetings at private houses. On Saturday, there were probably three hundred persons present, and on Sunday there were not less than six hundred earnest, attentive listeners. On Sunday, for want of room, we were compelled to vacate the house, and preach outside, in the grove, in order that all migh hear. After the evening services, brethren F. R. Bankston and J. A. Bryan were ordained to the work of the ministry. The ordination was witnessed by the entire congregation. After prayer by Eld. A. M. B. Graham, President Cargile presented the Bible to the brethren, and gave them a solemn charge in language that will long be remembered by them, and also by all who heard it.

Notwithstanding the intense opposition, the truth is making headway in that vicinity. Elds. J. J. Smith and J. A. Cargile deserve much credit for their steadfastness and perseverance amid the trials through which they have labored for the cause of truth. They give God the glory, take courage and press on. The Constitution and by-laws, together with the minutes of the Conference, will soon be published in pamphlet form. Any friends, North or South, desiring a copy, can obtain the same by addressing the Sec'y, at Atlanta, Ga.

A. M. B. GRAHAM, Secretary.

Correspondence.

From Bro. T. I. Wilkins.

Dear Brethren in Christ:—Having obtained a few of the old copies of the World's Crisis from a friend, formerly of Massena Center (never having seen any of them before), I wish to inform you that they have inspired my poor aching heart with new courage; believing as I do, and have for some time, that Jesus is about to come to make up his jewels, it seems to me that I never felt so much like throwing myself into the arms of Jesus as I have of late. Oh, how the blessed Spirit of God does cheer my poor heart. How I do thank God that Jesus ever said, "Come unto me, all ye heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Perhaps it would be well right here to tell you something of my trials. When in my fourteenth year, I thought I experienced religion. For five years I belonged to the M. E. Church. I then went to Chicago, and by neglect of duty, I wandered from Jesus, and for over ten years was lost; although several times I made an attempt to come back, but for want of faith, or failing to make a full consecration of myself to God, I did not obtain the former blessing. I wandered so far from Jesus, that life was a burden, and often, in the bitterness of my soul, I was led to exclaim, "O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" And then in despair would resort to the intoxicating cup to try and drown my grief; but it only made it worse. I thought I was lost. I went to searching the Scriptures, and on every page I found I was condemned. As I read of the love of Jesus, and of his sufferings, my poor, burdened heart experienced the bitter pangs of remorse. About a year and a half ago, I promised God I would serve him faithfully, and follow him even were I called to be even as the beggar that was laid at the rich man's gate. If he would only forgive me, and take the fearful burden from me, I would do anything for his sake. As I plead with God, he heard my prayer, and Oh, how the light flashed upon me! Jesus manifested himself to me in such an unmistakable manner, that, like doubting Thomas, I cried out, My Lord and my God. When I found that my sins were all forgiven, I said, O Lord, try me as gold and silver is tried. As I have been passing through the fiery trials, which came upon me, I sometimes thought I should prove to be all dross: but of late, I have been experiencing such wonderful blessings from God, that there is not room for even one doubt of my acceptance with him, as his child.

For eight years, I have been unable to work over one half of the time. Last Oct. I had to have my right foot amputated at the ankle joint. I am now helpless, and have to be helped by friends to support my family of five.

Oh, how I plead with God for the cup to pass from me; but I said, Not my will, but thine be done, O God. When the doctors were arranging the table to lay me on, I opened my dear old Bible, and found there precious promises that gave me new strength. As I prayed then and there for grace and patience, O how wonderfully God did come to my relief; and without a doubt of God's goodness, I submitted, and went through the operation. My faith in God never was stronger. I am hanging upon the promises of God. Hail the glorious advent of his coming. Even so, Lord Jesus, come quickly. Lift up the head, then, poor, tried and tempted ones; your redemption draweth nigh. I expect to be robed in white, and stand among the immortal company.

Norwood, N. Y.

From Sr. Phebo Clay.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—I want to tell a little of my experience. I am nearly fourscore years of age. I trust my many, many faults, short comings and sins have all been laid upon the head of the scape-goat and borne to the land of forgetfulness. I sought the Lord when young, but did not receive the evidence of my sins forgiven, of which many speak. But by the grace of God, and the aid of nursing fathers and mothers in Israel, I kept along about three years. Then the duty of baptism came up before me. I could not think I was fit for that ordinance. Like the old servant of God, I wanted the fleece wet and dried before I could go forward. In taking up the cross I was much blest. From that time I tried, by the help of God, to live faithful. I thought my articles of faith were sound, but my theory was built on a belief in the immortality of the soul. I had deep thoughts about the state of the dead. I was so anxious to know about the departed spirits in the spirit-land, I asked a dying friend if she would not come back and tell me about things in the kingdom above the sky. (She never came to tell me.) I can only say if the grace of God had not saved me, I should have been a strong Spiritualist. I am thankful he saved me from that delusion.

I advocated my old theory for a number of years, till I saw that Christ's reign on earth would be literal, and that some of the signs were in the past. I was astonished at the darkness that was in me, and wondered why I had not seen this truth before.

"Sweetly I'm resting in Jesus, Firmly I'm trusting his word."

I have now been in the school of Christ over sixty years. My pilgrimage is about ended. I want to tell my brethren some things I have learned in the school of Christ, although I have been a dull scholar. What I have learned of Jesus has made me better. It is by grace that I am what I am. I have learned the truthfulness of Christ's words—"Without me ye can do nothing," and that it is better to trust in him than to put confidence in princes. I have learned what this meaneth—"I will have mercy and not sacrifice." I have learned to forgive my brother his trespasses, and to have patience toward all men, and not to fret myself "because of evil doers," nor be envions against the workers of iniquity. I have learned what the fruit of the Spirit is, and that to be spiritually minded is life and peace. I have learned to lay aside jealousy, evil speaking, and evil surmising, and to "desire the sincere milk of the word."

When I look back thirty years, I weep while I think of many that have made shipwreck of their faith. Then I give thanks to the Lord that so many have endured hardness, as good soldiers. I do believe there are watchmen upon the walls that give the trumpet a certain sound. They stand up as ambassadors for Christ; like good shepherds, they care for the flock. Soon the chief Shepherd will appear, and they will have a crown of glory that fadeth not away. I am not worthy to be identified with the children of God, yet I feel to say, as one said anciently, "Entreat me not to leave thee"; I want the portion of God's people to be my lot, their work to be my employ.

From Sr. J. A. Goodrich.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—While reading the word of God this morning, I opened to these words: "Hearken, my beloved brethren, hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom, which he hath promised to them that love him?" James 2: 5. What heart-cheering promises. Though poverty may stare us in the face, yet we have the blessed assurance, if we love the Lord, and continue in the way he has marked out for us, when the riches and glories of this world have passed away, we shall be rightful heirs to all that God hath promised to his faithful children. Again, the promise is, "Blessed be ye poor, for yours is the kingdom of God. Blessed are ye that hunger now, for ye shall be filled." Luke 6: 20, 21. Blessed be God for the never-failing promise, that we shall nevermore hunger on the other shore; ever be filled with righteousness, nevermore be stained or polluted with sin. How often we become discouraged, and are led to murmur and complain because of poverty, not remembering the many promises that are made to us, and of the one who became poor that we through his blood might be made rich. This glorious news of redemption by one who had not where to lay his head, is sufficient to cause us to cast all murmurings behind, and patiently await the reward before us.

Let us hear what is said to those on the other hand; "but woe unto you that are rich, for ye have received your consolation." Verse 24. What a lamentable condition is this. Again, "But ye have despised the poor; do not rich men oppress you, and draw you before the judgment?" Jas. 2: 6. Jesus said, "how hardly shall they that have riches enter the kingdom of God;" not that it is impossible for such to enter the kingdom. I have rejoiced many times to know that the poor of this world are God's chosen people, if they walk in righteousness. Oh, let us not trust in uncertain riches, which will not be able to deliver us in the day of God's wrath. Then how gladly would we exchange those treasured idols for an unfading crown; but then it will be forever too late.

I often think that He who is able to prosper, is able to deprive. The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away and I can say, Blessed be the name of the Lord. Let us all praise our heavenly Father in adversity as well as in prosperity. Let us rejoice, though we be deprived of this world's goods; for great will be our reward in the future, if finally faithful. May we be guided as honest and faithful children, entirely by God's holy word and spirit, that we may receive eternal life at the end of the race. Let us be active members in the service of our blessed Lord and Master, that he may claim us as his own with all the blood-washed throng.

New Britain, Ct., July 2nd, 1876.

HOOSICK VALLEY TENT MEETING.

The Hoosick Valley tent was pitched at Thayer's Corners, Franklin Co., N. Y., according to appointment; and the first meeting held at two o'clock P. M., August 16th. The Lord manifested himself at the first, and gave us evidence that we should have a good meeting. Brethren came ten and fifteen miles each way to hear the word and to work for Jesus.

We were disappointed in not seeing Bro. D. T. Taylor at the meetings, who informs us that he is in poor health. The meetings increased in interest and numbers until the last. People who had never heard an Adventist preach came out of curiosity, but when they saw what the Lord was doing, they publicly expressed their sympathy for the meetings. Members from other churches took part in the meetings, and some were greatly blest. Quite a number started anew for the kingdom. Several were converted, fourteen put on Christ by baptism, and a church of twenty-two members was organized. Others will unite soon. All felt that the effort had been blest of God. The multitude who listened day after day reminded us of the noble Bereans, for they examined to see whether the things we preached were so. Prejudice was wonderfully removed, the brethren greatly strengthened, and a wide door opened for future work.

The church is making an effort to secure the labors of Bro. E. N. Morse, who labored arduously with us during the meetings. Brethren, pray that the blessing of God may rest upon this little band of believers, and that they may be like a city set on a hill which cannot be hid. C. PIKE.

LET not the Lord's dealing seem harsh, rough, or unfatherly, because it is unpleasant When the Lord's blessed will bloweth across your desires, it is best in humility to strike sail to him, and be willing to be led any way our Lord pleaseth. It is a point of denial of yourself, to be as if you had not a will, but had made a fresh disposal of it to God, and had sold it over to him; and to make use of His will for your own is both true holiness, and your ease and peace.

Obituaries.

CHASE. In Warner, N. H., June 5th, 1876, of consumption, Harriet M., wife of Nathaniel Chase, aged forty-three years.

Sister Chase embraced the truth about twenty years ago, and was baptized by Bro. T. M. Preble. Since that time, she has adorned her profession with a well ordered life. Death has taken for its victim a kind and affectionate mother, a true and faithful wife. May God sanctify this affliction, and gather the dear family to part no more. D. W. DAVIS.

WILLIS. On Town Farm, in Auburn, Me., Aug. 5th, 1876, Bro. Ruel Willis, aged eighty-nine years, nine months.

Although a member of the Baptist church, Bro. Willis was a firm believer in the truth we hold so dear. It has been my privilege to visit him a number of times the past year, and I always found him rejoicing in the "blessed hope" of Jesus' coming, and the resurrection. He said to me one day, "Bro. Tenney, there is nothing that has done me so much good as this Advent doctrine." "He sleeps, but not forever." WARREN TENNEY.

GREENE. In West Greenwich, R. I., April 17th, 1876, Bro. Rhodes Greene, aged fifty-seven years.

Bro. Greene's death was very sudden. He went out in the afternoon to work, as well as usual. At night, he was found in his wagon dead. He was well known by some of our ministering brethren for his kind hospitality, and we trust he died as he lived, in hope of immortality at the resurrection of the just. He leaves a wife and other friends to mourn. Funeral sermon by Elder E. R. Wood, from 1 Thess. 4: 18. MRS. W. H. H. ARNOLD.

FRENCH. In Brewer, Me., Aug. 17th, 1876, Sr. Harriet French, wife of Bro. David French, aged seventy-eight years, eight months, and sixteen days.

This sister was a christian for more than sixty years, and fell asleep in the blessed hope of Jesus and the resurrection. May God comfort our aged and feeble brother, and the children. Funeral sermon by the writer. Text, Job 14: 14. F. A. BAKER.

MORSE. In Oxford, Me, August 10th, 1876, Howard E, son of David F. and Elizabeth Morse, aged five months and twenty-two days.

God grant the sorrowing ones may be ready to meet those bright eyes, curly locks, and loving arms, beyond the dark river of death. Sermon by the writer, from Jer. 31: 16. JARED WHITMAN.

BISHOP. In Leeds, Me., July 11th, 1876, Sr. Fiducia, wife of Cyrus Bishop, aged thirty-four years.

The enemy has taken from our number one that was loved and respected by all. E. M. HAGGETT.

WAITE. At Sandy Hill, N. Y., August 18th, Mary Ellen, infant daughter of Elder Arthur A. and Ellen A. Waite. "Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep.'

FOREIGN NEWS.

THE EASTERN WAR.

LONDON, Aug. 30. A special from Bagdad to the Times says the keenest anxiety is felt to hear of an armistice. Every day increases the danger of the war spreading. The Servian army is fast becoming a Russian auxiliary force fighting on Servian soil

The Russians are exposing themselves into the brunt of the battle with remarkable valor. Out of forty-eight men who fought as a company at Alexinatz thirty were left dead on the field. The Servians are becoming jealous and afraid of the Russians. They feel the control of their army is slipping from their hands, and will joyfully accept peace, if obtained on good terms.

Aug. 31. A Belgrade dispatch to the Daily News says the Turks keep up their attack on the Servian lines near Alexinatz, hoping to capture the place before a plan of mediation is adopted. The Servian infantry has been worsted, but the artillery behave well. Russian influence is stubbornly interposing obstacles to peace, and Russians are swarming into Servia.

Should the efforts now making for a six weeks' armistice succeed, the Servian army at the end of that time, by reorganizing, by the influence of foreign officers, and by the experience it has had under fire, will be stronger than at the beginning of the war.

The Standard's Berlin correspondent telegraphs that in German political circles the belief is expressed that Prince Milan's request for mediation is only another move in the policy of Russia to protract the Turkish complications, so that she can complete her own preparations.

A dispatch to the Standard from Rome reports that ex-Empress Eugenie has purchased for her winter residence the villa of the Grand Duchess Maria of Russia.

BELGRADE, Aug. 29. The representatives of the great powers here have informed the Servian government that the powers will take the question of mediation into their own hands.

Official advices received here, say that the Turks attacked the Servian left on Monday, but were repulsed with heavy loss. They left their killed and a large quantity of arms and ammunition on the field. A Turkish attack on Little Sewarnick, was likewise repulsed.

VIENNA, Aug. 29. The great powers are constantly interchanging telegrams concerning the proposed mediation. A general agreement has been reached touching the principal features of the policy to be adopted, but the details are unsettled. Germany is the most backward of the powers. It is believed that no great difficulty will be experienced in determining the steps to be taken, but several days will probably elapse before the powers will submit their proposals to the Porte.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 31. A council of Ministers and great dignitaries of the Empire have proclaimed Abdul Hamid Sultan, vice Murad deposed.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 1. The deposition of Murad occasions no excitement or disturbance. The deposed monarch has been assigned to Tcheregan Palace as a residence. Abdul Hamid, the new Sultan, was yesterday received by ministers and functionaries at Topcapon Palace, where he was proclaimed Abdul Hamid.

BELGRADE, Sept 4. Official dispatches say the entire Turkish army attacked the Servian right wing on Friday. The battle lasted until 9 o'clock at night. Several villages were burned, and the carnage was terrible on both sides. The streets of Alexinatz were strewn with dead and wounded.

The following, from a special correspondent of the Telegraph at Belgrade, is apropos: Fresh arrivals of Russian reinforcements continue to reach us, and to pass on to the front. Fifty Russian officers came last night, and forty others with thirty Cossacks to-day. This contingent certainly includes some officers of the Czar's Imperial Guard, and I learn on good authority that 144 of their comrades have leave of absence for Servia. Already there are more than 1200 Russians at the front, mostly officers. The presence of these auxiliaries has completely changed the situation. The Russian officers themselves declare that they have saved Servia. It is stated that they drive the Servians to battle when necessary, as notoriously it often is, with pistol and sabre, and shoot down the laggards remorselessly.

His Holiness, the Pope, does not lose any of the tenacity of his opinions as he grows older. In a recent address he said emphatically: "And now, whilst I deplore all these crimes, which may be called sacrileges, I cease not, nor will I ever cease to repeat that in the actual order of providence, the temporal power is necessary to the Holy See, and I shall protest with ever increasing energy against the reiterated violations of it, perpetrated to the injury of the Church, of her liberties and rights."

DOMESTIC NEWS.

St. Hyacinthe, Ont. Sept. 3. A fire commenced at the west end of this city at half-past one P. M., and, favored by the high wind, soon totally swept the lower part of the city out of existence. The flames ran down both sides of Main street, taking in their course the St. Hyacinthe, Quebec and National banks, the postoffice, market, court house, factories, and over eighty wholesale and retail stores. At 3 P. M. the fire had spread, by means of the burning cinders, to the three parallel streets and burned everything up. The people had no time to save anything. At 7 P. M. six hundred houses had been burned. Hundreds of families are homeless, with nothing to eat. The loss is estimated at $2,000,000.

Notices.

THE R. I. CAMPMEETING, at Coventry Centre, R. I., on the H. P. and Fishkill R. R., will commence Wednesday, Sept. 6th, and close Friday, the 15th. To those in the business circles of life, that are anxiously looking for the return of former prosperity, with fearful forebodings of the future; and those that are watching coming events, waiting the promised return of the Savior, in like manner as he went away to give life and immortality to the faithful, this meeting will be one of unusual interest. Preachers will be expected to show from the Bible the first named class, the position they occupy, as plainly as did Noah's preaching the antediluvians, and the absolute necessity of getting ready to meet the things soon coming on the earth; and cause the second class to lift up their head, and rejoice that their redemption draweth nigh. The signs of the times are as unmistakable omens of the final doom of man, as the putting forth of the buds of the fig tree are of the approach of summer. Being obliged to reduce our expenses to meet liabilities, that we owe no man, free boarders, not active spiritual laborers, will be expected to labor in any position assigned them, to save expense of former meetings. By this arrangement, we do not exclude our aged sisters, who with anxiety have cared for and made happy the home of him whom the woe has been upon if he preach not the word. Come, every one of you, and know that the Lord provides for the Marthas as well as the Marys Those willing to volunteer their services to reduce the expense of the meeting, will please write J. P. Hazard, Greene, R. I., that there be no confusion at the commencement of the meeting, or unnecessary trouble in hiring help. Board 80 cts. per day. Horse keeping 75 cts. per day, ample room being provided on both sides of the road for horses and carriages. No teams or carriages will be allowed to stand within the limits of the highway. Railroad fare reduced as usual. By order of the committee,
J. P. HAZARD.

Pittsfield Campmeeting.

The Annual Campmeeting of the East Maine Missionary Association will be held, if the Lord will, on the ground occupied last year at Pittsfield, commencing Sunday, Sept. 10th, and hold over Sunday, Sept. 17th. The present owner of the grove is willing we should occupy it the full term of the lease, which is seven years more.

The new Maine Mission Tent will be pitched in the grove Sept. 9th, and will afford lodging for friends who cannot put up tents, but all must provide bedding for themselves. Good board will be furnished at the boarding tent as follows: Breakfast or supper, 30 cents; dinner 40 cents, except the last Sunday, when it will be 50 cents. Horse keeping per day, for hay 25 to 35 cents, near by the grove.

The fare over the M. C. R. R. and all its branches is reduced one half. Call for Campmeeting Tickets for Pittsfield and return, as there will be none given at Pittsfield. Tickets good from Sept. 6th to the 21st. Let all who can, come over the R. R.

Committee: Jer. Carr, O. S. French, A. M. Harris, Oscar Farnum, Wm. Clark, Paul Ames, Wm. Banton, Owen Wincapaw, G. L. McKinney.

YORK CO. CONFERENCE.—Our County Conference is to meet at South Hiram, Me., in the Union Chapel, Thursday, Sept. 21st, at two o'clock P. M. The friends there desire a large attendance from abroad, and we hope they will be gratified Those coming over the Portland and Ogdensburg R R. should leave the cars at Baldwin station, and get on board Stanley's stage. Request to be left at Captain Randall Libby's. Bro. L. will see that you are provided with a comfortable home while you remain. Those coming with teams had better call on Moses Norton, or George Mason, Kezar Falls. All letters should be directed to Kezar Falls, Me. C. H. SWEET, Secretary.

A Card.

I would say, through the Crisis, to brethren East, who have invited me to labor among them, that myself and wife left home Aug. 24th for a western trip, and, therefore, they will have to wait our return, perhaps about the latter part of October. We have enjoyed good health, and prospered finely ever since leaving home. I expect to attend the Galesburg, Ill., campmeeting, commencing Sept. 2d. Then go to Boscobel, Wis., where letters can be directed to us until Sept. 20th. After this, I expect to labor in the following places in Illinois, where I have been invited, viz: Rockford, Foreston, Genoa, Sycomore, De Kalb, and Chicago. I may not labor in these places in just in the order as here named, but shall arrange for meetings so as to save time and expense. We are now one hundred miles west of Chicago.
T. M. PREBLE.
Granville, Ill., Aug. 31st, 1876.

CAMPMEETING NOTICE.—The Kansas Campmeeting will be held in the grove, three miles east of Arvonia, Osage Co., Kansas, commencing Friday, Sept. 29th, and continue over Oct. 8th. We hope to see a general gathering of those who are looking for the return of the Nobleman throughout the State, and also from Mo. Bring tents, provision and bedding, and let us tent together in the forest, and worship the Lord of hosts. We expect Bro. Burr, Editor of the A. C. Times, will be with us to preach the word of life. The Kansas Mission Tent will be on the ground, and will afford shelter for many.

NOTICE.—The Hoosick Valley Tent will be pitched at Bombay Corners, Franklin Co., N. Y., Sept 13th, to remain over the two following Sundays. Let Brn. from Burke, Bangor, Canaan, and Massena, come filled with the Spirit to lend a helping hand to save the perishing. This is a new field; none of our faith at the Corners. Bro. C. N. Crawford lives five miles out, and is making an effort to spread the truth. Pray for the blessing of God on this effort. C. PIKE.

Many thanks for help in pledges, and payments of the same. We soon will be on the last third. If I had all the pledges paid in, it would help me much. Some are footing up their tobacco bill, and making an offering to the Lord as well as to appetite, and thus help in this enterprise. I trust others will follow their example.
PETER S. W. DEYO.

REVIVAL MEETINGS will commence in the Congregational Chapel, Spring Street, Woonsocket, R. I., Friday evening, Sept. 8th, and continue over Sunday, the 10th, and longer if the interest demands. All are cordially invited. Bro. I. B. Potter, of Conn., will be in attendance.
H. JEFFERY.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE.—The next annual session of the A. C. Conference of Northern Pa. and Southern New York will be held with the church at Westfield, Tioga Co., Pa., commencing Thursday evening, Sept. 21st, and hold over the following Sunday. By rail from Corning to Elkland, then stage to Westfield.
E. C. COWLES, President.
H. RIEGENFUSS, Secretary.

A Proposition.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—An effort is being made, by myself and two or three other willing souls, to hold a grove meeting in Medina, N. Y., and we want the earnest prayers of God's dear children in behalf of its success, and that he will control the elements in its favor; for we shall be without shelter from wind and storm during its progress. Any preaching brethren, whose sole object in preaching is to save sinners, and not to ride hobbies for their own selfish ends; who can come without any thought of reward, and lay hold of this work for the Master, will be welcomed. Such will please address the writer, and I will inform them of the time of the meeting. A neat and commodious place for holding such a meeting is promised us, and a lumber merchant promises the use of lumber for seats, etc.; therefore, as soon as we can secure the services of a requisite number of speakers to address the various meetings, the arrangements will be completed. We want to commence the latter part of the present month, and hold them as long as good can be accomplished. Pray for God's presence with us in power. A. PARMELEE, Medina, N. Y.

CONFERENCE.—There will be a conference in Middle Simonds, N. B., commencing Wednesday, Sept. 20th, at 7 P. M., and continue over the following Sunday. A general invitation is extended to all. Come in the spirit of our soon coming King, and glorious results will follow.
For the church, RUFUS SNOW.

THE Northern Kansas A. C. Conference will commence Sept. 9th. S. K. KNOX, Pres.

Bethel (Vt.) Campmeeting.

The Annual Campmeeting at Bethel, Vt., is appointed to commence Thursday, Sept. 14th, and hold till Friday, Sept. 22nd. Fares will be reduced on all roads controlled by the Central Vt. R. R, reaching from New London, Ct., to Montreal, P. Q, Montpelier and Wells River R. R, and probably on the Cheshire R. R, running from Fitchburg, Mass., and connecting with the Central Vt. at Bellows Falls. Trains will stop opposite the grounds, as heretofore, during campmeeting week, commencing with Tuesday. If no campmeeting tickets at the station where you start from, buy regular tickets, and get free return passes back, on the grounds, from our Secretary.

Board can be had on the grounds at low rates. All will please come provided with tents and bedding who can. Teams can be kept near the grounds at reasonable prices. Lodgings will be provided for preachers in the stand, and we hope each tent's company will invite one or more preachers in to board with them, so as to reduce the number of free boarders.

Efficient help is engaged to preach the word, also to keep order on the ground. We hope all will come praying that God may direct and bless the meeting to the glory of his name, and the salvation of the perishing. A. A. HOYT, for Com.

VERMONT ANNUAL CONFERENCE.—The Vt. Conference will hold its annual session Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 12th and 13th. It has been requested that we further amend the Constitution, and consider the idea of a change of the location of our camp-ground. We hope all churches will be represented, as all our business for the year is to be done at this meeting.
A. A. HOYT, for Com.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.—The A. C. Quar. Conf. of Central Kansas will hold its next session at Arvonia, Osage Co., Kansas, Saturday, Sept. 30th, and continue over the Lord's day, Oct. 1st. In connection with this meeting, it is thought best to have a State Campmeeting, commencing Sept. 27th, and continue as long as thought best. We hope all of our brethren and sisters in the State and elsewhere, who can come, will prepare for this meeting. Let fervent prayer be offered that we may have a rich season in the Lord. Those that can, bring tents. Now, brethren and sisters, let us make a general rally to this meeting. Bro. Burr, Editor of the A. C. Times, we trust will be there to preach the word.
J. C. SMITH,
AARON PRESTON, } Committee.
M. MCGUIRE,

DIST. CAMPMEETING AND QUAR. MEETING.—There will be a campmeeting at or near West Salem, LaCrosse Co., Wis., commencing Monday, Sept. 18th, to continue over the following Lord's day. Elds. Thurber, Hough, Howard, Sr. Rowell, and others, are expected to preach the word. Let there be a general rally of all the ministers and churches of the district, and all others who can. It is your meeting. Come and enjoy it, and make it a success. Let every church send one or more family tents. Churches that wish quarterly meetings, or protracted meetings, come up and make arrangements for them. Several ministers will be present with whom you can confer. This will be an important meeting for this district.

Committee: L. W. Wood, L. F. Bowles, A. Mosher, James Hewitt, Jno. Pettingill.
PHILO HITCHCOCK, Dist. Evangelist.

"LAKE VIEW CAMP."—From all stations from Sherbrooke on the north, to Wells River on the South, on the Passumpsic line, and from Newport, Vt., to West Farnham, on the South Eastern Railway, pay full fare one way, and you will get free return passes, by applying to me on the ground. The stage from Ayers' Flat (ten miles), will bring ministers to Magog for half fare; also the stage from Sherbrooke, and all others, for one quarter reduction. Those coming over the Boston, Concord, and Montreal R. R., will pay full fare one way to Wells River, and get free return passes properly signed, etc. Arrangement is being negotiated for half fare on the Grand Trunk, etc. C. P. DOW.

YORK CO. A. C. CONFERENCE.—This conference will hold its third quarterly session at South Hiram, commencing Thursday, Sept. 21st, and continuing over Sunday. It is hoped that our Brn. and sisters will make a special effort to attend this meeting. Strangers stopping at Kezar Falls will find good homes with Bro. Norton and Bro. Mason, and in Hiram with Bro. Libbey and others.
G. F. HAINES, Sec. pro tem.

The Evangel Tent is pitched in Waterville Village, corner of Elm and Spring Street. Will continue over Sunday the 10th, and longer if thought best. This is a new place for our faith. If any can come and help give the cry in the name of the Lord, come.
F. E. BLAISDELL. H. B. SEVEY.

Campmeeting.

The Kansas and Nebraska Campmeeting will be held at Peach Creek, Washington Co., Kansas (at the same place as last year), commencing Thursday, Sept. 21st, and hold over two Sabbaths. We expect a glorious meeting. Let all contribute to the interests of the meeting by their presence filled with the Spirit of the Lord. All who possibly can, bring tents, plenty of bedding, etc., etc. Do not stay away because you have not tents; provisions will be made for all who come, as far as possible. A large attendance of ministers will be present to preach the word. The large tent brought from the East by R. F. and M. J. Clark will be used for the occasion. There will be no side issues, or hobbies, and we expect to have perfect harmony. From present indications, it will be the largest meeting ever held in the State.

Committee—Geo. P. Boutwell, Clifton; C. D. Potter, Peach Creek; Wm. H. Shriner, Washington; W. T. Pilcher, Glen Elder, Kansas. H. Kissel, Blue Springs, Neb. For further particulars, address as above. R. F. CLARK, Sec.

A New Edition.

The first edition of "Berean's Casket" is exhausted. A new edition, revised and improved, is now published on excellent paper, and beautifully bound in cloth, ready for all who wish such a help in the study of the Scriptures. Price $2.00. In leather, 2.50. Sold at this office, and by the author.
I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

NOTICE.—My health having considerably improved, I am willing to devote a portion of the Sundays each month to preaching, if the Lord will. Any church or community wishing my labors, please write me at Lawrence, Mass., No. 10 Fulton Street, as that is my present address.
F. M. DRAKE.

ALL those who do not intend to occupy their tent lots at Pittsfield, Me., this year, please inform me at once by postal card. Direct to JER. CARR, Pittsfield, Me.

ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

This is an ably conducted weekly paper, edited by Elder Frank Burr, and published under the auspices of the Western A. C. Publishing Society. It gives prominence to the personal coming of Christ, the resurrection of the dead, the final destruction of sinners, and the eternal salvation of saints on the renovated earth. It also insists on a holy life as essential to an admittance into the coming kingdom. $2.20 a year. Address Advent Christian Times, 91 South Green St., Chicago, Ill

UNION IN CHRIST.

"UNION IN CHRIST" is the title of a neat illustrated Monthly, devoted to Christian Union and evangelistic work. Its editorial staff are clergymen of ability in different denominations. As leading features of the paper it will advocate, 1st. The Recognition and Fellowship of Christians of all denominations. 2nd. Union Revival meetings in cities, villages, and rural districts, everywhere, as a means to unite Christians, promote holiness, save souls, and prepare a people for the coming and kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. It will be furnished a year to our readers when remitting to this office, renewals or sending new subscribers, by enclosing 30 cents extra for "Union in Christ." Regular terms 50 cents a year; 30 cts. to ministers of the gospel and to agents. Sent on trial two months free with terms to agents. Address H. A. KING, 37 Park Row, New York City.

THE BIBLE BANNER FOR 1876.

This is a large, illustrated, monthly paper, conducted by A. A. PHELPS, A. M., assisted by two able Corresponding Editors—D. T. Taylor and William Sheldon—who will contribute liberally for its columns. It contains various departments—Doctrinal, Prophetical, Practical, Bible Class, Miscellany, and Items of Interest. It is devoted to a critical exposition of Bible Truth, and an earnest advocacy of Bible Salvation. Only One Dollar a year, in advance, and postage free. Liberal terms to Agents. Sample copy free.
Address THE BIBLE BANNER, Vineland, N. J.

Appointments

☞ APPOINTMENTS MUST BE RECEIVED AS EARLY AS TUESDAY MORNING (as our paper goes to press about noon) to insure insertion for the coming week.

☞ The following RESOLUTION was passed at the late meeting of the A. C. P. Society:—

"RESOLVED, That no appointments be published in the CRISIS henceforth for persons unknown to the Editorial Board (by which is understood the Editors, Editorial Committee, and Business Agent), unless satisfactory reference shall be given.

The Committee appointed by the Adv. Chris. Association, at its last Annual Meeting, to advise with the Editorial Board "in relation to the publication in the World's Crisis of the appointments of men unworthy of recognition as preachers," having attended to the duty assigned them, recommended, and the Editorial Board have adopted, and ordered to be published, the following resolution:—

"RESOLVED, That when the Editorial Board is properly notified by any of our Churches, or Ministers, or responsible persons, by a written allegation that a certain minister, or ministers, lack moral character, that they be instructed to notify such minister, or ministers, of the information received, as a reason for withholding their appointments till after a proper trial and acquittal."

All communications in relation to this matter should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board—GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass.

THE WORLD TO COME.

GEO. W. HOWARD.

There is a world of pure delight,
That knows no sorrow, death nor night;
Nothing can reach that blest abode,
To harm the children of the Lord.
CHO.—We await that bright morn,
We await that bright morn;
We await that bright morn,
Savior, hasten its dawn.

There is a rest divinely sweet,
Where all the blest together meet;
There sick bed scenes can never come
To mar our loved ones in their home.

The tongues of stammerers plainly speak,
And like a hart the lame shall leap;
No lion's whelp can tread that way,
Nor vulture's eye behold that day.

We scan the heavens with longing eyes,
And wait the everlasting prize,
When Gabriel's trump the earth shall shake,
And all the sleeping saints awake.

Job in his flesh the Lord shall see,
And David satisfied shall be;
For Christ in majesty shall come,
And gather all the faithful home.

Shall I be numbered in that throng,
And join to swell the victor's song?
Eternal God, my portion be,
That I at last may dwell with thee.

SPRINGFIELD CAMPMEETING.

WM. KELLAWAY.

(Concluded.)

Among the faithful that we meet, is Bro. Couch, with thoughtful expression, the same as when we last saw him. Bro. Grant, the serenity of whose countenance has not changed. Bro. Adams, whom we are glad to see yet alive, and whose face looks to us clearer than when we left. Bro. Matthewson, grown venerable in the truth. Bro. Hemenway, determined and manly. Bro. Phelps, meek and careful. Bro. King, enthusiastic in spirit. Bro. Hoyt, with eyes of piercing expression. Bro. Stewart, a whole-souled preacher. Bro. Wellcome, a trusty and worn laborer. Bro. I. B. Potter, of noble stature. Bro. Goodrich, generous and beloved. Bro. Leslie, the children's friend. Bro. Shorey, the sweet singer of Israel. Bro. Morrill, an old esteemed friend. Bro. Streeter, full-hearted as full-faced. Bro. Sibley, genial as summer-time, and many other brethren whose names we fail to recal, but whose visages bring back tender recollections, and Christian associations. We also greet in the Lord Srs. Stoddard and Crumb. We make new friends, such us Bro. Bowman, a thorough and intelligent man of God; Bro. Sheldon, whose name is worthy of mention with any; Bro. Clark, a fellow-laborer in Christ; Bro. Cargile, full of missionary zeal; Bro. McCulloch, of reverential aspect; Bro. M. A. Potter, not a tent-maker like the apostle, but a tent-master; Bro. Wendell, whom we greatly admire, and hope to see back again to the truth of God concerning man's nature. There are others, but they have slipped our memory.

Having with our heart entraced our brethren and sisters, among whom we have labored, and whose memories are fragrant as perfume itself, we now refer to the meetings. They are regular and well appointed. It is supposed that none upon the camp-ground will play the part of sluggard, for Bro. Grant holds a service at half-past five in one of the large meeting tents, for such as desire to realize the truth of faith in Christ, to such an extent as to have victory over the world and its lusts, and perfect satisfaction and assurance in their own minds. It is the universal voice that these meetings are both edifying and successful. Many have testified to a power and a trust hitherto unexperienced. The next gathering is at nine o'clock before the preaching stand, where a love-feast is held. Many joyful testimonies are given in from glowing hearts. Beautiful songs are sung. The faithful rejoice together. It is a high time. The meeting is dismissed a few minutes before half-past ten, when it re-assembles, and some preacher of the word stands and delivers his testimony with fervor and power, according to his ability, and as he has learned of the Divine Teacher. Truly impassioned, and in most instances soundly scriptural, are these addresses. At half-past two the congregation comes again to the stand, and again the truth is dispensed to the interested hearts of the many. At half-past six this is repeated, and afterwards the friends hie away to the grove tents to finish the day in prayer and praise, in exhortations and mention of the loving kindness of the Lord.

Thursday, the Advent Christian Mission Association held its annual meeting, when Bro. Bowman told of the work that had been done in South Carolina. He reported meeting-houses built, sinners saved, churches formed, in short, progress; but desired help in men and means. He also mentioned the sad social loss he has lately sustained in the death of an amiable and devoted wife; and having recently buried two sweet children of our own, we felt we could sympathize with him most sincerely in his bereavement.

Bro. Cargile also gave an account of his mission in the South, which was pleasing in its statistics of success. He has known hard times, and having had experience in that direction ourselves, we were well able to enter into his necessities. Bro. Couch spoke as he is so well able to do. And as we were present, and were asked to say a word about the truth in England, we tried to encourage our brethren with a very brief and necessarily imperfect account of the progress of the gospel record in our native land, and state our own needs, especially at this time, in order to be able to continue publishing the truth. We understand that over a thousand dollars were paid or pledged at the conclusion of the meeting; and we were glad to see that some of the preaching brethren set an example of good works by themselves contributing very respectable amounts to the fund. This is the way to encourage others to do right; and it shows that there is the practical, as well as verbal and theoretical, in our esteemed brethren.

As the result of the meeting, there has been, up to Saturday, the day on which we write, twelve baptized. We pray God that these newly received brethren and sisters may prove a praise to the name they bear, and that we may meet them in the better country.

There are one hundred and sixty-two tents and houses on the ground; and with the visitors from Springfield, mostly large congregations attend the services. Bro. Hastings preached to-day, (Saturday) from the stand, on our divine relations, and the duty of looking them up.

We ought not to finish without saying how well the boarding tent has been supplied with active and attentive waiters, and how sufficiently spread with everything necessary in the way of food, although it is away from Springfield. Brother Potter, who has the management of this service, has done his work admirably, and if all have our mind, to the entire satisfaction of the brethren.

The meeting has been one of rich blessing, and a source of strength to our heart. It has set us up for new labor. And with the further comfort and help that we expect to get at Seabrook, Alton Bay, and, possibly, Coventry, we trust to be very greatly re-invigorated for fresh testimony in England, whither we expect to return in about three weeks. Brethren, give your sympathy and prayers.

Sunday, Aug. 20th. We thought we had done, but the "last great day of the feast" has been such an extraordinary day in incident and blessing, that to let it pass without remark, would be an omission indeed. Early in the morning, the grounds began to fill with the crowd that flocked in from the entire surrounding neighborhood. And still they come, in threes and sixes and dozens. Teams of all sorts drive up and are assigned a place. What a number! Probably by noon there are fifteen thousand persons upon the grounds. The police are guarding the circle around the seats facing the stand, ropes being placed in various parts to prevent the visitors from walking around, and by their tramp and conversation hinder those from hearing the word, who have come to listen. In front of the stand and beyond, hiding some of the side tents, is stretched a chart pictorizing the customs and scenes of all lands in various centuries. This chart is also of an historical character, giving the names of various kings and emperors who have reigned co-temporaneously, and by scale of about a foot to a century, showing how long they ruled. On this historical basis is painted the symbolic beasts of Daniel and Revelation. It is a well-executed map, both in design and painting. There is none other exactly like it in the world. Its value is five hundred dollars. From this chart, Bro. Grant gave three very interesting and instructive addresses, showing distinctly that the time of glory is at hand. Our heart loves to have it so. Our Savior is heartily welcome to earth. There are many praises waiting for Him in the loyal hearts of his people. Sunday passes away delightfully.

Was there ever such a conference meeting as that held before the stand? Did the prophecies ever appear easier of understanding and belief, than they did as expounded with the chart? Were godly hearts ever more elated with hope? And then, at the end of the day, we gathered together with the accepted of the Lord, and in the boarding tent, as we eat the memorial bread and drank the wine of communion, we were drawn so close in heart to our Savior and to our companions in trial and hope, that we felt it to be a means of grace in very truth. Our heart had a great desire to this privilege and feast. Our steps were willing to this blessed ordinance. And heaven was near in the impressive hour in which we partook of the emblems of our sacrifice, and saw our holy Redeemer near to come for our salvation. Those long tables, spread with white cloths,—we charge our imagination to retain the sight. And now we retire to the tent of Bro. Morrill, to say to each other Good bye! In this gathering culminates deep interest. We say Farewell! Brothers, sisters, farewell! But we tell one another, as God is true, we shall meet again! "Yes, we shall all meet again!" Every saint shall come to the marriage Supper of the Lamb! Then, what joy! What sparkling eyes! Talking is changed into singing! And bliss runs high, for all are safe and satisfied. Eternally safe; divinely satisfied.

Monday is break-up day. We talk to a policeman to-day. He tells us there has not been one arrest during the entire session. He says there has only appeared on the grounds one drunken man, who submitted to be quietly led away. A sufficient answer to those who associate Adventism with outlawry. We give our brethren our christian adieu! And here we take leave of our readers.

UNFAITHFUL MINISTERS.

SILAS HENN.

There are ministers, not a few, who will deliver fine sermons about Joseph being sold into Egypt, about Pharaoh's army being drowned in the sea, about David killing Goliath with a sling and a stone, about Daniel in the lion's den, and about the three Hebrew worthies in the fiery furnace; but they seldom or never preach about the urgent duties of the present times, the duties devolving upon the people before them in reference to the things of to-day. What are the evils which are cursing society around us, and speeding the multitude on their way to ruin? And amongst those evils, which are the most prominent? Is not smoking one? Is not drinking another? Is not pleasure-seeking another? Is not lying and dishonesty in trade another? But how often do you hear these things preached about, and preached against? Why you may attend some chapels fifty-two Sabbaths in the year, and never once hear some of these evils even named. The abominable corruptions which prevail around us, are taken little or no notice of. If a few in the church are thought to be unsound on some article of their creed, some ministers will preach very learnedly and very earnestly against the supposed heresy, which, to say the most, is but an error of the judgment; but they will see the practical heresy of a wicked life in the thousands that are moving around them, and be comparatively unconcerned. And in some of its worst forms, that destructive heresy shall never be assailed. To preach faithfully against the evils and corruptions of the present day, might expose them to persecution, and inconvenience, and loss; and for this they are not prepared. Can such ministers believe their own creeds or doctrines? No; they cannot. Have they faith in what they themselves preach? No; they have not. Whatever place those creeds or doctrines may have in their minds, they have no proper place in their hearts; they have no proper hold on their spiritual nature. They are more concerned for their reputation as orthodox ministers, than for the salvation of souls; at least, they manifest more concern for the former than for the latter.

Let a member of the church, for instance, be unable to accept the frightful dogma of eternal torments, and he is warned and remonstrated with, and given to understand that he is departing from the true faith, and getting on to dangerous ground; or let a lay preacher reject that doctrine, and let him preach against it, and those ministers will warn him to desist on pain of expulsion from their pulpits; and if he will not promise to desist, official action will be taken on his case, and numerous chapels will at once be closed against him, and he will be regarded as unfit to preach; so exceedingly jealous are they of the orthodox doctrine of endless tortures; and yet those same ministers will see scores of thousands of souls drifting off in the whirlpool of intemperance to destruction; or, as they profess to believe, to never-ending misery, and will not preach against the accursed thing that is beguiling them to perdition, that they might, if possible, save some from the doom which is before them. They will not even give up strong drink themselves, but will use it and defend its use, notwithstanding all the evil effects of drink they see around them. Alas! alas! they are unfaithful ministers of the word, and will have a poor account to give in the day of final reckoning.

COME TO JESUS.

Though you cannot see Jesus, you can speak to him. You can pray. God has permitted, and even commanded us to do this. How great a privilege to be allowed to speak to God! "Call upon me in the day of trouble." "Watch and pray." "Pray without ceasing." Prayer requires no fine, well-arranged sentences. The simplest utterance of your heart's desire is prayer. Those desires themselves, unbreathed, are prayer. You need not wait until you can enter a church to pray; you may pray everywhere. And Jesus is always waiting for the prayers of poor sinners; so that no one ever escapes his notice. His ear is always open. It is difficult to speak to kings and princes; they can only be seen sometimes, and then only a few persons are permitted to come near them. But all may come with their petitions to Jesus, however poor and despised, and at all times too. Whatever good things you want for the soul, pray. You cannot pray in vain. You may be assured of such prayers being answered.

There are some things which even God cannot do. He cannot sin, and he cannot refuse to listen to a poor sinner's prayer, for he has promised. "Ask, and it shall be given you," said Jesus; and his word declares "He cannot deny himself." Be then encouraged to pray. However vile and helpless you are, you are not too bad to pray. Pray, if you can only utter such a petition as this: "Save, Lord, or I perish." Make a habit of prayer. Find some place where you can be alone. "When thou prayest, enter into thy closet and shut the door." Rise before the work of the day begins, that you may have time to pray. Lay open your heart before God. Tell him how vile and helpless and wretched you are. Confess your sins and cry for pardon. Read the Bible, and ask for that holiness which is commended there. Say, "Lord, I am ignorant, teach me. My heart is hard, soften it. Convert me by thy Holy Spirit. Help me to come to Jesus—to believe, love and obey him. Save me from sin, and fit me for heaven." And let your heart throughout the day often ascend to God, even while engaged in your necessary labor. "Pray without ceasing." If the answer does not seem to come at once, pray on, and success is certain.

A praying soul can never be lost. You never will perish while you are sincerely calling upon Jesus, saying, "Lord, have mercy upon me a sinner."—J. C. Ryle.

WORDS OF COUNSEL

Addressed to "Wanderer" in Crisis of Aug. 16th.

E. MOSS.

Dear penitent and burdened soul, now seeking salvation, will you accept a few words of encouragement from a friend, who earnestly desires and prays that you may be saved? Christ tells you, in John 10: 9, that he is the door through which you are to find rest to your soul, and obtain eternal life. You are now occupying the position of one on the outside, asking for admission. There is no necessity for your remaining outside the fold a moment longer. Stop knocking now, and listen to the voice within, which says, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." "Come unto me, all ye ends of the earth, and be ye saved." With all these invitations to come in, why not at once lift the latch and enter? But do you in your heart say, "I am coming, Lord, coming now to thee"? If so, Christ says to you, "Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you." If, then, you are now coming to him, he also is coming to meet you.

Now, how long will it take for the Lord to reach you? and when and where shall the meeting take place? The great Shepherd is within hearing distance, and the meeting may take place now and here, if you are believing and trusting as you are required to do. You are near enough to touch the hem of his garment. It is your privilege now, by faith, to reach forth, touch it, and be healed.

You may say, I am trying to believe, but cannot; as this is the language of nearly every seeking soul. We reply, Is there any special effort required, on your part, to breathe? Do you not inhale and exhale the air without having to try to do it? Believing is an act to be performed by you, and you have the power to do it as easily as to breathe. Now stop trying, and go to trusting. Why keep calling, when Christ says "Come"? Why keep asking, when he says "Take"?

Faith is the reaching forth of the withered hand, in obedience to the Divine command. Faith takes the word and rests upon its promises, because of the ability, willingness and faithfulness of its Author to perform all that he has promised. Having made a complete and entire consecration of all you have and are to Christ, your next duty is to believe that the offering thus presented is accepted, and because of its acceptance you are Christ's and he is yours.

Now, then, without any questions or doubts, or waiting for feeling, claim Christ this moment as your Savior, believing with all your heart that he does accept and save you just now. Maintain that position unwaveringly, until the witness of the Spirit is given, which will not long be withheld.

THE PARABLE OF THE TARES.

ASA GORDON.

"Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them."—MATT. 13: 30.

Who shall gather them? "The reapers." Who are the reapers? "The angels." v. 39. When are they to be gathered? "At the harvest." v. 30. "In the end of this world." v. 40. Why grow together until the harvest? "Lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them." v. 29. Who are the tares? "The children of the wicked one." v. 38. The idea has been advanced by some that the tares are now being bound in bundles in the many different organizations, which represent the bundles. I have not embraced this idea, for several objections seem too formidable for me to overcome without help from some source. Some of these I will mention. Admitting this theory to be correct, I cannot see any chance for any one to be saved who belongs to any of these doomed organizations; for they are bound expressly by the angels to be burned. I would also inquire when this binding in bundles commenced? with the beginning of these different orders? If such is the case, it must have been a long time since the work began. I cannot accept this idea, because some who previously belonged to these clans have given good evidence of conversion to God. So we see this will not work.

Another reason for not believing this doctrine is, that at the harvest the angels gather the tares and bind them, the two classes having become fully developed, and ready for the sickle; it being an act of the angels, and not a voluntary act of the grain in reaping and binding itself; whereas, in the cases under consideration, men form themselves into parties by their own choice. If these different organizations are the bundles, and people are being gathered into them for the fires of the last day, all that are gathered into them are considered tares, and there can be no escape from the decree of the Lord, as he sends his angels to do his bidding; but the wrath of God will certainly be poured out upon "the vessels of wrath, fitted for destruction."

I think that I have good reasons for believing that there are christians in these different combinations, and also sinners. I believe my mission, as far as it is designed to reach, embraces the good news of salvation to all who will come to Jesus. Salvation is yet free. The door of mercy is not yet closed. All who have not sinned against the Holy Ghost may yet obtain forgiveness of sin, and be admitted into the family of God. Joining a sect or party is not necessarily "a sin unto death." Although I have but little faith in man-made alliances, I would not be an extremist beyond what Jesus is.

GOD'S COMPLETED PICTURES.

If any one had looked in upon Raffaele while in his studio, working out the first rough draft of his immortal "Transfiguration," he might have seen nothing that was attractive. Vague outlines or coarse blotches of paint were all that the canvas could yet show of the world's masterpiece of art. The artist himself would say to his visitor, "Wait until the picture is done; it will be beautiful in its time." The time to see it was when it hung, in its matchless loveliness, above the dead master's coffin at Rome.

In like manner, if our heavenly Father would condescend to explain his mysteries of providence to his suffering children, he might say, "Everything which I do is beautiful in its time." But the time has not yet come. "What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter." The present trial is not joyous, but grievous; nevertheless, it worketh out the exceeding weight of glory. God bid us wait and see. The unsightly outlines of his providences, which so perplex and distress us, will yet stand out in the light of eternity as masterpieces of wisdom and of love. Now we see his work only through a glass darkly.

Why that terrible loss came upon us—why that coffin was brought into our doorway—why that long sickness defeated all our plans—why our staff was broken—all these things are more than our poor, selfish hearts can understand. God's only answer is, "All things work together for good to them that love me." Wait and see the picture when it is complete. It will be beautiful by-and-by. Some of the colors are very dark now; but they will be only the background for his grace to stand out firm in hues of flaming gold (Rom. 8).

The right time to pronounce upon the pictures of Providence will be that "great day of the Lord," when all mysteries will be cleared up, and the final purpose of every temptation will be as apparent as the sun at high noon. While God is chastising us here, we are pretty sure to err and scan his work in vain. Like old Jacob in his loneliness, we mourn out, "All things are against me." Jacob sang quite another tune when he discovered that the loss of Joseph and of Benjamin was but the stepping-stone to the preservation of all his house in Egypt. The completed picture of God's providence was so beautiful that the old patriarch gazed at it through tears of gratitude.

Now, this is the real meaning of that oft-quoted passage in the Book of Ecclesiastes, "He hath made everything beautiful in its time." The verse does not refer mainly to the beauties of external creation, but to the spiritual beauties of God's treatment of his own children. God's designs—like that colossal exhibition hall at Philadelphia—are, for a time, concealed by the scaffoldings. When the design is wrought out, the scaffoldings are removed. I conjecture that one of the richest joys of heaven will be to study the wonderful providences of our loving Father. Then the scaffoldings will all be swept away, and we shall see on every column and frieze and architrave the glorious inscription—God is love!

Brethren, let us possess our souls in patience while God's chisel is at work upon our souls, even though it cut sharp and deep. He knows what blemishes need to be clipped away, far better than we know ourselves. An eminent Scotch artist once said to me, "I never show my half-finished pictures to bairns or fools." What better proof can we give that we are both "bairns" and fools when we vent our peevish complaints against the file, and the hammer, and the chisel which God is using upon us? Again we say, wait and see! God is carving for eternity. Heaven will be the illimitable gallery for the exhibition of the paintings and the sculpture which his divine skill is designing. Oh, how beautiful will that workmanship be in its time!

The eye of Powers saw the "Greek Slave" imprisoned in the marble before his chisel touched the block. The eye of Raffaele saw the "Transfiguration" before he put the first stroke on the canvas. The omniscient eye of our Father sees the perfected characters of all his saints before the converting, chastening, sanctifying processes begin. If dark colors are needed, he will paint them in; if sharp blows are needed, he will not spare the hammer. It will be worth ten thousand fold more than all the suffering it costs us, if God can fashion such unsightly sinners as we are into the "beauty of holiness."—Rev. T. L. Cuyler.

SORROW NOT.

MARGARET WHITING.

Why so sad, lone child of sorrow?
Why those tears within thine eyes?
Why wilt thou from memory borrow
Thoughts to wake those rending sighs?
Perished every fond ambition,
All thou'st sought, or hoped, or known,
Christ can change thy sad condition,
And can lead the wanderer home.

Trust, believe, and wait upon him,
Serve him all thy journey through;
Knowest thou not he took upon him
All the debt that was laid on you?
Bowed his head in meek submission
To the Father's sovereign will,
Who, to change thy sad condition,
Did his cup of sorrow fill.

Ah! behold him pleading for thee,
Spare her, Father, for my sake;
Spare, oh spare, she looks toward me—
Let me her sad burden take.
Hark! he whispers—Come, ye weary,
All who heavy laden be;
Come, ye blessed of my Father,
And sweet rest thou 'lt find in me

Why then halt 'twixt two opinions,
When there is but one to know?
Search the Scriptures, they will point thee
On the way that thou should'st go.
Ask for wisdom, and receive it;
Seek to find, and never fail;
Knock, and he will open to you—
Home, sweet home beyond the vale.

CURRENT RELIGION.

WM. SHELDON.

Much of the religion of the present day contrasts unfavorably with the religion recommended in the book of Heaven. We refer not to its theological status, but to its spirit. In ancient times, religion radically separated its possessors from the world, both in spirit and practice, made them pre-eminently "a peculiar people, zealous of good works," and ardent lovers of the Lord. But now we behold an extensive assimilation to the world on the part of professors, being lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; for this fact is proclaimed by actions which speak louder than words. How averse to the apostle Paul's admonition: "Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your minds, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God."

The will of God obeyed, weans men from the world, and fills the heart with the spirit of fervent devotion; and when the love of the world, and a relish for worldly pleasure predominates, the proof is conclusive of a sickly religion in the heart, if, indeed, it is not already extinct. Where is the proof of victory over the world, over self, sin and Satan, enjoyed by the saints in ancient times? How unlike the early practice of being kept "unspotted from the world." Surely God's plan has not changed, but men have swerved therefrom, and hewn out to themselves broken cisterns that hold no water. Let us not accept a counterfeit religion.

ONE-SIDED GOSPELS.

We sometimes hear people boast of preaching "a whole gospel," which, of course, is a good idea, only we can no more preach a whole gospel at one time, than we can eat a whole loaf of bread at one mouthful. But it sometimes happens that "a whole gospel" as proclaimed by these persons, simply means some single point or portion of divine truth which they believe and their neighbors have not yet learned;—this they make their special theme, till their "whole gospel" becomes more partial and incomplete than that of their neighbors, with whom they find fault.

It is no easy task to present a complete, connected, harmonious, and impartial view of any subject, however familiar it may be. And if that subject be of vast extent, of incomparable importance, and of personal concern, of course the difficulty is proportionably increased. And in this case, men often divide the gospel into specialties, and aim to preach simply those points which other people neglect. A certain truth falls into disuse and is neglected. A man arises who makes it his business to call attention to this truth. Presently it is found that he and his adherents make this the Alpha and Omega of their faith, and neglect almost everything else, and so make the gospel which they teach more one-sided than that which they criticise.

The commissiou to preach the gospel does not allow us to dissect and analyze the sacred message, aud only teach such portions of it as may seem to our defective vision of the greatest consequence, but it requires us not to shun to declare all the counsel of God. The antidote for a one-sided gospel in those around us, is not another one-sided gospel, but "a whole gospel," even the glorious gospel of the blessed God; and to present this, there must be much study, experience, and enjoyment of the word of God.

The great reason why men do not declare the gospel, is they do not know it; they only learn it in parts, when they should embrace it as a grand and glorious whole. A dozen rival sects each inscribe upon their banner some one truth of the Bible; and in doing this each casts a dozen other truths into the shade, and leaves them to become rallying centres of a dozen other sects who profess to repair their neglect. Said the professor of pastoral theology, in Oxford University, in his lecture room: "The Church of England is to blame for our unhappy divisions. Each denomination stepped aside to pick up some one principle we did not have." This work goes on continually. Meanwhile, among the whole of these differing and protesting sects, often only a mutilated gospel can be found.

It is as if one man painted portraits which were complete and perfect with one exception—he never painted any noses. Straightway his neighbor commences to paint portraits, and as a protest against such an outrageous impropriety, he paints his portraits all nose, and nothing else. Now a face without a nose is not a portrait, but how much better is a nose without a face? Another artist might omit the ears from the pictures which he made, while yet another would paint pictures which should be all ears, of all sizes, forms and shapes. How many such painters would it require to get one life-like face? You might have a dozen skillful artists, and yet not be able to obtain one portrait among them all, just as there might be a dozen different sects, and in none of them the gospel as the Son of God proclaimed it.

To paint a correct portrait of a man, we must give up all idea of correcting or protesting against the false drawing of others, and simply follow our pattern, as if no one else had ever tried to do it. And if we would preach the gospel as the Savior preached it, we must get above the strifes and names, the dissensions and bickerings of sectarianism. and preach the word! For the time has come when men will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they have turned away their ears from the truth, and are turned unto fables. 1 Tim. 4.—Christian.

THE CENTENNIAL.

E. A. BOYNTON.

What a vast commotion is caused throughout the world by the great Centennial Exhibition. With what enthusiasm do the multitudes throng to the place where the nations of earth have met to celebrate the one hundredth birthday of our nation. Many and great are the wonders there to be seen; and grand indeed the display in honor of the great occasion. But in a few brief months, where will be all this magnificence and grandeur? Who will be the better for the vast expenditure of time and labor and money? And in fifty years from to-day, where will be the mighty throng who are now surging up and down the streets of the City of brotherly love?"

In a little while, we know not how soon, there will be another World's Exposition; more grand and glorious than earth has ever known. There will be gathered every kindred, tongue and nation under heaven; all who have lived since the days of Adam. There, too, will be an awful display; not of the wisdom and greatness of man; but of his sinfulness, depravity and nothingness; of the power and majesty of the everlasting God, and his infinite mercy and love toward them who repent. Of all that may be exhibited by men on that great occasion, one alone will bring them any credit or satisfaction; and that is the righteousness of Christ. All else will yield but shame and mortification. Not every one may be present at the great celebration in Philadelphia; but when the nations of earth are gathered the last time, we shall all be there. Holy men and shining angels, and the Son of God himself, will be there. Dear reader, shall you and I enjoy it?

St. Johns, Mich.

RELIGION THE GREAT BUSINESS.

Unless I make religion my great and engrossing concern, I shall be a stranger to all solid peace and enjoyment. I have at times caught a glimpse of the comfort which it yields to the spirit when I merge my will into God's will; when I resolve to have no will of my own separate from God. I feel quite assured that this renunciation of self and entire devotion to God's service, would give a simplicity and grandeur to my existence; would throw an unclouded sunshine over all my ways; would raise me above the cares and provocations of this life; would enhance even my sensible gratifications, and superadd those gratifications of a higher order which constitute the main and essential blessedness of heaven. O my God, may it be thus with me! Call me out of nature's darkness into thine own marvelous light! Give me to aspire after the graces and to hold forth to my acquaintances and above all to my children, the example of all righteousness. Conform me to the gospel economy, under which I sit, that as Christ died for sin I may die to it; that as he arose again, I may rise to newness of life, and feel it my meat and drink to do thy will.—Dr. Chalmers.

CLOUDS.

D. N. SMITH.

Young converts are apt to think when they are passing through darkness, and a cloud obscures their spiritual vision, that God has forsaken them, and all is lost. But let us look at the use of clouds in the natural world. Without them, there could be no rain. The earth would dry up, vegetation would cease growing, and all would come to desolation. At such a time, how the farm is cheered by the appearance in the distant horizon of the gathering cloud. He knows rain is coming; and so the christian should hope in the darkest hour, that ere long the cloud that hangs over him will burst, and send a shower of blessings into his soul.

REMOVE STUMBLING BLOCKS.—A merchant in one of our cities said to a friend, "I wonder why none of my clerks have been converted?" His friend replied, "Are you aware that you have a hasty temper, and often find unnecessary fault with your clerks, and manifest a wrong spirit in your business?" The merchant, who was conscious that he was verily guilty, retired to his closet, confessed his sin, and deeply humbled himself before God. The next morning he called his eleven or twelve clerks together in his counting-room, told them of his agony of mind, asked their forgiveness, knelt dowu and prayed. Two of those clerks were converted in that counting-room before they left. Fault of temper and behavior among those who are in daily association, often prove hindrances to worship and service. 1 Pet. 3: 7. An honest confession is good preparation for effectual prayer.—Ex.

IF a king cast his favor on a mean subject or slave, and prefer him to a great and honorable office, yet he cannot change his nature, and give him fitness for that place. But God doth not only give a kingdom to his saints, but inwardly adapts and fits them for that kingdom. God hath gloriously, wonderfully, miraculously separated to himself the godly man.—John Fox.

HOME AND HEALTH.

SAVE YOUR STRENGTH.

HOW SOME WOMEN WORK.

Monday. Rise at four o'clock, wash, make yeast bread, get breakfast, clean the kitchen floor, churn, get dinner, iron the calicoes, work over the butter, get supper, and then darn stockings until every one else in the house is in bed.

Tuesday. Rise at four and go to ironing, get breakfast, make pies and cake for the week, finish ironing, and if there are any other big jobs of housework, do them all up as far as possible, and have the remainder of the week for sewing or visiting or doing nothing at all.

Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Rise at half past five or six, according to the time when breakfast is required, and as soon as the work is done up, sit down to the sewing and work with might and main; do just as little housework as possible, driving on the sedentary work until nine or ten o'clock, or even later, and, perhaps, sitting up on Saturday until midnight in order to have the job done and "out of the way." She exhausts nerve and muscle in the everlasting hurry to get through, giving herself no rest until outraged nature takes the matter in hand and lays the worker up with a long fit of sickness, and not unfrequently with the long rest, right in the prime of life. A dear friend of mine has just run this course, and left her children when they most needed a mother's care.

HOW THE WISE WOMAN WORKS.

Monday. She rises at the usual hour, which is fixed to suit both personal needs and surrounding circumstances. She looks over her work for the week, and, so far as possible, she arranges a certain amount of heavy work for each day, and a certain amount of sedentary work. If baking or churning or both must be done on Monday, she puts off her washing until Tuesday, which gives her the opportunity of putting her clothes to soak over night. Then she has the ironing for Wednesday, baking again for Thursday, sweeping for Friday, and cleaning and some baking, and perhaps churning, on Saturday. Then the next week she can wash on Monday, if she prefers. If possible, she has the same jobs for each day every week; but if not, she finds some way of changing, so that she gets no more exercise than a fair proportion each day. If she gets too much any way, so much the more need of careful management. Her sewing is selected, and the wants of her family so well foreseen, that she has that done first which will be most needed, though many a time she lets an old garment be worn rather than break in upon her hours of nightly repose. She has some light work (if any) for the evening, has her hour for retiring, and keeps it, allowing herself the time for rest which she knows from experience to be necessary. She gets some time out of doors every day, even if she has to take her work with her.

She takes things calmly, does not waste her nerve power, stops and rests if she feels exhausted, and lets the extra jobs go to the wall rather than make herself sick with trying to do them. If she really has too much to do, she studies devices for "slighting her work," especially that part of it designed for show. If still there is too much to do, she hires help for the heaviest jobs and for the sewing, and saves money to pay for it out of the next doctor's bill. She puts some of her vitality into vivacity and companionableness for her family and friends, instead of laying it all out on their backs or for their palates. She gives them wise and sound companionship during a long, pleasant life. She makes them wiser and happier than they would have been without her; she bequeaths vitality, calmness and power to her children, who rise up and call her blessed, and her husband also praiseth her, and at last in their ripe old age they go home together.—Science of Health.

SUMMER DIET.—Nature teaches us what we should eat in summer. She provides cooling, delicious fruits, juicy and tempting vegetables; she inspires the normal appetite with a loathing of rich pastries, heavy puddings, hot bread, fat meats, and invites us to refresh ourselves with muscle-making rather than heat-producing foods. A correspondent complains of biliousness, has the bilious headache two or three times a week. Now, if he will diet himself, live on graham bread, fruits and vegetables, bathe freely every day, avoid Sunday dinners as he would shun the plague, and dispense with condiments, in all probability his headaches will leave him.—Health Reformer.

AFTER-DINNER NAPS.—Many persons are in the habit of sleeping for half an hour or an hour immediately after dinner. This is a bad practice. Ten minutes sleep before dinner is worth more than an hour after. It rests and refreshes and prepares the system for vigorous digestion. If sleep is taken after dinner it should be in the sitting posture, as the horizontal position is unfavorable to healthful digestion. Let those who need rest and sleep during the day take it before dinner instead of after, and they will soon find that they will feel better and that their digestion will be improved thereby.—Ex.

THE amount of daily exercise necessary for health depends upon the kind of exercise, and varies considerably with different persons and with the same person at different times. A safe rule to go by is to exercise until slightly fatigued. It should not be continued so long that an half hour of perfect rest will not entirely remove all feeling of fatigue.—Ex.

HYMNS OF THE ADVENT.—No. 5.

THE WAITING CHURCH.

The church has waited long
Her absent Lord to see,
And still in loneliness she waits—
A weary stranger she.

Age after age has gone;
Sun after sun has set;
And still in weeds of widowhood
She weeps a mourner yet.

Saint after saint on earth,
Has lived, and loved, and died;
And, as they left us one by one,
We laid them side by side.

We laid them down to sleep,
But not in hope forlorn;
We laid them down to ripen there,
Till the last glorious morn.

"The whole creation groans,"
And waits to hear that voice
That shall restore her comliness,
And make her wastes rejoice.

Come, Lord, and wipe away
The curse, the sin, the stain,
And make this blighted world of ours
Thine own fair world again.

REPORT
Of the Seventeenth Annual Meeting OF THE SECOND ADVENT CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
HELD AT
Chelsea, Mass., Aug. 23d and 24th, 1876.

Pursuant to the published notice of the Secretary, the seventeenth annual meeting of this Association was held in Chelsea, Mass., the meeting being called to order by the President, Elder S. G. Mathewson, at two o'clock P. M. After prayer, a committee of three on credentials was appointed by the President, consisting of Brn. E. A. Stockman, G. L. Teeple, and H. K. Flagg. This committee reported the following List of Delegates.

FROM MAINE.—F. A. Baker, I. C. Wellcome, H. K. Choate, H. B. Eaton, George Humphrey, C. Goud.

FROM MASSACHUSETTS.—Benj. Young, H. V. Davis, James Hemenway, M. Grant, C. Goodrich, G. L. Teeple, J. Couch.

FROM NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Albion Ross, N. Wheeler, E. A. Stockman, C. H. Fletcher, T. W. Piper, G. H. Wallace, E. S. Moulton.

FROM RHODE ISLAND.—J. P. Hazard, A. W. Sibley, P. S. Butler.

FROM VERMONT.—A. A. Hoyt.

FROM CONNECTICUT.—I. B. Potter.

FROM NEW YORK (Hoosic Valley Conf.)—Richard Mosher, H. K. Flagg, S. G. Mathewson, Robert Candish.

FROM SOUTH CAROLINA.—P. G. Bowman.

FROM ALABAMA (Southern A. C. Conf.)—J. A. Cargile.

FROM OHIO.—E. McCulloch (authorized to cast three votes).

FOR KANSAS.—L. T. Cunningham (authorized to cast two votes).

FROM NORTHERN ILLINOIS.—D. S. Clark (authorized to cast two votes).

FROM WISCONSIN.—William Sheldon (authorized to cast four votes).

FOR CALIFORNIA.—Geo. T. Adams.

The above report was adopted. It was voted that a cordial invitation to sit in this Association and participate in its deliberations, without the right to vote, be extended to Brn. Wm. Kellaway of England, and A. A. Phelps of New Jersey, and to Srs. Stoddard and Hitchcock of New York.

By vote, a committee of five, consisting of Brn. Sibley, Choate, Hemenway, Wellcome and Grant, was appointed from the floor to prepare the order of business to come before the meeting. It was voted that the space forward of and including the fourth row of seats from the front, be reserved for the exclusive accommodation of the delegates to this meeting. Adjourned to meet at six o'clock.

The meeting was called to order at six o'clock by the President, and after prayer, the committee on business reported the following Order of Business.

1. The reading of the Secy's Minutes of the S. A. C. A.
2. The Treasurer's Report of the S. A. C. A.
3. Election of Officers for the S. A. C. A.
4. The reading of the Secy's Minutes of the A. C. P. S.
5. The Treasurer's Report of the A. C. P. S.
6. The Business Agent's Report of the A. C. P. S.
7. Election of Directors of the S. A. C. A.
8. Election of Editors of "World's Crisis" and "Young Pilgrim."
9. Election of Officers of the A. C. P. S.
10. Revision of the Constitution of the S. A. C. A.
11. Miscellaneous Business.

The report of the Sec. Adv. Chris. Association for the past year was read and adopted. The Treasurer of the Association reported no funds received and none expended, which report was accepted. By vote, the President appointed a committee of three, consisting of Brn. Wellcome, Hoyt, and Ross, to receive, assort and count votes for the officers of the S. A. C. A. It was voted that each officer be elected separately, and that the Secretary call the roll, each delegate to vote at the calling of his name. On the first ballot for President there was no choice, but on the second, Eld. S. G. Mathewson was elected. On the first ballot for Vice President there was no choice, but on the second Eld. E. A. Stockman was elected. The ballot for Secretary resulted in the election of C. E. Barnes; and for Treasurer, in the election of Geo. T. Adams, and the following were declared to be the officers of the S. A. C. A. the ensuing year:

President—S. G. MATHEWSON.
Vice President—E. A. STOCKMAN.
Secretary—C. E. BARNES.
Treasurer—GEO. T. ADAMS.

The report of the Secretary of the A. C. P. Society was read as follows and adopted.

SECRETARY'S MINUTES
OF THE
Advent Christian Publication Society, for the Year ending Aug. 23d, 1876.

Mr. President and Brethren of the Second Advent Christian Association:—

There have been five meetings of this Society during the year. The first was held in Springfield, Mass. (Chapin's Grove); the second in Worcester, Mass.; the other three at its rooms in Boston.

At its first meeting, held in Springfield, Aug. 11th, 1875, the following business was transacted: On motion, it was voted, That Geo. T. Adams be continued Business Ag't the ensuing year, at a salary of $400 per annum, and that his salary as Treasurer be $400 per annum.

That the salary of the Secretary be $20 per year.

That the salary of each Editor of the World's Crisis be $14 per week.

That each Secretary be paid $20 for services, as such, the past year.

That the salary of Editorial Committee be as last year, $200.

That the Editor of the Young Pilgrim be paid $10 per number.

That an effort be made to raise $2000, or more, the ensuing year, for the publication and free distribution of tracts, and that the Editors be requested to make an appeal from time to time, through the Crisis, for this object.

That the Society appropriate a sum, not exceeding $100, to remunerate such writers for the World's Crisis as are approved by the Editors, Editorial Committee and Business Agent.

At its second meeting, held in Worcester Dec. 15th, 1875, the following business was done: It was voted, That the Editor of the Young Pilgrim be paid five dollars per number in addition to his regular salary, in consequence of increased editorial work on Sunday-school lessons.

That Brn. H. V. Davis, J. G. Hamblin, and L. T. Cunningham, be the auditing committee for this Society this current year.

The third meeting was held April 17th, 1876, and the following business transacted:

The Secretary's minutes of the previous meetings were read and approved.

Brn. Couch, Grant and Stockman were invited to a seat with the Society, and to make such suggestions on subjects before the meeting as they thought proper.

The subject of publishing a new Hymn and Tune Book was introduced, and after some discussion it was voted unanimously, that the Society publish a new Hymn and Tune Book not to exceed 200 pp; and size not to exceed that of "Gospel Songs."

Brn. Hemenway, Mathewson, and Sibley, were chosen a committee to select hymns and tunes, and prepare the copy for the printer, and when properly arranged to deliver the same to the Business Agent for publication.

The Treasurer was authorized by vote to pay the charges of the committee for preparing said Hymn and Tune Book for the press.

The Treasurer was authorized to pay the expenses of the Board of Directors of the S. A. C. Association in attending meetings of said Board, and also the necessary expenses in attending the present meeting of this Society.

The fourth meeting was held June 1st, 1876. At this meeting the committee chosen at the previous meeting to prepare for publication a new Hymn and Tune Book made a report saying, That it was impossible for them to collect material sufficient to publish the proposed book at present, as many of the hymns and tunes the committee contemplated putting into the new book are copyrighted and cannot be obtained without paying a large sum of money, and the committee did not think it best to do so.

The report of the committee was approved. The Editors of the Crisis were added to the committee already chosen to prepare for publication a new Hymn and Tune Book, and the committee were authorized to proceed in the matter as they deem proper.

The Treasurer was authorized to defray the expenses of the members in attending this meeting, and also the committee for services rendered.

The fifth meeting was held Aug. 22nd, 1876, and the following business done:

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted.

The Treasurer's and Business Agent's reports were read and adopted, and ordered to be read before the S. A. C. Association.

The minutes of the Secretary for the year were read and adopted, and ordered to be read before the S. A. C. Association.

The minutes of the Secretary for the year were read and adopted, and ordered to be read before the S. A. C. Association.

Whereupon, the Society adjourned sine die.

A. W. SIBLEY, Sec'y A. C. P. Society.

The report of the Treasurer of the A. C. P. Society was read as follows, and adopted.

GEO. T. ADAMS,
Treasurer A. C. P. Society.

OFFICE OF THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY, BOSTON, AUG. 22, 1876.

We, the subscribers, have examined the accounts of the Treasurer, and find them correctly cast, and properly vouched, and a balance in cash on hand of eighty-five dollars and eighty-seven cents. ($85.87.)

HENRY V. DAVIS, J. G. HAMBLIN, L. T. CUNNINGHAM, } Auditing Committee.

The report of the Business Agent of the A. C. P. S. was presented as follows, and adopted:—

BUSINESS AGENT'S REPORT.

Mr. President, and Brethren of the Advent Christian Publication Society:—

Grateful to our heavenly Father, who in his merciful providence has preserved our unprofitable lives through another year, during which vast numbers have passed away, their accounts being sealed up to the great day of reckoning,—as your Business Agent I now present you my report of the business operations of the Society for the period extending from Aug. 4th, 1875, to Aug. 19th, 1876.

The lease of our former office expired with the close of the year 1875. Some weeks before its expiration, we were enabled to procure very eligible and commodious rooms a short distance from our former location, at an annual rental of $200 less than we had been paying, which we fitted up (without having to pay rent while so doing) and had in readiness to occupy Jan. 1st, 1876. The cost of fitting up, including some furniture, stoves, and removing of goods, was about $475. We now have very convenient and desirable rooms, every way suitable, we believe, for the purposes of the Society.

At the beginning of the year our capital, as given in our last annual report, was $17,843.98. Our present capital we put as follows:—

Property on hand, valued at	$8126 08
Cash in the Treasury	85 87
Amount due on Crisis, valued at	6000 00
" " Young Pilgrim, valued at	400 00
" " on book account, valued at	500 00
Total capital	$15,111 95

Our reasons for placing a portion of our assets at a less value than last year are as follows:—

1st. The book and tract plates have been in use many years, and the demand for the works being less, with a prospect of some of them being superceded by a new music book, we regard their value diminished, and have placed it $500 less.

2nd. Although the amount due the Society for the World's Crisis and Young Pilgrim is more than it was last year, yet having made much effort to collect these dues, together with the fact that the times are emphatically hard, we have felt it our duty to estimate the value of said indebtedness at $1600 less than last year.

On the book account there is about the same amount due as last year, but the value of this we have also reduced, for the same reasons, $400.00 from last year's estimate.

Our receipts during the year were $19,495.85.

Book and Tract Department.

We have published during the past year about 1,000,000 pages of tracts,—the new ones being, "The Significance of the Great Prophetic Symbols of Daniel and John"; and "Brief Expositions of Prophecy." We have also published one edition each of "The Scriptural Question Book" and of "The Child's Bible Question Book."

The value of books and tracts on hand at the beginning of the year was $3,293.92; the cost of books and tracts made and purchased during the year is $2,021.00. Total books and tracts, $5,314.92. The receipts for books and tracts were $3,433.91. Due on book account about the same as last year, but the value of which we estimate at $400.00 less than last year. Amount received on the Tract Fund for tracts granted, $451.27. Total sales and grants, $3,885.18. Value of books, tracts and papers on hand, $2,969.93. Total, $6,856.11.

The World's Crisis.

Early in the year an earnest effort was made to extend the circulation of this paper, by appealing to its friends to send the Crisis for three months to any person they might name. This call has been responded to most nobly, 1856 copies of the Crisis having been sent to new readers on this arrangement.

The number of names on our subscription list last year was 9192. The number now is 9240, being an increase of 48 against a decrease of 392 last year. The number of new subscribers entered upon our list during the year is 2940, against 1183 the previous year. The number of stoppages and delinquents cut off is 2892 against 1575 last year.

The number of names on the free list is 896, being an increase of 62 since last year. They are scattered throughout the various States as follows:—Mass., 142; Me., 124; N. H., 106; Vt., 42; R. I., 27; Conn., 82; N. Y., 98; Penn., 24; Mich., 20; Wis., 28; Ind., 12; Ill., 34; Iowa, 28; Minn., 20; Kan., 15; Cal., 10; Mo., 8; Ala., 7; British Provinces, 27. The balance scattered through various States, England, Ireland, Africa, etc.

The receipts for the Crisis on subscription list were $14,394.30, including $56.45 received to pay postage on papers sent on free list. On Poor Fund, $94.37. Total, $14,488.67.

The amount due on the Crisis is large, and constant efforts have been made to collect the same; but in consequence of the hard times, many of the subscribers are slow to pay. We have many promises of payment this fall, and we hope that they will be kept to the glory of God, and to help the Society in its work of publishing the truth designed for this generation.

The Young Pilgrim.

A new feature of this paper during the past year has been its original Bible Lessons, which have added largely to the interest of the paper, and have been a means of increasing its circulation considerably.

The number of names on the subscription list now is 4019; last year 3573, being an increase of 446. The number of names on the free list is 33; last year 32.

Receipts on subscription list, $1,079.82; on Pilgrim Fund, $1.50. Total, $1,081.32.

The Tract Fund.

We have received on this Fund, for the gratuitous distribution of tracts during the past year, $446.95, which is the smallest amount received for this object for several years; while requests for free tracts are as pressing as ever. We have been obliged to donate in smaller lots, but have endeavored to send them where they would do the most good; and we trust they have been a blessing to many. Grants have been made to the amount of $451.27.

The Poor Fund.

The amount received on this Fund towards meeting the expense of the free list of the Crisis is, by donations, $94.37; by cash received to pay postage on the same, $56.45. Total, $150.82. While 895 copies at the price, $2.25, would amount to $2,016.

It will thus be seen that in addition to the free distribution of tracts, reading matter equal to more than 3,300,000 pages of tracts has been sent out, for which we have received only $150.82. To meet this continual expense it is highly important that those whose names are on the paying list should pay up their dues more promptly, that the Society may not lack funds to enable it to continue the paper to the worthy poor. We also hope that those of our brethren and sisters who are favored more abundantly with this world's goods will remember this fund, and donate to it as the Lord may direct.

Brethren, we should have been most happy had we been able to report to you a greater degree of financial prosperity. Yet, while we remember the fact that these times press hard upon all departments of business, newspapers suffering as well as others—old and well established ones among the number—we are thankful to our blessed Lord, whose advent we believe is just at hand, that we are enabled to report so good a degree of prosperity as we have.

May we all so engage in the work of the Lord, do his will in all things, that at his coming we may be received into that kingdom which shall stand forevermore.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

GEO. T. ADAMS,
Business Agent A. C. P. Society.

OFFICE OF THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY, BOSTON, AUG. 22nd, 1876.

We, the undersigned, having examined the accounts of Geo. T. Adams, Business Agent of the Advent Christian Publication Society, as embodied in the foregoing Report, find them correct, according to the best of our knowledge and belief.

HENRY V. DAVIS, J. G. HAMBLIN, L. T. CUNNINGHAM, } Auditing Committee.

Adjourned to eight o'clock A. M.

Thursday, Aug. 24th. The meeting was called to order by the President, and prayer offered. Voted, that the election of the Board of Directors for the S. A. C. A. be proceeded with. The vote resulted in the election of the following

Board of Directors.

GEO. HUMPHREY, F. A. BAKER	Me.
A. ROSS, C. H. FLETCHER	N. H.
J. HEMENWAY. J. COUCH	Mass.
C. S. SHERMAN	Vt.
A. W. SIBLEY	R. I.
R. K. STARK	Conn.

It was voted that an informal ballot be taken as to whether there should be one or two editors of the World's Crisis. This ballot resulted as follows: Whole nnmber of votes, 38; for one editor, 22; for two editors, 16. It was then moved and seconded that the World's Crisis have but one editor the ensuing year, and after a prolonged discussion the ballot was taken with the following result: Whole number of votes, 39; for one editor, 21; for two editors, 18; and the motion was carried.

The first vote for Editor of the World's Crisis resulted as follows: Whole number of votes, 37; necessary to a choice, 19. John Couch had 18, Miles Grant had 10, D. T. Taylor had 5, E. A. Stockman had 2, Wm. H. Mitchell had 1, and Wm. Sheldon had 1, and there was no choice. Bro. Couch then arose and declined positively to be a candidate for the position, and a second ballot was taken with the following result: Whole number of votes, 38; necessary to a choice, 20. D. T. Taylor had 17, Miles Grant had 11, E. A. Stockman had 7, John Couch had 2, Wm. H. Mitchell had 1, and there was still no choice. Bro. Stockman declined further candidature, and requested that no more votes be cast for him. A third ballot was taken with the following result: Whole number of votes, 35; necessary to a choice, 18. D. T. Taylor had 18, Miles Grant had 14, scattering 3. D. T. Taylor was declared elected. The Secretary was instructed by the meeting to telegraph the fact to Bro. Taylor, and the Treasurer of the A. C. P. S. was authorized to pay the expense of so doing.

The President tendered his resignation to the Association, which was not accepted, and he was prevailed upon to withdraw it.

The ballot for Editor of the Young Pilgrim was taken, and resulted as follows: Whole number of votes, 36; necessary to a choice, 19. C. E. Barnes had 35, and was declared elected.

The ballots were taken for the officers of the A. C. P. Society, with the following result:

For President	JAMES HEMENWAY.
For Secretary	C. E. BARNES.
Treas. and Business Ag't	GEO. T. ADAMS.

Editorial Committee.
JOHN COUCH, E. A. STOCKMAN, W. H. MITCHELL.

Publishing Committee.

H. K. CHOATE	Maine.
E. A. STOCKMAN	New Hampshire.
H. K. FLAGG	Vermont.
H. V. DAVIS	Massachusetts.
A. W. SIBLEY	Rhode Island.

In connection with the foregoing, it was voted that the offices of Business Agent and Treasurer, instead of being two separate offices, shall be merged into one office, and be denominated the office of Treasurer and Business Agent. It was also voted that the Publication Society be advised to pay the Treasurer and Business Agent $500 per year for his services, if in their judgment that amount will be sufficient and proper.

It was voted that a committee of three on the revision of the Constitution be appointed by the President, and Brn. Hemenway, Bowman and Stockman were appointed.

Adjourned to the call of the President.

The meeting was called to order by the President at half-past five o'clock. After prayer, the committee on revision reported the following:

Resolved, That the Constitution of the S. A. C. A. be so changed as to make the basis of representation in this body consist, not of one delegate for a certain number of church members in each State, but of one delegate for a certain number of subscribers to the World's Crisis in each State.

The report was accepted, and after discussion, it was voted to be laid on the table.

It was voted that the next annual meeting of this Association be held on the first Tuesday, at two o'clock P. M., after the close of the Springfield campmeeting next year.

Voted, that Treasurer of the A. C. P. Society is hereby instructed to pay the expense for refreshments furnished the delegates while attending this meeting.

A petition from L. C. McKinstry was read to the meeting, and it was decided that the subject matter of his petition was already covered by former action of this Association.

At this point a telegram was received by the Secretary from D. T. Taylor, and read to the meeting, in which he declined to accept the office to which he had been elected, but consenting to serve as corresponding or assistant Editor, not as Editor in chief. It was then voted that the meeting proceed to elect an Editor for the World's Crisis. By vote, the President appointed a committee of three, consisting of Brn. I. B. Potter, E. McCulloch, and G. E. Teeple, to receive, assort and count the votes for Editor. A ballot was taken with the following result: Whole number of votes, 29; necessary to a choice, 15. E. A. Stockman had 1, Wm. Sheldon had 1, Miles Grant had 7, John Couch had 20, and Bro. Couch was elected. On motion, the election of Bro. Couch was made unanimous by a rising vote. By vote, the Secretary was directed to send Bro. Couch notice of his re-election to the editorial chair.

The following resolution was presented: "Believing that the labor in the World's Crisis Office can be performed by the Business Agent and one clerk, therefore, Resolved, That this Association advise the Business Agent to dispense with the services of one of the clerks if practicable." Carried.

The following was also adopted:

"Whereas this Association has voted to have but one Editor of the World's Crisis, and Bro. Taylor has declined that office, therefore,

Resolved, That while we have no such office in our power to bestow as Bro. Taylor offers to accept, we thank him for offering to accept a subordinate office, and appreciate his modesty in so doing."

Voted, that the Secretary be directed to communicate this action to Bro. Taylor.

At this stage of the meeting, Bro. Stockman addressed the meeting as follows:

Mr. President and Brethren:—Bro. Grant, who for years and years has honorably and successfully discharged the duties of the office of Editor of the World's Crisis, and upon whose hands that paper in large part grew up to what it now is, ceases his official connection with it to-day. I move, for I feel sure that this whole convention will respond most heartily to the suggestion, that a committee of three be appointed by the Chair to draft resolutions expressive of the feelings of this meeting toward Bro. Grant for his services in these years, and the deep obligation this Association and the cause at large is under for those services, and that they be published with the minutes of this meeting. Seconded, and carried. The President appointed Brn. Stockman, Bowman, and Choate, who retired, and in a short time reported the following:

Whereas, Bro. Miles Grant ceases his connection to-day with the World's Crisis as Editor, and

Whereas, the paper during his conduct of it has borne testimony to his ability and zeal in its behalf, therefore

Resolved, That this Association express their hearty appreciation of him as their devoted servant, and tender to him their sincerest thanks for his long, ardent, and patient service.

After the above resolution was reported, Bro. Stockman again addressed the meeting thus:

Mr. President:—Some allusion during the course of debate to-day was made to Maine and New Hampshire as being the seat of the chief criticism of the work of the Editors of the World's Crisis. That question has gone by; but in view of those references, it may be specially fitting for some word to be said now from our delegation. The most of my time since I came out among this people has been spent in New Hampshire, and I know (and I am sure the other members of this delegation will join me in this statement) that throughout that State, Bro. Miles Grant is held in the profoundest Christian esteem, more, Christian love; and that he not only has many friends in New Hampshire, but I believe the whole body of Adventists in that State are his friends, and as an humble member of the New Hampshire delegation, it would give me great pleasure to vote for this resolution. But having been but a short time among you, I leave it to these other brethren to say more than this, and yet I feel warranted in emphasizing the statement that Bro. Grant has our sincerest regard and friendship.

BRO. ROSS—Mr. President, it would be superfluous to add anything to what Bro. Stockman has said, but I rise in behalf of the people of New Hampshire to endorse it.

Bro. N. Wheeler addressed the meeting, and in the course of his remarks said: I esteem Bro. Grant a personal friend and brother, one that laid his hand on my head in ordination. I esteem him as a father in the cause, and appreciate his labors, and ever shall to the end.

Bro. I. C. Wellcome, in behalf of the Maine delegation, expressed the kind feelings entertained toward Bro. Grant in Maine, they esteeming him as a Christian man, thoroughly faithful to his convictions, and he hoped there might be the most kindly feelings entertained between them from now till the Lord comes. Bro. F. A. Baker also expressed similar feelings in behalf of those with whom he labors.

Bro. Miles Grant then spoke as follows: Mr. President:—I would like to say that these kind expressions that have just been dropped are very soothing, and very rich to my feelings. I appreciate them, and shall remember them with much kindness. I think I am well known among you; you know my failings, and I presume the mantle of charity is large enough to cover those. I have done the best to serve you I could, but never in all my life have I been so fully committed to this work as now. It is my purpose to devote all the powers there are in me to persuade people to get ready to meet Christ. I believe he is coming very soon—on that point I have no doubts. That being so real to me, I have felt for the last four or five years unusually stirred, more perhaps than in all my life before, to try to persuade all to be ready for that day. And you know the theme I love (I trust you all love it) the subject of purity of heart, purity as being the necessary preparation for that day. I expect to make that prominent as long as I preach for Christ, together with the message of the coming of Christ, until my work is done.

Wherever I may be, I expect to find work in this cause in which we are associated. My whole being is thrown into it. I think very likely this result is providential, and will only open a wider door for usefulness for me than ever before. I am perfectly peaceful in this. My feelings are not shaken a particle. I think I am the easiest man of the lot about the result, so you must not think I am going to lie awake about it. I wish simply to say, my whole heart is for Christ by the grace of God all my days.

The resolution was then unanimously adopted by a rising vote.

Voted, that this body instruct the treasurer of the A. C. P. Society to pay the Editor of the World's Crisis the sum of one thousand dollars per year for his services.

Voted, that the minutes of this meeting be published in the World's Crisis.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the thanks of this Association be most cordially given to the A. C. Church in Chelsea for the hospitality and entertainment so generously bestowed for our comfort.

Resolved, That this Association learns with deep regret of the serious illness of their esteemed brother, and respected late Vice President, Matthew Batchelor, and that they tender to him their most profound sympathy in his affliction, and recommend him to the grace and consolation of God, and that the Secretary be directed to convey the same to him by letter.

Resolved, That the thanks of this Association are hereby tendered to the President and Secretary for the able manner in which they have discharged their duties during the course of this meeting. Adj. sine die.

C. E. BARNES, Secretary.

The foregoing is a report of the bare facts of the meeting, but the meeting will not be adequately reported unless the Secretary says a word as to the spirit of the meeting, which deservedly demands notice at his hand. The foregoing report shows that some questions of a very delicate nature were discussed, and issues raised, where personal prejudice could readily have been called into exercise; but to the credit of the gentlemen in convention assembled, the Secretary wishes to say that the candor, christian courtesy, kindliness, and general freedom from everything resembling passion or partisan zeal on the part of the delegates was truly remarkable, and worthy of much praise. Each and all seemed earnest to have the best interests of the cause at large consulted, without any regard to personal wishes or sectional desires.

C. E. B.

QUEER LIBERTY.

WM. SHELDON.

It sometimes happens that believers in the unpopular truths which distinguish us from other people, grow tired of the warfare against error, or become wearied of an unpopular standing, and so seek association with those who discard our faith, by compromising the truth, or by deserting, and fleeing to the ranks of our opposers, claiming that they have not changed their faith, and seek to justify themselves by setting up the plea that they have liberty. Yes, "liberty;" but what kind of liberty? Liberty to carry a dark lantern; liberty to wear handcuffs; liberty to be gagged; liberty to smother the truth; liberty to strangle the gospel of the kingdom, and kindred truths. Is this the liberty of the gospel, or the liberty that stifles convictions of truth to purchase the goodwill of men?

If we have the truth of God, we have no right to wait till it becomes popular before we proclaim it. We have no right to join hands with those who seek to exterminate it, either by directly opposing it, or by secretly smothering it. To go back into theological darkness after having once been enlightened, to gratify our relish for honor, popularity, ease, or wealth, is a deplorable retrograde. We have great respect for those back there in the rear, who have received a part of the truth, and are slowly coming out into greater light; but we cannot put the same estimate upon those who have gone backward to get rid of trial or reproach. Our motto should be, No compromise with error for a sickly liberty.

TAKE UP THE CROSS.

M. J. PRATT.

As I was thinking of the goodness of the Lord, and how much he has done for me, of the many privileges I enjoy, I feel to praise the Lord, and take new courage to press on in the good way. I was thinking too of the many crosses I have neglected to take up, and how many times I have lost the blessing by being so neglectful in regard to duty. If we do not take up our cross, we fall into many temptations. We must ever look to the Lord for help and strength, and he will always help, as says the Lord in Isa. 41:10, "Fear thou not, for I am with thee; be not dismayed, for I am thy God. I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness."

If the cross is heavy, Jesus will give us strength to carry it along, for he says so in his word. We must not leave it for others to stumble over, but take it up and look to Jesus for help, and he will certainly give us strength. We cannot serve the Lord in our own strength. There are trials and temptations all the way while we live in this world; but Jesus says he will help us; he will never leave or forsake any that trust in him. We know this by experience. O let us do as we know the Lord would have us. Let us take up every cross, and perform every known duty; and be willing, if need be, to give up all for Jesus' sake, and receive in return sweet joy and peace. Think of an eternal home in the kingdom with all the pure and holy, if only faithful till Jesus comes. Let us be encouraged by the precious promises in God's holy Word, and hold fast the profession of our faith, looking unto Jesus.

THE devil knows that if there be any good treasure, it is in our hearts; and he would gladly have the key of these cabinets, that he might rob us of our jewels.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

We would say to those who have sent us money to renew their subscriptions, and also to those who paid at the Campmeetings, and do not as yet see the figures changed on their papers, please have patience with us. The delay is caused by the Campmeetings, and the extra work in consequence of the same. We expect to have all credited in a few days. AG'T.

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS.

The Advent Christian Society met at its rooms in Boston Tuesday, Sept. 5th, and unanimously voted to invite Brn. M. Grant, D. T. Taylor, and E. A. Stockman to become Special Contributors to the Crisis. May the benediction of Him who dwelt in the bush be with these brethren, assisting them to communicate to the "household of faith" "meat in due season." ED.

IS THE PRESENT WAR IN TURKEY PROPHETIC?

To determine that a war is prophetic, we must prove that it exists between the antagonistic parties foretold coming at the time expressed, and the circumstances of the conflict such as the prophecies describe. The prophet Daniel very explicitly describes a war as taking place just before the resurrection of the dead, and many able expositors have interpreted that prophecy as representing the Turkish government as one of the parties in the strife.

The prophet represents the acts of this power, in its last war, by the following language: "But tidings out of the east and out of the north shall trouble him; therefore he shall go forth with great fury to destroy, and utterly to make away many," Dan. 11: 44. The language clearly indicates that this government will become furiously enraged against a certain class, and in its rage will contemplate their utter destruction; not merely the conquering of a people by the defeat of their armies, but the annihilation of the people themselves. The language expresses just this, and nothing less.

That the Turks have commenced the present war upon the above principle, and will carry it out as far as they are permitted to do by the Great Powers, is perfectly evident to all who are conversant with the facts in the case. To prove our statement correct, as to the intentions of the Turks, we will give one case among the many, showing the terrible fury of the Turks, and their determination to destroy the Christians, as a class, and not simply to defeat their armies. We quote the history of the scene from the London Times, as follows:

THE ATROCITIES IN BULGARIA.

"A correspondent, writing from Tatar Bazardjik, on Aug. 1, says—I have just seen the town of Batok. On approaching it, there were some dogs on a hill. They ran away, and we found on this spot a number of skulls scattered about, and one ghastly heap of skeletons with clothing. I counted from the saddle a hundred skulls, picked and licked clean; all of women and children. We entered the town. On every side were skulls and skeletons, charred among the ruins, or lying entire where they fell in their clothing. There were skeletons of girls and women with long brown hair hanging to the skulls. We approached the church. There these remains were more frequent, until the ground was literally covered with skeletons, skulls, and putrefying bodies in clothing. Between the church and the schools there were heaps. The stench was fearful. We entered the churchyard. The sight was more dreadful. The whole churchyard for three feet deep was festering with dead bodies partly covered—hands, legs, arms, and heads projected in ghastly confusion. I saw many little hands, heads and feet of children of three years of age, and girls, with heads covered with beautiful hair. The church was still worse. The floor was covered with rotting bodies quite uncovered. I never imagined anything so fearful. There were three thousand bodies in the churchyard and church. We were obliged to hold tobacco to our noses. In the school, a fine building, two hundred women and children had been burnt alive. All over the town there were the same scenes. In some places heaps of bodies buried in shallow holes had been uncovered by the dogs. The banks of the little stream were covered with bodies. Many bodies had been carried to Tatar Bazardjik, a distance of thirty miles. The town had 9000 inhabitants. There now remain twelve hundred. Many who escaped had returned recently, weeping and moaning over their ruined homes. Their sorrowful wailing could be heard half a mile off. Some were digging out the skeletons of loved ones. A woman was sitting moaning over three small skulls with hairs clinging to them, which she had in her lap.

"The man who did all this, Achmed Aga, has been promoted, and is still Governor of the district. The newspaper accounts were not exaggerated. They could not be. No crime invented by Turkish ferocity was left uncommitted. Seven thousand bodies have been lying here since May 12th, rotting in the sun, preyed upon by dogs; and Sir Henry Elliot has never heard that the authorities demand a war contribution from the remaining inhabitants of one hundred thousand piastres. The town formerly paid a million. The harvest is rotting in the fields. The owners are in the churchyard. The survivors' cattle have been taken by the Turks, who refuse to restore them. It is impossible to get in the harvest. It is not true that the Turks are sending help. The inhabitants every where complain to M. Schuyler that their cattle are not restored, and that help is not given. The statement that the Bulgarians committed atrocities is utterly unfounded and shamefully false. Less than two hundred Turks were killed, nearly all in open combat. There is no proof yet that a single Turkish woman or child was killed or violated. The official reports will corroborate this telegram. There is urgent need of relief for the starving and helpless families.

"The investigation into the atrocities is proceeding rapidly. Mr. Baring will probably report that not fewer than sixty villages were burnt and twelve thousand people killed."

This case shows clearly the purpose and ferocity of the nation, that it is full of furious revenge, and that fury is produced by opposition of religious sentiment, and is manifested just as the prediction expresses it, "with great fury to destroy and utterly to make away many." It is perfectly evident that the infuriated Turks would butcher, in the most cruel and barbarous manner, every Christian in their empire, if it were not for the fear and restraint produced by the threatening menaces of the Great Powers.

It seems to us that if these events do not fulfill the above predictions, or rather are the commencement of their fulfillment, then we are entirely at a loss to know what would fulfill them. We repeat what we have said before, that these atrocities are just what will prevent the nations from helping Turkey in its final struggle for existence, and they come exactly in the place where the prophecy locates them, preceding the king's final destruction, when none will "help him."

Turkey must prevail for a time over her enemies, so as to slaughter and destroy, and thus compel her friends and helpers to leave her to sink into the grave she has so wickedly dug for others.

Surely the Word of God is wonderful in its foreshadowings and infallible in its accomplishments. Its thunders shake the rebellious nations, and its lightnings burn up its enemies. We believe that every thing thus far in this Eastern War corresponds very perfectly with God's description of the skirmishing before the last great battle. Let all be ready for the sword of God and the sentence of final doom.

ALTON BAY CAMPMEETING.

The Alton Bay Campmeeting this year was reckoned by many to be the best meeting ever held in that consecrated bower. The number of worshippers present was larger than ever before, while the number of spectators was smaller than the last few years. The preaching, for strength of argument, depth of devotion, and manifestation of gospel power, was manifestly superior to that of any preceding meeting. The spirit and tone of the devotion was more like that of our early meetings, in this great prophetic movement, than anything that we have experienced for many years. It was evident that the recent manifestations of signs, and demonstrative proof that the coming of Christ is very near, has revived and greatly strengthened the faith which we once enjoyed in the speedy coming of the "day of the Lord."

When our faith becomes vitalized by the Holy Spirit, and we really view the awful grandeur of the judgment scenes hanging over us, and think of the millions to be soon crowded through the gates of death into eternal darkness, all strife and contention about disputed questions, and complaining about the mistakes and weaknesses of our brethren are hushed in silence, as when we are witnessing the death scene of a friend.

We were greatly rejoiced to witness the increased fruits of such a faith at our last meeting. A profound and deep impression seemed to pervade the hearts of the truly spiritual and faithful, that we are exposed to infinite risks if we are not thoroughly and momentarily prepared to meet our final doom. The social meetings were characterized by a spirit of earnest seeking for a present, perfect preparation for the kingdom of God, and united and earnest efforts to glean a few more into the garner, for whom Christ died, and pluck a few more of the perishing as brands from the burning.

Many rose for prayers in these meetings, the definite number is not known, but it is thought to be as many as three hundred. There were many who professed conversion, and fifty who were baptized. There are three hundred and fifty cottages on the ground, and about a hundred cloth tents this year, giving a capacity of lodging of between four and five thousand. There were people present from all parts of New England, and some from New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Missouri, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, South Carolina, Vermont, Canada, Province of Quebec, Ontario, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and England.

Such a meeting, when controlled by the spirit of the gospel, is capable of producing results which small local meetings cannot produce; for when all the worshippers labor in harmony, there is a concentration of power which cannot be produced by a few; on the principle that "one can chase a thousand, and two can put ten thousand to flight."

The divine economy has, in all the dispensations, called the multitudes together at certain times, for concentrated and harmonious action and worship, evidently to produce and perpetuate general sympathy, social cooperation, and to increase and extend the religious power of the church, to strengthen the courage of the faithful, promulgate truth, break down prejudice, and convert sinners to Christ.

This may be our last convocation in the consecrated grove, made so vocal by christian melodies, and so lovely by holy associations, and ever to be remembered by many as their spiritual birth-place. The next gathering of Jesus' friends who experienced the bitterness of parting at Alton Bay, may be in the Eternal City, by the "sea of glass," and not by the disturbed waters of the "Queen of Lakes"—Winnipiseogee. Here we meet in joy, to part in sadness; but there the joy of meeting will be eternal, where the sorrow of farewells will be unknown. Here one of our number grappled with the king of terrors, and was engulfed in the wave of darkness; but there the fearful monster will never enter the loving circle to wake the voice of lamentation. In this great encampment there are many points of special interest, where local altars were consecrated, around which loving hearts met in holy fellowship, where wanderers came to the feast of a Father's love, and where the repenting sinner shed bitter tears of repentance, and through infinite love were received into the family of Jesus' friends.

But the sermons, prayers, and sweet songs, are hushed in everlasting silence; their influence and results to be proclaimed upon the house-top at a future day. An awfully impressive silence now meets the listening ear, as it turns toward the sacred desk and the holy shrines where the echoes of divine worship so recently blended in heavenly melodies. May the solemn vows made to God, and the binding covenants entered into with Jesus Christ by repenting sinners and returning wanderers, be faithfully kept, is our earnest praye.

A BAPTISM BY MOONLIGHT.

As the last meetings of the last evening of the Alton Bay Campmeeting were closing, and feeling that the last opportunity for some at that meeting had come, who had given their hearts to Jesus Christ, to make a full and Scriptural declaration of their faith in his death and resurrection, they requested the privilege of then going to the lake (eleven o'clock, P. M.) and being buried with Christ in baptism. The petition was cheerfully granted, believing that it was in perfect harmony with the inspired apostolic example, and so seven "new-born babes," in solemn march, accompanied by a congregation of about two thousand people went to the silent, liquid grave and were buried, thus testifying that they were indeed dead to sin—to the carnal lusts of the flesh and the pride of life, and so calling angels and men to witness that death.

We were not privileged to witness it, but as represented, it was wonderfully impressive and solemn. The hum of business and sound of busy life were hushed in the stillness of midnight, and the moon threw her queenly robes around the sacred scene, as the fanning zephyrs gently moved the crystal surface of the quiet lake, reflecting pearly brightness from countless rippling waves. When all had gathered at the water's edge, the profound stillness was suddenly broken by the sound of prayer, which rolled its awakening notes over the bosom of the sparkling waters, and swept back among the tents of the inhabited bower, arousing many hundreds from their quiet slumbers. Soon the voice of prayer ceased, and enrapturing strains of melodious songs were heard, which seemed as inspiring as anything heard since the sweetness of the first earthly song was lost in the hoarseness of the curse. The service was truly grand, and deeply impressed all with reverence for the divine ordinances and praise to the Creator of all, and Savior of the faithful.

JOTTINGS.

C. H. HURD.

The Wolfeborough News, in speaking of the late campmeeting at that place, says: "It is quite evident that these people are struggling against the popular sentiment of most evangelical denominations; or at least the sentiment of their creeds. That there is a general softening down among most religionists with regard to the doctrine of 'endless torment,' as formerly taught, there is little doubt. But people seem not quite ready to adopt the theory of annihilation as a substitute."

We judge from this very favorable report by the local paper, and from what we hear from other sources, that the campmeeting has made a favorable impression upon the minds of at least some of the Wolfeborough people. This seems more evident from the fact that Elder F. H. Burbank remained after the close of the meeting, and gave a series of four evening lectures.

We learn that the revival interest at Water Village, N. H., still continues, under the faithful labors of Bro. C. H. Sweet. The Lord is blessing that community and vicinity with a gracious season of refreshing from his presence. At the Wednesday evening prayer-meeting last week, two more made an effort to come over on the Lord's side. Eight candidates have been baptized, and there are more to follow their example soon.

Rev. King Atkinson, the Methodist preacher, who a few years ago so bitterly opposed the truths as set forth by Elder Miles Grant, in a series of lectures given at Kezar Falls, Me., and who has occasionally written some very severe articles against Adventism for Zion's Herald, recently in a discourse preached on a funeral occasion at Kezar Falls, assured his hearers that their friend had not gone to heaven, as many believed, and could not go there until Christ come again. He very frankly informed his audience that the popular idea entertained of going to heaven at death could not be proved from the Bible. But he endeavored to sustain the theory of an intermediate state for the soul somewhere, between death and the resurrection. In speaking of the resurrection, he admitted the idea of the body being raised, the same one that died, and each individual retaining their personal identity then as now. In view of these reported utterances of Elder Atkinson, we would respectfully inquire if he is not leaning rather hard, to say the least, towards materialism?

MINNESOTA A. C. CONFERENCE.

FIFTEENTH SESSION.

The Minnesota Conference met at Utica, Winona county, June 28th, in connection with the campmeeting and held several sessions during the week. I suppose the clerk of the campmeeting committee will send you a full account of the campmeeting for the Times, so I will say nothing respecting that (except to remark that it was, I think, the best one I have ever attended), but will try to give you a brief abstract of the business transacted by the Conference.

The following is a list of the preachers and delegates who were present a part or all of the time of the meeting. Sister Ruth M. Rowell, P. Ramer, Wm. J. Bursell, P. Mitson, A. G, Lombard, Job Brown, O. R Fassett, M. Wellcome Sister H. Ramer, Wm. Chapman, E. K. Smith, L. F. Cole, D. Cheatham, Joseph Chapman, Stephen Pike, O. Richardson, Wm. Talbot, John Powell.

The following committees were elected or appointed: On business—L. F. Cole, M. Wellcome J. Brown. On Finance—O. Richardson, D. Cheatham, Stephen Pike. On Ordination—O. R. Fassett, M. Wellcome, Wm. Chapman. On Nominations—O. Richardson, O. R. Fassett, M. Wellcome. On Resolutions, relating to the death of Bro. S. C. Wellcome—O. R. Fassett, L. F. Cole On Revision of the Constitution, to report at the next Annual Conference—L. F. Cole, E. K. Smith, Wm. Chapman.

The reports of the Secretary and Treasurer were received and adopted. The President gave an excellent address which will be furnished for publication separate from these minutes.

The reports of the Quarterly Conferences, Churches and Ministers, were interesting and encouraging, but too lengthy to publish.

Bro. Morgan of St. Paul District and Bro. Joseph Chapman of Winona District were granted each a license to improve their gifts as public preachers.

The names of L. R. Wood and Geo. H. Dewing were dropped from the list of membership.

The name of the Ottawa Quarterly Conference District was changed to Blue Earth.

The Campmeeting committee was instructed to take into consideration the advisability of changing the location of holding the campmeeting.

The committee on resolution respecting Bro. S. C. Wellcome reported the following, which was adopted, and the Secretary instructed to incorporate the same in the minutes.

Whereas, Our beloved brother, S. C. Wellcome has been, in the solemn providence of God, suddenly removed by death from our number, and his chosen field of labor in the Lord's vineyard, and,

Whereas, In his departure, the Christian ministry and the Advent body in this State and at large, together with the churches under his special supervision as an under shepherd have had taken from them a faithful and zealous worker in the cause of Christ; therefore,

Resolved, That we express our sincere sorrow in this affliction—our sadness at his removal from our midst—our admiration of his christian excellence, virtues, and untiring zeal in the cause of our Lord; and that we are only comforted in our loss and affliction, in the remembrance of his excellent life, and the blessed hope of the resurrection of the just, and that we bow in humble submission to the divine will, praying that the Lord will raise up another, upon whom his mantle of faithfulness may fall.

Resolved, That the members of this conference express their sincere sympathy for the surviving widow and sons of our brother in their deep sorrow and bereavement, and express the hope, and pray that they may be supported and comforted in this time of their affliction, and that as a family, all may be gathered to meet again in the kingdom of God.

A missionary board of five members, viz., L. F. Cole, O. R. Fassett, Wm. J. Bursell, E. K. Smith, and M. Wellcome, was elected to present a form of organization, to place the matter of missionary effort upon some definite basis. The sole direction and control of the missionary effort was placed in the hands of the board.

[A plan of "Annual membership," and "Life membership" on the payment of specified amounts was presented and adopted, and as a result of about twenty minutes effort, one hundred and fifty-eight dollars and fifty cents was paid in and pledged to assist in carrying on the missionary work in the hands of this conference.—SEC.]

Eld. O. R. Fassett was chosen to preach a missionary sermon at the next Annual Conference. Eld. Wm. Chapman was chosen as his alternate.

The State tent was placed in the hands of the Missionary Board, with instructions to keep it in the field as much as possible.

The committee on ordination reported that Bro. E. K. Smith had consented to be ordained, and that Eld. L. F. Cole offer the ordination prayer, Eld. Wm. J. Bursell give the charge, and Eld. M. Wellcome give the right hand of fellowship, and the time be fixed by the officiating brethren.

[This interesting and impressive ceremony took place on Saturday evening at the close of the regular services.—SEC.]

The campmeeting committee was elected for another year.

The report of the delegate to the meeting of the Publishing Society at Chicago was received and adopted.

After a long and careful deliberation on the subject, the conference unanimously voted to withdraw from the Western Advent Christian Publishing Society.

Eld. A. G. Lombard was appointed a committee of one to confer with the brethren in the western part of the State who are organized under the name of "Church of God" and write them to join with us.

The Executive Board was re-elected for another year.

The committee on nomination reported in favor of the re-election of the President, Secretary, and Treasurer. The report was adopted and the conference elected by acclamation. Wm. J. Bursell, E. K. Smith, Secretary, and D. Cheatham, Treasurer.

The conference voted to hold its next Annual Session in connection with the next Annual Campmeeting. Adjourned.

THE TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, held at its rooms, 144 Hanover Street, Boston, on the 5th of September, 1876, it was voted that the Society make diligent effort to raise the sum of Two Thousand Dollars for the Tract Fund. This is one of the most important departments of our field of labor, and the Society intend to make more earnest efforts than ever before to publish the soul-stirring message of Christ's speedy second advent, and the precious truths connected therewith. To this end the Society solicits the aid of its friends and sympathizers, and hopes that donations to this object may be prompt, liberal, and hearty.

J. J. SMITH'S REPORT.

LABORS IN THE TENN. RIVER VALLEY, ALA.

Dear Brethren:—I have just returned from a three weeks' preaching tour down the Tennessee River. I went on the same line of two former trips, taking in some new points on the way. As a general thing, the people have shown a desire to hear the old man. I find a few of "like precious faith" at various places, who are rejoicing in the truth. Others are investigating with much interest, while at other places there is on the part of the "would-be leaders" a most determined opposition. For example: I had been solicited by one of the best of the Methodists at Smith's Chapel to leave an appointment at that place on my return; and arrangements were made for a man to meet me with a horse about fifteen miles from there, and convey me to the place. I was surprised on my arrival to learn that the trustees of the chapel had refused to allow me to occupy the house, and that the appointment was called in, and another made two miles from there for the same evening. I was notified that there would be an assemblage at the chapel to meet me, who would insist on my preaching there or thereabouts. I thought best to fill the new appointment that evening and leave an appointment at a school-house for the next evening near the chapel. It was so arranged. I met a large assemblage for so short a notice, many more than the house would hold. I discoursed to them of the Lord's coming soon. I had many pressing invitations to call again and preach a series of sermons. The Lord willing, I hope to do so after a while.

The Savior tells us to "be wise as serpents and harmless as doves." I thought it wisdom to make no allusion to being shut out. Opposition unnoticed is short lived. I believe it was Dr. Isaac Newton who said: "While the devil throws chaff into the bushel, let us throw in all the wheat we can." If others preach error, let us preach all the truth we can, in the name of the Lord, and we will hear the "Well done," and that will be enough.

On this trip I had pressing calls to visit several new places. I enjoyed the christian kindness of ministers of the Presbyterian church, P. C. Word of Dodsonville, and J. J. Birdine of Maysville, Ala., who invited me to preach in their meetings. One of the men had just read Wellcome and Goud's "Plan of Redemption," and agreed that "our loss in Adam was all we gained in Christ." The other agreed that this earth redeemed from the curse would be as good a heaven as he wanted or expected. I hear of several ministers of the various denominations who frequently utter truths not known to have been held by them till recently. The tracts scattered over this country are bringing forth the fruit thus manifested. I would encourage the dear ones to do more in the tract cause. I might have said much more in this report, but I have no self to eulogize, or crowing to do, over what I have done. I deal but little in the sensational element, except the truth in my humble way of expressing it produce the sensation, and then to God be all the glory.

CHRIST THE FOUNDATION.

EDWARD FORREST.

Friend, be careful how you build. We are living in the generation to whom the full light of the gospel is due. We have come to the time when men shall walk to and fro, and knowledge shall increase. We are fast hastening to the fulfillment of the blessed promises to be given to those that love his appearing, and to the final punishment of those that do not love him nor keep his commandments. All Scripture is given by inspiration. The Bible is the Word of God, the only chart and guide on earth that man can take and enable him to learn the way, the truth, and the life. Stop one moment and consider. See the many spirits that have gone out into the world. The Word tells us to try the spirits, compare them with the Word. Those that are able to stand the fire of the Word, accept; all others reject.

Let no man deceive you. You have, by the great love that God showed to fallen man, been offered that which this world's riches and honor could never buy,—a full pardon and remission of sins, once for all, through the cleansing power of the blood of Jesus; the Lamb without spot or blemish, that was offered up for the sin of the world, —to you, poor man, servant to sin, who is in vain looking to man for help. Various ways are held out. Some promise you a safe harbor through the mediation of the saints and apostles gone before. Look at 1 Tim. 2: 5. Others offer you reform in the shape of the pledge against the use of strong drink, with the hope that it may lead to the putting off of other evils, and in the end bring you to Jesus. This may sound very good, and is in its place; but its place is after Christ, not before him. Christ must be first in all things; the rock on which we must build. Abstaining from drink does not always lead to Christ; but embracing Christ, removes not only the appetite for strong drink, but gives the controlling influence of the Comforter, which leads those who accept of Christ, removes all evils, changes the heart, and in the end saves from the power of the second death.

There is no long, round-about way to Jesus. He is very nigh to those that call upon him; for he says, "And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be delivered." Every word that he speaks he will keep. His word cannot be broken. "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my word shall not pass away."

O friend, I warn you to build on that Rock. Use the gospel for your material, and when that day comes in the which every man's work shall be tried, it will be able to stand the test. Do not delay. Remember, the day of the Lord cometh as a thief in the night. The present only is yours. You know not what the morrow may bring forth. Jesus you must have, if you would have life in the world to come. God sets life and death before every man. He tells you to choose this day whom ye will serve. Act well the wise part. Jesus loves you still. Do not turn him away. He ever waits to make intercession for you. No matter how far down you have fallen; call on his blessed name, like Peter of old, "Lord, save or I perish," and as he reached the hand to Peter, so he will reach forth to you. Remember his love for man while on earth. Look at his meek and gentle spirit. See how he cared for those around him. He even forgave and prayed for his enemies. Look at his sufferings; persecuted, railed at, and driven from place to place. Look at the scene in Pilate's judgment hall; the crown of thorns, the purple robe, the mockings, the insults, the soldiers pushing and striking him; the scourging. Overcome by the cruelty of man, he falls beneath the weight of the cross, only to rise again, and continue his weary march to the place of execution.

O reader, can you look on these scenes of pain and anguish, without having your heart stirred with compassion? O hear that cry when every one seemed to desert him, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" His last prayer,—"Father, forgive them, they know not what they do." Friends, this was done that you and I might live. Will you reject such love? will you spurn the offered gift? life eternal with such a friend? will you have him to reign over you? a dwelling place on the new earth, and a right to eat of the tree of life, and to enter in at the gate into the city. Once more I ask you in the name of the Master; will you choose that good part that shall not be taken away from you?

WHEN Jesus gave sight to the blind man, he followed him, glorifying God; and all the people, when they saw it, gave praise unto God. Thus the witness to faith calls forth many witnesses to praise.

Correspondence.

From Sr. L. B. Weaver.

Dear Ones in Jesus:—My heart has been greatly cheered by having some cheering visits from the dear ones from campmeeting at Springfield.

On the evening of the 14th of August, Bro. J. A. Cargile (whom I have long desired to see) and Sr. L. M. Stoddard spent the night with us, and it was cheering beyond all that I can express. I was so glad to see Bro. C., and speak face to face of the work that is being done through his instrumentality at the South. I was also greatly comforted by seeing the kind and well-remembered face of dear Sr. Stoddard, with whom I had taken sweet counsel. We spent a delightful evening together, and had a heavenly season of prayer before retiring for the night, and in the morning. It seemed as if I had had a small piece of Campmeeting brought to me. It was so blessed. I wept when the time came for them to go back to the camp of the saints; but I bade them adieu hoping that we shall all soon be gathered home, never to part again. God bless them both in their arduous labors for the cause of God. While I am shut out from laboring in the cause in a similar way, I earnestly pray God to bless them and keep them till Jesus comes.

I felt lonely after they left, and earnestly prayed God to direct other dear ones here to cheer and comfort me; and in answer to prayer, on the morning of the 16th Bro. H. J. Nace and Sr. Grestey, from Phila., came up to see me. I had never seen them before, yet, when I saw their happy, smiling faces, I knew they wore the mark of Jesus, and my heart went out in deep thankfulness to the Giver of all earthly blessings, for sending them to see me. O how we did enjoy the fleeting hours from 10 A. M. to 4 P. M. The day passed altogether too quickly, and we should have been glad to have kept them much longer; but after having a blessed season in prayer, they bade us good bye, hoping we may soon meet in the sweet fields of Eden. O, how I long to be there! I daily pray God to bless those dear ones who practised self-denial in leaving the meetings to come up and see me. You who are accustomed to seeing the dear saints daily or weekly never can know how I appreciate the privilege. I believe they will have their reward for comforting me in my isolation and suffering. God bless you evermore.

I tell you, dear ones, when that present came it encouraged me to ever trust in God for ALL I need. My heart went out in praise to God for his loving-kindness. If ever I felt to praise God for anything, it is that we can tell him all our wants. If the meal is low, or if there is none there, we can go and tell it all to Jesus, and he will give us relief. I know I love him more and more, and O, "I will trust him though he slay he." O how good the Lord is, and I long to see him face to face. Pray for me. God bless you all. Trust in the Lord, and do good.

North Dana, Mass.

From Sr. J. A. Goodrich.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—I take my pen once more, through the blessing of our heavenly Father, to tell you how good the Lord is. I am glad that there are many of you that know of his goodness, but I love to tell of Jesus, and I hope to be ever found praising him for his loving kindness to me. He has watched over me these many years, and led me through many trials, and has promised to lead me all the way safely. He leadeth me to green pastures, and by the side of still waters. He has showed me how to drink deep at the fountain, from whence its streams are never dry. O how blessed and comforting have those words been to me many times—"Whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water, springing up unto everlasting life." I find it so. When I think of his blessed promises, I am led to rejoice with joy unspeakable. I find the more I love and serve him, the more I know of his goodness. He says that "the willing and the obedient shall eat the good of the land." We can be filled with all the fulness there is in Christ. How many times in the Word of God are we taught to rejoice. Let what will come, we can look up and rejoice, knowing that our redemption draweth nigh.

Dear ones, when Jesus comes I expect to have administered unto me an abundant entrance into the kingdom of God, to go no more out forever. O what a blessed and glorious day that will be to all those that love his appearing. It is my meat and drink to hear others talk of the coming of our blessed Lord and Master. O how I long to see Him whom my soul loveth, and be made like him. It is a blessed thought to know that Jesus is coming to redeem his waiting ones, and deliver us from all that does not belong to Christ. I never felt so much like consecrating all I am to him, as I do to-day. I can look up and rejoice that deliverance is so near. It is soul-cheering to know that we are almost home. It is only a little way ahead. The Captain of our salvation is almost within our sight. O let us be ready to hail him with joy, and go in to "the marriage supper of the Lamb" with our garments unspotted from the world, and be ready to crown him Lord of all. What a blessed day that will be. Are we ready to meet him, and have it said of us, Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord. I love him and his cause better and better every day and hour I live; and it is my daily prayer that I may walk near the cross. O how I long to be made perfectly whole, and be just what my Master would have me be, a true child of God, walking blameless in all the ways of life, free from every sin, and be made a fit temple for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit.

New Britain, Ct., July, 1876.

From Sr. M. L. Woolworth.

Dear Friends of the Crisis:—I want to tell you what the Lord has done and is doing for me. I want to tell it for your encouragement. It has been a long time since I professed to love Jesus, but I have always been so full of doubts, fears and distrust, as to prevent my growth in grace, and hinder my usefulness in my Master's service. With so little faith, I could not claim the promises as mine. I could not give up my hope, neither could I find comfort in hoping. Afflictions came with crushing weight, which weaned me from this world of sin and sorrow. One after another was taken from my embrace, till the last silver cord was severed, and I left alone, with not one kindred tie to bind me to earth. Then it was that I felt as never before the need of that Almighty arm, which is never shortened, to sustain and support me; and the dear Lord was better than my fears. Yet I did not trust him as was my blessed privilege to do, hence my doubts and fears and spiritual dearth.

But, dear friends, a change has come over me. My heart is full of gratitude to Him who has kept me and saved me. And since I have come to believe that my dear Savior is so soon to come, I have been led to search the Scriptures as never before; and I find all the kindred truths plainly taught in the Bible which are inseparably connected with the soon coming of Christ. And since I have found that there is so much more in store for humble seekers after truth, and the whole truth, I have prayed for more light—more light, more faith, more trust, more of God in the heart. When I went to the Campmeeting at Springfield, my desire was for more light; for a heart wholly consecrated to Christ, that I might be pure in heart; that I might be wholly the Lord's. I believed all these blessings were in store for me, and I craved them all.

I stayed through the meeting, and was greatly blest in so doing. O such meetings! I wished every body could be there. It was my first experience at campmeeting, and a blessed experience it was. The meetings for the promotion of holiness were soul-satisfying. I have no language to describe them, only that the Lord was there, and his dear children knew it. The power of the Holy Ghost was there, and his children felt it, and the dear Savior poured light into my own heart. Now my peace flows like a river. My heart is stayed on God. I can trust him. I can look up and say, "Jesus, keep me," believing that he will keep me. O, the blessed assurance! I now feel that Jesus is mine and I am his. I long to see him, but I will patiently wait and labor till he comes.

Brookfield, Mass., Aug. 26th, 1876.

From Sr. A. A. Boyce.

Dear Brn. and Sisters:—As I derive a great deal of comfort from reading the letters in the Crisis from the dear followers of Jesus, I would like to give in my testimony for the Lord. It is nearly eight years since I thought that I gave my heart to him, but it has been but little more than two years that I have really enjoyed his presence and felt the peace and joy afforded by resting in Jesus. In that time I have been growing in grace and in the knowledge of the truth, striving to live up to all the light I could obtain.

We are now living in a new country, in the great timber lands of Minnesota. The country is settling quite fast, but the people are all intent on securing the treasures of this world, instead of seeking those that shall endure forever. My husband and myself are the only ones in this immediate neighborhood who even make a profession of religion; and we would ask the prayers of the brethren and sisters that we may let our light shine in this place, as we ought, to the glory of the Master. I don't know how near we may be to those of like precious faith. We are not acquainted with any in the State. We are young in years, as well as in the faith, but by the help of God we want to work till Jesus comes, and not be found sleeping. Pray for us, that our faith fail not, but that we cling to Jesus and so come off more than conquerors.

Middleville, Wright Co., Minn.

From Bro. R. M. Harvey.

Dear Brn. and Sisters:—Long years have passed since last we met, yet still we meet around one common mercy seat. The same loving Father watches over us, and cares for us still. O what love, while we were sinners, to give his only Son to die for us, and through faith in him to adopt us as his own children. We do not half realize his love and constant care for each one of us. If we did, our doubts and fears would vanish. Though clouds and tempests gather, and trials deep close around our trembling footsteps; let us flee to the strong hold, and hide us in the Rock of ages. O ye trembling, doubting ones, just try the strength of Him who has all strength. What are God's promises good for if we cannot prove them true? None ever trusted in him and were confounded.

It is good to live so near our Father that we can ask and receive, that our joy may be full. "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples." John 15:8. Gladly would we meet with you at the campmeetings, as in years past, but we are here where Jesus' coming never has been preached, and most are infidels. O that the Lord would send some one endued with power from on high to rescue the perishing. Pray for us.

Gardner, Douglas Co., Oregon.

From Bro. W. D. Tucker.

Dear Friends of Jesus:—It has been a long time since I have written a letter for the dear Crisis. The reason is because I have fallen out of the way, and have been a wanderer from the fold of Christ, and have lost all my hope of eternal life; but praise be to the Lord, my Savior's tender voice has brought me once more to his loving arms, and he has forgiven all my sins, and I now stand complete in Christ Jesus, ready and willing to do as he may bid me. I am now this very moment all consecrated unto the Lord, and am determined to be in this position until the Master shall say unto me, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." Matt. 25:21.

I believe with all my soul that the coming of Jesus to restore all things is very near; and oh let us see that our lamps are trimmed and brightly burning, that we may be ready when he comes. Pray for me, dear ones in the Lord.

Haydenville, Mass.

Extracts from Letters.

Bro. A. J. Young writes from Vallejo, Cal.:—"The church here is on the mountain top. The meetings of the Conference commenced at high tide, and the interest has not yet abated. Bro. and Sr. Reed removed here, and assisted Bro. Carpenter for two weeks. The results are heavenly. One young man, reared in infidelity, has yielded; also several others have given up to Christ. Three have been baptized."

Bro. H. B. Sevey writes from Mt. Vernon, Me., Sept. 2nd:—"Beloved Brn. and Srs.: All praise to our heavenly Father for his goodness and mercy to me. For the first time I put my boot on this morning since last March. I am able to help some n meetings. Was with Bro. Carr and others in tent at China Village last week. I expect to be at Waterville Village with Bro. Blaisdell in Evangel Tent next week. Pray for us. Time is short. Jesus' coming is at the door. May we be all ready."

Indignant Horror at Turkish Crimes.—When a strong man, apt at the use of fists, sees a brutal fellow ill-using a woman or a child, there is no doubt as to his duty. If well-disposed, he knocks the ruffian down, and improves him with a few judicious blows if he resists being transferred to the care of the police. If the Turkish ruffians and their victims presented an equally simple problem to the arms of civilized Europe, there need not be a moment's hesitation in applying gunpowder and steel to stop the appalling outrages in Bulgaria, and inflict a memorable punishment upon the chief perpetrators of deeds of such horror that our blood boils and curdles at their barest mention. Something decisive ought to be done, and must be done; but, unfortunately, it is no easy matter to ascertain what is best. —London Times, Aug. 27.

Obituaries.

Stone. In Cambridgeport, July 23d, 1876, after a somewhat protracted illness, which he bore with christian resignation, Daniel G. Stone, aged fifty-five years, six months.

He leaves a widow and a large circle of friends to mourn their loss. During his sufferings, which were great at times, he enjoyed great peace of mind, resting in the promised hope of the Savior, and his assurance of his soon coming with redemption. Of this beautiful doctrine he was a strong advocate till his death. He rejoiced greatly that it would be but a little while before he should meet his blessed Redeemer. May the God of all comfort cheer the heart of the companion and friends left behind. The memory of the just is blessed. Funeral services by Eld. Cyrus Cunningham.

Ellis. In hope of immortality at the resurrection, Sister M. V. Ellis, of Hinesburgh, Vt., fell asleep Sept. 1st, 1876, aged sixty years.

Our sister indeed rests in hope of eternal life, which God who cannot lie promised before the world began. Her last words, after bidding farewell to her family, were—"Come, Lord Jesus." She leaves behind a bright evidence of a good preparation for the judgment. Funeral attended by the writer. A. Damon.

Downs. In Haverhill, Mass., Aug. 16th, '76, Bro. Ephraim K. Downs, aged about seventy years.

This dear Bro. was one of the pillars in the church at Haverhill, and they feel deeply their loss. He leaves a wife and three children, who feel that a good, devoted husband and father has been torn away from them; but his rest in the grave will be short, for the great Life Giver will soon come to awaken the dead from their slumbers. May God bless the weeping widow and all the mourning friends.

W. H. Mitchell.

Emery. In Kennebunk, April 9th '76, Sarah, widow of the late Benjamin Emery, aged seventy-five years.

Sister Emery was a highly esteemed citizen, an intelligent christian, and a faithful, devoted and affectionate mother. Her loss is deeply felt by many relatives and friends. May all the mourners so live that their mourning may be turned into joy, when all the saints are gathered to the deathless land. W. H. Mitchell.

Illsley. In Kennebunkport, July 26th, '76, Sister Sarah Illsley, aged fifty-seven years.

She was a christian, and bore with remarkable patience her great sufferings for many months, anticipating with pleasure the coming of that day when the Lord in his glory will appear, and change this vile body, and fashion it like his glorious body. May the comforting hope of the gospel sustain the weeping relatives.

W. H. Mitchell.

Hardy. In Exeter, N. H., Aug. 16th, 1876, Annie E., eldest daughter of Charles L. and Jane E. Hardy, aged eight years.

Annie was a dear little girl, and beloved by all who knew her. Her sickness was short, but severe, and she yielded to the enemy without a murmur. Dear little Annie! She "sleeps, but not forever"; and the hope of meeting her again when Jesus comes comforts the hearts of her sorrowing father and mother. Services conducted by the writer. W. M. Harmon.

Harron. At Wheelock, Vt., Sunday, Aug. 20th, 1876, of typhoid fever, Sister Ann Harron, wife of John Harron, formerly of Stanstead, P. Q. aged fifty-four years.

She fell asleep with the hope of rising soon.

H. H. Tucker.

Bessie. In Hinesburgh, Vt., Aug. 15th, 1876, of lung fever, Otis Bessie, aged seventy-eight yrs. Funeral attended by the writer. A. Damon.

FOREIGN NEWS.

The Eastern War.

London, Sept. 5. A Vienna dispatch to the Times says an aide memoire prepared by each representative of the six powers in similar but not identical terms, has been presented to the Turkish Minister of Foreign Affairs, informing him that the Princes of Servia and Montenegro desire an armistice, and the powers offer their good offices in the way of mediation.

A dispatch to the Times from Constantinople states that the British embassador has presented a demand for the conclusion of an armistice, to be followed by negotiations for peace. The term of armistice demanded by England is one month. There is little doubt that Servia and Montenegro will be glad to accept an armistice. There remains only the question whether the Turks will consent. England's declaration that if Turkey's refusals should lead to armed foreign interference the Porte must not reckon on the British Government, caused surprise and disappointment. No secret was made that Russia was the power likely to interfere, but in spite of the English declaration Turkey may think that in the decisive moment of impending war in case of Russian intervention, England's national interests will have weight.

Sept. 8. A despatch from Berlin says the powers are still endeavoring to induce the Porte to reconsider his resolution verbally expressed, refusing an armistice. The Porte's written reply is expected shortly. It is stated that the Porte earnestly desires peace and disclaims any intention to make exorbitant demands.

No news is received from Belgrade respecting peace negotiations. The Servians would prefer a continuation of the war to humiliating conditions of peace.

A Belgrade dispatch reports that a member of the Red Cross Society was brutally murdered by the Turks. The assassins cut off his arm bearing the red cross.

England is at last not only thoroughly aroused about the Turkish atrocities, but frightened at the increasing signs of an European war. The London Spectator urges an immediate diplomatic intervention, and says: "If Lord Derby refuses to do this, and refuses, further, to indicate that he will consider the only terms which can secure peace even for three years—namely, the emancipation of the northern provinces from the Pashas—the temporary destruction of Servia will be certain, and with it European war."

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Washington, Sept. 5. A number of fugitives from Savannah, where the yellow fever is now raging, have arrived in this city. A gentleman doing business in this city states that the panic is indescribable and that all persons able to do so have fled the city. He himself had locked up his store and brought the key with him, and had only delayed his departure on Friday last long enough to put a change of clothing in a traveling bag. The fever first commenced in the suburbs, but the reports were not credited until a lady died in the centre of the city, when a rush for the cars commenced. There was a general feeling among the citizens that the fever was much worse than reported. The whole community were in a state of alarm. Three thousand persons had taken their departure and nearly all business was suspended. All the cities in Georgia and South Carolina in communication with Savannah were vigilant to prevent any one from Savannah from stopping in their midst.

Atchison, Kansas, Sept. 5. The heaviest rain known here for years fell on Sunday night. Stranger and Camp creeks rose seven feet above the highest mark recorded since the settlement of the county. There is much damage in the bottom lands, and many bridges are swept away. The central branch of the Pacific Railroad is badly washed and no train arrived or departed on that line on Monday.

A Plague of Grasshoppers.—A despatch from St. Paul to the New York papers states that the damage done by the grasshoppers on the northwestern, western, and southwestern borders of the State is incalculable, and hundreds of industrious hard-working settlers have lost their all and have nothing left to live upon. A great part of the region west of and including Jackson county to eastern Dakota, and south through Iowa, is covered with devouring hosts, and the reports indicate that the entire crops of this region are being swept away, and that many of the discouraged settlers are leaving.

Notices.

Bethel (Vt.) Campmeeting.

The Annual Campmeeting at Bethel, Vt., is appointed to commence Thursday, Sept. 14th, and hold till Friday, Sept. 22nd. Fares will be reduced on all roads controlled by the Central Vt. R. R., reaching from New London, Ct., to Montreal, P. Q., Montpelier and Wells River R. R., and probably on the Cheshire R. R., running from Fitchburg, Mass., and connecting with the Central Vt. at Bellows Falls. Trains will stop opposite the grounds, as heretofore, during campmeeting week, commencing with Tuesday. If no campmeeting tickets at the station where you start from, buy regular tickets, and get free return passes back, on the grounds, from our Secretary.

Board can be had on the grounds at low rates. All will please come provided with tents and bedding who can. Teams can be kept near the grounds at reasonable prices. Lodgings will be provided for preachers in the stand, and we hope each tent's company will invite one or more preachers in to board with them, so as to reduce the number of free boarders.

Efficient help is engaged to preach the word, also to keep order on the ground. We hope all will come praying that God may direct and bless the meeting to the glory of his name, and the salvation of the perishing. A. A. Hoyt, for Com.

York Co. Conference.—Our County Conference is to meet at South Hiram, Me., in the Union Chapel, Thursday, Sept. 21st, at two o'clock p. m. The friends there desire a large attendance from abroad, and we hope they will be gratified. Those coming over the Portland and Ogdensburg R. R. should leave the cars at Baldwin station, and get on board Stanley's stage. Request to be left at Captain Randall Libby's. Bro. L. will see that you are provided with a comfortable home while you remain. Those coming with teams had better call on Moses Norton, or George Mason, Kezar Falls. All letters should be directed to Kezar Falls, Me. C. H. Sweet, Secretary.

Dist. Campmeeting and Quar. Meeting.—There will be a campmeeting at or near West Salem, LaCrosse Co., Wis., commencing Monday, Sept. 18th, to continue over the following Lord's day. Elds. Thurber, Hough, Howard, Sr. Rowell, and others, are expected to preach the word. Let there be a general rally of all the ministers and churches of the district, and all others who can. It is your meeting. Come and enjoy it, and make it a success. Let every church send one or more family tents. Churches that wish quarterly meetings, or protracted meetings, come up and make arrangements for them. Several ministers will be present with whom you can confer. This will be an important meeting for this district.

Philo Hitchcock, Dist. Evangelist.

Quarterly Conference.—The A. C. Quar. Conf. of Central Kansas will hold its next session at Arvonia, Osage Co., Kansas, Saturday, Sept. 30th, and continue over the Lord's day, Oct. 1st. In connection with this meeting, it is thought best to have a State Campmeeting, commencing Sept. 27th, and continue as long as thought best. We hope all of our brethren and sisters in the State and elsewhere, who can come, will prepare for this meeting. Let fervent prayer be offered that we may have a rich season in the Lord. Those that can, bring tents. Now, brethren and sisters, let us make a general rally to this meeting. Bro. Burr, Editor of the A. C. Times, we trust will be there to preach the word.

J. C. Smith,
Aaron Preston, } Committee.
M. McGuire,

Campmeeting Notice.—The Kansas Campmeeting will be held in the grove, three miles east of Arvonia, Osage Co., Kansas, commencing Friday, Sept. 29th, and continue over Oct. 8th. We hope to see a general gathering of those who are looking for the return of the Nobleman throughout the State, and also from Mo. Bring tents, provision and bedding, and let us tent together in the forest, and worship the Lord of hosts. We expect Bro. Burr, Editor of the A. C. Times, will be with us to preach the word of life. The Kansas Mission Tent will be on the ground, and will afford shelter for many.

Committee of Arrangements: N. L. Brian, J. C. Smith, D. Webster, L. L. Smith, J. A. Beauchamp. Levi L. Smith, for the Com.

Annual Conference.—The next annual session of the A. C. Conference of Northern Pa. and Southern New York will be held with the church at Westfield, Tioga Co., Pa., commencing Thursday evening, Sept. 21st, and hold over the following Sunday. By rail from Corning to Elkland, then stage to Westfield.

E. C. Cowles, President.
H. Riegenfuss, Secretary.

I would like to inform the churches, and individual friends waiting for Jesus, and all others, that I am ready to assist them in protracted meetings and Sabbath services to the extent of my ability. Let me hear from all as soon as possible.

G. W. Burnham, Newburyport, Mass.

The Hoosick Valley A. C. Conference is appointed for Wednesday evening, Oct. 25th, at Castleton, Vt., and continue over the Sabbath. More next week. H. K. Flagg, President.

Robert Candlish, Sec.

The next session of the Advent Christian Conference of Nova Scotia will be held at Scott's Bay, King's Co., Sept. 28th, and continue over the following Lord's day. All are cordially invited.

J. M. Tozier.

Campmeeting.

The Kansas and Nebraska Campmeeting will be held at Peach Creek, Washington Co., Kansas (at the same place as last year), commencing Thursday, Sept. 21st, and hold over two Sabbaths. We expect a glorious meeting. Let all contribute to the interests of the meeting by their presence filled with the Spirit of the Lord. All who possibly can, bring tents, plenty of bedding, etc., etc. Do not stay away because you have not tents; provisions will be made for all who come, as far as possible. A large attendance of ministers will be present to preach the word. The large tent brought from the East by R. F. and M. J. Clark will be used for the occasion. There will be no side issues, or hobbies, and we expect to have perfect harmony. From present indications, it will be the largest meeting ever held in the State.

Committee—Geo. P. Boutwell, Clifton; C. D. Potter, Peach Creek; Wm. H. Shriner, Washington; W. T. Pilcher, Glen Elder, Kansas. H. Kissel, Blue Springs, Neb. For further particulars, address as above. R. F. Clark, Sec.

Notice.—My health having considerably improved, I am willing to devote a portion of the Sundays each month to preaching, if the Lord will. Any church or community wishing my labors, please write me at Lawrence, Mass., No. 10 Fulton Street, as that is my present address.

F. M. Drake.

Conference.—There will be a conference in Middle Simonds, N. B., commencing Wednesday, Sept. 20th, at 7 p. m., and continue over the following Sunday. A general invitation is extended to all. Come in the spirit of our soon coming King, and glorious results will follow.

For the church, Rufus Snow.

Appointments.

☞ Appointments must be received as early as TUESDAY MORNING (as our paper goes to press about noon) to insure insertion for the coming week.

☞ The following Resolution was passed at the late meeting of the A. C. P. Society:—

"Resolved, That no appointments be published in the Crisis henceforth for persons unknown to the Editorial Board (by which is understood the Editors, Editorial Committee, and Business Agent), unless satisfactory reference shall be given.

The Committee appointed by the Adv. Chris. Association, at its last Annual Meeting, to advise with the Editorial Board "in relation to the publication in the World's Crisis of the appointments of men unworthy of recognition as preachers," having attended to the duty assigned them, recommended, and the Editorial Board have adopted, and ordered to be published, the following resolution:—

"Resolved, That when the Editorial Board is properly notified by any of our Churches, or Ministers, or responsible persons by a written allegation that a certain minister, or ministers lack moral character, that they be instructed to notify such minister, or ministers, of the information received as a reason for withholding their appointments till after a proper trial and acquittal."

All communications in relation to this matter should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board—Geo. T. Adams, Boston, Mass.

WAITING AND WRESTLING.

I am waiting, Savior, waiting,
For the dawning of the day,
When this weary night of weeping
Shall forever pass away.

I am looking for the sunlight
Of thy glory soon to dawn;
And I view with blest assurance
The sweet tokens of the morn.

But I owe thee for this gladness,
For this sweet and calm repose;
For this joy amidst my sadness,
Far outweighing all my woes.

Yes, I owe thee for the prospect
Of a brighter, better home;
Where is known no pang of sorrow,
Where no dark'ning cloud can come.

I would bow before thee humbly,
I would keep the narrow way;
Ever trusting in thy mercy,
Till the dawning of the day.

I am glad my rest is nearing,
Glad my race is almost run;
Hasten, Lord, thy blest appearing,
Come, dear Savior, take me home.

WAIT ON THE LORD.

Many dear disciples has the heavenly Master called, both for the mountain and the wilderness preaching. He does not send them there alone. He says, Come with me. He does not summon all his laborers to the same place; nor does he employ them in the same manner. While one watches for sinners by the wayside, and exhorts them to listen to the glad sound of salvation, another feeds the hungry, and ministers to the thirsty gathered together; but there are some, whom the Lord of the harvest needs under clouds of suffering, in sick chambers, and in strange out-of-the-way places, where they learn lessons taught only in darkness and silence; and are thus prepared to deal with souls who can be reached in no other way, than through the hidden ones of God. He asks for a willing heart.

Dear reader, are you content to be weak and afflicted, in order to be fitted for the service He has designed for you? willing to suffer that you may do his bidding? Nature may long after fleshly service, earthly companionship; but the new man in Christ Jesus will love God's will better than his own, and though obedience to that will may entail a daily crucifixion of its desires, it will not be without its reward; for as the sufferings of Christ abound in us, so our consolation also aboundeth by Christ. The smile of the beloved shall and does brighten each dark dispensation, and the golden fringe, which borders even the heaviest clouds, shall lead others to believe in the goodness of him who has thus overshadowed you.

"Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous; nevertheless, afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruits of righteousness, unto them which are exercised thereby." To you, this doubt is a wall of fire. But for it, you might have wandered into by-paths, and pleased yourself by yourself, by your self-chosen service. Perhaps you might have won the admiration of your fellows. Few will even understand you, if you are walking in fellowship with the Lord Jesus. You will find that you can easily bear to be misjudged and misrepresented by those who know little or nothing of that path of faith in which he is leading, in that secluded chamber, or that distasteful dwelling. Testimony may be yours, which only the last day will reveal, while many will point to that spot where you have wept, and prayed, and suffered, as the birthplace of your blessing.

Let the Holy One of Israel, who placed you there, mould you for his work. Be still. If you seek only to be approved of him, you will soon find a peace which no snare will ruffle, and learn that it is a very small thing to be judged of man. "Be not weary in well doing, for in due time, we shall reap, if we faint not." When the chief Shepherd shall appear, you shall receive a crown of life, that fadeth not away. Let not the vineyard laborer, who is busy in the personal activities of service, imagine that a sick room shuts out the world, the flesh, and the devil. Satan has weapons to suit every heart, every place, and every circumstance. The quiet chamber, where you loved to tarry, seems a little sanctuary. You say peace reigns there. Your weary heart gathered refreshment from its calmer atmosphere, and your distracted mind repose. Blessed be God that it is so. That still chamber has been a scene of sadness and conflict, and triumph, witnessed by the Holy One alone. You partake of the fruit. That place was prepared for you, who bear the heat and burden of the day. That tranquil and heart-warm sympathy, the heavenly Master required for his weary servant; and the oil, and the wine, and the waiting service from one of his wayside watchers. You may marvel how one who has never trodden your path can retain a sympathy with you in the world without, simply by enduring the trials of the world within. Was it from pleasant hours of meditation and happy thoughts over the book of God, that all was bright and calm? Nay, there have been long, weary days and nights of watching. The power of thought has seemed to have forever departed, physical pain has cast a cloud over the mind, and the blessed promises have appeared but as a dead letter; and though the sufferer knows that the Lord changes not, yet he is mourning over the sinking heart that cannot realize his love and faithfulness as heretofore. There are the same conflicts, there is the same cross, in the camp and in the closet; the very same strength is needed, the same deliverer.

There are some, whose discipline and ministry are frequently within the little space of a single room, and this for years. If any such glance upon this page, I would speak as one who has trodden that way, and who knows it is a valley of blessing. God sees that the sick room can nourish idols, as well as other places. He has brought you just where you are, to prove you. Who but the loving Father, and nurse of his sick children, knows all the heart-sick longings for health and strength that fret the active soul? We are prone to desire the removal of everything unpleasant to nature, instead of seeking to learn what it is intended to teach, or asking for grace to glorify the Lord in it.

Patient endurance, and meek acquiescence in a loving Father's will, work a rich reward. But it is not for the pleasant things of earth, that the sick one weeps. He thinks the opportunity of usefulness is over. Who but God sees tears falling over conscious helplessness, or looks upon the first early struggle to be content, to be still, to be as a thing forgotten, and out of mind. Look up!

Jeremiah, in his prison garments, and with his prison fare, was as much the messenger of hosts, as when he delivered his message to king Zedekiah. Thank God, the richest promises are to those that endure and overcome. Messages of sweetest cheer are daily awaiting you. The hand of him whom you have pierced with your sins is ever moving for your help. His eyes are ever on you; his ears are open to all your cries. Oh beloved ones, of whom the world knows so little, from whose chamber of suffering and weakness flow forth streams of blessings, whose meek subjection and patience, and fervent love rebuke the selfishness of many, and encourage others that are without to seek to enter within the vail, pray on; watch and wait, and hope. Let God be glorified. Envy not health and strength. Be thankful that he who loves to hear your voice, and to see your face turned toward him, has chosen for you the better part, which you would not have chosen for yourself. The eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth to show himself strong in the behalf of them whose heart is perfect toward him. We know not what means he will take to carry forth the fruit that grows within his garden; but when he has a purpose to fulfil, all the intermediate steps are in the hands of infinite wisdom. The cloudy, dark day, is as need ful for underground vegetation, as the summer sunshine and soft dew.

"Oh, it is worth the sharpest cross,
Christ's fellowship to share;
The dearest things I count as dross,
One pain for him to bear,
Who bore the curse of sin for me,
And bowed his head to shame,
That I from condemnation free,
Might triumph in his grace."

INIQUITY ABOUNDING.

It seems to be assumed, in all quarters, that the times are out of joint; that sin and folly prevail in high places as well as low; and that the very foundations of social order are in danger of being destroyed. This opinion finds constant expression through the pulpit and the press, in our seats of justice, and in our halls of legislation. With the increase of light and knowledge, which has marked the progress of the century, there has come an equal augmentation of all the forces and appliances of evil. It would seem that while the good are getting better, the bad are getting worse at each successive stage of the world's advancement, and if this be the law of its progress, it is difficult to see, on principles of human calculation, what the end will be. We are left, however, in no uncertainty as to final results; for we know that God is on the throne, and he has assured us in his word that the good shall at last triumph.

It cannot be denied that there is, in all parts of our land, and in all ranks of society an unusual prevalence of luxury and extravagance, violence and corruption, vice and crime, threatening the very existence of our free institutions. At such a spectacle many of our oldest and wisest men are filled wtth astonishment and misgiving as to the future. What these things mean, and what they portend, are problems which call for the thoughtful and prayerful consideration of all true patriots and christians.

To us it seems perfectly plain that the fearful domestic, social, and public evils of the times have grown out of a departure from the essential truths of God's word, and the obvious requirements of God's ordinances, on the part of the individual, the family and the nation. There has been a growing disregard for the old established principles of religion and morality, and with it a relaxation of the demands of conscience, a connivance with sin and folly, a yielding toleration of error, a tacit conformity to the maxims of worldly wisdom, and an open or secret indulgence in a thousand practices condemned by the word of God. All this has come in a large measure from the prevailing skepticism, materialism, and atheism of the age. A whole generation has sprung up under this teaching, and we are beginning already to reap its harvests. Our people have drifted away from all the old landmarks. Under the popular watch-word of progress, a good thing abused, they have been trying the experiment of countless innovations. They have gone after other gods, unknown to the fathers of our church and the founders of our republic.

There has been a gradual, but now very wide departure from the great principles of virtue and integrity, of individual character and of public honor, on which our republican institutions were founded, and by which they were maintained through all our earlier history. It is the fashion now, in certain quarters, to decry the great principles of the German and Swiss Reformers, the French Huguenots, the English Puritans, the Scotch Covenanters, and the New England Pilgrims. But it is one of the best established facts in history, and one of the grandest, that these are the very priciples on which the American church and the American State were founded - the destructive principle, on which their young life was nourished up to greatness, which have given character to us as a people, and made the nation respected and honored in the eyes of mankind.

For the first fifty years of our history there was comparatively little departure from the maxims of our fathers. The affairs of the nation were administered on the same principles of economy, frugality, honesty, public spirit, and patriotism, which had distinguished the career of all our early patriots and statesmen, but the last half century, especially the last quarter, with its influx of population, its accumulation of wealth, its lust of power, and its unparalleled splendor, has brought a woeful declension of moral character. Many among us have become so paganized and demoralized that they seem to be ashamed of our nation's religious origin and christian character.

The church itself, in many of its branches, has caught the prevailing spirit of worldliness, and instead of rebuking the sins of the times, has been willing to join in the idolatry of wealth and fashion. We might almost take up the lamentation of the old prophet over the desolations of Jerusalem, and say, "Judgment is turned away backward, and justice standeth afar off; for truth is fallen in the street, and equity cannot enter."

If such be a true diagnosis of the prevailing malady, then the remedy is plain. It is in the line of reformation and return. If as a people we have been departing from the ordinances of God, and hewing out for ourselves broken cisterns which can hold no water, then our only remedy and our only salvation is in coming back to Him who is the fountain of living water—whose inspired word is the true source and standard of righteousness and peace to the individual and the nation. Our safety lies in the setting up of the old landmarks, in the restoration of first principles. When the prophets of God preached reformation in Israel, they called the people, not to a seeking after new inventions, but a return to the old paths.

It is not in new departures from evangelical truth, not in empirical innovations, not in rationalistic speculations, not in the cold negations of atheism, materialism, and skepticism that our true strength lies. On the contrary, it is in a return and firm adherence to those old established principles of truth, equity, and liberty which have stood the test of ages, sustained the children of God through all generations, and carried the fruits of civilization around the globe—the principles of the American Revolution, of of the Protestant Reformation, and of the gospel of Jesus Christ."—Interior.

PREACHING IN A THUNDER STORM.

Extract from a Sermon by Whitefield during a thunder storm.

Text.—"Strive to enter into the straight gate; for many, I say unto you, shall seek to enter in, and shall not be able." . . . "See," said he, pointing to a shadow that was flitting across the floor—"see that emblem of human life. It passed for a moment, and concealed the brightness of heaven from our view; but it is gone. And where will ye be, my hearers, when your lives have passed away like that dark cloud? Oh, my dear friends, I see thousands sitting attentively, with their eyes fixed on the poor unworthy preacher. In a few days we shall all meet at the judgment-seat of Christ. We shall form a part of that vast assembly that will gather before the throne; and every eye will behold the Judge. With a voice whose call you must abide and answer, he will inquire whether on earth you strove to enter in at the strait gate; whether you were supremely devoted to God; whether your hearts were absorbed in him. My blood runs cold when I think how many of you will then seek to enter in, and shall not be able. Oh, what plea can you make before the Judge of the whole earth? Can you say it has been your whole endeavor to mortify the flesh, with its affections and lusts? that your life has been one long effort to do the will of God? No; you must answer, I made myself easy in the world by flattering myself that all would end well, but I have deceived my own soul, and am lost.

"You, O false and hollow christian, of what avail will it be that you have done many things; that you have read much in the sacred Word; that you have made long prayers; that you have attended religious duties, and that you have appeared holy in the eyes of men? What will all this be, if, instead of loving him supremely, you have been supposing you should exalt yourself in heaven by acts really polluted and unholy.

And you, rich men, wherefore do you hoard your silver? Wherefore count the price you have received for Him whom you every day crucify in your love of gain?"

The eye of the preacher gradually lighted up as he proceeded, till towards the close it seemed to sparkle with celestial fire. With his whole energy he exclaimed, "O sinners, by all your hopes of happiness, I beseech you to repent. Let not the wrath of God be awakened. Let not the fires of eternity be kindled against you. See there!" pointing to the lightning, which played on the corner of the pulpit, "it is a glance from the angry eye of Jehovah!" Raising his finger in a listening attitude, as the distant thunder grew louder, and broke in one tremendous crash over the building, he continued, "Hark! It was the voice of the Almighty as he passed by in his anger!" As the sound died away, he covered his face with his hands, and knelt beside the pulpit, apparently lost in inward and intense prayer. The storm passed rapidly away, and the sun, beaming forth in his might, threw across the heavens a magnificent arch of peace. Rising, and pointing to the beautiful object, he exclaimed, "Look upon the rainbow, and praise him who made it. Very beautiful it is in the brightness thereof. It compasseth the heavens about with glory; and the hands of the Most High have bended it."—Sel. by J. N. Berry.

THE A. C. CONFERENCE OF CALIFORNIA.

The A. C. Conference of California met as per appointment. Meeting opened in the usual way,—reading of the Scriptures, prayer, etc. President, D. Mathewson in the chair. Minutes of the last meeting read, and approved. The necessary committees were then appointed, and detailed on their respective duties. The balance of the time during the meeting was devoted to social worship. So did all other business meetings terminate.

At the next meeting, the constitution presented at the last conference was adopted as a whole. Met again Friday, at 10 o'clock. Committee on credentials reported the following, as persons who should be members of the conference, as per Art. 10, of constitution. Ministers: D. Mathewson, H. F. Carpenter, D. D. Reed, Thomas Howell, R. W. Wilson, and D. C. Abbott. The delegates were C. C. Morse, Wm. Patterson, H. W. Snow, John Goodwin, T. C. Purington, J. E. Pettis, G. W. Fix, and A. J. Young.

The tent committee was granted further time, and D. Mathewson added to the committee. The different churches were reported as usual, by those delegated for that purpose. All were about the same as last year, and occupying a strong position against Satan, and for the truth.

The San Francisco church is a little embarrassed. They need help in this direction, and deserve great credit for their fortitude. There have been several additions since the last conference. A few have withdrawn; cause, side issues.

MINISTER'S REPORTS.

D. D. Reed reported labors South as encouraging. He had distributed books and tracts, which found welcome hearts. He found an open door in nearly every place visited, and several of like faith, looking for the Lord.

Bro. Carpenter stated that, though there had been no conversions as yet in Vallejo, the Lord had helped him to preach the gospel, and the people in Vallejo could not sin so easily as before; that the church was getting on to higher ground, but not quite up to concert pitch; that blessings had followed all the way along; that the friends there possessed large hearts.

Bro. Mathewson stated that San Francisco was the hardest place he ever was in; that the church occupied a strong position, and that perfect harmony existed. He knew of no element to cause discord. He had baptized several, and taken them into the church. Never was better used by any people in the world.

Saturday, the election of officers resulted as follows: For President—H. F. Carpenter; for Vice President—Thomas Howell; Treasurer—H. W. Snow; Secretary—A. J. Young.

Ministerial Committee: R. W. Wilson, H. F. Carpenter, D. D. Reed. State Committee: A. J. Young, J. D. Carey, J. Harrow, J. Goodwin, C. C. Morse.

Treasurer reported that he had paid out no money, nor had he received any. The Secretary reported eleven dollars and fifty cents due for printing, which was then collected.

Next was a series of resolutions by Bro. Snow, which were discussed to a considerable length. Finally an amendment was offered, and passed; the substance of which was to appoint a committee of twelve, four from each church, to inquire into the practicability of having the conference incorporated into a legal body, etc. The meeting adjourned to the call of the chair.

Sunday afternoon met again as per call of the chair, when it was decided that the next conference should be held in Santa Clara. Bro. Carpenter was asked to explain Art. 3, relative to side questions; to which he replied that the advocacy of the Seventh day, Age to come, Non-resurrection of the wicked, all had a tendency, if discussed in the churches, to distract and divide them. It was also voted that all ministers, recognized by this conference, should have a certificate, signed by the proper officers of this conference.

A resolution, relative to assisting the A. C. Times, was also passed. A vote of thanks was passed also to the Vallejo friends for their provision for all who came.

From the commencement the meetings were of the richest order. They were the best yet. There were heavenly results. Meetings were continued by Brn. Reed and Carpenter for two weeks, and have resulted in the conversion and baptism of several; and we are assured that there are more to follow. May the Lord bless others as he has blest us, is our prayer.

THE CONSOLATIONS OF PRAYER.

E. A. BOYNTON.

"Is any among you afflicted? let him pray."—JAS. 5: 13.

When we with sorrow are oppressed,
And burdened with a load of care,
And disobedience brings unrest,
We take it to the Lord in prayer.

When all the way looks dark and drear,
And clouds shut out the day so fair;
And doubts, to dim our faith appear,
We take it to the Lord in prayer.

Though coming ills clothe us with fear,
And trials seem too hard to bear,
Our sorrows would much less appear
If taken to the Lord in prayer.

In him we find a sure defense
From sins which would our steps ensnare;
What peace repays our confidence,
When we approach the Lord in prayer.

He promises to every one
A crown, who now his cross doth bear;
To those who say, "Thy will be done,"
He is a God who answers prayer.

St. Johns, Mich.

A REQUEST.

H. S. MITCHELL.

"Brethren, pray for us."

1. This request was a very moderate one. St. Paul had given up all in order to preach the gospel. He had suffered much in several places, and even his visits to Thessalonica had been attended with much suffering; yet he does not ask for their money. St. Paul was a man of as great talent as any man of that age, yet he did not ask for honor. It is their prayers, and their prayers only which he humbly craved. The request, the petition, the ardent desire of all the ministers of Christ, is the same, "pray for us." According to St. Paul's own rule, it is right that "they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel." The laborer is worthy of his hire. They request something for their support; but this is not their great object. They are anxious to obtain an interest in your prayers. "Brethren, pray for us."

2. It was an affectionate request. We are children, adopted children, of the same Father, redeemed by the same gracious Savior, and influenced by the same Holy Spirit; therefore, we request your prayers. It is with the same kind of feeling that we, as pastors and preachers, would ask of the church to-day. You are our brethren. Will you pray for us? Do you esteem those men who have left all and gone out to preach the coming of the Just One? If you love them, pray for them. Do you respect your pastors, and those who labor with you? those who have toiled all the week, visiting from house to house, and preaching every Sunday? Do you receive these words with meekness, although the instrument may be weak and unpolished? Brethren, do you love us? If you do, pray for us. Deny us not.

3. It was an earnest request. Had this Hebrew of the Hebrews, this chief Pharisee of the Jews, this distinguished pupil of Gamaliel, occasion to implore an interest in the Thessalonians? Had he who had spoken before kings with such eloquence, attended by divine power that made Felix tremble, filled Festus with astonishment, and almost persuaded Agrippa to be a christian, had he need of the prayers of these poor saints? He had; and all gospel ministers, be their learning ever so profound, their talents ever so brilliant, and their success ever so great, have need of an interest in the prayers of the weakest believer.

We should pray for ministers because their work is great. The weight of souls lies on them. If they are not faithful, souls will perish. They are Christ's ambassadors. To them is entrusted the work of reconciliation; therefore, woe is unto them if they do not earnestly and affectionately preach the gospel, and beseech sinners to be reconciled to God. Whatever we may think of the subject, the office of a preacher is most awful and important. They indeed wrestle not against flesh and blood only, but against principalities. Eph. 6: 12. If the devil delights in the destruction of one member of the church, will he not delight to devour one of the chief officers of the christian army? Therefore they ask and crave your prayers. O pray for the ministers. "Brethren, pray for us."

INVITATION.

Mortal, art thou still pursuing
Earth's fleeting show?
See, thy pathway leads to ruin,
Why wilt thou go?

Why pursue earth's flitting pleasures?
Why live in vain?
In the kingdom seek thy treasures—
Joy thou shalt gain.

Think of Christ, that mighty Savior,
Who died for thee;
Turn, repent, and seek his favor,
His glory see.

Now his voice in love entreats thee,
Calling thee home;
Now in love he waits to meet thee,—
Come, sinner, come.

Come and share that glorious mansion,
Prepared on high;
Come, for God hath paid thy ransom,
Why wilt thou die?

SEEKING TO SAVE.

Why does Mr. Moody have such a crowd? For one reason, because he goes after it; he does not wait for the crowd to come to him. There are some very obvious contrasts between Mr. Moody's Hippodrome and the average church, which it does not require a very discriminating eye to discern.

Our modern churches are mostly temples. We are not willing to live in houses of cedar, and worship God in a tent. We are, perhaps commendably, unwilling to be extravagant in social living and parsimonious in religious expenditure. It is easier to bring our religious expenditure up than our social expenditures down, to conform our churches to what our houses are, than to conform our houses to what our churches ought to be. As a consequence, in all our cities and larger towns, are churches which are intended to be attractive to the rich, and certainly are forbidding to the poor. The velvet carpet, the polished black walnut, the marble pillars, the stained glass windows, the dim religious light—in the midst of these the butcher, the baker, the candle-stick-maker, feel as ill at ease as they do in the richly carpeted and cushioned parlor of the millionnaire who worships there. They do not know how to comport themselves in the midst of all this unaccustomed elegance. If they stray into the church, they feel that they are not wanted there, and the sexton generally does nothing to disabuse their minds of that impression. They do not come to your church, for the same reason that they do not call at your houses. If you were left standing in the front-hall of a neighbor waiting for a servant to show you a seat, as long as they are left in the vestibule of the church waiting for the sexton to show them a pew, you would be in no hurry to call again.

The dress, like the church, repels those whose means are moderate. They do not go to the church for the same reason that they do not go to the fashionable promenade. Pride in the house of God is very unbecoming, no doubt, but it is not very extraordinary. . . .

Now, Mr. Moody's Hippodrome is the extreme of plainness and simplicity; the carpets are sand; the pews are pine; the pulpit is unstained, unpainted; the light is God's own sunlight; the organ is a common reed instrument; the dress is so far common that it is wealthy extravagance not impecunious plainness which is noticeable. First come first served, is the rule of the house, and no one waits in the lobby for the sexton to show him a seat. It is not a church of the poor, nor a church of the rich, but a church of the people. And the people throng it.

Along with this characteristic feature of the place is a characteristic feature of the accompanying ministry. Mr. Moody comes, likes his Master, seeking to save that which is lost. He goes after the sheep in the wilderness; he does not wait for the sheep to come and ask permission to enter the fold. This has always been his method. He began his work by hiring one or two pews in a Congregational church in Chicago, and filling them up with young men brought in from the hotels and the streets. He extended operations, and became "drummer" for a Methodist church. He took a vacant bench in a Sabbath-school, and filled it up with a class of city Arabs. He took a room in "The Sands," and recruited till it overflowed. He bought a pony, and ransacked the streets and lanes of Chicago for material. He hired an omnibus and made two hundred calls one New Year's day. He went out into the streets and lanes of the city, and compelled them to come in. And in his later ministry a house to house visitation and wide-spread invitations by tickets and placards and advertisements have been characteristic features. If we generally employed his methods we might perhaps generally achieve an analogous, if not an equal success. The same sickle in other hands might reap as well. The net cast might catch fish; it will not if left ashore.

For this method has always succeeded. Christ left the synagogues and preached in the streets and on the hill-sides, and from the prow of the fishing boat to crowds. Luther left the cathedral and preached in the public squares, and the multitude followed him from the squares to the churches. Whitefield and Wesley, driven from the pulpit, preached in the fields and market places, and their ministry gave birth to the denomination which still, more than any other, preaches to crowded houses. Mr. Moody's methods are not new. He simply seeks to save the lost; he does not wait till the lost come seeking salvation at his hand.

"How think ye? If a man have a hundred sheep, and one of them be gone astray, doth he not leave the ninety and nine, and goeth into the mountains and seeketh that which is gone astray?" It is at least an open question whether we do not spend more time, thought, and money, in making comfortable provision for the ninety and nine, than in going into the wilderness for the one.—Christian Weekly.

AFTER much praying, waiting and weeping, God usually comes with his hands and his heart full of mercy to his people. He loves not to come empty handed to those who have sat long with tearful eyes at mercy's door.

RELIGION IN CROQUET SLIPPERS.

H. B. SEVEY.

While visiting the town of W., in Maine, last winter, I went to one of the (so-called) union revival meetings. The several churches in the place had been holding their meetings for some time. I found the union was to keep out the message of Jesus' coming and kindred truths. Truly, we are living in "perilous times," when people are turning away their ears from the truth, and are turned to fables. Paul said the time would come, when they would not endure sound doctrine; and we can say of a truth, it has come already.

What strange inducements are presented to the unconverted for them to turn from sin to serve the Lord. At the close of the meeting, the leader, in giving an invitation for them to come forward for prayers, in speaking of the beauties of religion, and its popularity, said he could not tell them that religion had got into its silver slippers yet, but it had got into croquet slippers. I thought of the contrast between the religion of this age, and that as taught by Christ and his apostles, which was to "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

One prominent man in the church asked me if I knew why they had more join their church than others? I waited for him to answer. He said it was because their church was more congenial to the wants of the world; that is, there was not so great a step for them to take to join them. How true that the "broad way" receives the mass, while the narrow way has the few. What a contrast! An easy religion; one that is in keeping with the fashions of the world; one that goes with the popular tide, drifting into the broad road, which ends in destruction; while but few enter by the door, having the fallow ground of the heart broken up by putting on the new man, crucifying the old by bearing the cross; being dead to sin, and alive to God; not our own, but a servant of Christ, yielding obedience to him; not conformed to this world, but transformed by the renewing of the mind; not our own, but belonging to Christ, who has bought us with his blood, having our citizenship in heaven, from whence we look for our Lord.

May we be of that number, who shall share the glories of that age, which will know no sorrow, when the golden age shall come.

MY EXPERIENCE.

MARTHA S HUGHES.

Dear beloved friends, and readers of the Crisis: I experienced religion some years ago. I don't know the time when I was converted to God, but I do believe and know that I have been born of the Spirit. I have the evidence that I am born of God. The Word tells us we may know we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. That is the evidence I have that I am accepted. The Holy Spirit followed after me, and led me to see the truth as I never saw it before.

Before I gave my heart to God, I was in earnest. I wanted to be a christian, but I thought there was something great to do. I supposed I had to cry and mourn over my sins as I saw others do, or I could not be a christian. When the invitation was given for sinners to come forward to be prayed for, I went with an earnest desire that I might become a christian, and love the Lord Jesus with full purpose of heart; but I thought a good moral life was going to save me. I was very much burdened. I prayed, but could not get rid of the burden. Self was in the way. I trusted too much to my good works that I had done. I was selfish in my desires, but thanks be to God, the veil has been removed from my eyes.

Wherein I was blind, I now see. I stopped looking for feeling. The Holy Spirit followed after me. I simply cast my burden on the Lord; took Jesus at his word; read my Bible, believed it meant what it said; asked forgiveness of all my sins, and am still trusting, believing, casting all my care on Jesus. He is my all-in-all. I am filled with all joy and peace in believing. I have that peace which passeth all understanding; that keeps my heart and mind through Christ Jesus. I have that "perfect love" that casteth out all fear.

Sinner, if you are looking for feeling or good works that you may do, stop where you are; look to Jesus, ask for the Holy Spirit to teach you, and lead you into all truth. Pray that you may grow in grace, and you will bring forth fruits, meet for repentance. Works will follow, as you receive the grace of God in the heart. The things you once loved, you will hate; then the Holy Spirit will sanctify you through the truth. God's word is truth.

I have written these few lines thinking to do some one good. I am a poor, suffering mortal, but Jesus is mine, and I am his. I am looking for him soon to come. I am paralyzed. I have had no use of my left side or hand for over twenty years. I am unable to earn a cent, but my God has been the God of the widow to me. He will never leave nor forsake me. Glory be to his name. We are almost home.

WHAT IS CONVERSION?

The devil has imposed on the world many counterfeits of conversion. He has performed his work so skillfully, that, if possible, he will deceive the very elect.

Profession is not conversion. It is more than a theory—it is a reality. It is more than a name—it is the life of God planted in the soul. It is more than form—it is the power of God unto salvation.

External conformity to the rules of piety is not conversion. Much praying, frequent sacrifices, attendance on worship and zeal for the church may be forms, but they are not the power of godliness. Indeed, we may give our goods to the poor, and our bodies to be burned, and yet be profited nothing. "The pure in heart shall see God."

Conviction of sin is not conversion. Felix trembled; Agrippa was almost persuaded, but neither of them was converted. Great care should be exercised not to mistake the goadings of conscience, the decisions of the judgment, the fear of hell, for a change of heart and a meetness to fellowship with God.

Reformation is not conversion. Giving up riotous living, leaving off a particular sin, or amending our evil ways, is a duty we owe ourselves and to those with whom we are associated in life. God demands the purification of our natures as well as the sanctification of our lives.

Conversion is a supernatural work that is wrought in our hearts by the Holy Ghost, whereby we are changed from the image of the devil into the image of God. Conversion is not simply repairing the old building, but taking all down and building up anew. It is not patching up matters, but a weaving of holiness into all our powers, principles and practices. In conversion, the blood of Jesus which cleanses from all sin is applied by the Holy Ghost to our hearts. "If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me." The mind is renewed, the judgment is balanced, the will is altered, the imagination is purified; the sentiments are sanctified, hope, desire, joy and love are all changed as respects their objects and pursuits.

All the members of the body are renewed. The eye is no longer wanton, covetous or haughty, but is humble and fixed on Christ. The ear waits to hear the words of God; the hands and feet are ready to go and do holy work for Jesus' sake. The mouth is filled with the praises and glory of the Redeemer. Satan, sin and the world are given up, and Christ becomes all in all.—Ocean Grove.

HOME AND HEALTH.

DON'T WORRY ABOUT YOURSELF.—To retain or recover health, persons should be relieved from anxiety concerning disease. The mind has power over the body. For a person to think he has a disease will produce that disease. This we see effected when the mind is intensely concentrated upon the disease of another. It is found in the hospitals that surgeons and physicians who make a specialty of certain diseases are liable to die of it themselves; and then mental power is so great that sometimes people die of disease which they have only in imagination. We have seen a person seasick in anticipation of a voyage before reaching the vessel. We have known persons to die of cancer in the stomach, when they had no cancer, or any other mortal disease. A blindfolded man slightly pricked in the arm has fainted and died from believing that he was bleeding to death.

Therefore, well persons, to remain well, should be cheerful and happy; and sick persons should have their attention diverted as much as possible from themselves. It is by their faith that men are saved; and it is by their faith they die. As a man thinketh, so is he. If he wills not to die, he can often live in spite of disease; and if he has little or no attachment to life, he will slip away as easily as a child will fall asleep.—Selected.

CARE OF THE SICK.—Dr. Irenæus Prime, one of the editors of the New York Observer, after giving some account of his own suffering from the thoughtless conversation of friends during his sickness, gives the following directions about the care of sick persons:

"From the sick room, exclude all persons but the patient and nurse in charge. Whatever assistance is required should be within easy reach, but the less the number in the room, the less the temptation to converse. If a physician be in attendance, let his directions be obeyed, and discharge any nurse at once who knows so much more than the doctor as to determine whether his prescriptions are the best or not; or dismiss the doctor, and install the nurse in his place. In a battle with death, there should be only one captain. If other members of the family besides the one in charge be admitted, let them enter softly, minister to the sufferer their loving offices, and retire, soothing and not disturbing him by their voices and footsteps."—Health Reformer.

REST.—After we have had abundant exercise, or honestly labored until necessary work is accomplished, then should come a period of rest. It is then grateful to every sense because it has been deserved. It is not consonant with health to be "always on the drive," to be, as it were, too industrious. Not in a physical sense merely, but under too great a mental stimulus. Consequently there must be, for health's sake, intervals of leisure—a pleasant suspension of effort, when the faculties are "off guard," and we are happily unconscious of care.

BATHING we should resort to when the physique is sound, for purposes of cleanliness only. In this respect, a daily morning bath is necessary. This should be taken immediately on rising, quickly, but without "nervous haste." If no other means are at hand, a good and inuigorating bath may be had with a quart of water. Simply rub the body all over with a wet sponge, or, what is better, with a wet towel, or with the hands. Dry rapidly with a coarse towel, using plenty of friction.

WOMEN are not able to do heavy work like men, because their bones and muscles are not so large, but they do light and delicate work better. Children should not be required to make great exertion, as their bones are not so solid at the ends. Old men cannot make so much exertion as the young or the middle-aged, and their bones are more brittle and liable to be broken. An old woman of eighty years of age falling down, is very liable to break her thigh at the hip joint.

EVERY little while we read of some person who has stuck a rusty nail in his feet or some other portion of his person, and lock-jaw has resulted therefrom. All such wounds can be healed without any fatal consequences, following them. The remedy is simple: It is only to smoke such wound, or any wound, or bruises that are inflamed, with burning wood or woolen cloth. Twenty minutes in the smoke of wool will take pain out of the worst case of inflammation arising from such a wound.—Ex.

HYMNS OF THE ADVENT.—No. 6.

LO! HE COMES.

Lo! he comes with clouds descending;
Hark! the trump of God is blown;
And the archangel's voice attending,
Makes the high procession known.
Sons of Adam,
Rise and stand before your Lord.

Crowns and sceptres fall before him,
Kings and conquerors own his sway;
Haughtiest monarchs now adore him,
While they see his light'ning play.
How triumphant
Is the great Redeemer now!

Hear his voice in mighty thunder,
Sounding in majestic roar;
While its echo rends in sunder
Rock and mountains, sea and shore.
Hark! his accents
Through the wondrous depths resound.

Come, Lord Jesus, O come quickly,
Oft has prayed thy mourning bride;
Lo, he answers, "I come quickly!"
Who his coming may abide?
All who loved him,
All who longed to see this day.

Come, he saith, ye heirs of glory;
Come, ye purchased of my blood;
Claim the kingdom now before you;
Rise and fill the Mount of God;
Fixed forever,
Where the Lamb on Zion stands.

THOUGHTS ON MAN.

BY A BAPTIST.

As the following thoughts were put on paper in an ordinary correspondence with a friend who, like myself, had been educated according to the strictest rules of Orthodox teaching, which teaching had been exactly antipodal to the views now entertained by the writer, as herein advocated, there was no thought or design that they would ever appear in print; and it is only by the urgent solicitation of a friend that I have now consented for them thus to appear. The circumstances under which they were written, and the object had in view, will account for the apparent personal manner of address which frequently occurs.

Brother ——: As intimated to you some time since, I will commence a statement of some views I hold, about which you have formerly had some doubt as to their soundness. It is a subject on which I have bestowed more thought than on any other. Perhaps no one thing has tended as much to the examination as a class of funeral sermons, in which I have heard the idea made prominent that now, being made free from the clog of the body, the deceased were in a condition to make superior progress in knowledge and enjoyment beyond that which they could do in the body; which idea, to me, is unintelligible; for, that being true, wherein is the necessity or importance of the resurrection? And further, I have no more conception of man without life and body, after having both, life leaving and the body decaying, and he still in conscious existence, than I have of his existence previous to his creation, when the life was breathed into him.

But I must state the subject on which I propose to give my views, before giving the reasons for them; and as there are four points to be examined, I will state them in four propositions, or questions; viz:

1. Do the Scriptures teach that man originally, as he came from the hand of his Maker, possessed immortality?

2. As the term "death" is used in different senses in the Scriptures, how are we to determine its meaning in the penal clause of the law, as first given to man?

3. Do the Scriptures teach anything in regard to an intermediate state (that is, between death and the resurrection of man), and if so, what?

4. What is the teaching of the Scriptures as to the future state of the finally impenitent?

I am well aware that I am taking issue with a doctrine that has been in the world a little longer than man has been a sinner, and, as I believe, the prime cause of his sin. God said to man, "In the day thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die"; but the tempter said, "Ye shall not surely die." If God's declaration had been believed when he thus declared man's liability to death, or a mortal being, and the tempter disbelieved when he advanced the idea of man being immortal, or that he would not die, and man had acted in accord therewith, he would not have become a sinner. It was not the temptation that made man a sinner, but the yielding to it; for the temptation of Christ in the wilderness did not render him a sinner, from the fact that he did not yield to it.

1. Then, in reference to man's original condition. In Gen. 1: 29 we read—"And God said, Behold, I have given you every herb bearing seed, which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree in the which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; to you it shall be for meat." Is it even supposable that a life which was dependent on perishable food, was an immortal life? In Gen. 2: 9 we read—"And out of the ground made the Lord God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the eye and good for food; the tree of life also in the midst of the garden, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil." Now, if perishable food was not necessary to sustain life, why such an abundant supply, and so great a variety? It will be borne in mind that this transpired before man was a sinner. In the 16th verse of the same chapter we get the idea of law; consequently, the idea of accountability; and in the 17th verse the penalty for its violation, which is death. Now I believe the Scriptures to be a revelation from God, for the benefit of man; but how can he be benefitted by them unless they are upon the plane of the intelligence with which he is endowed? But is it intelligible to the human mind to pass sentence of death upon an immortal being? I am aware that those who advocate the doctrine of inherent immortality tell us that death, the penalty of law, does not mean the extinction of being, but the extinction of well-being. But I shall not stop to reply to that here, but shall use the term "death" to mean the extinction of conscious being; and under the next head shall attempt to prove that to be its true import: and if I succeed in that, it will be all the answer that will be needed.

In the last three verses of Gen. 3d chap., we read—"And the Lord God said, Behold, the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil; and now, lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live forever; therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the garden of Eden, to till the ground from whence he was taken. So he drove out the man; and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden cherubims, and a flaming sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life."

Here we have it as clearly stated as need be, that man was driven from the garden for the one cause only, to prevent his living forever in that condition; and life and death set over the one against the other, so that, if life means to live, then death does not mean to live, but to die. We can see the justice of God in this act, to say nothing of his love; for if he sinned as a mortal being, then it would not be just to punish him as an immortal being. But perhaps it will be said that I assume that he was a mortal being, when he sinned; to which I reply, that it is no assumption, for if the eating of the fruit of the tree of life would cause him to live forever, then it follows that not eating it he would not live forever; otherwise there was no importance in the act of preventing him from eating. But the tree of life was not destroyed, but only so hedged about that man in his fallen condition could not approach it; and it remained as a reminder of another tree of life for fallen man, which was promised in the seed of the woman that should bruise the serpent's (devil's) head; and for another purpose, which I shall notice in another place.

Now, is it not clear that the tree of life was designed to give man immortality, or to enable him to live forever? Was it not the perfect antidote to the natural tendency to decay and dissolution in man? and would not the eating its fruit have given man eternal life? (To be continued.)

PREREQUISITES TO TRUE DISCIPLESHIP.

WM. SHEPHERD.

"Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. For whosoever will save his life shall lose it; but whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's, the same shall save it. For what shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" Mark 8: 34–37.

It is a common saying among men, that religion costs nothing; that the gospel is as free as the air we breathe. This may be true in a certain sense, inasmuch as the blessings which the gospel communicates to man were purchased, so to speak, by the sufferings and death of Christ. Rom. 5: 18; 1 Pet. 1: 19. Though it be a "gift of God," and free (Rom. 6: 23), yet it requires, on the part of those who receive the precious jewel, certain conditions, which in the aggregate make it cost "all that a man hath," which is the testimony of the enemy himself (Job 2: 4); and which is certainly declared in the words of our text. Some people, if allowed the liberty, would ride a free horse to death, as the saying is. It seems to me that many have done so in reference to the gospel, not apprehending the character, manner and measure of its freeness. It appears to me that this class are described by our blessed Lord as those who undertake to build without first fairly looking at the matter, and counting the cost, whether they would be able to finish the tower or not. Luke 14: 28. This would seem to set forth the idea that religion costs something; yea, all that a man hath; and yet, had he the wealth of the wealthiest of earth, all combined, he could not purchase it. Acts 8: 20.

We have heard of men who made their boast that the gospel, or salvation, was free; that it never cost them anything. Poor souls, they never knew anything, we fear, of that fatness of soul which is the result of liberality. Prov. 11: 25. The religion of Jesus Christ is a free gift of God, yet it costs all a man may possess to purchase it, as it were. As it is likened unto "a hidden treasure," or "a pearl of great price," which a man found and sold all he had in order to secure it. Matt. 13: 44–46. This is one of those paradoxes in which Christianity abounds.

The conditions of discipleship, stated in our text, fully confirm the great truth taught in these parables,—the doctrine of self-denial and cross-bearing, which involves entire consecration to God, and all that we have and all that we are to his service. There must be a full and perfect sacrifice. The conditions are equivalent to what God requires in another place, in these words: "Son, give me thine heart." When this is complied with, everything else goes with it. "For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."

Self-denial is one of the most difficult lessons to learn and practically carry out, and one of the most important enjoined in the gospel. It comes in direct conflict with selfishness, the carnal mind, and with the natural dispositions of men. Men are naturally disposed to live for self. Yes, says one, this is the first law of nature—self-preservation. This we freely admit, but the promptings of the christian to preserve his own life may not spring from selfish motives, but from a desire to live that his life may be for the benefit of others, and to the glory of God. The sentiment of the christian's heart is, "When I cease to live for others, let me die." Jesus' life was one of constant labor, toil, and tender solicitude for the welfare of poor fallen humanity. The testimony concerning him in this respect is that "he went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil," etc. (Acts 10: 38). It is most especially in this department of his walk, in which he calls us in the text to follow him. Selfishness is one of the distinguishing characteristics of the last days. 2 Tim. 3: 2. It is obvious that men cannot be christians who are "lovers of their own selves"; yet they may have "a form of godliness" (v. 5); but having hearts governed and ruled by this selfish spirit, they cannot bring forth fruit unto righteousness. In a word, they cannot be saved because they are not Christ-like; and it follows as a legitimate conclusion, that which is not Christ-like cannot inherit the kingdom of God.

"Follow thou me." The way is certainly brought down to a "strait gate" and "narrow way" (Matt. 7: 13, 14), in order to follow in the gentle footsteps of the Master. It is an exclusive way, as are all God's ways compared with man's. We must not suppose it a trifling affair to follow Christ. Some have fancied this to be the case, until they have learned otherwise, and then have forsaken him. Like the nice young man, coming with flattering unction on his lips—"Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?" Was he not told to go and sell all that he possessed, and distribute it among the poor, as a preparatory step to following him? Matt. 19: 16–21. The way was too narrow for him, the gate too strait. He turned away sorrowful. Like the certain scribe who said, "Master, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest." But when our Lord illustrated his condition as inferior and still more uncertain as to where he would lay his sacred head, when night overtook him in his journey, than the foxes and the birds, it is altogether likely that this scribe's ardor to follow Christ very much cooled down, and he soon turned away, not willing to put up with such humble and uncertain fare as our blessed Lord experienced from day to day. Another of his disciples said unto him, I will go with you, only permit me to arrange my temporal matters, making ample provision for those I leave behind; and especially "suffer me first to go and bury my father. But Jesus said unto him, Follow me; and let the dead bury their dead." Matt. 8: 19, 22. It is more than likely that the way was so narrowed down in the estimation of this man, that though he strove to enter, yet was not able. Luke 13: 24.

There are four things we would briefly notice in the text:

1. Christ will have volunteers; no chain-gangs, none by compulsion, are to follow him. It is "whosoever will."

2. Then, in order to come of his own free will, he must divest himself of self; and as Christ did not seek to do his own will, but the will of him that sent him (John 5: 30), so we must come to him with this same sentiment in our hearts—"Not my will, but thine, O Lord, be done."

3. He must then "take up his cross"; not take it up, and put it down again, like we would throw on a coat and cast it off at pleasure; but feel willing to be nailed to it, as it were, and bear it daily until we become crucified unto the world, and the world unto us (Gal. 4: 14); even crucified, until we become so dead to the world that our lives may be hid with Christ in God, that when Christ who is our life shall appear, we may also appear with him in glory. Col. 3: 3, 4. The cross must be our constant companion, if we hope to keep crucified to the world. To take up the cross and to bear the cross are two different things. To simply take it up, and then when persecution conflicts, and trials come for the truth's sake, and we cast the cross aside in not defending that truth, we are not following Christ. In seeking to save our lives in this cowardly manner, we shall lose them. But if we cling to and bear the cross under these circumstances, being willing to lose our lives, if need be, we shall then save them unto eternal life in the kingdom of God.

Fully understanding these points with the brief exposition given, the subsequent portion of the text is easily apprehended, though it be of momentous import. One portion of Scripture often interprets another, as in this case. To follow Christ so as to claim discipleship, and secure his approbation now and in the last day, we must comply with his precepts; we must reduce the holy principles of his gospel to daily practice; we must carry out his lessons; we must be governed in our lives and conduct by those invariable rules and regulations, laid down in God's Word. We must richly imbibe his blessed spirit, and manifest it in our daily walk and conversation. We must endeavor to imitate him in that deep humility of heart (Matt. 9: 29) and that modest deportment which so signally adorned his life, and made him the object both of admiration and veneration of all the truly good. O may we so follow Christ, until we behold him coming in the ineffable splendors of eternal glory, to crown his waiting church with the imperishable and spotless robes of immortality. Amen.

PERVERSIONS AND DENIALS OF SCRIPTURE.

BY J. J. HOBBS.

1. It is a perversion of Scripture to affirm that when God created man he made a living and immortal soul within a body of dust, and that that same earth-compounded body was but the shell in which the true man lived.

The Mosaic account of man's creation says nothing of the kind. On the contrary, it clearly relates how God made man out of the dust of the ground, and by breathing into him the breath of life, the earth-formed man became a living soul or person.

2. It is a perversion of Scripture to affirm that it is this breath, or spirit of life, as possessed by man, that gives him preeminence over all creation besides, inas much as the very birds of the air and beasts of the field share this spirit of life in common with man. (See Gen. 7: 22, etc.) So also, according to Moses, the beasts of the earth and the fowls of the air possess soul as well as man. (See Gen. 1: 20, and 30, margin).

Paul also affirms man to be "of the earth earthy," in contrast with that which is spiritual (see 1 Cor. 15: 44, etc); and not Paul only, but throughout the Scriptures, man is regarded as a physical organization, mortal and perishable as the grass of the field, fleeting as a shadow that continueth not.

3. It is a perversion of Scripture to assert that because man is said to have been made in the image of his Maker, he is therefore immortal as his Maker. Scripture no more predicates immortality of man in his present condition than it does omniscience or omnipotence. Immortality is said to pertain to God alone, and hereafter to be bestowed on some who will be raised out of their graves. Bible immortality for man is made to pertain to the raised body, and is never said to be an attribute of the soul as distinct from the body.

4. It is not merely a perversion of Scripture to affirm that man is or has a never dying soul, or that he must live for ever; it is a flat contradiction of the plainest Scripture statements. It was Satan who first dared to assert that man should not surely die, when God had said he should. Again and again do we read, "the soul that sinneth it shall die." (Ezek. 17 and 33.)

5. It is a perversion of Scripture to say that because death is sometimes applied to man in his present moral or judicial condition before God, therefore the death threatened as the wages of sin is also a condition of living existence. Death as the wages of sin is explained by God himself when he first declared—"Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Also by the apostle Paul, in the epistle to the Romans, wherein he shows it to be the consummation of his moral condition, and as much a physical death as that our Lord experienced. (See Rom. 5: 6, 7, and 8).

It is a fearful perversion of Scripture to affirm that when God threatened death to Adam he meant by it not destruction of his being, but the endurance of unheard-of suffering in hell.

6. It is a denial of Scripture to affirm that the threatened destruction of sinners does not mean as literal a destruction of their physical being as that experienced by those destroyed by the flood, the inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah, or those on whom the Tower of Siloam fell. Our Lord tells us the destruction will be as real and absolute as theirs.

7. It is a denial of Scripture to assert that the substitutional sufferings of Christ were not so much of a physical nature as of soul suffering at the hands of his Father before bowing his head in death. However terrible the soul suffering might have been, the very essential element of the atonement consisted in death itself. Without the shedding of blood there could be no remission of sin. He gave his "flesh,"—"himself,"—"poured out his soul unto death,"—"gave his life," as a ransom for many. "We are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all."

8. It is a denial of Scripture to assert that when Christ comes again he will not burn up the wicked like chaff or stubble. To affirm that he will keep them alive for ever in the burning, is to deny the general teaching of the whole Bible. The Scriptures everywhere teach that "the Lord preserveth them that love him, but all the wicked he will destroy." Like the morning cloud and early dew will they pass away, and "be as though they had not been."

9. It is a denial of Scripture to assert that because the fire is said to be unquenchable, and that the worm dieth not, therefore the fire will not consume, or that the sinners will live on as well as the worm. God says, sinners shall be consumed, and that they shall die. To say they shall not is to make God a liar.

10. It is a denial of Scripture to affirm that after the first death the ungodly are to be raised in order that they should be cast into the lake of fire to experience a second life there; on the contrary, their doom is to be a "second death." So say the Scriptures.

11. It is a perversion of Scripture to accept parables and scenic representations in a literal sense, when by so doing they are made to contradict the obviously literal and most distinct utterances of divine inspiration. Parables, symbols, and allegorical representations can only be understood in the light of the more apparent Scripture teaching.

12. It is doing violence to Scripture to set a few select texts against the general teaching of the whole Bible; the fairer way is rather to get an acquaintance with the teaching in its completeness, and then to read the exceptional texts in the light of all the rest.

13. It is a perversion of Scripture to insist upon attaching the idea of absolute endlessness to the terms "ever," and "ever and ever," wherever found, when it is apparent enough they have not this fixed and only meaning. Scholars know full well that the Greek original does not warrant any such fixed meaning. The import of such terms is to be sought either in the context or elsewhere in Scripture.

14. It is a denial of Scripture that the character of God is altogether unintelligible to the human understanding; that the attributes of love, mercy, justice, and righteousness are different in nature to all that men understand by such terms. It is a perversion of Scripture to deny that what in man would be monstrously unjust would not be equally so in God.

16. It is a denial of Scripture to assert that God's dealings are not to be judged of by any human tribunal. God himself appeals to man and challenges his judgment of his doings. Again and again does he say, "Are not my ways equal?" etc. Ezek. 18 and 33. If the popular belief concerning the doom of the lost be true, it is utterly impossible for any human judgment to pronounce God's ways to be equal. Humanity recoils in horror at such ways.

Friend, consider the things you have been reading. Do not pretend to accept as a part of your creed that which to believe would be to madden. Do not be misled by the apparent meaning of two or three misunderstood texts, when these texts, as usually interpreted, prove subversive of the plainest Bible truths. Do not accept for doctrines the commandments of men. "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good."

THE GREAT DAY OF THE LORD.

W. J. BOSTWICK.

"Multitudes, multitudes, in the valley of decision; for the day of the Lord is near in the valley of decision."—JOEL 3: 14.

He that sitteth in the council chamber of the Most High, out of the immeasurable depths of his own wisdom, hath set the time, and appointed the day, in which to put an end to sin, and bring in everlasting righteousness. He has set the limits of man's disobedience and iniquity, and has said, "thus far shalt thou go and no farther." But, with a love that is as boundless as the universe, he looks upon man in all his guilt, in all his filthiness, in all his wretchedness, in all his wickedness; and determines in his compassionate heart to give him space to repent and return, and thus escape the fiery judgments of that great day of his indignation, which is surely coming upon all the world. With this in view, through his holy prophets and apostles, he has graciously let man into the secret of the determinations of his will, and set before him, in living pictures, the character of that day, in which all who would not have him to reign over them, should be partakers of his wrath.

And now, while we stand upon the threshold of that great and awful day, and hear the rustle of its coming in the not distant future, let us examine into the character of the day of the Lord, so graphically set before us by the prophets and apostles, and then look upon the condition that the world and church should be in just before its coming, and then examine the state of our own heart toward God, and decide quickly, whether we shall be partakers of its judgments, or whether we shall be ready to enter into the marriage supper of the Lamb, and sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the world to come.

ITS CHARACTER.

Isaiah says, it will be a day in which "The Lord will come with fire, and with his chariots like a whirlwind, to render his anger with fury, and his rebuke with flames of fire." A day in which "all the hosts of heaven shall be dissolved, and the heavens shall be rolled together like a scroll, and all their hosts shall fall down, as the leaf falleth off from the vine, and as a falling fig from the fig tree." A day in which the Lord will visit the earth "with thunder, and with earthquake, and with great noise, with storm and tempest, and the flames of devouring fire." A day in which "the earth is utterly broken down, the earth is clean dissolved, the earth is moved exceedingly." A day in which "the earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard, and shall be removed like a cottage, and the transgression thereof shall be heavy upon it, and it shall fall and not rise again." A day in which men "shall go into the holes of the rocks, and into the caves of the earth, for fear of the Lord, and for the glory of his majesty."

Jeremiah says, it will be a day in which "evil shall go forth from nation to nation, and a great whirlwind shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth." A day in which "the slain of the Lord shall be from one end of the earth even unto the other end of the earth; they shall not be lamented, neither gathered, nor buried; they shall be dung upon the ground." "Alas! for that day is great so that none is like it."

Joel says, it will be a day of "darkness and gloominess, a day of clouds and thick darkness." A day in which "the earth shall quake, the heavens shall tremble, the sun and the moon shall be dark, and the stars shall withdraw their shining." A day that is "great and terrible."

Zephaniah says, it will be a "day of wrath, a day of trouble and distress, a day of wasteness and desolation, a day of darkness and gloominess, a day of clouds and thick darkness, a day of trumpet and alarm against the fenced cities, and against the high towers." A day in which the Lord will "bring distress upon men, that they shall walk like blind men, because they have sinned against the Lord, and their blood shall be poured out like dust, and their flesh like the dung."

Haggai says, it will be a day in which the Lord will arise and "shake the heavens, and the earth, and the sea, and the dry land," and will "shake all nations, and the Desire of all nations shall come."

Malachi says, it will be a day "that shall burn as an oven, and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly shall be as stubble, and the day that cometh shall burn them up, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch."

Ezekiel says, it will be a day in which, because of the tidings of its coming "every heart shall melt, and all hands shall be feeble, and every spirit shall faint, and all knees shall be weak as water."

Our Lord says, it will be a day in which there "shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be."

St. Peter says, it will be a day "in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up."

St. Paul says, it will be a day in which "the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ."

St. John, the revelator, says, it will be a day in which "the stars of heaven shall fall unto the earth, even as a fig tree casteth her untimely fruit when she is shaken of a mighty wind, and the heavens shall depart as a scroll when it is rolled together."

Thus we have set before us the character of the great day of the Lord. And oh, what a day! Who can withstand it? Who is pure enough? Who is righteous enough? Who is holy enough to pass through its fires unscathed? Surely, not he who sows to the flesh. Surely, not he who loves the wages of sin better than the wages of righteousness. Surely, not he who walks after his own lusts, not he who despises government, nor he who is self-willed, nor he who has eyes full of adultery, nor he who labors to bring down virtue to the dust, and hoist up uncleanness in its place. But let us examine into the condition the world should be in just prior to its coming.

THE WORLD.

When our Lord was upon the earth, he gave his disciples a minute description of the signs which should precede his coming again to judgment, from that time down to the very portals of that great day. He tells them that "many shall come in my name, and shall deceive many;" that they shall hear of "wars and rumors of wars;" that "nation shall rise against nation;" that there shall be "famines, pestilences and earthquakes in divers places;" that "false prophets shall arise, and shall deceive many;" that "this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations;" and that "there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars, and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity, the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming upon the earth;" thus taking them over the many intervening years of time, and bringing them down to the very doors, and placing their feet upon the very threshold of that great and awful day, when all the nations of the earth shall be dashed together and broken, like a potter's vessel, and showed them his coming again in all his glory.

We, who have been permitted to live in these momentous times, can look back over these eighteen hundred and seventy-six years, and with the light of historical facts to guide us, can see how faithfully the prophecy of our Lord has been fulfilled in every particular, and thus know just where we stand in the calendar of prophetic events. We know that false christs have arisen and deceived many. We know there have been wars and rumors of wars, and that nation has risen against nation, and many have fallen. We know that there have been great famines, pestilences and earthquakes. We also know that the gospel has been preached unto all nations for a witness against their wickedness, and can point to the very day and hour when the signs occurred in the sun, moon and stars; and this brings us down to that momentous period of time characterized by distress, perplexity, fear and trembling, darkness and gloominess, clouds and thick darkness, trumpet and alarm.

We live in a time filled with calamity to all nations and peoples. Unusual events of a startling nature are taking place in all quarters of the globe, and the world is in that condition of unrest, disquietness and uneasiness, which indicate the working of a multitude of antagonistic elements, which will, by their action, sooner or later, heave upon mankind a mountain of woes. The very air is filled with rumor and forebodings of coming trouble, and men's hearts are already beginning to fail them for fear, because of the things that are coming upon the earth. The whole mass of society, political, social and religious, is beginning to heave, and surge, and tremble, caused by the ebullition of the bitter waters beneath, produced by the fire, kindled by the pouring out of the last vials of God's wrath.

The financial affairs of the leading governments of the world are just now in that peculiar condition which may well be termed chaotic. The most able financiers are puzzled to know what is the matter, and the great silver problem, the solution of which is just now occupying their minds to the exclusion of nearly everything else, produces an uneasiness which they are unable to conceal, and all stand aghast at its magnitude, and the seeming impossibility of escape from what looms up in the near future as universal bankruptcy. The capitalist gathers his gold and bonds around him, locks up his treasure in his great iron safe, and sits down and awaits with uneasiness the coming of the crash with the hope that he may pass through unscathed. The workingman looks upon his thinly clad and poorly fed little ones as they gather, with hungry looks, around the scant home-board, and with anxious brow, and despairing eye, gazes into the gloomy future, thick with the clouds of coming distress, as if to find some ray of light to build his waning hopes upon.

"Hard times" is the cry that is going up from every hamlet, village, town and city of our broad and productive land, while its echo comes borne back upon every breeze that floats from the shores of the old world. Great armies of men are sitting down in idleness in all the states of America and Europe, and the great manufactories and collieries, where once was heard the cheery sound of hammer, pick and saw, and the busy hum of machinery, now stand with closed doors and darkened windows, and with the stillness of death within. Idleness breeds crime, and just now is to be seen large numbers of these men, driven to desperation by the gaunt presence of the wolf at the door, tramping throughout the land, and up and down the streets of our large cities, crying, in frenzied tones, "bread or blood." A bitter enmity has sprung up between capital and labor, which is becoming more malignant in its character, and the line of separation more clearly defined, as each turn is given the screw of selfishness, and the rich become richer, and the poor poorer. On all sides can be seen men gathering themselves into innumerable secret societies, evidently for the purpose of self-protection. No one can tell what the future will bring forth, yet all feel that it will be one filled with the greatest peril to their individual interests.

AFRAID OF OUR LORD'S RETURN.

What! a brother afraid of a brother's return? And of such a brother! One so kind in heart and manner as Jesus! Oh, think of him, and see how unreasonable, how improper, that you should be distressed with tidings of his approach. I am afraid you have forgotten what sort of a being it is whose coming is now announced. Have you pictured him a sprite, or an unrealizable Mightiness? Is he to you an inconceivable, undefinable existence? Dismiss these nightmare dreams! Avaunt, ye unreal and distressing conceptions! I will show you the coming Jesus. He is all that he was when on earth, excepting mortality and ignominy. When here he was the sympathetic and affectionate Christ. To him the mothers crowded with their babes. The common people hung on his words. He inspired all the unprejudiced with trust and love. Jesus! the word spake a meek, approachable, loveable, helpful kinsman to the men in Israel who found in him the Christ of God's holy promise. Since then he has passed through death and come out again into life by way of resurrection. Is he now changed? Yes, and no. Yes, as regards his life; for he is now "alive for evermore." Yes, in physical nature; for he is now capable of invisibility, and he is invested with a glory in possession of which he shines as the sun at noonday. But no, if you inquire as to his affectional and mental nature. All the dignity with which he is crowned does not change him in heart. He is as gentle and merciful as ever.

Exaltation and regal appearance have not made him any less the Jesus that men once knew. And can you have any objection to his return, whose path was ever one of blessing? The negro feeling that speaks of "hugging him," although conventionally improper and apparently irreverent, is after all much more the right kind of feeling in respect to the Savior than that which is in dread of him and that regards him with suspicion and fear. Read the Gospels, and become acquainted with Jesus as therein revealed, and with a mind and person submitted to him as the redeeming and lordly brother of the divine family, of which by grace you are a member, you will not be frighted at his return, but will welcome him with "Come! and come quickly!"

It argues an ignorant or guilty state of mind to be alarmed at the announcement, "He cometh!" Decide which it is in your own case. If ignorance, become better acquainted with him; so shall your fears subside. If guilt, confess and forsake your sins, and rest more perfectly in the character of Jesus as that of the atoning and forgiving Savior. Take advice, and cease today henceforward to be afraid of the return of earth's true hope, of her only Regenerator. Mark it! Jesus the Christ is not feared by such as know him and keep his commandments. May you be able to say daily, "That's me!"—The Bible Echo.

READY.

"And while they went to buy, the Bridegroom came; and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage; and the door was shut." Matt. 25 : 10.

The true church of Christ is evidently represented by the virgins, who were ready for the marriage, which represents the union and presence of Christ with his church.

To be ready for any position, work, or association, is to be prepared for such work or association so as to reap the greatest possible good from it. An army is not ready for battle until it is prepared to gain a victory. A man is not ready to fill an office until he can do it honorably. We are never ready to associate with friends until we are prepared to make the association happyfying and beneficial.

So it is with the professed followers of Christ; they are not ready to labor for him until they are prepared to make that labor profitable to themselves and others; and they are not prepared to be acquitted by the Judge until their innocence and faithfulness can be approved by him; neither are we ready for the marriage of the Lamb until we are prepared for the divine and eternal union with him in his kingdom. That union cannot exist only as we have his Spirit and nature; our will completely harmonizing with his will. To be ready for the Marriage is to be in this condition.

None are ready for the kingdom of God in the absolute sense until the last act of probationary life is done; for God will not give his people one trial or hour of training which is not needed for their full development and perfection. A scholar cannot graduate, no matter how perfect his scholarship, until he has mastered the last problem in the regular course between the freshman and the graduate. So it is in the christian life. The last lesson in the revealed course must be learned, the last step in the gospel drill must be taken, the last position appointed by the Commander must be occupied, before the divine and eternal benediction can be received.

In personal experience none can prepare to die until dying grace is given, which is only when death approaches. God will not give us grace to preach where we have no opportunity to preach; but he helps us do what we have the opportunity to do. We cannot be ready to go over a bridge until we come to it. We may have to travel four miles before we reach it, but the last step must be taken before we are ready to pass over it.

No people could have an experience of readiness for the first advent of Christ, only those who lived at the time he came; for God never gave grace to any others to prepare to accept him personally as the Messiah. It has never been possible for any family, excepting Noah's, to prepare for a flood; and none, excepting Lot's, to prepare for God's fiery judgments upon their cities.

God never fails to furnish his people with all that is needed to assist them to be ready for every duty required of them, and for every event lying in their pathway; and this grace is always offered seasonably, and never out of season.

To be ready for the coming of the Bridegroom, is to be ready for translation. The church of God will never but once in her history be required to prepare for translation; and as this will be an entirely different event from any other, she will need special grace and assistance suited to this work.

There is essential order in christian work, as much as in building a house. No man would attempt to paint his house until near its completion. This is necessarily about the last in its preparation. The best of christians do not prepare to die until death approaches; and those acts of preparation are the last in their experience.

There is a proper finishing work in every christian life, which is not profitable or right at an earlier period. The most holy have duties to do when they are notified that their probation is about to end which they never had before. The farmer leaves his field, and the mechanic his shop; the mind is withdrawn from worldly business; friends must receive his last counsel and warning; his worldly cares and interests, which were right before, now cease; the last earthly tie is broken as the last shade of preparation for his exit is experienced.

This is the normal way by which a christian is prepared to end his pilgrim life. But the church of the last generation, which will remain in active life until the Bridegroom comes, must prepare for the ending of this life under very different circumstances. The end will come to them in the midst of life and health, while they will be in the "field" and "mill" at their usual labor. They will have no premonitions, as their fathers had, by the warnings of sickness or age, that their last acts of loyalty to Christ are now demanded. The approach of death will not do the last work of weaning them from the cares and influences of the world, and thus enable them to be fully ready to leave it. Therefore preparation for translation must be made under different circumstances, and will require different means of grace to accomplish the same results. To supply that deficiency the gospel of the kingdom is given, designed to give the necessary premonitions of the approaching end, and thus inspire the church to do her last preparatory work, and stand in readiness, like a dying man, for the end of a life of trial.

Every message of sacred truth is designed for some purpose connected with the salvation of men, and the proof is clear that the gospel of the kingdom was designed to be preached to the last generation, to prepare a people for the coming of the Bridegroom. If God saw it necessary to give such a message, let us be very careful to teach its vital importance for such a purpose. A man will prepare for that which he truly expects, and will never prepare for that which he does not expect; consequently, to cause a man to make ready to meet the Bridegroom, he must be made to believe that he is about to meet him.

The virgins took their lamps to meet the Bridegroom because they expected he was immediately coming. Christ clearly taught that a want of real expectation of his coming would cause a fatal unreadiness for the event, when he said, "And take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be over-charged with surfeiting and drunkenness and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares; for as a snare shall it come on all them [who are not aware that it is coming] that dwell on the face of the whole earth." Luke 21 : 34, 35. The great idea of the passage is that if Christ comes when we are not aware that he is coming, we shall be ensnared; that is, we shall not be ready to meet him.

Therefore, let all the servants of Christ understand the infinite importance of publishing to the people the clear and unmistakable signs of the Bridegroom's approach, that all who will heed the warning may be prepared for the glorious nuptials.

TRACTS.

We believe that the importance of scattering tracts gratuitously, which are filled with condensed, important present truth is very little understood. Pure gospel truth is very little circulated among the people now, and it has become so unpopular that but few men of ability will consent to lose caste by preaching it; consequently there is a famine in the land of hearing the Word of the Lord. The people have heaped to themselves teachers who teach fables, prophesying falsely of good times coming, while the sword of the Lord is unsheathed and ready to execute foretold judgments.

The Lord is calling loudly to his people to publish his sacred truth, given specifically for the present emergency, the present perilous condition of society. Never was there such a battle fought between truth and error as at the present time. Angels gaze with untold interest to see the hated friends of Jesus struggling against the rich, learned and mighty of earth, led on by Satan to defame and make powerless the glorious truths now shining like a thousand suns from the Holy Book. The invisible angel hands are ready to uphold the weary, fainting servants of Christ, as they, with short and thinned ranks make their last terrible charges upon the closed, and long lines of a mighty foe, with inspired tongues, pens, and presses made potent by the almighty power of God.

The last and most sublimely important message ever sent by God to men is now due to the world, and must be proclaimed. The faithful who are ready to suffer the loss of all things for Jesus' sake in this wonderful work are few, but still the awful necessity increases of warning the perishing as the hour of doom approaches; and as inspired tongues are few which will sound the judgment warning, the pen and press must be brought into the front rank of the warring hosts of Immanuel, and silently but effectually dismantle the enemies forts of popular worship and satanic error.

These little silent tracts are like torpedoes under the iron-clad fleets. Send them out into the maddened waters, filled with Jehovah's explosive of truth vitalized by divine power, and wonderful results will follow. Brethren, you cannot all preach and write, but you can send your dimes and dollars to the tract fund, and so do your part of the God appointed work. The storm cloud gathers fast in the East, and the nearing war thunders tell you that the last hour of this holy work approacheth. Arouse, ye slumbering ones, and gird you for the conflict! The last hour for making deposits in Heaven's bank has come. Hasten to put some of your treasures beyond the reach of coming flood and flame.

Send the messengers of life to the perishing, scatter the sunbeams of light before they are forever withdrawn. Many, hastening over the precipice of eternal death have been saved by these little messengers of mercy. Send them to the wrecked mariners who have praying mothers and an interceding Savior. Send them to the wretched inebriate for whom Christ died. Scatter them like the autumn leaves. Some proud Pharisee may see his ragged righteousness, and seek of Christ the wedding garment. Cast your bread upon the waters, for you shall gather a rich harvest at the end.

NOW READY---A NEW BOOK.

The book entitled, "Mormonism Examined and Refuted," is now ready for delivery. It is a 12 mo. work, of 184 pp. Owing to the increase of its size, it will be sold at 50 cts. per copy hereafter. Send orders to the Crisis Office, or to Wm. Sheldon, Brodhead, Wis.

AG'T.

THE WAR PROSPECT.

The "Eastern war" looks more and more threatening. There are some alarming features now indicated. Strong efforts have been made by England, assisted by other nations, to stop the Turkish war. Various plans have been proposed, but thus far they have all failed; and their prospect of success seems very small at present. Of course, we cannot tell what a day will bring forth in this fast age.

The outrages committed on innocent people, by the Turks, have left them without sympathy from other nations. When the Turks are aroused against a people, they show no mercy, especially those who are opposed to Mohammedanism. As the present war is in the main a religious one, it may be expected, if it is not soon brought to an end, that the whole Mohammedan body in Europe and Asia will commence an indiscriminate slaughter of Christians. They have already given a few samples of their bloody work since the commencement of the present war in Europe. Should there be a general uprising of the Mohammedan power, they would make a terrible slaughter in a short period. This is what the English government fears, if it does anything to provoke the Turks at the present time; but the people are becoming aroused to such a degree, that the government will soon have to give way before the pressure, and cease to protect the Mohammedans while committing their horrid butcheries of harmless people.

It is a fact of interest, that the Christians, so called, against whom the Mohammedans are warring, support the Greek church, which is the same as the Roman Catholic, excepting it does not accept the Pope of Rome as its head. Hence the war is really between the Mohammedan and Catholic churches. The first great slaughter may be expected to come on the Catholics, and then may follow the destruction of the Mohammedan power, when Jerusalem will cease to be trodden down by the Gentiles, and Jesus will appear in all his glory, to set up his kingdom in righteousness.

The following shows the present aspect of things:

London, Sept 11. The Times' editorial on the Eastern question says the temper of Europe is swiftly undergoing a menacing change. More countries than Russia might easily pass beyond the control of statesmen. The very danger of which Earl Derby warned Turkey threatens to become a reality. He said, with startling force, that a renewal of the outrages would be more disastrous to the Porte than the loss of a battle. If the statements regarding the atrocities in Servia prove true, it may matter little whether they should afterward prove exaggerations. The Russian people seem approaching a state of popular excitement when even a false report will make peace an impossibility.

Every day of warfare adds to the likelihood that the strife may overflow its present limits. There are diplomatic signs which might warn Turkey's rulers how narrow is the foothold on which they must pick their way. They will find it less easy than it has been in former times to keep Turkey safe by exciting the jealousies of rival powers. If they display their wonted astuteness they will seize any expedient that offers a chance of peace.

ENGLAND'S ATTITUDE ON THE TURKISH QUESTION.—According to the London correspondent of the Liverpool Mercury, the English Government is hampered, in its treatment of the war in Turkey, by the fear of a Mussulman uprising, which would be likely to extend to India and seriously endanger British rule there. The correspondent remarks:

"What we have most to fear is a general Mussulman rising throughout Turkey—a rising which would be accompanied by the perpetration of horrors of a kind like those at Batak, but on a far larger scale. The well-informed correspondent of the Daily News believes that such a rising is imminent. Should it take place, Europe will see such a war of races and creeds as has not been seen for many a century. Nor can we be sure that it will be confined to Europe. The followers of the Prophet hang together, and in India there are millions of Mohammedans who would be ready to join in any fanatical outbreak against the Christians, against us and our rule—that is, if their co-religionists on the Bosphorus gave them the mot d'ordre. It is this, far more than the fear that Russia will be able to impede her approaches to India, which makes English statesmen so slow to renounce the old tradition of their Foreign Office that the integrity of Turkey must be preserved."

M. G.

"MORMONISM EXAMINED" is the title of a new work, by Bro. Wm. Sheldon, Brodhead, Wis., which every Mormon should read; and also every one who wishes to be prepared to show that Joseph Smith was not an inspired man, as claimed by the Mormons, and that the Book of Mormon is no more an inspired book than Robinson Crusoe, or Don Quixote. These facts are made to appear very clearly in "Mormonism Examined."

M. G.

"THE GREEN FLAG."—A careful observer says: "Europe to-day seems verging upon another holy war." When the Mohammedan chief flings "the green flag" to the breeze, then every true Moslem is bound to follow him to the death. Death in such a cause would be counted by them as a great blessing; and, according to their belief, would insure them an immediate entrance to the elysian fields of paradise.

M. G.

CALIPH AND SULTAN.—Both of these terms are applied to the head of the Mohammedan power. Caliph is the oldest term, and signifies a successor to Mahomet. Caliph is from the Arabic word khalifa, which means to succeed. It is the term formerly used to denote the one who has the highest spiritual authority among the Mohammedans, but the word Sultan is now used to signify the same thing.

THE TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, held at its rooms, 144 Hanover Street, Boston, on the 5th of September, 1876, it was voted that the Society make diligent effort to raise the sum of Two Thousand Dollars for the Tract Fund. This is one of the most important departments of our field of labor, and the Society intend to make more earnest efforts than ever before to publish the soul-stirring message of Christ's speedy second advent, and the precious truths connected therewith. To this end the Society solicits the aid of its friends and sympathizers, and hopes that donations to this object may be prompt, liberal, and hearty.

C. E. BARNES, Sec. Adv. Chris. Pub. Society.

Remittances should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass., or they may be enclosed with remittances to the Crisis Office.

FROM BRO. T. G. GREEN.

TO THE A. A. M. SOCIETY.

Dear Brn.:—Since my last I have been called to undergo severe trials. My family have had chills and fever, but are up again, thank the Lord, and I am at my post, where I hope to be found when the Master shall appear.

Our cause was never so strong in Florida as now, nor the people so much interested in the glorious message we hold. All are attentive hearers, and strong men are made to tremble at the notes of warning to this sin cursed world.

It was published by some one that the Methodist elder would expose Adventism at Falling Creek, on the fourth Sunday in July. I went to hear him, and a goodly number of the brethren were present, thus showing that we were willing to be enlightened. When he saw us he changed his base of operation, and said he was not going to attack other denominations; yet it is well known that he threatened to do so at that time. The result is a glorious victory for us without an effort on our part. Praise the Lord! I began a series of meetings at Oak Grove, Columbia County, on Thursday, the 27th of July, with the expectation of getting Brn. Matton, of Ga., and R. C. Gillen of Bradford Co., to help me; but I was disappointed; so the burden fell on me. Two days before the meeting I was taken with chills and fever. I asked God to give me strength to attend this meeting, and I never had another chill. I began quite weak and feeble, but increased in strength to the close. The result was, two have been reclaimed, three baptized, two signed the covenant, and seven are waiting to be baptized. Of this number one is my nephew and two my daughters.

O how I rejoice to see young men and women come over on the Lord's side, especially those of my own household. God grant that when the Lord comes my family may be found an unbroken circle.

At this meeting I met with the faithful old pilgrim, Bro. G. W. Batre. He is seventy-three or four years old. He is filled with the Spirit, and says he is not willing for his name to be on the superannuated list yet, and hopes to be able to proclaim the glorious gospel of Jesus till the Lord comes. But he is in delicate health, and must soon return to dust unless the Lord comes quickly. So may it be.

Dear Brn., I need your help. The cause you hold dear, requires your greatest effort. Great responsibility is on us. God will require the talents entrusted to us. Let us double our efforts to save sinners before it is too late. And whatever our condition, let every one do something for the cause.

Pray for me and my family, while I am absent. God grant them grace to comfort them in distress, that they may not murmur or complain at their lot, and enable them to bear up under the heaviest burdens.

I regret that I was not able to attend Springfield and Alton Bay campmeetings, but I could not raise the funds to pay expenses.

Suwanne Shoals.

ONE remark I cannot help making: the doctrine of the resurrection appears to have been thought of more consequence among the primitive christians than it is now. How is this? The apostles were continually insisting on it, and exciting the followers of God to diligence, obedience, and cheerfulness through it. And their successors in the present day seldom mention it. There is not a doctrine in the gospel on which more stress is laid, and there is not a doctrine in the present system of preaching which is treated with more neglect.—Adam Clarke.

CURRENT EVENTS.

Whatever may be the result of the present war between Servia and Turkey, one thing is clear, that Russia is becoming inflamed with a state of intense hostility against Turkey, which renders a general European war imminent. A newspaper correspondent in Russia writes:—"The sympathy of Russia with the Servians against Turkey is daily becoming more intense. In St. Petersburg there is not a manufactory, nor an office, nor a private house where appeals have not been left soliciting aid for the insurgents. Everywhere the workmen have given sums, which shows the genuineness of their enthusiasm. The subscriptions amount already to six million roubles. The priests are everywhere preaching against the "accursed infidel," the Turk, and gathering money from the excited peasantry to assist their Sclavonic fellow-countrymen in Servia. Hundreds of Russian ladies have gone to nurse the Servian wounded; and hundreds of Russian officers have joined the Servian army. Wagon loads of material for the wounded have been sent. The Pansclavonic movement has now become so popular that the fever has infected all classes. It has spread itself throughout the whole empire, and every day sees some fresh manifestation of it.

The accounts of the Turkish atrocities in Bulgaria which appear in the London newspapers are translated as soon as they reach Russia, and on being circulated among the masses create a feeling of indignation compared with which that in England is commonplace and tame. The army, which has been hankering after something to do since that of Germany achieved such splendid success in 1870, watches with eager interest a contest in which its honor is concerned. If the Servians are conquered by the superior forces of the Turk, the Russian army will naturally become incensed at the discomfiture of its Sclavonic co-religionists, and will demand to be led against the Turks. The Czar, like Prince Milan, will then have to choose between abdication and war. It will be in vain that he will tell the people that the country cannot afford a war. Russia will go to war with the same reckless disregard of the consequences that the Servians have lately done. The fact cannot be denied that, in spite of pacific assurances of the Czar, Russia seems drifting into a war with Turkey."

The Morning Post remarks that public feeling in Russia is undergoing a development that may lead to strange results. We find the contingency of an alliance between Austria, Germany, and England being considered, as well as a counter-alliance between Russia and France. At present it is impossible even to guess at what may flow from this development of Russian sentiment, but that it is genuine and intense there is every reason to believe, and if it grows instead of diminishing, it may become uncontrollable and menacing to the peace of Europe.—The Christian Herald.

TEARFUL SOWING, BUT JOYOUS REAPING.

R. P. ELDREDGE.

Are you sowing in tears, dear laborers in Christ's vineyard? He that soweth in tears shall reap in joy. Your time of sowing and weeping will be of short duration; but not so with your joy; for that shall have no end. Be of good cheer, faithful soldiers of Jesus, being assured the seed you sow is of the good—the right kind; for the Word of truth tells us, "He that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." Step bravely forward, then, ye laborers for God and his cause, doing good service for the Master. Keep on sowing day by day, and may the seed you sow take deep root, and yield its rich fruit in great abundance. "He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him."

Yes, dear laboring ones, though you may now sow amid tears, and find many trials and much opposition; yet your soul may still possess peace, sweet peace, flowing like a river; a joy deep and lasting, growing wider and yet wider; also a lasting faith, rising higher and higher, as if mounting on eagles' wings. Singing will at times take the place of weeping, and the beautiful song will burst forth from your hearts, while you sing the soul-cheering and soul-inspiring lines,

"Its coming, coming nearer,
The lovely land unseen;
Its shores are growing brighter,
Though a mist lies now between."

With what life, what joy is the christian inspired, when he thinks of his heavenly home, his everlasting treasure; the prize which he is to obtain at the end of the race.

If a preacher, how great, how deep the interest he feels for the unconverted. And while he tells the sinner that the "wages of sin is death;" with what love and pity does he urge them to seek now the pearl of great price. If a private christian, how heavenly his conversation and deportment. It is the christian's privilege to live in Christ.

Take courage, my brother, my sister, for soon, perhaps sooner than you expect, the Lord of the harvest will come to gather home his sheaves. What a glorious day will that be for you, dear, weeping, and toiling ones! Oh, what tongue can describe the joys that are in store for you? The Word says, "They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars forever and ever."

How sweet, how precious are such promises to God's laboring children. When, "persecuted for righteousness' sake," ye ye need not fear, for greater is he that is for you, than they that are against you. And how sweet the whisperings of Jesus, saying unto you, "Lo, I am with you alway." When Paul and Silas were cast into the inner prison, with their feet made fast in the stocks, even then they sang praises unto God, who sent an angel and delivered them. God's power is the same to-day. He can do wonders for his children, if they will but trust in him. If the Son of God will walk with us, we are safe; even though we are called to walk through the fire. Earthly friends might leave us, but not so with the blessed Jesus. He will never leave nor forsake us.

Faithful watchman upon Zion's walls, toil on a little longer, for your toiling and weeping is only for a season. "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." Joyful morning! happy day! How many weeping and weary ones are waiting for that glorious morning to dawn! But that long hoped for, long looked for morning will surely come, for that "same Jesus" who went away is coming again, coming in "power and great glory." When he came before, he came to purchase; now he is coming to possess. Yes, he is coming to claim the purchase of his death. To gather home all his faithful children. Oh, blessed thought; that the righteous are to dwell with him in his kingdom, which is to be established on the new earth. Lift up your heads, ye weeping ones, for your redemption draweth nigh.

Oh what a day will that be, when God and a world are brought face to face; and the doom of eternity is pending. Then the righteous, known to the Shepherd of the sheep by many a testimonial, will be called to the King's right hand, and the pledge of the kingdom given before the world, with whom they have lived, and among whom they wept, toiled, and suffered. How blessed, how joyful, will be that final "Well done." But awful in the extreme must that day be to those who will hear the dreadful sentence, "Depart, for I know ye not." Haste, dear sinner, to Christ. Cry for mercy ere mercy's door is closed forever. Come, make your peace with God, that unto you it may be said, "Come, ye blessed. The Lord help you to make the wise choice before it is too late.

When Jesus comes there is to be a new creation. Old earth shall then be restored to her Edenlike beauty and loveliness; and Eden's bowers again shall bloom beneath the suns of paradise restored. "Then shall the righteous shine forth in the kingdom of their Father." How changed will be the scene! The harps of heaven will then fill the air with its sweet and richest melody. Then dear weeping and laboring children, you will receive your crown which is laid up for you, and which we trust will be decked with many stars.

SUNDAY AND THE TWO-HORNED BEAST.

Passing events have recently directed my attention anew to one of the main points of faith that is held by the Seventh-day Adventist church, and I thought I would call attention to it for the benefit of those who may be interested. It will be no news for me to say that in the S. D. A. theory the United States is confidently, if not dogmatically set forth as the power or government that is to fulfill the prophecy of the two-horned beast of Rev. 13. That theory teaches that the time will yet come before the second coming of Jesus, when the government under which we live will enact a law and issue a proclamation condemning to death those who will not acknowledge and observe the first day of the week as the Christian Sabbath.

This terrible result is to be reached in some such way as this: The various Protestant churches are to unite in some way that will concentrate their strength and power, and thus enable them to influence or control the civil or law-making department of government, thus forming a union of Church and State, a politico-ecclesiastical power, resembling the old Papal one at Rome. This union of the Protestant churches is to be effected principally by the wonder-working power of Spiritualists, or Spiritualism, and when accomplished, the Protestant is to combine with the Roman Catholic element in this country, to establish or constitute a great hierarchy, that shall wield for a time the political, as well as the ecclesiastical destiny of this land; and not of this land only, for the power symbolized by the two-horned beast is to cause the whole world to worship (or regard with veneration), the government whose deadly wound was healed, which S. D. Adventists say is the Papacy.

Surely this is a wonderful programme that our S. D. A. friends have marked out for the Protestant churches of America to follow; not only to unite in order to seize the reins of civil power, and condemn people to death for Sunday breaking, but also to lend their influence and power to re-seat the old harlot church on the scarlet-colored beast, from which she has been (as I believe) forever cast down. This theory of the two-horned beast, and the programme incidental to it, has been held and taught and expected by S. D. Adventists for about one-third of a century, and the passing incidents of this period that seemed to favor their views, have been industriously gathered and published in their periodicals.

When the Centennial Exposition was broached a few years ago, and finally decided on, some of the S. D. Adventist brethren (what proportion I cannot say) expected great things to transpire this year, in confirmation of their theory of prophecy. Now what is the present situation and prospects for the future? There is a powerful element in society that is opposed to the observance of Sunday in the Puritan sense of a Sabbath, while there is another strong element in its favor. These two opposing elements have and are exerting all their influence for and against opening the Exposition on Sunday, and so far the Sunday-Sabbath influence has prevailed, which only proves that that element, instead of being the aggressive one, is merely standing on the defensive, and striving to preserve one of its cherished institutions from the destructive attacks of its enemies; and even this is not yet positively secured, according to the statement of one of the Board of Managers, who had it published in an Iowa paper that the Board were to meet again July 1st, to decide this and other questions. Suppose, however, that the Sunday Sabbath should be sustained in regard to the Exposition, what progress would that indicate towards the expected union of Church and State, and a law to put people to death for Sunday desecration?

The Presbyterian General Assembly and the Methodist General Conference, have both been in session recently in the East, and have both taken action against the opening of the Exposition on Sunday, which action has doubtless had an influence in keeping it closed so far; but this action was purely defensive, and not aggressive. In the Presbyterian Assembly, however, other action was taken on the subject of Sabbath-keeping, in which the ministers and members of that church were urged to a strict adherence to the former teaching and practice on that subject, and the reason why this action was taken may be learned from the following extract:

"In view of the persistent efforts continually made to undermine the faith of the church in the divine authority and perpetual claim of the Christian Sabbath, and to introduce among us the Continental view of its observance," etc.

This extract shows that it is the anti-Sabbath element that is in the aggresive, and the Editor of the Herald and Presbyter, in reporting this very action, not only informs his readers that this anti-Sabbath element is within the Presbyterian church, but says that "it is worthy of note that the Assembly did not introduce into its action the name of the theological professor alluded to, and the fact that he held the Continental view, and the judgment that he was unworthy on that account to be a minister of our church." It would be vain for me to speculate as to why the Presbyterian General Assembly would tolerate the anti-Sabbath element in their own ministry; but this, with other passing incidents, indicates that the two-horned beast theory of the Seventh-day Adventists is not likely to be verified in this centennial year.—H. E. CARVER in Sabbath Advocate.

TWO RESURRECTIONS.

Will you please explain Rev. 20: 5? I don't understand how there can be two resurrections one thousand years apart, when Christ says, "The hour is coming when all that are in their graves shall hear his voice." (John 5: 28.)

D. S.

The word "hour" in the above passage is not necessarily limited to sixty minutes. It may include a period of time of considerable length. In fact, the 25th verse contains the same word used in an enlarged sense, as is plainly evident. "The hour cometh, and now is;" that is, the time of Jesus' ministry upon earth, during which time, or hour, he called the dead from their graves. He spoke to Lazarus, for one, and he heard and lived. This "hour" was the time of Jesus' ministry, and during that hour, or time, the dead heard Jesus' voice and lived; not all at once, but at different times during that period, or "hour." So also we read, "the hour cometh when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father." This hour, or time, includes nearly the whole christian dispensation. Also, "the hour of his judgment is come" (Rev. 14: 7), referring to the time when God shall judge the world, not in sixty minutes, but in a time especially allotted to that work, be it long or short. Many other instances could be cited of a similar use of the word "hour" in the New Testament.

The Savior says it is an hour "in which all that are in their graves shall hear his voice," which signifies that during the time included by the word hour, be it long or short, all the dead shall be raised. This is evidently the same time as the "hour of judgment," for we read that "he shall judge the quick and dead at his appearing and kingdom." (1 Tim. 4: 1). This hour of judgment includes all the time allotted for commencing and closing the judgment scenes. During some time in this "hour" Jesus says that all the dead shall hear his voice and come forth, but they do not all necessarily hear it at the same moment in the hour, or time. In fact, he makes a distinction himself between the resurrection of "they that have done good," and "they that have done evil," as though the one was separate from the other. In view of the distinction made by the apostle in 1 Cor. 15: 23, 24, and also contained in Rev. 20: 5, 6, we conclude that there will be two events to the resurrection in the "hour," or time, in which Jesus shall call forth the dead.—Advent Christian Times.

Correspondence.

From Bro. P. G. Bowman.

Dear Bro.:—I came to this place last Saturday week, from Alton Bay, by the special request of Elder Dow, for the purpose of assisting at the Magog Campmeeting, which closed last night.

I found Bro. Dow confined to his room of inflammatory rheumatism, so that he was unable to attend or take any part in the meeting. I was sorry to find some division in sentiment, if not in feeling, among the Advent people, about continuing this meeting separate and distinct from the Beebe Plain Campmeeting; but I think all unpleasantness will now cease, as the Conference which met from time to time during the campmeeting, determined to continue this meeting, which affords privileges to many, and particularly poor people of this Providce, who cannot go to the other meeting.

We have had but few preachers at the meeting, but they labored faithfully in word and doctrine, and God most wonderfully blest their labors. The prayer and social meetings were the best throughout, I ever attended. Many souls were converted, backsliders reclaimed, and the saints quickened on their way to the kingdom nigh at hand. All things considered, I feel safe in saying this has been one of the most profitable meetings I have attended; certainly there was more pungent conviction for sin, and more clear conversions, in proportion to the number of persons in attendance, than at any campmeeting I have attended for many years.

I do hope and pray that the Beebe Plain Campmeeting may be a great success in bringing many souls to Christ, and that Magog may be made a blessing to all this lovely country in Canada. I have no doubt that by another year the ground will be occupied with tents, as several persons selected places before they left.

Magog, P. Q., Sept. 11th, 1876.

From Bro. C. H. Ward.

I write a few lines to the Crisis giving some of my experience, hoping that it may encourage others to deny themselves of useless, yes, worse than useless indulgences.

I commenced chewing tobacco when I was only twelve years old, and continued chewing for about forty-three years. I quit chewing seven years ago last Oct. I have not taken a quid since, although I have smoked at intervals, but the first of last Jan. I threw away my pipe, and have not smoked since, and have no desire to, thank the Lord. I became so fully convinced that it was not only a filthy habit, but worse than useless, and that I was using the Lord's money, which should be used for a better purpose than to buy tobacco with, that I came to the conclusion to quit the whole thing. But, feeling my weakness and frailty, I went to the Lord with my good resolution, and asked him to help me to put my new resolve in practice. He has answered my prayer, and has taken away my appetite for the filthy weed.

Now, dear brother, whatever your name may be, or wherever you may live, if you have got this filthy habit, go to the Lord, and ask him to help you out of it, and he will do it. We are to add to all the other virtues temperance; and for this purpose, let us ask God to direct us and strengthen us to perform our vows. I feel, for one, that I want to get rid of all the dead weights, and all the hindrances, so that I may be God's free man. I feel that the Lord has blessed me in all my acts of self-denial.

Some five weeks ago my daughter and I quit drinking tea and coffee, and I think I feel better for it. For one, I am determined to cut off all the unnecessary sprouts that may be a hindrance to my growth in grace, and the knowledge of the truth.

My dear brethren and sisters, I do not say these things to boast of what I have done, but on the contrary, to thank the Lord that he has helped me, and to encourage others to do as I have done, so far as I have done right. Let all look at these things candidly, knowing that the end of all things is at hand. Pray for me, that I may continue on in this good way, and meet you all on the other shore.

I would say for the benefit of all who feel interested in the welfare of the little band of believers in this place, that I believe all are trying to live according to the good Word of life, so far as they can. We keep up our little prayer meetings every Thursday evening, and they are blessed seasons to us all, for the Lord sends his blessed Spirit to meet with us every time we meet. Pray for us.

UNCONSCIOUS SPIRITS.

WM. SHELDON.

Theologians, who speculate about departed spirits, sometimes involve themselves in a ludicrous dilemma. Such is the case with Dr. Wm. Smith, of the large Bible Dictionary, who says in a note on "Sheol:" "The word sheol is never used of the grave proper, or place of burial of the body. It is always the abode of departed spirits, like the Greek hades."

If this assumption were correct, it would prove that departed spirits become unconscious, by making Solomon affirm: "There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in sheol (the abode of departed spirits), whither thou goest." Eccl. 9: 10. So departed spirits must be unconscious, being void of "knowledge" and "wisdom." Furthermore, by adding John's testimony, they are shown to be dead: "The sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hades (Heb. sheol) delivered up the dead which were in them." Rev. 20: 13. So hades, as well as death, contains "dead" occupants; and consequently if it is a realm of "departed spirits," instead of dead bodies, such spirits must be "dead."

Just think of sheol or hades as a realm of disembodied spirits, all unconscious and dead! They might as well have died with the body. Is there anything animating in the contemplation of such a disembodied state? Can such spirits be immortal? This assumption kills the theory it sought to serve.

Brodhead, Wis.

DISHONESTY BEGINS AT HOME.

The crying sin of the day is dishonesty. One hears much of it in public life; but there is too much of it altogether in private life. And its cause is to be found in the want of self-control in the indulgence of tastes and appetites. Reckless, extravagant living is at the bottom of it all. If this living had any true foundation in any hearty desire for desirable things, there would be more hope of amendment. But when one comes to see what ill-gotten gains are spent upon, the outlook is a sad one. Dress, display, amusement, costly things bought just because they are "costly;" wealth won evilly, merely that it may be wasted foolishly; these are the signs of a time which it is not pleasant to contemplate.

If a man loves any one thing, say rare books, or pictures, or objects of any kind, or music, or science, so well that for the sake of the one thing in which he would be rich, he is willing to be poor in every thing else, no matter though his choice be an unwise one according to the best standards of choice, he will yet have a motive which will help to keep him upright. But for those who love none of these things, but simply desire them because it is the habit of the time; because, like pampered children, they must needs cry for whatever they see just out of their reach; for them is needed the wholesome self-discipline which shall teach them to let alone whatever is not theirs. And the beginning of this self-discipline is in the home. Parents must teach their boys and girls the great lesson of doing without whatever cannot be fitly theirs. There need be no niggardly restraint, but in some way the first lesson for childhood should be that of earning its pleasures. To get whatever it craves as soon as it asks for it, is the worst training a child can have.—Churchman.

THE ATROCITIES IN BULGARIA.

Writing from Bucharest, on Tuesday afternoon, the correspondent of the Daily News says: "I have just arrived, after riding all through Bulgaria on horseback. I left Mr. Schuyler at Galnova, going south, and recrossing the Balkans. I see from the papers that Mr. Baring reports sixty villages burnt, and twelve thousand people killed. This estimate does not include the district north of the Balkans, which was not then visited, nor the district of Sophia. Forty villages were burnt north of the Balkans, and seventy south, not including the district of Sophia. Mr. Schuyler has not yet completed his estimate of the people killed. In the district of Philippopolis alone there were fifteen thousand. I see that the friends of Turkey make much of the statement that only the Bashi-Bazouks committed the atrocities, not the regular troops. This is untrue. Wherever there were troops, as at Olluk-Kui, they rivalled the Bashi-Bazouks in cruelty. There is no doubt in my mind that the massacres were committed with the sanction of the authorities. The present condition of the country is deplorable. Complete anarchy prevails. Life and property are nowhere safe. Everywhere people came to us with fresh sabre cuts from Mussulman neighbors. They were obliged to work without pay. Their horses and cattle are taken; the women are violated. These things are occurring now. The authorities were disposed to do justice, but are powerless. The Governor of Philippopolis says he must have cavalry to quell the Mussulman population. Some Kaimakams and Mudirs say that the Zaptiehs threatened by the Turks are afraid to execute their orders. Mr. Schuyler thinks there is imminent danger of more massacres. He will suggest to his Government to insist upon the following measures: First, the hanging of Achmed Agha, Fassoun Bey, Chefket Pasha, and another Achmed Agha; second, the disarming of the Mussulman population; third, the rebuilding of the burned villages at Government expense, and payment for the stolen cattle. The execution of these measures cannot be left to the Turkish authorities. He will therefore propose the appointment of a Foreign Commission to see the measures executed. If this be not done he thinks that massacres surpassing all yet committed may occur any day, especially if the Turkish arms meet with reverses. Kiani Pasha's mission is a farce."

Letters and travelers from Central Russia state that the accounts of the atrocities in Bulgaria have been everywhere published in the territory of the Cossacks of the Don, and have caused feverish excitement. War is loudly demanded. The authorities remain passive.—London Times.

DEATH AND RESURRECTION.—In death and the grave, where man goeth, there is no work. Death is the discontinuance of life; and wherever men leave off at their death, they will begin at resurrection. The passage of time is nothing to the dead. It is neither perceived nor registered; so that when they wake up, none will be able to tell whether they have been dead a minute or five thousand years. They are like a watch, that having run down, is again set going. The watch, while it ticks, registers time; but directly it ceases to go, time passes unmarked by the chronometer, until it again be wound up and started, when it again records time. If between its stoppage and its resetting a year passes, it is to that watch as if it had not been; no account has been made of it. It is thus with man's perceptions and actions. They go on until his death, and then stop. Then when the life returns in resurrection they recommence. The interim is a blank of neither joy nor sorrow, conscious pleasure nor pain. Therefore, a long dreary period of lying in the grave is a wrong way of looking at an unconscious intermediate state. Death and resurrection are close together. One step is death, the next is resurrection. The dead know no waiting.—The Bible Echo.

Obituaries.

WALKER. In Barnstead, N. H., Aug. 11th, 1876, Bro. Joseph Walker, aged seventy-seven years.

Bro. W. was a highly respected citizen, who received for many years the suffrages of his townsmen, elevating him to the highest positions of trust and honor in their gift. He was a kind and affectionate husband, a loving and faithful father, a man commanding the respect of all who witnessed his nobility of character in all the paths of life. Above all he was a Christian, a lover of Christ and his appearing, the resurrection of the dead, the kingdom of God and its speedy establishment. He looked with earnest longings for the dawning of eternal day, but closed his eyes to sweetly rest during the last fleeting moments of earth's dreary night. May his waking be glorious, and his rising be to peerage with angels. May the abounding grace of God comfort and support his sorrowing widow and weeping son, and all afflicted friends. J. COUCH.

MCKEE. In Independence, Minn., Aug. 9th, 1876, Rocelia McKee, wife of Bro. Alva McKee, aged twenty-four years.

In the death of Sr. McKee the church has lost a devoted christian believer, and an earnest, active, intelligent christian worker. She embraced the Advent faith under the labors of Eld. O. R. Fassett, about nine years ago, together with others who were organized into a church at that time, and she remained a steadfast, consistent believer in the faith until the day of her death. In victorious hope she exclaimed just before she died, "I must die, but I shall live again." Her funeral was held at the R. R. Depot, in Armstrong, and largely attended. Words of comfort appropriate to the occasion were spoken by Eld. O. R. Fassett from Ps. 88: 10. Sr. McKee leaves a husband, son and daughter, and other relatives to mourn her death, but all are comforted with the assurance that she has fallen asleep in Jesus, and that we shall meet again when the morning cometh and the shadows flee away. B. H. HALL.

CALKINS. In Monson, Mass., Aug. 18th, 1876, Sr. Ruby Calkins, aged eighty-nine years.

Sr. C., after a long and useful life, has fallen like a shock of corn fully ripe. For more than forty years she was a member of the Baptist church, and for a number of years she has been a believer in the soon, personal coming of Jesus Christ to raise the dead, quicken the living, and give immortality and eternal life to his children. Death had no terrors for her. She sleeps in hope of living soon where the infirmities of age will all be removed. She leaves sons and daughters, and a large circle of other friends to mourn. Four years ago the 25th of last Feb., at the time she buried her dear companion, she requested the writer to preach her funeral sermon, which he did to quite a company of relatives and friends who gathered at her funeral, from a text found in Num. 23: 10. P. S. BUTLER.

DORR. In Portsmouth, N. H., June 26th, 1876, Miss Florentine L. Dorr, aged twenty-six years.

From childhood she had been an invalid, suffering almost constant pain, but bearing it with scarce a murmur. She daily committed herself to the care of Jesus, in whom we trust she sweetly sleeps, to awake in his likeness, with the beauty of heaven unfadingly impressed upon her brow, far more lovely than that so silently left to the farewell gaze of those left to mourn. May they meet that dear one again in the land of beauty to part no more, when the sleep of death is ended. J. N. BERRY.

MARDEN. In Chichester, N. H., Feb. 4th, '76, John Marden, aged seventy-two years.

Early in life Bro. M. gave his heart to the Lord, and ever afterwards maintained an upright walk and godly conversation. His house was a bethel. Under its roof the freedom of the gospel was enjoyed. He died in the faith of a resurrection from the dead at the appearing of Jesus. He leaves a wife and two children, who sorrow not as those without hope. A large number of his neighbors and townsmen attended his funeral. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." C. W. SARGENT.

WILBER. At Killingly, Ct., Aug. 21st, 1876, Sr. Phebe Wilber, aged eighty-three years.

Sr. Wilber leaves eight sons and daughters, together with a large circle of other friends to mourn. She has been a member of the church for many years, and has died in hope of immortality and eternal life when Jesus comes. Quite a large company of relatives and friends gathered at her funeral, to pay their last tribute of respect to one they had loved in life and respected in death, to whom words of comfort and truth were spoken by the writer. P. S. BUTLER.

MARDEN. In Chichester, N. H., Sept. 1st, Owen Stockman, youngest son of Nathan and Sarah Jane Marden, aged thirteen months.

While Bro. Marden was preparing to attend the Alton Bay Campmeeting, his little son was taken sick with membranous croup and died. "There is no household, howsoe'er defended, but has one vacant chair," for death reigns. But, thanks to God, the little one will be "gathered home" when Jesus comes. C. W. SARGENT.

FOREIGN NEWS.

THE EASTERN WAR.

London, Sept. 13. An Amsterdam special says there were serious disturbances there on Monday night and last night because the Government suppressed a fair. Troops were called out and attacked the mob, killing one person and wounding fourteen. Large reinforcements of troops have arrived.

Sept. 15. A dispatch from Constantinople says the Porte informed the Ambassadors of the Powers, in reply to their representations made on Saturday last, that it is impossible to grant an armistice, but the Porte is prepared to accept peace based upon the following points:

First—Reoccupation of the fortresses held by Turkey previous to 1857.

Second—Destruction of the fortresses constructed by the Servians since 1857.

Third—Investiture of Prince Milan at Constantinople.

Fourth—Reduction of the effective Servian army to 10,000 men and three batteries.

Fifth—Construction of a railway across Servia.

A sixth point follows, which is indecipherable in the telegram.

The Porte insists chiefly upon the necessity of the occupation of the principal Servian fortresses so as to prevent fresh aggression, and leaves the negotiation of a treaty on the above bases entirely in the hands of the powers.

Sept. 16. The London Times, in an article on Turkey's basis of peace, declared that Europe cannot permit Turkey to occupy the Servian fortress which she held until 1857. The European powers will be the best judges as to what military force Prince Milan should maintain after they complete their plans. For the sake of peace the Porte should waive the empty form of Prince Milan doing homage to the Sultan. In fact the only safe condition of those proposed by Turkey is the construction of a railway across Servia.

A dispatch from Berlin says the Porte has definitely resolved to refuse an armistice, but declares its readiness to discuss terms of peace. The Porte will not object to a suspension of hostilities, provided the powers show as earnest a desire to conclude a peace as they have shown about an armistice.

A dispatch to the Daily News from Odessa reports that the Turkish inhabitants of Philippolis and Tartar, Bazardjik, have assumed a threatening attitude toward the Bulgarians. They declare that before many days there will be a further reduction in the population. The Mussulmans are all armed, while the Christians ever since the collapse of the insurrection have been deprived of their weapons. The British Embassador at Constantinople has been advised of the perilous condition of the Christian population.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Savannah, Sept. 15. The total interments to-day were thirty-one, of which twenty-seven were from yellow fever. Over one-half of the colored population are depending upon the charity of the whites, and the amount of destitution is increasing. There have been seventeen deaths among the colored people in two days.

Augusta, Ga., Sept. 15. The citizens contributed $1200 to-day for the Savannah sufferers. There will be additional subscriptions to-morrow. The City Council contributes $50 per day during the epidemic.

Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 15. To-night the City Council of Jacksonville donated $500 to the poor and needy of Savannah.

Havana, Sept. 15. There was a strong hurricane on the evening of the 12th at Antigua, St. Kitts, St. Croix and St. Thomas. At midnight of the 13th a fearful hurricane passed over Porto Rico. All the telegraphic wires were prostrated in Jamaica from the 12th to the 14th. A dispatch from Santiago, Cuba, reports that a light hurricane began there yesterday about midnight. It started from the northeast and went out to the southeast.

New Haven, Sept. 15. A tornado cut a swath through the northern part of Bridgport about midnight Thursday night, unroofing several houses and snapping a number of large trees off near the ground. It lasted about three minutes and was, apparently, some three hundred yards wide. It was accompanied by a rumbling noise, and houses in its path shook as if an earthquake was coming.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.—The A. C. Quar. Conf. of Central Kansas will hold its next session at Arvonia, Osage Co., Kansas, Saturday, Sept. 30th, and continue over the Lord's day, Oct. 1st. In connection with this meeting, it is thought best to have a State Campmeeting, commencing Sept. 27th, and continue as long as thought best. We hope all of our brethren and sisters in the State and elsewhere, who can come, will prepare for this meeting. Let fervent prayer be offered that we may have a rich season in the Lord. Those that can, bring tents. Now, brethren and sisters, let us make a general rally to this meeting. Bro. Burr, Editor of the A. C. Times, we trust will be there to preach the word.

J. C. SMITH,
AARON PRESTON, } Committee.
M. MCGUIRE,

CAMPMEETING NOTICE.—The Kansas Campmeeting will be held in the grove, three miles east of Arvonia, Osage Co., Kansas, commencing Friday, Sept. 29th, and continue over Oct. 8th. We hope to see a general gathering of those who are looking for the return of the Nobleman throughout the State, and also from Mo. Bring tents, provision and bedding, and let us tent together in the forest, and worship the Lord of hosts. We expect Bro. Burr, Editor of the A. C. Times, will be with us to preach the word of life. The Kansas Mission Tent will be on the ground, and will afford shelter for many.

Committee of Arrangements: N. L. Brian, J. C. Smith, D. Webster, L. L. Smith, J. A. Beauchamp. LEVI L. SMITH, for the Com.

THE Hoosick Valley A. C. Conference is appointed for Wednesday evening, Oct. 25th, at Castleton, Vt., and continue over the Sabbath. More next week. H. K. FLAGG, President. ROBERT CANDLISH, Sec.

NOTICE.—There will be a tent meeting at Tonganoxie, Leavenworth Co., Kansas, commencing Oct. 11th, and will continue as the interest may demand. Bro. Hunt and others are expected to be present to preach the Word. Let continual prayer be offered that the Holy Spirit may do its office work, and that sinners may be converted unto the Lord. J. C. SMITH.

NOTICE.—There will be a Conference in Mercer Village, commencing Sept. 28th, at seven o'clock P. M., and hold over the following Sunday. A general invitation is given. Homes will be provided. Come filled with the Spirit to labor for Christ. Call on Brn. E. Watson, Eldridge Thomas, and others. For the church, H. B. SEVEY.

THE next session of the Advent Christian Conference of Nova Scotia will be held at Scott's Bay, King's Co., Sept. 28th, and continue over the following Lord's day. All are cordially invited. J. M. TOZIER.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE.—The next annual session of the A. C. Conference of Northern Pa. and Southern New York will be held with the church at Westfield, Tioga Co., Pa., commencing Thursday evening, Sept. 21st, and hold over the following Sunday. By rail from Corning to Elkland, then stage to Westfield.
E. C. COWLES, President.
H. RIEGENFUSS, Secretary.

NOTICE.—The tent meeting which was to commence at Bombay Corners the 13th of this month, is adjourned to the 27th of Sept. First meeting at seven o'clock P. M., Sept. 27th. C. PIKE.

NOTICE.—A Conference will commence in Wesley, Me., Oct. 4th, and continue over the Sabbath. All are invited. M. W. CORLISS.

I would like to inform the churches, and individual friends waiting for Jesus, and all others, that I am ready to assist them in protracted meetings and Sabbath services to the extent of my ability. Let me hear from all as soon as possible. G. W. BURNHAM, Newburyport, Mass.

NOTICE.—My health having considerably improved, I am willing to devote a portion of the Sundays each month to preaching, if the Lord will. Any church or community wishing my labors, please write me at Lawrence, Mass., No. 10 Fulton Street, as that is my present address. F. M. DRAKE.

A New Edition.

The first edition of "Berean's Casket" is exhausted. A new edition, revised and improved, is now published on excellent paper, and beautifully bound in cloth, ready for all who wish such a help in the study of the Scriptures. Price $2.00. In leather, 2.50. Sold at this office, and by the author.
I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

Appointments

☞ APPOINTMENTS MUST BE RECEIVED AS EARLY AS TUESDAY MORNING (as our paper goes to press about noon) to insure insertion for the coming week.

☞ The following RESOLUTION was passed at the late meeting of the A. C. P. Society:—

"RESOLVED, That no appointments be published in the CRISIS henceforth for persons unknown to the Editorial Board (by which is understood the Editors, Editorial Committee, and Business Agent), unless satisfactory reference shall be given."

The Committee appointed by the Adv. Chris. Association, at its last Annual Meeting, to advise with the Editorial Board "in relation to the publication in the World's Crisis of the appointments of men unworthy of recognition as preachers," having attended to the duty assigned them, recommended, and the Editorial Board have adopted, and ordered to be published, the following resolution:—

"RESOLVED, That when the Editorial Board is properly notified by any of our Churches, or Ministers, or responsible persons, by a written allegation that a certain minister, or ministers, lack moral character, that they be instructed to notify such minister, or ministers, of the information received as a reason for withholding their appointments till after a proper trial and acquittal."

All communications in relation to this matter should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board—GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass.

TO THE CROSS.

IDA A. AHLBORN.

To the cross of Christ oh! turn thee,
There eternal rest is found;
There is healing in the current
Flowing from the Savior's wound.
It will make sin's lepers pure,
'Tis a sure and perfect cure.

To the cross oh! come, ye weary,
Who for rest have vainly cried;
There is rest that earthly pleasures
Have your yearning souls denied.
Seek for earthly joy no more,
Christ hath better things in store.

To the cross come, tearful mourner,
Christ hath solace sweet for thee;
He hath tasted of our sorrow,
He can give us sympathy.
Earthly friends may pass away,
But our Lord remains for aye.

To the cross oh! come, earth's children;
There the blood of Christ was shed;
There he bore all our transgressions,
And was wounded in our stead.
Oh! earth, come bow before him
Who hath suffered for our sin.

THE COMING OF OUR LORD.

C. MENDENHALL.

This doctrine, which has always been a very important one, seems at this juncture to be doubly so. By the prominence given it in Scripture, we may learn that it is one of the fundamental truths of the gospel.

The Old Testament prophets many times mention it, and proclaim the premonitions, which are to cast their "shadows before" the grand event comes upon men. The New Testament writers, impressed and guided by the Holy Spirit, have deemed it necessary to make the "blessed hope" a constant theme. It is said that one verse in thirty mentions the second advent of our Lord.

This fact alone should teach us to value this glorious truth, and to give it the prominence in our conversations and our preaching due its importance.

The immediate disciples, after the ascension of Christ, earnestly longed for his appearing a second time, remembering the promise left them—"Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts 1: 2.

Later we read Paul's admonition—"For ye have need of patience, that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise. "For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry." Heb. 10: 36, 37. James says—"Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain. Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts: for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh."

Many very many scriptures might be quoted showing that this doctrine ever has been deemed an important and practical truth. We say practical, because we find it used as an incentive to so many virtues, giving point to exhortations, weight to admonitions, and a powerful motive to purity. "Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God." Again. "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him, purifieth himself, even as he is pure." Everywhere we see the lustrous beauty of the coming King shining out upon the pages of our blessed Book of books. This light should shine on us, in us, and about us.

Accepting this "blessed hope" is more than believing the doctrine; it is making it a part of our beings, and showing its wonderful effects in pure hearts and holy lives. One may believe Jesus is speedily coming, have the proof texts upon his tongues' end, and even presume to tell us by his chronological arrangement just when the Nobleman will arrive, and yet not be in readiness for the manifestation of the Son of God. The uncertainty of the day and hour must needs keep us on the alert: "Watch therefore; for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." Oftentimes we are bidden to watch, to take heed and to pray; "for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh."

Truly it must be an important article of faith which is so often brought to our view in the epistles and elsewhere in the sacred writings, yet men in their blindness will dwell largely upon other things, spending time in theological hair-splitting, when they should be sounding the alarm, and warning men to prepare to meet the Master. Let us sound the trumpet clearly. Inscribe upon our banners the "Lord cometh" and "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

We feel, as we take an outlook into the future, that humanly speaking there is naught but darkness and foreboding. All is unsettled, all is ominous, and well may men's hearts fail them; but the comforting thought comes, these things indicate the speedy approach of Him who shall drive out all darkness with the effulgence of his manifestation. How diligent we should be, how earnest, humble and holy. Now is the time to consecrate our all to Jesus.

No other truth can have the power over men that this does; nothing else can afford the consolation, can give nerve to action, can inspire men with aspirations for more of Jesus and his perfect love. What a gem is this second advent among the many rich things found in God's treasure house. When one possesses it, he becomes rich indeed, for he has that which aids him in all of life's vicissitudes, and promises much in the future; for "unto them that look for him, shall he appear a second time without sin (sin offering) unto salvation."

Beloved, be ready. Have you learned the truth that our Lord is soon coming again? Yes, very soon he may come, and can you heartily respond, "Even so, come quickly"? Pray for those who are sounding the cry, "Behold, he cometh," that many may awaken from lethargy to "gird their loins" ready for his approach. Everything earthly should be cut loose, all be upon the altar—"and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord, when he will return from the wedding; that when he cometh and knocketh, they may open to him immediately. Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord, when he cometh, shall find watching." Luke 12: 35–38. Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame." Rev. 16: 15.

In these dark days we need the prayers of the saints, and above all we need divine aid that we may be "kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed at the last time." Let us then give the doctrine of our Savior's speedy appearance the preeminence which God has assigned to it, never forgetting that holiness is essential in order to be ready. "The very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit, and soul, and body, be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Embreeville, Pa.

WAITING.

MRS. E. TAYLOR.

Amid the discordant din and confusion of the present hour, when there is so much to lure the mind from God; when pride is called religion, and holiness of heart is mocked at, as a chimera of discordant minds; when evil puts on a countenance of light, when passion rages like the sea, and spiritual wickedness in high places is becoming so common, that all can see the frailty of those we put in places of trust. It is cheering to know amid all this, that there is a little band patiently waiting for the promised rest that remains for the people of God. Though the heathen rage, and the people imagine vain things, they know that what he has promised he is able to perform. The deeds of horror that are committed every day do not surprise them; the arrogance of professed christians does not annoy them; for the Bible tells them what to expect in the latter days.

They are waiting, hoping, longing, but never idle. They see that the harvest is great, the laborers few; therefore, they do not sit down with listless languor, and say, I can do nothing; but knowing the time is short, they labor more earnestly, that they may save some. So many errors prevail; so many false hopes are cherished by the people; so many weak, feeble ones, that need encouragement; so many doubting souls, and some, almost persuaded to believe, that this little band cry mightily to God for strength to compete with the powers of darkness. They know there will come a time when the scoffer will be obliged to pray, and the prayer will avail them nothing. The angel of mercy will cover her eyes, and turn away; the frail habitations of men will fall, and those that have grown rich by oppressing the poor, would give all their wealth for one hour of time; but, too late! too late! will ring with dread appall in their ears.

The great Shepherd loves his sheep. Still he is gently pleading, "Come unto me, and I will give you rest." But we are told that his Spirit will not always strive with man. He does not forget his word; he is not slack concerning his promises; therefore, arise, O dreamer, put on the robe Christ has prepared for you. With his holy Spirit in your heart, you can pass through the hot strife of the world. You will neither faint or fail, if you follow closely in his footsteps, for he has promised to be a lamp unto your feet. Then patiently work and wait; be not weary in well-doing.

There is another class looking for the appearing of Christ, yet they are not glad he is coming. They realize the many changes taking place on earth; they have a dim perception of danger; they feel that all is not well with them. They are blindly groping for the way, refusing to be led. The tempter holds them in thrall, whispering, Eat, ye shall not die; and by it all they are bewildered, burdened, yet still hoping against hope; thinking God will interpose and make christians of them at last. Vain hope! if they do not accept Christ in life, they are none of his; neither have they any promise of life beyond. Oh sad thought, that any will go down to death, when life is offered so freely. By grasping for the treasures of earth, we fail to lay up treasures in heaven. Many are spurning the gift of immortal life, choosing rather to die. Oh reader, out of Christ, do not longer shut your eyes to the beauties of holiness. Close not your ears to his earnest appeal. Besot not your soul with sin, and the lusts of earth. Pray that all your ways may be made right, believing that he is a rewarder of all that diligently seek him.

If you are weary, seeking for rest, and finding none, believe me, O precious friend, you will never find it until you become a new creature in Christ. Brothers and sisters, labor on. God will give strength for the battles yet to come. There's a light from the cross, that illumines the pathway of those that bear it. Press on, then, till the cross is exchanged for the crown, in the city of our God.

Winterport, Me.

2 CHRONICLES 21: 20.

J. P. MARQUAND.

"And he died without being desired."

This is the epitaph written on Jehoram, who reigned King of Judah eight years. He ascended the throne at the age of thirty-two, on the death of his father Jehoshaphat. He was the oldest of seven brothers, and the first-born. We will endeavor to give a little of his history, that it may prove as a salutary lesson to others, and a warning to the young. His being the heir to the kingdom, no doubt, gave him prominence in the eyes of the people, and his youth was passed in a palace, surrounded with all the luxuries and blessings of competency. In due time his father brought him forward to help him in the administration of the government. His character became strongly marked, but the salient points did not appear until he was made king. The first wrong step he took was to marry queen Jezebel's daughter. He married into a bad family. His next step was to murder and kill his six younger brothers, whose names are given in the Bible. Then he killed some of the princes of the land, that portion of them who reproved him for his sins, probably. Instead of walking in the ways of God, he set up idols and worshipped them, the natural result of a depraved heart. His wife was also brought up in a palace, but under the care and tuition of a wicked adulteress, (Jezebel); and now this husband and wife set themselves to do evil, and thus the prophet Elisha was constrained to utter against them impending judgments. He informed him that severe disease, long and protracted, of the bowels, should attack him and his family, (a plague) until they were dead, and thus cut off from the earth. He and his family lingered along two whole years, before the welcome news spread through his kingdom, that this murderer was gone. No one regretted his departure. Many dear saints that night gave glory to God, and felt relief in their minds.

The Bible says "the wicked shall not live out half their days." (Psalms 55: 23). This wicked king was cut off in the midst of his days; and God also says in Revelation 11: 18, "he will destroy them which corrupt the earth." Vice and immorality brings its own punishment, and virtue its own reward. God never designed this earth for bad men or women; on the contrary, it was for the pure and good, who shall inherit the earth and dwell therein forever. This is abundantly proved by the 37th Psalm. God works by systematic laws, and we must understand and practice them; then we may expect peace and happiness.

David said, "How love I thy law; it is my meditation all the day." In studying the Scriptures, do you not see what a beautiful harmony there is among all the saints, patriarchs, prophets, martyrs and apostles? They all talk the same thing; all point to God our heavenly Father; all point to righteousness and truth. Dear old Jeremiah says he constantly shed tears, because men would not love God and keep his commandments. Jer. 9: 1. But a brighter day is in store for us. Our hearts will lose their heaviness, and our tears be dry, when we see this earth in its beauty, and the curse entirely removed and blotted out. This is what Jesus labored for, and all his followers are united with him. We hate sin and iniquity, and long for its removal, and our eyes are turned to God in expectation of his coming. This event must be near at hand, when the kingdom and the dominion under the whole heavens shall be established forever. Oh, for a preparation to go in with Christ to the marriage supper. Oh, for a weaning from delusive pleasures and follies, and a sinking into God; to be rooted and grounded in the truth; to have the heart established by grace, and to be led by the Spirit in the paths of righteousness. Surely, the Lord will avenge his own elect, who cry day and night unto him. Yea, he will avenge them speedily. "The Lord will give grace and glory, and no good thing will he withhold from those who walk uprightly." "To the upright there ariseth light in the darkness." Trust in the Lord Jehovah, for in him is everlasting strength.

ROBBERY.

C. S. BRANCH.

"Will a man rob God?"—MAL. 3: 8.

It is presumed that these bigoted and sectarian Jews, that God charged of robbing him, were enthusiastic and zealous in the extreme, having their phylacteries enlarged and extended in the most conspicuous manner, and to the paying of tithes on mint and anise, and the analyzing of fractional doctrinal points, and withal, to the claiming of Abraham as their father. Neither is it all improbable they spent hours sitting upon the fence that surrounded the synagogue, on the Sabbath day, in animated discussion with sarcastic reflection upon their Gentile neighbors; or, perchance, with some one or more that did not endorse their cherished views and theories, as law and gospel. Or, perhaps, chiding some delinquent for neglecting a minor portion of the law. They boasted of being the exclusive and chosen people of God.

They had had line upon line; here a little and there a little; and still, with all their boasted knowledge and fancied superiority, they were positively and openly charged of robbing God. With other duties, they were commanded, at certain times, to take of the first of their flock without blemish, and offer sacrifice unto God; but instead of doing as they were commanded, the avaricious and penurious souls brought the lame and sickly, and such of those as they could not appropriate to their own advantage and carnal use, as an offering. God, in viewing their stingy and imperfect sacrifices and contemptible penury, said unto them, Now offer it unto thy governor; will he be pleased with thee, or accept thy person? If these sticklers that were straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel, were to make their governor, or an earthly friend, an offering, they would present them with the best of their flock; but to God they presented the refuse.

I leave the following question for the honest at heart to answer. Is it not a solemn fact, that there is a large body of the Advent people among us, that furnish an exact parallel to the people brought out in this short analogy? Professed christians, that claim to be looking for the speedy return of the Master, that are actually robbing God with crowded heads and empty hearts? boasting of the hope of the gospel, and of being able to put thousands of their enemies to flight, with a thus saith a Lord? Brethren, where are our sacrifices? have we not in the past and at present been robbing God? Have we not been using the most and best of our talents for our own individual comfort, and offered the worn-out and exhausted balance to God? I fear some of us have become so engaged in the hay field, that we have forgotten and neglected the prayer-meeting, and perhaps so fatigued on the Sabbath, as to fall asleep in our pews under the preached Word.

Have we not said within ourselves, when haying and harvesting is over, and with more time upon our hands than we can use, then we will try to keep awake in church, attend the prayer-meetings, and re-establish the abandoned family altar? Are we not equally guilty with the Jews of old in robbing God? Is it not fair to conjecture that the cold, backslidden Jew said within himself, as the time drew near for him to go up to the house of God, to offer his sacrifice, walking among his herd of cattle, as he espied a lame and weakly heifer, I will offer her unto the Lord, for she is not suitable for my use, nor to be put in the market?

How many of us spend weeks and months at the seaside, basking in pleasure, and living in luxury; or, perchance, smoking or chewing the filthy weed, and spitting our life and vitals away. When the collection is taken for the support of God's dear saints, that are sent among us from time to time, to warn the people of impending danger; do we send them away with a few dimes in mutilated currency, that could not be exchanged for the necessities of life? We have been refused when we attempted its passage, and now we offer it unto God! How many times have we sent for the brethren to come and preach the Word of eternal life among us, and when they arrive, allow them to grope and stumble their way from the depot alone, in the dark, in search of some one of like precious faith; and perhaps, at the dead of night, after diligent search and inquiry, he finds the abode of his ungrateful and unfeeling brother. As the wearied and hungry traveler makes himself known at the door, he from within answers and says, Trouble me not: the door is now shut, and my children are with me in bed. I cannot arise and give thee; you will have to go to A. B. or C's.

Is this not wronging our brother and wronging God? What and if the King should answer and say unto you, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." And what saith the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ? Whosoever offers a freewill-offering, there shall be no blemish therein, blind, or broken, or maimed, or having any wen, or scurvy, or scabbed, lamed, bruised, crushed, or anything superfluous, or lacking in his parts.

Brethren, let us examine ourselves in the light of the oracles of God, and see that our devotions and offerings are not selfish, and we be not found robbing God.

Milldale, Ct.

A FEW THOUGHTS.

L. B. WEAVER.

What a dreary, gloomy life this life of affliction, pain, sorrow and care would be, were it not for the help and presence of our dear, loving and precious Savior to comfort and bless us. O how much extreme suffering there is in this world, of which we know but little in comparison to what perhaps some have suffered.

Through the kindness of my dear friend and sister in Jesus, Mrs. L. A. Mirick, Savoy, Mass., I have been presented with a copy of the Life and Sufferings of Mary Rankin, who for years was a great sufferer; and in her hours and days when comfortable, wrote out some of the incidents of her life of suffering for the encouragement of others in a like situation. Through an accident, she was shut up from the outside world for life, and passed through intense suffering caused by spinal disease.

O how weary this life would be to us, if we had no Jesus to go to in these years of helplessness. O if ever I felt to praise God, I do to-day, that I have never been left in my deepest sufferings to murmur or complain.

I wish I could in words express my feelings to-day, as I lie here and write. My mind is staid upon God; I am sweetly resting in him, and he has taken up his abode in my heart. I know my heavenly guest abides with me constantly; and oh, how it soothes my sorrows, whispers words of hope and cheer while passing through severe trials, and gives me sweet trust in him when all looks dark and drear without. He is always whispering some words of cheer, bidding me look up—up above the waves; and then I hear the sweet, loving words, "Lo, I am with you alway," and, "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee"; and, "My God shall supply all your need"; and, "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee"; and, "Come unto me, . . . and I will give you rest"; and many other sweet, cheering promises I might mention; but oh, how much more sweet will it be when, face to face, we can stand on Eden's fair shore and talk with this heavenly guest. O, I do want to see him so much.

North Dana, Mass.

SORROW.

D. N. SMITH.

We read in 2nd Cor., seventh chapter, of two kinds of sorrow; godly sorrow working repentance unto salvation, and the sorrow of the world, which worketh death. According to this we might weep all our lives, and it would avail nothing unless we have "godly sorrow."

Now see the fruits of this godly sorrow. In the 11th verse we read—"For behold this self-same thing, that ye sorrowed after a godly sort, what carefulness it wrought in you, yea, what clearing of yourselves." This probably means, what stripping of yourselves of everything not in accordance with the gospel. "Yea, what indignation, yea, what fear." Fear to do wrong. "Yea, what vehement desire." Desiring the things of Christ. "Yea, what zeal." Zeal in God's cause. "Yea, what revenge." This revenge is not against any one but ourselves. These are the fruits of this "godly sorrow."

It is to be feared that many who profess Christianity have never had this "godly sorrow." They have made a profession of religion, and are members of the church; but know but little about the inner workings of the Holy Ghost. The Lord enable us to go down to the bottom, and build upon a sure foundation.

JESTS UPON SCRIPTURE.

It is very common with some persons to raise a laugh by means of some ludicrous story connected with a text of Scripture. Sometimes it is a play on words, or a pun; at other times a blunder; and not seldom a downright impiety. Whatever be its form, even when lightest, it is no venial offence, leading as it does to profane contempt of God's Word. Those who practice this have never been celebrated for genuine wit. The laughter which they call forth is provoked solely by the unexpected contrast between the solemn words of Scripture and droll idea. There is no real wit in the case, and the dullest persons in society are most remarkable for these attempts.

The evils arising from this practice are greater than they first appear. It leads in general to irreverence for Scripture. No man would jest with the dying words of his father or mother, yet the words of God are quite as solemn. When we have heard a comic, vulgar tale connected with a text of Scripture, such is the power of association that we never hear the text afterwards without thinking of the jest. The effect of this is obvious. He who is much engaged in this kind of false wit, will come at length to have a large portion of Holy Scripture spotted over by his unclean fancy. "The pure in heart shall see God."—Sel. by Caleb A. Wiles, Troy, Pa.

TESTIMONIAL FOR ELD. E. N. BLISS.

At a meeting of the members of the Salem, Marsh Valley and Salt Creek A. C. Churches, held at the house of T. R. Comstock, Aug. 7th, 1876, the following resolutions were passed:

Resolved, That the said churches have by their action virtually said that the charges that were preferred against Eld. E. N. Bliss are of too flimsy a character to be of any importance, and also believe and know that they are false, and were preferred through malice; and they were proved and substantiated in part before the Conference by false testimony, and from those who were not members of any church.

Therefore be it further Resolved, that Bro. T. R. Comstock be empowered to report the proceedings of this meeting, also the action of the churches in this matter to the Times and Crisis offices for publication. Meeting adjourned sine die. A. HENRY, Chairman.
WM. T. MARTIN, Sec.

At a meeting of the Salt Creek A. C. Church, held on the 23rd day of July, 1876, at the Little school-house in Republic Co., Kan., it was unanimously voted that Eld. E. N. Bliss be its pastor for the ensuing year. We also put all confidence in the ability and christian character of Eld. Bliss, and know him to be a true and tried christian, and a zealous worker for the cause of Christ, and looking for his speedy coming.
WM. T. MARTIN, Cor. Sec.

At a meeting of the Marsh Valley A. C. Church, held on the 30th day of July, 1876, in the Switzer school-house, in Jewell Co., Kan., it was unanimously voted that Eld. E. N. Bliss be its pastor for the ensuing year.

A motion was made by Bro. H. Myers that we, as a church, extend the right hand of fellowship to Bro. E. N. Bliss, and was seconded by Bro. Hale, and carried unanimously; whereupon Bro. E. N. Bliss was cordially welcomed.
WM. HALL, Cor. Elder.

At a meeting of the Salem A. C. Church, held on the 6th day of August, 1876, at the school-house in Salem, Jewell Co., Kansas, it was voted that Eld. E. N. Bliss be its Pastor for the ensuing year.
THOS. R. COMSTOCK, Cor. Elder.

All of the above is respectfully submitted.

AFTERWARD.

Now, the sowing and the weeping,
Working hard and waiting long;
Afterward, the golden reaping,
Harvest home and grateful song.

Now, the pruning, sharp, unsparing,
Scattering blossom, bleeding shoot;
Afterward, the plenteous bearing
Of the Master's pleasant fruit.

Now, the long and toilsome duty,
Stone by stone to carve and bring;
Afterward the perfect beauty
Of the palace of the King.

Now, the tuning and the tension,
Wailing minors, discord strong;
Afterward, the grand ascension
Of the hallelujah song.

Now, the spirit conflict-riven,
Wounded heart, unequal strife;
Afterward, the triumph given,
And the victor's crown of life.

Now, the training strange and lowly,
Unexplained and tedious now;
Afterward, the service holy,
And the Master's "Enter thou!"

QUESTION.

G. E. MERRILL.

"Why do we not know God's will? Because we, in the stubbornness of our own will, do as we please, and then consult God afterwards. God cannot be bargained with. If we advance without taking God's Word, we will discover that instead of walking in God's way, we are following our own way, and desolation will be the result. If undecided as to God's will, in reference to duty, take the Word and kneel before God in retirement, asking for direction. If the Word isn't illuminated, 'stand still,' and see the salvation of God."

When you know not what to do, do nothing. Some of the greatest mistakes in life have been because of failing to wait for a revelation of God's will, and undue haste in going where our zeal leads us. We never really know what rest is till we are willing to wait to find out God's will. O wait, trust, and rest.

"O rest of rests! O peace serene, eternal!
Thou ever livest, and thou changest never;
And in the secret of thy presence dwellest
Fullness of joy, forever and forever."

Worcester, Mass.

WHOM HE LOVETH HE CHASTENETH.

All along the stream of time the chastened ones have been many and their trials sore. Frequently too, the very pungency of the trouble has been, that in their conception it has failed to be directly connected with the great Father's hand. In this respect the Jews had a better faith than we. They saw God in every circumstance, and learned to judge of their own standing in the school of life by the credit and the debit marks drawn by the prosperous or adverse providences in which he dealt with them.

But the practical creed of most of the churches to-day, leaves such vast chasms in the high-way of minor events in which a materialistic philosophy hides God under the rotten tressle-work of second causes, that the sweetness is eliminated from our text, by the doubt whether our chastening be from his hand, or by the wrathful blows of some outraged laws. To us there seems an honor in his chastening, for in the light of our text it becomes a pledge of his love. Even as the bride has a noble pride in wearing the pledge of her husband's affection, so this new affianceship of suffering rejoices in its signet. It is as the Master said, "Now my child, I choose you to illustrate amid your surroundings, some of the most difficult graces of the christian life, and give to you a lofty commission and a holy ministry. Glorify me just here."

Can such a ministry be useless? Can such a commission be unattended by a corresponding empowerment for successful endurance? God makes no mistakes. True, the process may not be agreeable. He says, "No chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous, nevertheless"—Thank God for that nevertheless! "Nevertheless it worketh the peaceable fruits of righteousness to them that are exercised thereby." "Worketh"—a process, a leavening, rather a ripening, to them that are "exercised"—not to those who are insensible of the trouble, or stoical in the trial, but to those who are "exercised"—tossed about, thrown into transient, contradictory states of thought and feeling, like one heaved and wrenched to and fro by a skillful wrestler. Such bring forth the peaceable fruits of righteousness in their tribulations, if they but cling to the great idea that their chastening is from him, and "whom he loveth he chasteneth."—Christian Standard.

SEARCHING THE HEART.

SILAS HENN.

"Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me, and know my thoughts; and see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting."—PSA. 139: 23, 24.

Many, who ask God to search them and try them, would be astonished at the sight of their own moral deformity, if their prayer was answered. Persons sitting in a room into which a dim light only can enter, might be content amidst much dust and many cobwebs; but if the full light of the sun was allowed to penetrate, the discovery of the real state of the room would create discontent and unhappiness.

Professors of religion may have comparative ease while certain evils may nestle within them; but let the searching light of God's truth enter their hearts, and they will at once see what will give them pain and disquietude. Let those whose souls the light has entered, and whose sins are troubling their consciences, determine that sin shall no longer reign within them, but that all shall be given up for Christ.

COME TO CHRIST.

Reader, if you really want to be saved, I give you an invitation this day. If you want to have peace with God now, and glory in heaven hereafter, I invite you to come to Christ at once, and both shall be your own.

I invite you boldly, because of the words which Christ himself has spoken. He says, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy-laden, and I will give you rest."—"Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." Matt. 11: 28; John 6: 37. Reader, are you tired of your sins? Are you laboring and heavy-laden? I invite you this day to come to Christ, and you shall be saved.

I know not who you are, or what you have been in time past, but I say boldly, Come to Christ by faith, and you shall have a pardon. High or low, rich or poor, young man or maiden, old man or child, you cannot be worse than Manasseh and Paul before conversion; than David and Peter after conversion. Come to Christ, and you shall be freely forgiven.

Take the advice I give you this day, and act upon it at once. Stand still no longer, waiting for some imaginary frames and feelings which will never come. Hesitate no longer, under the idea that you must first of all obtain the Spirit, and then come to Christ. Arise and come to Christ just as you are. He waits for you, and is as willing to save as he is mighty. He is the appointed Physician for sin-sick souls. Deal with him as you would with your doctor about the cure of a disease of your body. Make a direct application to him, and tell him all your wants. Tell him you want to be saved, and ask him to save you. Rest not till you have actually tasted for yourself that the Lord is gracious. Cast yourself wholly and unreservedly on Christ, and your soul shall be saved.

Reader, once more I invite you. Come to Christ. The Lord grant the invitation may not be given in vain.—J. C. Ryle.

PECULIAR.

D. B. PEARSON.

We read that God's people are to be a peculiar people, zealous of good works. Jesus Christ was peculiar, so were his disciples. The children of God have always been a peculiar people, and those that are saved when Jesus comes will be peculiar, and not very popular.

Professors of religion have mingled with the world, and so conformed to it that it is difficult for us to tell who are the Lord's and who are not; but the dear Savior knows every sheep of his fold, and he hears the cry of the weakest and most feeble lamb. God help us to be peculiar after a godly sort.

Wilmot, N. H.

THE TEACHING OF SORROW.—Great sorrow is often needed to develop a good teacher. When the oil wells in Pennsylvania dry up, the owners sink great torpedoes of nitro-glycerine down into them, a thousand or fifteen hundred feet to the bottom, and there explode them, rending and crushing the rock on every side, frequently opening pent-up fountains of oil, which change the worthless hole into a richly producing well again. So the christian teacher sometimes seems to dry up. Though a fountain of truth may be hidden in his heart, it is of no value until it is broken open by some sharp providence; until God lets down into that heart some great sorrow, crushing it and setting free the richness of his truth and goodness. Then with what fulness, tenderness, persuasiveness and power does the Christian teacher give forth the truth to his scholars.—Ex.

THE RESURRECTION.—Reflecting the other day upon the sad state of the churches at the present moment, I was led to look back to apostolic times, and to consider wherein the preaching of the present day differed from the preaching of the apostles. I remarked the vast difference in their style from the set and formal oratory of the present age. But the main difference I observed was in the subjects of their preaching. Surprised I was when I discovered that the very staple of the preaching of the apostles was the resurrection of the dead. The apostles when they preached, always testified concerning the resurrection of Jesus, and the consequent resurrection of the dead. It appears that the Alpha and Omega of their gospel was the testimony that Jesus died and rose again from the dead according to the Scriptures.—Spurgeon.

GOLD OR THE GOSPEL.—If the preacher were showering gold pieces upon his audience, every one would contend for his share, and pocket the whole if he could. But where only the Word of God is dispensed the reverse of this is seen. Every one is anxious that his neighbor should gather the most of it, and he forgets himself in his concern for the spiritual welfare of others. The sermon should be almost as direct and personal as the address on a postal card; and the internal marks should be such that it cannot easily fail to reach its intended destination. As Joseph sent messes to each of his brethren, so the preacher will often do with reference to those whom, as the flock of God, he is sent to feed.—Ex.

GROWTH OF GRACE.—There is no better method of growth in grace than the habit of constant communings with the Father of our spirits. It is the secret of progress heavenward. It explains the difference in the rate of advance of different christians. One halts along, another runs. One is of comparatively little use in effort, another is abundant in every good work. The reason is, one is content with simply offering few and feeble petitions, the other holds communion with God, and there comes to him an elevation of spirit, a heavenliness of mind, that makes him joyous, and strong, and effective. In numberless instances has the promise been fulfilled—"they that wait upon the Lord renew their strength, they mount up with wings as eagles, they run and are not weary, they walk and do not faint."—Ex.

HOME AND HEALTH.

EVIL EFFECTS OF ICED-WATER.

It is an abuse of language to style a man temperate merely because he does not drink ardent spirits—at least, so says the New York Times, and subsequently the same paper observes: "While there is no doubt that intemperance in the use of ardent spirits is one of the most deadly evils incident to civilization, it is equally true that intemperance in the use of ice-water is rapidly undermining the constitution of American men and women.

Strange as it may seem to the conscientious man who comprehends the deleterious effects of cold drinks, there are thousands of our best and noblest citizens who are victims to the cold water habit. They begin the day with one or more glasses of ice water before breakfast. During that meal they frequently turn from the coffee which cheers but not inebriates, in case it is sufficiently adulterated with the simple and healthful bean—and satisfy their depraved thirst for water. On their way to their business they stop at the numerous drug stores which shamelessly flaunt their soda water fountains in the face of the public, and hastily pour down the deadly ice-water which perverted ingenuity makes palatable with creams and syrups. In the office or the store, the water cooler, filled with the stomach and tooth destroying beverage, is always at hand; and when the water drinkers return home after a day of constant drinking, they too often spend the greater part of the night in solitary and aquarial debauchery. The result of this pernicious practice has been to fill the country with a class of stomachs that are incapable of any earnest digestive efforts, and to crowd the chairs of busy dentists.

American stomachs and American teeth are gradually growing feebler. The deadly effects of ice water are particularly noticeable just at present. When an overheated man desires an attack of congestion of the brain, there is no plan which he could devise which would be better adapted to secure the end desired than that of drinking water of or below the temperature of 32 degrees. Yet this is precisely what scores of so-called temperate men are continually doing. Water is undoubtedly the most wholesome beverage which we can use, but there is a vast difference between water at a safe and natural temperature and the ice water which alone satisfies the abnormal cravings of the American throat. Let us by all means drink water, but let us decline to endanger our health ank degrade ourselves below the level of the beasts by drinking inordinate quantities of ice-water. There is not a single animal—except man—which ever dreams of contaminating wholesome water with ice."—Exchange.

WHITE BREAD OR BROWN.

At the East a great flour reform has been initiated recently, and is obtaining a foothold even in the army and navy bakeries; also in the public hospitals and asylums. Comparatively few people in the west are aware that the flour and bread which they admire for whiteness, are devoid of all the strengthening properties of the wheat. Bread is the "staff of life" only when it contains a nutritive constituent. There is no nutriment in starch; or, if any, only a small percentage; and yet it is only the starch of wheat that is used in the manufacture of the flour in general use. Directly under the woody fibre, composing the skin of the wheat kernel, we find the real meat of the grain. As in the case with animal meat, it contains phosphates which, taken into the stomach, assimilate with the system and strengthen it.

Shall we throw away, or give to our live stock, this most valuable portion of every kernel of wheat, because it is not white and fine like the starch at the core? Discarding it, the staff of life is not worth a straw, as a support. It is a vegetable meat, serving as a tolerably good substitute for flesh food; hence, in those countries in which it is retained in the flour or meal, the people subsist much less upon animal food than we are compelled to do in this country by our foolish adherence to the exclusive use of the emasculated, fine, white products of our mills and bakeries. In cake, certainly, the cooks and bakers do put in a little something that is nutritive, viz.: sugar and fruit; hence, no objection exists, perhaps, to the use of the popular flour in making those luxuries. Griddle cakes, muffins, waffles, and all that class, (unless made partly of Indian maze or corn meal), ought to contain all the virtues of the wheat; made skillfully of attrition flour, they are not only healthy but delicious.—Chicago Appeal.

HYMNS OF THE ADVENT.—No. 7.

O'ER THE DISTANT MOUNTAINS BREAKING.

O'er the distant mountains breaking,
Comes the reddening dawn of day;
Rise, my soul, from sleep awaking,
Rise and sing and watch and pray;
'Tis thy Savior,
On his bright returning way.

Oh! thou long-expected, weary
Waits my anxious soul for thee;
Life is dark and earth is dreary,
Where thy light I do not see.
Oh! my Savior,
When wilt thou return to me?

He is coming, and the gladness
Fills o'er full my willing heart,
Driving far away all sadness,
Bidding every fear depart.
Oh! how blessed,
Tears of joy refreshing start.

Nears my soul's complete salvation,
Night is spent, the day's at hand;
Keep me in my lowly station,
Watching for thee till I stand,
Oh! my Savior,
In thy bright and promised land.

With my lamp all trimmed and burning,
Swift to hear and slow to roam,
Watching for thy glad returning
To restore me to my home,—
Come, my Savior,
Oh! my Savior, quickly come.

ADDRESS OF MILES GRANT,
President of the American Advent Mission Society,

HELD AT SPRINGFIELD CAMP-GROUND, AUG. 17TH, 1876.

To the American Advent Mission Society greeting:—

A smiling Providence has permitted us to greet each other again in this tented grove, made sacred to many hearts by hallowed associations. The happy experiences on this ground afford a good idea of the meaning of the term, "Feast of Tabernacles." The smiles of heaven, here enjoyed, have been as sunshine after the storm; as home rest to the weary traveler; affording strength to the weak, joy to the sorrowing, and union of hearts in christian love. Sweet memories cluster here, and our hearts glow with lively emotions, as we once more grasp the friendly hand, see the smiling faces, and listen to the cheerful, swelling songs of the happy and the free. Let every heart bless the Lord for his loving kindness and rich mercies that have filled our pilgrim pathway the past year, as we have journeyed towards the Eden of the redeemed.

The review of the work in the mission field during the past year, affords abundant cause for both rejoicing and sadness. Rejoicing, that so much has been done by the faithful, self-denying missionaries; but sadness, to hear the earnest Macedonian cry from the North, South, East and West, while we have not sufficient means to send the needed aid. He who enters the mission field, especially in the South, with the unpopular truth we love so well, is not seeking selfish ease, nor the praise of men; but his is a noble work, and secures the smiles of the heavenly. The following, from one of our missionaries is a sample:

"When I reached Ooltewah Creek, I found that I could not get near the foot-log on account of the water. Here I was, about fifty miles from home, in the woods, about midnight, wet and drowsy; only one mile to the church; but I must walk about twelve miles to cross the stream on a railroad bridge, and then foot it back on the opposite side to the church. I did not see how I could do this in time for meeting Sunday morning, and not be worn out, so as to be unable to preach. After serious meditation and prayer, in the rain, mud, and dark, I made my way back to Ooltewah; went into Mr. Green's boarding house, and slept with a stranger till daylight."

Another writes: "I am acquainted with privations and scarcity of clothing; I have suffered hunger, but only for a short time; but O my heart is pained, when my dear companion says: 'Dear husband, please send your wife and children some money, as I have eaten but two meals a day for two weeks, and have had nothing but corn bread, mixed with salt and water, and then baked.'"

We have read from his pen, and heard from his own lips, the statements of Bro. Cargile, in relation to his lonely walks by night and day, through mud and rain, with his load of tracts on his back; insulted in one place, misrepresented in another, denied a lodging at night, while the family is on short allowance at home, and others in the mission field are having a corresponding experience.

Now, what shall be done for such men? Shall we, who abound in home comforts, let them suffer for a little aid that we can give, without ever missing the boon? Can we withhold without producing our own spiritual starvation? Let us consider ourselves in their places, and then do as we would be done by. It may be your friend, your brother, to whom that man of God is carrying the "gospel of the kingdom." How much would you give to have that missionary visit your dear ones, and lead them to Jesus, showing them the blessed hope, we prize so highly? Would it be a small offering? It would cost from fifty to one hundred dollars to visit those friends, besides weeks of time, and the absence from business and home. This we cannot do; but here are men, who are doing it for us, whose hearts are in the work, and ready to make great sacrifices to bring our loved ones to the cleansing fountain.

Do we hear the response? I would give liberally if I knew the preacher would visit my brother, my son, my daughter, my friend. Jesus speaks in one of the two great commandments, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." If it is not my brother, son, daughter, or friend visited, they are as dear to their home circles as are our loved ones; and their salvation is just as important as that of my friends. If we do it for them, we may expect the Lord will listen when we wish help for our friends, or ourselves. Let us not forget the saying of Jesus: "Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure that ye meet withal, it shall be measured to you again." Luke 6: 38. Do we believe this?

In keeping with this passage, Paul says: "But this I say, He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully. Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity; for God loveth a cheerful giver." And as a result of giving cheerfully and liberally, Paul goes on to say: "And God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work; as it is written, He hath dispersed abroad; he hath given to the poor; his righteousness remaineth forever, ... being enriched in every thing to all bountifulness." 2 Cor. 9: 6–11. What more can we ask?

Listen: "He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto the Lord; and that which he hath given, he will pay him again." Prov. 19: 17. This is the best bank stock for "hard times." These are the surest bonds. How much shall be lent to the Lord? We are only lending him his own. We are ever willing to lend to each other, when sure of its return soon as needed. My mother used to give me bits of silver money, in the days of my boyhood. Sometimes she would wish to borrow it again to make change, or to give some poor person. I had no fears to lend it to her, even to the last cent, for I knew that I could have it back again, whenever desired, and more added. I should have been ashamed to have refused, or even hesitate to accommodate my dear, loving mother. She would have felt sad, if she had thought I did not do it cheerfully; and it would have been an insult to her kindness, her benevolence, her love, and her honesty, to have even intimated she would not give back what she borrowed. In lending, I had a chance to show my confidence in her promises, and she her faithfulness in keeping her word. It gave me comfort to lend, and I loved her the more for having afforded her the accommodating service. She, too, loved me better, because she found me willing to trust and please her.

This same principle, only in a much higher and stronger sense, holds true in our relation to the Lord. All we have is his gift. "The earth is his, and the fulness thereof." 1 Cor. 10: 26. Look again at the promise: "He that hath pity upon the poor, lendeth unto the Lord; and that which he hath given will he pay him again." Prov. 19: 17. "Give, and it shall be given unto you." Luke 6: 38. His word is pledged. Has it ever been broken?

How much shall be lent to him at this time to aid the self denying missionaries in their noble work of trying to save the perishing, and thus add to the number who will help praise the Redeemer in his coming kingdom? Remember it is written: "God loveth a cheerful giver." 2 Cor. 9: 9. Let us then, take delight in putting ourelves in this lovable condition. We read in the Scriptures: "There is that that scattereth, and yet increaseth; and there is that that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty. The liberal soul shall be made fat; and he that watereth shall be watered also himself." Prov. 11: 14, 25. Shall we fear to trust the Infinite? He that withholdeth will be found like the garden with no showers. His peace, his joy, his love, his hope, fade away; and doubts and darkness take their places. Legions of witnesses can give the sad testimony to this truth.

Let us make a bold venture upon the promises of the Most High, and give him an opportunity to honor his word in a way that shall give him glory.

Do we hear the whisper: "It is hard times?" There is no hard times with the Lord. The bank of heaven has never failed to meet the promise-checks. If all at once make a run upon it, they will create no panic among the heavenly hosts. One expressed fears to Bro. Muller, that his orphan supplies might fail during the Franco-German war. He replied that he had unshaken confidence in the ability of the Lord to provide for his two thousand orphans in war times as well as in peace. And thus it proved. If we give liberally, when we have but little, like the poor widow bestowing her mites, we afford the Lord a better opportunity to glorify himself in us than when we give of our abundance. What we do does not glorify him; but what he does for us beyond what we could do for ourselves gives him glory. Give him, then, an opportunity to magnify his benevolence. Why should we give? how much? The answer lies in the importance of the end to be gained. If the object be to raise money to puschase fireworks for a Fourth of July celebration, or to buy articles for a fashionable fair, or a picnic, or a golden gift for a friend, as a token of esteem, we might withhold, and not feel condemned, though some one might whisper, "He's stingy," and thus wound our pride, if any remained. The poor stranger at the door, stretching forth the hand of poverty, may be turned away with a small allowance, but should we learn a loved one was a starving prisoner in a foreign land, or that a dear child was kid napped, like a Charlie Ross, where lives the man that would give sparingly to secure the rescue? and still more to save the life of the dear one. The last dollar would be a cheerful offering.

But this would only be to add a little to a short life, full of troublesome perplexities. If all the noble principles, emotions, and sympathies of common humanity prompt us to do all this to protract temporal interests, how much more should it be done to secure those which are eternal. He would be called a very unwise man, who should toil a lifetime to save a penny, when the same effort in another direction would have secured a hundred thousand dollars. If self can be denied to save a dollar, how much more to save a million. If we can give the last mite to save this life, what shall be withheld when the object to be gained is eternal life? Says the pen of inspiration: "Whoso hath this world's goods, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?" 1 John 3: 17. But this refers only to temporal blessings. What will he say to him who is unwilling to make any sacrifice to save men from eternal ruin? "Depart from me," "thou wicked and slothful servant." "Take . . . the talent from him, . . . and cast . . . the unprofitable servant into outer darkness." Let him be buried under the barren fig-tree, and his name be for ever forgotten.

One of the great principles of Christianity is expressed in the following language: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Matt. 32: 39. Then let us put ourselves in the place of those who are without the "blessed hope" we love so well, and prize so highly; and in view of the approaching judgment, as in sight of our great King, make a free-will offering to the Lord, worthy of the nobleness of true Christians. Jesus gave his all to save us, shall we not deem it a privilege to unite with him, and do what we can to save others! A gift to the Lord is true riches to the giver.

THE GREAT DAY OF THE LORD.

W. J. BOSTWICK.

"Multitudes, multitudes, in the valley of decision; for the day of the Lord is near in the valley of decision."—Joel 3: 14.

The moral atmosphere is rank with the exhalations from the putridity of a rotten society. Those nations where the light of the gospel has shone with such brilliancy, for so many years, and where once was found those priceless treasures of integrity, honor and virtue, have now become the productive beds of fraud, corruption and abomination. Crime, of the most heartless and fiendish nature, stalks unhindered abroad throughout the christian world, and nearly every community in our broad land has its assassin, incendiary, or rapist.

Anxious eyes are just now cast to the future, and men are scanning the political horizon with troubled look and trembling heart. The indications of the approach of some great change, some mighty convulsion, in which all nations will have to take part, and which will shake the world to its foundations, are so prominent, that the most casual observer cannot fail to notice them. Emminent men, the great statesmen who occupy the watch-towers of the nations, see it coming, and look upon its approach with fear and trembling. To them it is a cloud of thick darkness, without a silver lining, or bow of promise, and which does not portend any good to the nations over which they have control. They, who have been called upon to grapple with those grave questions, which are springing up in unlooked-for numbers, upon the safe disposal of which depend the life of nations, are just now fulfilling the prophecy of Zephaniah, and are literally walking like "blind men." The rulers sit upon uneasy thrones, and know not what another year will bring forth. Governments are becoming more antagonistic toward each other daily, and evil is going forth from nation to nation, and a great whirlwind is being raised up from the coasts of the earth. Europe has suddenly become a great camping ground for mighty armies, and the tramp of armed men can now be heard from St. Petersburg to the Euphrates, and from London to Alexandria. The great question which has ruffled the political seas for many years—"the eastern question"—has now come up for final settlement. Already a fire has been kindled along the shores of the Bosphorus, which is spreading with frightful rapidity, and which, we believe, will not go out, but will set all Europe ablaze.

Well does the Lord liken these times to the "sea and the waves roaring;" for truly it does seem as though the woeful winds of the last days were beginning to blow from off the fast approaching storm-clouds of God's wrath, and with increasing severity, upon a lost and ruined world; every blast of which is replete with the elements of distress, pain, trouble, alarm and destruction; and which will finally culminate in that great day of his indignation, in which the heavens will depart as a scroll, and the elements melt with fervent heat; the earth also will quake, and the mountains pour down their molten mass, and He will come, whose right it is, and hurl the king of darkness from off his usurped throne, put an end to sin, and bring in everlasting righteousness. Let us now look upon the last-day church, as foretold by the Scriptures.

THE CHURCH.

St. Paul, in his epistles to Timothy, points out in an unmistakable manner, the character of the apostate church of the last days, in these words: "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come; for men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." Should we apply this picture of the last-day church to the world, we would do nothing more than point out the condition of the world for ages past. The world is dead in sin already, and has no part or lot in Christ, and will continue to grow worse and worse, as each day advances it nearer to the end; therefore, we must look further, and find a people who will fulfil this prophecy to the letter, and bring it out in its true light.

That the prophetic vision of St. Paul was resting upon the condition of the last-day church, when he uttered this prophecy, is patent upon the face of it; for after giving Timothy a description of the character of the individuals who should compose it, he warns him to beware of them, to turn from them. He describes them as "having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof," as "ever learning, but never able to come to a knowledge of the truth;" . . . "men of corrupt minds, reprobate concerning the faith." He then holds up his own life of persecution, trial, and affliction, for Christ's sake, as the character of the true christian, in opposition to that of the apostate church, and declares that all who will live godly in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecution also; and finally exhorts Timothy to "preach the word; be instant in season and out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long-suffering and doctrine," adding that "the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers having itching ears, who shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." This also corresponds with the prophecy of our Lord; viz., "and because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold." Again, "When I come shall I find faith on the earth?"

Yes, startling as it may be, yet it is true, that we here have set before us in an unmistakable manner, a picture of the great Laodicean, the great apostate church of the last days, going hand in hand with the world. We see a uniting of the two. The love that once pulsated the hearts of men and women for the Lord Jesus Christ has now succumbed to the chilling blasts of the world and Satan, and they are in that lukewarm condition, which the Lord declared was so offensive to him, that he would spue them out of his mouth. The world and God are at enmity with each other. That is, the principle which underlies, and upon which is built the religion of the Lord Jesus, and that which governs the world, are antagonistic in their nature, and repel each other just as two opposing magnets, and cannot come together unless a conflict take place; consequently, there should be a wide and noticeable difference in the lives of the adherents of the two. But in these last days, we do not see this difference; but instead, scarcely any difference at all. To draw a line between the church and the world today would be a very difficult matter; for it is impossible to tell where the one leaves off and the other begins. The lives of many of the professors of to-day correspond so exactly with those of the men of the world, that an observer would be puzzled to know which was of the church, and which was of the world. It is a common thing to see the professors of to-day occupying seats in the theatre and vanity show, night after night, feasting their eyes upon scenes that are only fit for devils to look upon, and having their ears tingled with sentences, couched in language which is only fit for the bandy house. Yes, we believe that devils are there in the midst of them, and clap their lurid hands in an applauding manner, at each expression of delight that gleams itself across the face of the hearer. Every foul word that is received with an expression of delight by that man, tittillates the heartstrings of the fiend behind him in like manner.

It is a common thing to see the professor of to-day, joining the throng of pleasure-seekers, as they go forth on the Sabbath day, headed by bands of music, composed by men fresh from the pot house and saloon, playing music, every blast of which sends a wave of defiance and contempt in the face of Him who agonized his life out upon an ignominious cross, and shed his precious blood that they might live. Yes, instead of using this day as a day of supplication, praise and prayer, that they may gain light and strength to walk in the straight and narrow way that leadeth unto life; they join the throng that goes marching down the broad road to destruction.

It is a common thing to see many of the professors of to-day, both male and female, come forth from their homes on the Sabbath day, gotten up in the highest style of art and fashion; and, with prayer-book in hand, sail gracefully down the street, with proud bearing and haughty look, and feelings akin to those of the Pharisee, as he went down to the temple to pray, climb the steps of a heavily mortgaged church, listen to a lecture on one of the great questions of the day, and then go home, throw themselves behind some of the yellow backed novels of the day, and pass the afternoon wading through scenes of blood and carnage, and with vindictive feelings of malice and revenge, join in the chase after some imaginary villain, weeping and agonizing through scenes of woe and distress; while their feelings break out in lamentations over the awful fate of some imaginary heroine. And just beyond them, on the table, its dark covers emblematic of the mournful story within, lies the word of God; the story of him who, out of love for a sinful and dying world, left his home of immortal delights, took upon himself the nature of sinful man, bowed his back to the burden of the world, and, with the waves of persecution licking his every footstep, wended his weary way amidst the insults, the jeers, the stripes, the blows of just such a faithless generation as we have to-day; and, while the great drops of blood poured from his veins, feet, hands, and pierced side; and while the light of the everlasting Father's countenance ceased to shine upon him, burst the chains that bound the world to the throne of the great adversary, and thus bridged the heretofore impassible gulf between earth and heaven with his own death, so that all who would might, by this only way, pass safely over.

It is not an uncommon thing to see the professer of to-day making merry, with sensuous song and ribald jest, with the followers of the beery god, Bacchus, deluging their systems with that vile compound, which steals away the peace from the heart, the bread from the household, the coat from the back, and the intelligence from the brain; forgetting that their bodies should be the temples of the Holy Ghost, and that it is their duty to present them a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, which is their reasonable service.

It is a common thing to see the christians of to-day pouring their wealth into the coffers of the world, helping to build up and support institutions, which in every way oppose the spread of the gospel, while all around are the poor, half-starved ministers of Christ, wearing out brain and muscle, and going foot-sore from one part of the country to the other, in order to point a dying people to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world.

THOUGHTS ON MAN.

BY A BAPTIST.

PENALTY FOR SIN.

Now I return to the penalty for the violation of the law, not to inquire what the penalty is, but the time of its execution which reads, "For in the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die." The skeptic says your Bible is not reliable, for after this it tells us that Adam lived 930 years, consequently he did not die that day. Let us examine a little. The 3rd of Genesis gives an account of the temptation; the fall; the discourse between God and the man and the woman; the promise of a Savior; the legitimate fruits and consequences of transgression; the divine council, and its decision, and God's action in driving man from the garden. It appears that all that is recorded in that chapter, after the eating of the forbidden fruit, was of immediate occurrence. Dr. Hovey, in treating on this passage, puts the emphasis wholly on the first part—"In the day of thy eating;" but suppose we change that and emphasize the word "surely," and then examine the action of God in prohibiting positively and actually, access to the tree of life, as it appears to have been done immediately, or on that day, and then see if we do not remove the difficulty as to time. The import would then be, "In the day that thou eatest thereof, I will take such action as shall surely result in death; for it is evident from the record, that no other means were necessary, or were used to make death a certainty, but prohibition from the tree of life. Paul tells us that death entered by sin, (Rom. 5: 12), but as sin was the only reason why man was cut off from the tree of life, it might be emphatically said that death came by sin, and that too, as the penalty of law.

As the original tree of life in the midst of Eden did not contain healing or remedial qualities, but only had the quality to continue existence in the same condition in which man was when he should partake of its fruit; God, both in justice and in His great love wherewith he loved us, immediately prohibited fallen man from access to it, and instead thereof promised him another tree of life, already agreed upon in the divine council, which agreement, considering the nature of the contracting parties, was equivalent to the complete carrying out of all its details in the divine mind; which tree of life the Revelator saw (Rev. 22: 2), and in describing which he says, "the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations;" showing clearly, that it possesses even in its leaves the remedial properties necessary, so that man may be healed from all the maladies of sin; and be in a condition that when he partakes of the fruit, which shall give eternal life, that the immortality thus received may be as complete and perfect in glory and happiness, as the immortality received by partaking of the fruit of the original tree of life, in his fallen state, would have been in ignominy and misery; which idea seems clearly portrayed by the abundance and variety of its fruits, as well as the frequency of its harvests.

Thus we conclude, that the greatest favor God could bestow on the race was to bring to bear the means necessary to continue man in his then present mortal condition, as that was the only way in which redemption could be wrought out on the plan of substitution (as death was the penalty of law), which substitution was wrought out in its details, some four thousand years after, in Gethsemane, and on Calvary in the suffering and death of Christ.

Another reason for the doctrine of the entirety of man's mortality is the fact, that that is the only ground that will give the importance to the atonement to which it is entitled; for if a man possesses inherent immortality, then he was not dependent on Christ as the atoner for his eternal being, but only for the circumstances of that being. The more perfect and complete a state of glory and happiness may be, correspondingly painful must the thought be (if well founded), either that it shall cease, or that we shall by any means become incapacitated to enjoy it; so that to make the happiness perfect there must be an assurance of continuance in both particulars, as a basis, or foundation, on which the whole superstructure is built. But if our immortality is inherent, and not through Christ, then, in that particular, he is not the foundation or chief corner stone. But to estimate fully the value of the atonement, we must not only look at what man was redeemed from; but also at what man is redeemed to. Christ says, "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me, and I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any pluck them out of my hand." Here we have not only the assurance of immortality through Christ, but also of being with him, which is a full assurance of the state of happiness. I am aware that using the terms immortality and eternal life as identical in meaning is not in accordance with what is termed Orthodox doctrine; but I cannot see any propriety in any distinction after all that has been said in its favor.

John in vision saw the sealing of a hundred and forty-four thousand from the tribes of Israel; and then saw "a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations . . . . before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes; and finally closes the description by repeating what one of the Elders said to him:—"These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." Now if an innumerable number of mortal beings are clothed with immortality, and eternal life permeated and filled them with blessedness and glory to such an extent that an inspired apostle, instead of attempting a description of it himself, quoted from an inspired prophet, "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him;" may we not conclude that there is no danger of placing too high an estimate on what Christ has done, or of ascribing to him more than he has done, in giving him the credit of our immortality, which will be the basis on which the redeemed shall, through all eternity, enjoy the salvation spoken of by the prophet? Could we fully grasp such thoughts and delineations, we might then have some just conceptions of the importance of the atonement. Thus Christ is not only "the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth," but also the "all-in all."

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST.

We are surprised to learn that from the days of Joshua until the times of Nehemiah, the feast of Tabernacles was not observed by the children of Israel. (Neh. 8: 17). This fact seems at first glance to be inexplicable when we remember that the feast so long neglected was specially typical of millennial glory and gladness, and that it was celebrated amid all the accompaniments and tokens of national rejoicing. (Lev. 23: 40). It is strange, therefore, that when established in their land, the festival which at once reminded them of their wanderings in the wilderness, and looked forward to the rest and victory awaiting them at the close of their troubled history, should have dropped out of the notice of God's people for a thousand years.

But their settlement in the land may account for the singular indifference they manifested to the most joyous of all their feasts. Alas! they became contented with their worldly prosperity, proud of their success, and wedded to that which was seen and temporal. They did not care to recall the wearisome journeys of their fathers across the trackless desert, nor to anticipate the spiritual blessings promised in the future under the personal reign of their Messiah.

As the crowning festival of the year admonished them that, like those who had gone before them, they were still strangers and pilgrims on the earth, and was evermore saying, "Arise ye, and depart, for this is not your rest, because it is polluted" (Micah 2: 10); they sought to hush its voice by banishing it entirely from their thoughts.

Something like this is seen now in the Christian church. For three hundred years after the crucifixion of our Lord, the promise of his return was the cherished faith of his disciples, and all the records of those years, ecclesiastical and secular, conclusively prove that believers stood on the tiptoe of expectation, "looking for that blessed hope," animated by it to the most heroic efforts, armed with it by the most unflinching courage, strengthened by it for the most arduous toils, sustained by it in the most painful trials.

But when they were established in the land, and taken under the sheltering wing of the state, that blessed hope gradually faded from their vision, and they turned their attention to the fruitless task of attempting to improve the world, from which they ought to have measured their separation by the exact measure of their Savior's separation. (John 17: 16). Then they did not love to remember the terrible journey of their fathers through fiery persecutions, nor to confess amid their fancied triumphs the need of Christ's personal coming to put an end to the groans and travailing pains of the whole creation; and so their feast of Tabernacles fell into disuse.

But even though the virgins slumber, it still remains true that the Bridegroom cometh, and it still remains true that this coming glances out like a beam of glory from one verse in every twenty-five of the New Testament, and it still remains that with this coming the Holy Spirit always associates the word "hope," as it belongs to christian experience.

The Scriptures never hint that the bride will reign on the earth without the Bridegroom, and who could desire such a thing? Dear as the church is to our hearts, she is not so dear as Jesus himself, and it is certainly a sad revelation when she shows that she wishes, and expects, and strives to sway the sceptre of power among the nations, apart from the visible appearing of her Lord. Many need to be reminded that loyalty to the church does not necessarily include loyalty to Christ.

Neither he nor the Spirit of God in the inspired apostles makes the slightest allusion to the progress of the church as the proper object to fix our attention, but constantly is the personal coming of the Lord held forth to cheer us amid discouragements, to comfort us amid sorrows, to nerve us to fidelity. When he was taking leave of his disciples, what did he say to sustain their sinking hearts? that they would achieve brilliant success in preaching? Nay, but, "If I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." John 14: 3.

When he warned them against the terrible danger of conformity to the ways of the world, what did he say? that they would thus arrest the prosperity of the cause which they were called to advocate? Nay, "But and if that evil servant shall say in his heart, My Lord delayeth his coming, the lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him." Matt. 24: 48, 50.

When he put them on their guard against the encroachments of spiritual slumber, and sought to arouse them to unflagging wakefulness, what did he say? that only by incessant vigilance they could convert the nations? Nay, but, "Watch, therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh." Matt. 25: 13.

When he promised the power of the Holy Spirit coming upon them, and made them his witnesses unto the uttermost part of the earth, what did he say to stimulate them to a faithful discharge of their high commission? that the uttermost part of the earth would believe their testimony? Nay, but he sent two men in white apparel to tell them, "This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts 1: 11. "And they worshiped him, and returned to Jerusalem with great joy." Luke 24: 52.

Thus it is through the entire new Testament, flashing out from almost every page, "whereunto," says the Holy Spirit, "ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day-star arise in your hearts." 2 Peter 1: 19.

THE RISK OF FAITH.

Faith is confidence in the Word or testimony of God, and may be superficial or perfect, imaginary or real. Superficial faith will not save us, and therefore it is of infinite importance to us to know whether our faith saves or deceives us.

To provide for our safety in this matter, God has furnished such means and made such arrangements that all have the proof given them of the genuineness of their faith, so that all can try themselves so see if they be "in the faith."

Superficial confidence in the revelations of God is always produced by proof determined by a human or satanic standard, so that no statement of God is believed as given, which does not harmonize with human education, philosophy and science; while true confidence rests entirely upon the proof that the God of truth said it, and therefore it must be true.

God will accept man's full and unqualified confidence in himself, and will not accept that which is partial or subject to qualifications. This we believe to be the grand and vital point in gospel faith.

To test the perfection of man's faith, God must make some revelations which would be rejected by the human standard and accepted only by the divine rule; and thus prove whether a man believed a revealed statement because it was in harmony with his understanding of the matter or simply because God had said it.

If a man wished to test his friend's confidence in his character for truth, he would not invite him to believe a statement no one would be liable to discredit, but something that would tax his credulity,—something that he would not believe only upon the assurance that the friend's character would not suffer him to misrepresent. So it is with our heavenly Father; he will permit us to have an experimental test of our confidence in him by giving us revelations which men, unassisted by a divinely vitalized confidence in the truthfulness and veracity of Jehovah, would never believe.

This principle requires that God keep before his people of all generations, revelations presenting events which men, looking from a human standpoint, resting their arguments upon reason and science, would not believe. The inspired record of saving faith and the history of the men possessing and exercising it through all the historic ages proves the principle Scripturally correct.

The coming of a flood of waters, sufficient to drown man and beast from the face of the earth, was to Noah and all the people of his generation marvelous, and to the multitudes an incredible miracle; and for this reason the revelation foretelling it was discredited by those who lacked true confidence in God, while Noah, with an inspired assurance that God would not fail to do all he had said, prepared for the miraculous event.

Abraham received the promise from God that his seed should become the father of a great nation and inherit the land promised by oath to him; and he was required to believe this after his wife had passed age. He could have believed this without the inspiration of a divine assurance before the foretold mother had passed the half century, but when she had become old and dim-eyed, nothing but a heaven-given confidence could cause his faith to expect a legal heir.

That Abraham might become the father of the faithful, that is, that he might exhibit a sample faith to all the people of God who should follow him, God called him, after having received this perfect demonstratation that the child was given him by the direct interposition of infinite power for a specific, stated purpose, to take the life of that son before the divine purpose of his becoming a "father" had been accomplished; thus apparently making void his own Word by a subsequent revelation.

God would test him to see if he would tenaciously hold the first and second installments of truth, notwithstanding it necessitated him to believe in the grandest of miracles—the resurrection of the dead. If he still believed, after receiving the commandment to offer his son, that he would become a father, he must believe that subsequent to his death he would re-live, so that the first promise could be fulfilled.

God has given this faith of Abraham, embracing these truths, as the pattern of saving faith approved by him. Paul presented this subject very clearly in the 11th of Hebrews, bringing to view a large number of cases of justified faith; and in every one of them he presents as the grand testing point of complete fidelity to God, that they believed in the divine testimony of coming miraculous events, unheard of in human science and experience.

With all those men of faith, who were looking for such events, viewing the subject from a human standpoint, there was a mighty risk in the proclamation of and preparation for such events. Noah perilled all his worldly honor and interests upon the truthfulness of one prophetic message from God. His confidence in that truth was tested by his willingness to sacrifice his present earthly advantages and prospects upon the assurance that truth gave him of future triumph and glory.

So it was with Moses. As a prince of Egypt his prospects were bright; but as a brother and partner of the Hebrew slaves, his prospects politically were perfectly dark and hopeless. But his unwavering confidence in the promise the God of his fathers made to Abraham, that he would bring his seed out of the land of bondage, to possess the delightful land of Canaan, and that the appointed time had come for their exode, caused him to sacrifice his present advantages, riches and glory upon his faith that God would, by a stupendous miracle, deliver his people from their task-masters and carry them with an almighty arm through the sea and wilderness to their coveted home. So it was with David in his battle with Goliah. From a human, military standpoint he must have appeared like a reckless youth, about to foolishly sacrifice his life and disgrace his people; but God had taught him the glorious lesson, that when he raised his arm to battle for him, unearthly power was vouchsafed to give certain victory.

This is the kind of faith God's true people have manifested through all the ages of Bible history. In fact it is the only faith which can test a man's confidence in God as he almighty Controler of all things; for if we believe he can do all things we shall not question his ability to do whatsoever he reveals.

But where is this faith now manifested, that takes hold of truth which presents mighty miracles in prospect?—the changing of earth and earth-scenes, the rending of the heavens, the rolling the mountains into a furnace of fire, the melting the elements as a founder melts his ore, the final overthrow of strong empires, the demolition of rich cities, and the resurrection of the long slumbering dead? Who has got confidence so strongly fixed in the sure word of prophecy, which presents for anticipation such mighty miracles, as to risk earthly honor, position and wealth in the proclamation and preparation for them. Who of this nineteenth century will dare to do by faith what Noah, Lot, and Moses did? Has God changed his government, so that he does not require men to manifest their confidence in him by such fearful risks as they were called to run? or has the standard been lowered to suit those who have a weak and sickly faith, which staggers under the frowns of scoffing infidels, and hides behind the fog-banks of science, falsely so called? Looking at the church of this generation we do not wonder that the Savior said, "Nevertheless, when the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" Reader, be careful that you have the faith which will stand the test of the gospel standard, and acquit you at the final judgment.

THE SITUATION IN THE EAST.

There are constantly changes taking place among the powers and elements connected with the Turkish war, all progressing toward the final termination of the strife. What the finality of the bloody strife will be is the great question now exciting the world. We can see no reason in the recent progress of the war and peace elements to change our position as to its being a prophetic war; the disturbing question never to be settled until the battle of the Great day is introduced.

Turkey shows signs of internal discord by so often changing her Sultans; one week bidding defiance to all the Powers by rejecting their proposals, and the next week yielding to their invitation to suspend hostilities.

A cessation of hostilities has been ordered by Turkey and Servia for ten days, commencing the 15th; but Servia complains that the Turkish commanders have violated the order, so that there is less prospect for peace than before.

The war excitement in Russia is rapidly increasing, and it is said that the Czar, who is personally pacific, cannot restrain the people from rushing to arms. England is in a very similar condition; for while Disraeli and Lord Derby are straining every nerve to preserve peace, the masses of the people are agitated like a boiling pot, and howling in their vast indignation-meetings for vengeance upon the Turks.

How perfectly these things fulfil the Word of God; for when the kings—rulers—refuse to drink the cup of war, God says, "Tell them ye shall certainly drink." The excited people are driving the governments into a terrible war. We can see from the Scriptures no hope of future permanent peace for the nations, and certainly the present outlook of the governments and their subjects perfectly harmonize with them. An editorial in the Boston Journal expresses our views upon this subject very clearly as follows:

THE STRUGGLE IN THE EAST.—Russian sympathy with the Servians may now be said to be fairly at its utmost height. The whole Empire is filled with parties engaged in raising subscriptions to aid Prince Milan's army in prosecuting the war. Committees of Russian ladies have interested themselves in the work, and labor as valiantly at the preparation of lint and bandages and at the collection of money, as if their own husbands and brethren were actually engaged in the war. The nobles and the peasants are alike eager to see the continued success of the Servian arms; and it is pretty certain that they will insist that the Emperor Alexander shall send Prince Milan aid, if he really needs it. Although Russia may not be regarded as fully ready to go to war, never has she been so anxious and determined. She feels that the hour of her opportunity is rapidly approaching, and begins to discern that other powers will not interfere with her designs, at least for the present. England seems compelled to withdraw from the false position of supporting the barbarians and marauding Turks, who must be driven out of Europe as they came into it, by force of arms; and Germany appears willing to allow the Russians to open their campaign very much as they please. No great power promises that it would not eventually engage in a struggle in which Russia should take the lead; but all appear resolved to allow the Servians to be aided by the Russians, and to let Russia strike pretty much as she pleases against the Turks, provided, always, that a definite peace cannot be established through the mediation of the principal nations. In this condition of affairs it is evident that exciting events may before many weeks be expected to occur in Europe; and it is not strange that the English are already hinting at the convocation of an extra session of Parliament.

The manner in which the Turks approach the preliminaries of peace do not indicate any strenuous desires on their part to compromise. On the contrary, they ask privileges of Europe which that assemblage of nations has once taken away from them, simply because they made them the basis of cruel barbarities. They wish practically to restore Servia to the degraded position that she occupied previous to 1857, when the Turks held the fortresses and were thus enabled to exact anything and everything which they desired. They wish to have all the fortresses built by the Servians since 1857 utterly destroyed, leaving the country without a particle of defensive power. They wish to bring Prince Milan to Constantinople, and there make him go through the humiliating process of avowing himself a vassal. They wish to reduce the Servian army to a small and insignificant force. Every one of these conditions, pressed by the Turks as the basis of peace, is an insult to Russia. There is not one which that great power can conscientiously accept; and it is pretty safe to say, not one that will be accepted. Even the English admit that the Turks cannot be allowed to re-occupy the fortresses from which they were expelled. There is much truth in the cynical saying that when the powers begin to talk of a conference, war is near at hand.

Of course no one can venture to predict at what state Russia, throwing aside all reserve, will enter the field against the Turks; but Europe is convinced that she will do it sooner or later. The slightest pretext will now suffice. A campaign during the winter months would be perfectly feasible, and should the Turkish forces succeed in gaining some immediate victories over the Servians, Russian interference is not far off. On the other hand, should it appear that the Turkish commanders have really retired to Nisch and intend to make a long halt there, Russia would be glad of a delay that she might perfect her fine military organization still farther. The Servians do not appear to have lost heart at all, and their generals are acting in a manner which plainly shows that they expect material aid as well as advice from Russia.

LATEST NEWS FROM THE EAST.

This morning's news from the seat of war is truly thrilling to us, startling to the nations especially interested, and joyful to the anxiously waiting servants of Jesus. The ten days' cessation of hostilities, intended as a means of effecting a reconciliation between the beligerents by the mediation of the Great Powers, ends this morning, Sept. 25th. It was said by many who understood the subject, that if hostilities were renewed at the end of those days, the prospect of peace would be nearly lost. The lightning news says that the fight will be renewed very early this morning with renewed determination on both sides, and that Russia is fully determined to carry the war to the bitter end. It seems to us we never have had any thing so definitely prophetic in this great movement, to determine the immediate future, as the present status of the war.—ED.

"RUINS EVERYWHERE."

So says the Pope, when referring to what has been done in his empire since 1859, and more especially since 1870, when he lost the last fragment of political power. Some two thousand three hundred years ago, the prophet Daniel, then a captive at Babylon, says the God of heaven told him that after the "little horn" had made war against the saints for a long time, then it would lose its dominion, a short time before the coming of the Son of man.

We live to see the day when Daniel's prophecy is being fulfilled in the most faithful manner, leaving no foundation to doubt the truth of what he wrote. The Pope's own talk shows that the last prophetic items relating to the Papacy are now fulfilling.

On the 22nd of last March, the Pope made a remarkable speech in the Consistorial Hall, in the Vatican. It was addressed to an International Deputation, composed of representatives from America, England, Ireland, France, Germany, Austria, Poland, Holland, Belgium, and Italy. The Pope was accompanied by five Cardinals, and a large number of bishops, prelates and laymen. He said:

"When I turn mine eyes around the different points of the Catholic world, I find before me everywhere the sad and dolorous spectacle of immense masses of ruins, caused by the cruel perfidy of the enemies of the church in the present revolution. I see convents and monasteries which were but lately inhabited by peaceful Cenobites and by virgin spouses of Christ, now deserted by their former occupants in order to make room for people strange and profane, and sometimes worse than profane. I see the fair riches and possessions of the church made the prey of the devourers of to-day, and destined to satiate the insatiable appetite of the revolution. '' I see the ruins everywhere. I see the rights of the church trampled on and outraged, the ecclesiastical hierarchy interrupted and made useless, because all are condemned, no matter what their grade, to pay that most terrible of tributes, the tribute of blood in the fields of battle, and the church is impeded from selecting her own ministers. I see liberty of teaching rendered a monopoly, which every day augments the tyrannical oppressions, and which is accompanied with error, and sometimes also with blasphemy. I see tolerance for many crimes and offenses against God, against morality, and against social order. And very often I see judicial sentences inspired, not by justice, but by the evil-born passions which ever dominate in times disturbed by revolution. These and many other things are what form the great mass of the ruins of the church, which, scattered here and there, occupy an immense space."

The inquiry comes, "Who has produced these "ruins of the church?" The Italians, who once supported it. Seventeen hundred and eighty years ago, when on the isle of Patmos, John was shown in vision what has been taking place in our day. Her bloody persecution of the saints has been recorded on the pages of history during the last one thousand two hundred years, and now her turn has come to "drink of the wine of the wrath of God." Hers is a terrible doom. Let all the friends of Jesus be ready for translation. The glad hour of deliverance is rapidly approaching.

BETHEL CAMPMEETING.

It was my privilege to be at the Bethel, Vt., campmeeting, which was one of special interest. The weather was very unfavorable, but the religious results were said to be the best ever witnessed on that camp-ground. The order was excellent. A goodly number converted and eleven baptized. Among the converts, and those baptized, were some three or four Catholics. The meeting increased in interest and power every day. A large number made a full consecration to Christ, and were filled with the Spirit. Nearly all pulled one way. About every minister present united in efforts to advance Scriptural holiness, and could testify of the blessedness of laying all upon the altar of sacrifice. I have been at no campmeeting where so large a proportion of the lay members present made a full surrender to Jesus. For these reasons, the conference meetings were very rich feasts, characterized by a deep-toned devotion, and much power. Several young men were converted and took a bold stand in the service of the Lord. Others were almost persuaded to become the disciples of Jesus. The spirit of brotherly love was very prominently manifested during the progress of the campmeeting, and continued to grow stronger, the longer we were together. Those who attended the meeting had great reason to thank the Lord for such a heavenly privilege.

The campmeetings this year have been extra good. The more the spirit of holiness prevails, the richer, and the more lasting the results. The time has come when all who wish to be ready to meet Jesus should sanctify themselves wholly to him, and let the "old man" be fully crucified. "The end of all things is at hand."

M. G.

"THE OLD CAMP-GROUND."

The vast throng has departed. All around oppressive stillness reigns. The hundreds of rude dwellings, from which but yesterday arose great volumes of prayer and song, are silent now as graves. The "Old Stand" from which flowed, in impassioned earnestness, the inspired messages of the holy, prophetic Word, grand, solemn and startling as the voice of God resounding through a guilty, doomed world, is hushed now and voiceless, as will be the throne of mercy when mediation is ended.

The well-filled ranks of plain, sound-minded men, called of God and anointed, are seen no longer in their customed places, with tear-filled eyes lifted to heaven, and lips quivering with unuttered prayer,—heard only at the throne,—as one by one the Spirit leads them forth to the waiting people, burdened with the glorious, awful tidings—"Behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him, and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. Even so. Amen."

Despised, yet honored men! When the great King shall award crowns of life, and pronounce blessings on faithful servants who fed the flock with meat in season, they shall be well remembered.

But O, this voiceless solitude! The great leaf-covered amphitheatre, so lately crowded with ardent, waiting worshippers, is as painfully vacant, and touchingly suggestive as a death-saddened hearth-stone. The trees, tall and gracefel as angels, seem keeping sentry over the deserted shrines, covering with long interwoven branches the sacred enclosure, as the Seraphim covered the mercy-seat with their wings. The air drips with breath of parting words, fondly but sadly spoken. The winds, that chimed their voices through rustling leaves with the swelling symphonies of praise, are hushed among the surrounding hills, and the plaintive whippowil, touched with the common sadness, withholds her evening song.

But as we sit alone in the sacred, solitary arena, and "let our thoughts throng on us as they will," the whole scene suddenly changes. Voices are heard in heaven; a radiant glory streams across the sky, the white clouds divide, the pure drapery of the throne is folded back by angel-hands, and "ten thousand times ten thousand" seraphs shout till all worlds vibrate with the glad acclaim,—"He cometh; the great King cometh, to take the sceptre of man's revolted world, and reign in righteousness forever. Down rolls his chariot of flame; light breaks over the wide domain of death; the myriad sleepers wake to life, and stand in immortality secure; the living changed "in twinkling of an eye" join the newly risen throngs, and from countless lips of washed, and ransomed ones rolls up the sweet refrain,—

"Hallelujah! Jesus comes on earth to reign."
"Hallelujah! Welcome, welcome, Son of God."

Eden's bright, blushing morn, so long and darkly clouded, yet prayed for by the just in tears and sorrows through the weary ages, now spreads its primal beauty over a ransomed world. The long, black shadows lift and pass away; night, and death, and sin "are felt and feared no more;" the weary, shattered, wasted earth, touched by renewing energy, stands robed in ancient splendor, as when the sons of God sang in joy together over its finished beauty: the New Jerusalem comes down—"city of the great King,"—and through its spacious, glory-lighted mansions reverberates the high, endless ascription—"Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father; to him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen."

May the hour hasten when what is now but faint anticipation shall become grand, glorious, eternal reality. Until that glad moment comes—now surely near—may the Holy Spirit give abundant strength to all the dear children of the kingdom, to hold the faith so divinely revealed to us, without wavering to the end.

Dark, and wild, and terrible is the night; but the cloud still goes before, and mountains, seas and devils retire at His presence who has conquered sin, death and hell.

Entire loyalty to Christ, and heroic devotion to duty make eternal life a certainty, "though heaven and earth shall pass away." Weak, timorous ones, frightened and trembling under the dreadful assaults of Satanic power and darkness, take instant and constant covert in the heart of Him "who is able to save to the "uttermost." He loves you, cares for you, and will save you.

E. C. STOCKMAN.

BRO. WM. KELLAWAY, of London, England, expected to sail for his sphere of labor on Saturday; but he writes us that from circumstances which have transpired he expects to be in America for a fortnight beyond the day mentioned; and any friend wishing to write to him upon any matter, can do so, addressing their letters to the care of Mr. Geo. T. Adams, Crisis office. He will be at liberty to preach in Mass., Conn., or New York, during the remainder of his tarry, and will be happy to respond to any invitation that may be given him.

PENCIL POINTS.

I. I. LESLIE.

Submitting. To whom submit? for submission is commanded. To God surely; but to whom else? Not to everybody, for this would include the devil and all his subjects. Not them who wear the garb of christianity, and are in the service of Satan. Submission to these? Never! "Submitting yourselves one to another in the fear of God"—to your own brethren in the heavenly family, into which you have been adopted, and thereby brought very, very near to every member thereof—to them of the same faith, hope and love. To these alone in the fear of God we can and should submit. No danger here. The arms of those who love God and us are a safe place; and to these we can without fear submit.

Wages not cut down. There are some wages that are never cut down; but which cut down all who work for them. Many work for these wages, and die because they receive them. These wages are never kept back, but are faithfully and promptly paid. He who works for them cannot decline to receive them. They are always unwillingly received. Many, therefore, work for wages they hope not to have paid them. What are these wages? Do you work for them?

Religious stories. Are all religious stories true? Who would tell or write a religious lie? But has no one done this? If no one has, then all religious stories are true. But who believes that all religious stories are true? If some of them are not true, who can tell which of them are not false? But if some of them are false, then somebody has told or written a religious lie. If they are stories told and written without any proof or evidence of their truthfulness, who can believe them? Religious lies? Yes, we see them in print; we hear them told—told in the pulpit; told in the conference and prayer-room; told on the camp-ground; told everywhere, and told differently every time. Many of them are worn out, everybody having heard them until they are stale in their ears. Poor material with which to convict sinners, or keep saints from falling. Brother, sister, leave out the stories, unless you know they are true.

Selfish Christians. Are there such christians as these? A christian selfish? Ask if Christ was selfish. Ask if a christian can be unlike Christ. This he must be if he is selfish. But to be unlike Christ is not to be a christian. Yet the world is full of christians (?) who are selfish. Not selfish, however, with their religion. They are willing to impart this to everybody; for as it cost them nothing, and there is plenty where this was obtained, they give it freely. Why should they not offer it to others without price? With them it is simply a talking religion, and it is, therefore, talk that they offer. A talking religion. Who will say that it is not offered freely and cheap?

CONSOLIDATION.

Bro. Editor:—Permit me to say to your readers, that the Biblical Messenger is henceforth to be merged into the Bible Banner. The former will simply lose its identity, while the latter will be sent to the Messenger subscribers. It is hoped and believed that this will be a satisfactory arrangement. Let all who are interested in the Messenger, direct their letters and communications hereafter to the Bible Banner, Vineland, N. J.

I would also state that Bro. William Sheldon will henceforth share with me the responsibility of publishing the Banner, while D. T. Taylor, William Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps, will be the joint Editors. There is some prospect that one or two more may be added. It is designed to make the Banner so strong and good a paper that Bible-loving people cannot well afford to do without it. Terms: One dollar a year, strictly in advance. Half price to ministers of all denominations. Postage paid by the publishers. The year may begin with any month. Direct simply: Bible Banner, Vineland, N. J.

Your Brother, A. A. PHELPS.

The symptoms of spiritual decline are like those which attend the decay of bodily health. It generally commences with loss of appetite, and a disrelish for wholesome food, prayer, reading the Scriptures, and devotional books. Wherever you perceive these symptoms, be alarmed, for your spiritual health is in danger; apply immediately to the great Physician for a cure.

THE TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, held at its rooms, 144 Hanover Street, Boston, on the 5th of September, 1876, it was voted that the Society make diligent effort to raise the sum of Two Thousand Dollars for the Tract Fund. This is one of the most important departments of our field of labor, and the Society intend to make more earnest efforts than ever before to publish the soul-stirring message of Christ's speedy second advent, and the precious truths connected therewith. To this end the Society solicits the aid of its friends and sympathizers, and hopes that donations to this object may be prompt, liberal, and hearty.

FROM BRO. J. A. BUGAN.

TO THE A. A. M. SOCIETY.

Dear Brn.:—I wish to write a few words in relation to Bro. Smith's labors in Marshall and Madison counties.

Several days ago he came to Mt. Zion, and preached twice to attentive crowds. The C. P. Brn., were holding a meeting at this place, and treated Bro. Smith kindly. I hope some good has been done. He labored with them several days in the altar and in the prayer meeting.

After resting with me for a day or two, we started to Madison county, to preach the glad tidings of a Savior's coming the second time to save his people, and set up his Kingdom of righteousness and peace on this same earth, over which Satan and sin have so long held dominion. A small congregation met us in the grove, near Bro. J. T. Dilworth's, on Friday evening, and we tried to show the importance of searching the Scriptures. Saturday morning we met again, and again in the evening. Our congregation grew larger, and attention good. On Sunday, Bro. Smith lectured on prophecy; and when he had done, it seemed that conviction had fastened upon some, and others knew not what to think. We gave out quite a number of tracts and papers to inquiring minds. What the end of these things will be, who can tell?

A few years ago I had not heard of the Second Adventists, and when I did, it was only to hear them evil spoken of as a class of dangerous heretics. A year or two later I heard Bro. Smith preach, and now their influence is felt all over the communities where they have been. We have twelve or fifteen preaching brethren, and there are others who I think will soon throw down their creeds and preach the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ. God grant that it may be so.

Brethren, we have no money to carry us through the country on Railroads and Steamboats, but generally have to wend our way over mountains and valleys on foot, and carry our papers and tracts on our shoulders, and preach the glad message out of doors. Pray for us, that we may be faithful.

THE LEAVEN AT WORK.

E. MOSS.

I am pained to see how the leaven of infidelity is at work in the church. When I united with the Methodist church, about thirty years ago, the doctrine of the resurrection of the body, as the hope of the church, was then believed and taught by her ministers; and so continued to be until within the last ten years. We shall never forget the effect produced by a sermon on the resurrection, preached in the Methodist church at New Hope, Pa., in the year 1847, by Rev. P, Hallowell. After describing the nature of the resurrection, showing that it is a literal resurrection of the body from the grave, to immortality and eternal life, and speaking of the joyful, happy greetings of those who have part in the first resurrection, Rev. 20: 6, he closed by requesting the congregation to join in singing what was then a familiar and popular song:

"We will have a resurrection
From the old church yard.
CHO.—With a band of angels
We'll go shouting through the air.
We will see our Jesus coming
To the old church yard.—CHO.
We will have a happy meeting
From the old church yard.—CHO.

This is all that we can remember of the hymn, as it has long since ceased to be sung in our churches. The tune is yet familiar and loved. During the singing of this hymn the congregation indulged in a regular, old-fashioned Methodist shout, unlike anything heard in her churches to-day, so general and and hearty in its character. The Lord owned the faithful presentation of the word; the Holy Spirit applied the truth, and blessed were the results.

Alas, how times have changed! Now we seldom hear a sermon on the resurrection, unless it be on Easter Sunday; and then it is generally a labored effort to prove the resurrection of Christ, and nothing said about that of our own bodies. But this silence is easily accounted for, because of the dilemma in which modern theologians are placed by teaching a literal resurrection of the body at the end of this dispensation, and at the same time believing that an immortal, spiritual, soul entity leaves the body at death and goes to its reward.

A short time ago I heard a sermon from the text, "He is not the God of the dead, but of the living," in which the preacher said, The Patriarchs are now in their resurrection bodies, with God in heaven, as all saints are who have since died. And others, I find, also teach that at death we receive our resurrection bodies. How are the mighty fallen!

I believe that much of the infidelity and Spiritualism which is leading the church from the Fountain of living waters, can be traced directly to the teachings of Emanuel Swedenborg. His followers during the last decade have manifested unprecedented zeal in spreading their pernicious doctrines. They have raised sufficient money to present a large well bound volume of the works of Swedenborg to every minister of every church in the land. They are furnished by the publishers, J. B. Lippincott & Co., Philadelphia, to all who apply for them. A great many have been given out and read, and we see the working of the leaven, by the rapid growth of Spiritualism, and the revival of the doctrine of the Sadducees. Oh that the Lord would raise up a standard against this evil, seducing spirit! Ought we not to put forth as much effort to spread an antidote to this poison? Should not a number of our best doctrinal tracts be bound together in a neat volume, and a copy be placed in the hands of every clergyman in the country? Cannot the money be raised for that purpose? Think about it brethren.

REMINISCENCE.

A. W. B.

It is Sabbath day, fair and beautiful, and I am thinking of the R. I. Campmeeting. Last year it was our privilege to be there. We went in company with ten of our friends, and spent a week with the people of God. This year only two of our company have gone. Many cares keep some of us at home. One sister stays to watch over a sick husband; and another, dear Etta, the daughter of Bro. J. S. Eldridge, sleeps in Jesus.

While there last year she gave her heart to the Lord, and came home and told her young companions and all around what a dear Savior she had found. Soon after she followed Christ in baptism. When we stood on the bank of the river, and saw her walk into the water with her father, and heard him say, "My dear child, I baptize thee in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost," many eyes were filled with tears. Little did we think her young life would close so soon.

We commenced prayer-meetings at our house the last of Oct., and continued them all winter. Bro. Eldridge came nearly five miles to attend them. Etta most always came with him. Her voice mingled in the songs of praise, and her testimony for Jesus was never withheld. O blessed seasons, never to be forgotten! Eternity will unfold the good that was done. Sometimes they would be a little late, and we would hear the remark—"I am afraid Bro. Eldridge will not come to-night, it is so cold;" but soon we would hear Etta's cheerful voice at the door, and she would come in, her face radiant with smiles, the picture of health. But alas! the destroyer came in the beautiful month of May, in the form of canker rash, and in one short week she was carried to the grave. O death! could ye not be satisfied with so fair a prize? No; in another week it came again, and took little Minnie; and together they sleep, side by side, safe from all temptation.

Bro. and Sr. E. sorrow not as those without hope, for soon the trump of God will sound and they will come forth clad in immortal beauty. Our prayer often ascends—"Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly," and put an end to sickness, pain and death, and save all thou canst in thy kingdom.

LIFE WITHOUT THE CAMP.

WM. SHEPHERD.

"Let us go forth therefore unto him, without the camp, bearing his reproach."—HEB. 13: 13.

The christian's life is not exempted from annoyance. As Jesus has set the example, "suffering without the gate," or camp, so we must follow him outside, as our text exhorts us, if we would follow him acceptably.

Jesus did not seek the comforts and ease of the camp-life, as thousands of his professed followers do to-day; but went "without," exposing himself to all the sufferings and toils natural to such a course. He did not seek after the honors or applause of men. As we would be followers of him, "Let us go forth therefore unto him, without the camp, bearing his reproach."

The christian must go forth on the field of battle, and fight the good fight of faith. He must go to the front, if he has strength of endurance, and in the whole panoply of his divine Commander, girt about firmly with his truth, which is the sword of the Spirit, being filled with "the Spirit itself," bravely coping with the enemy, until victory is gained over every foe.

"Bearing his reproach." The reproach, then, is predicted upon our going forth without the camp. When Abraham remained in his own country, among his people and kindred, it was all very well. He was a clever man, and had many friends; but when he started out at the call of God, the popular current went against him. The people called him a silly old man, a fanatic, and heaped all kinds of opprobrious epithets upon him. So with the prophets, when they remained among the people in silence, and suffered them to go on in their wickedness undisturbed, everything went smoothly; but when they came out from among them, and faithfully discharged their duty in showing the people their sins, then they were hated. So with all the worthies, noted in the great role of honor, "of whom the world was not worthy. These all suffered without the camp, bearing the reproach of Christ. They choose rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasure of sin, or a camp life of ease, for a season, esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of the whole world. They gloried in affliction and persecution for the truth's sake, that the power of Christ might rest upon them. Like Paul, they rejoiced in tribulation.

"Let us have grace, whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and holy fear," that when the Master comes, he will greet us with "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

"WHY STAND YE HERE IDLE?"

Christ speaks of a man who wanted workmen. Several times during the day he went out among the loungers in the market and on the street, and set them at work. Finally, at five in the afternoon, he saw others and said, "Why stand ye here all the day idle?" This was their excuse, "No man hath hired us." Every man, however, when he got into the vineyard, went to work, and every man, whether he commenced at six A. M. or five P. M., got his pay.

But now-a-days inside the vineyard the workmen stand idle. Their difficulty is they have no diploma as professional gardeners. They are not graduates of any college of agriculture, and so they stand with their hands in their pockets, or lie all day under the trees. Dropping the metaphor, the idle church member throws his work upon ministers and men of culture, and satisfies his conscience by saying, "That's their business not mine." Dear, lazy christian! Take your hands out of your pockets and come and listen! And you who are fast asleep under the trees, wake up! It's five o'clock in the afternoon! Soon the Master of the vineyard will come to pay off his workmen. Then every man shall be judged according to his works.—The Morning.

Correspondence.

From Sr. M. G. Gowen.

Dear Brn. and Srs:—I was thinking to-day, as I laid down the last Crisis, so full of good things, how true are the words of the wise man. "As cold waters to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country;" especially so to the isolated ones who have not the privilege of regularly attending the house of worship, and listening to the truth. Next to the blessed Bible, with its dear old chapters, which never fail to comfort and cheer, comes the Crisis. Its weekly visits bring the preaching as well as prayer-meeting. How many times has my poor heart been made to rejoice, during the past year by the good news from all over our land. From Lowell, which was at one time the place of my sojourn, and where I first learned to love the "gospel of the Kingdom," after living many years in sin. I have pleasant recollections of the sweet councils taken together there. Some with whom we used to meet have fallen asleep in hope of a better resurrection, and the Lord is raising up others, for which we thank him. Good news comes also from Manchester, Concord, and dear old Maine, as well as the far West and sunny South. The good news from this place will be more meagre, for there is a famine in this land; not for bread, but for hearing the word of the Lord! Though I thank God that the gospel of the coming Kingdom has been preached here at least for a witness, and the seed has been sown and watered, and I still pray that it may spring up and bear fruit unto eternal life. It was sown amid opposition and misrepresentation, though the common people heard gladly. The Lord has said his word should not return unto him void, but should accomplish that whereunto it is sent, therefore I hope for good results.

The church is as yet in our own house, and though weak, Gideon-like, I am still pursuing. There are a few scattered over the hills in other parts of the town, who are looking for that blessed hope and glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ. O how it cheers us amid life's trials and woes. We forget that which is behind, and ever press forward to that which is before, feeling like the Psalmist "we shall be satisfied when we awake in his likeness."

The appearing of Jesus is very unpopular, yet it is the hope of the early christians, and none the less ours because the church has lost sight of it. I love it still, and mean by the grace of God to be among the number that shall hail him with joy. But in order to do this I must live for it. O how important it is that we live righteously. Let us be faithful a little longer, and "He that is to come will come, and will not tarry," and bring in everlasting righteousness and reign on the earth.

From Bro. H. Munger.

To my Dear Brn.:—As you have heard little and seen nothing of me for some weeks, I wish to say it has been in consequence of three attacks of the enemy by way of disease; one following another, and each holding me about seven days. But by the help of the Lord, the skill of a good doctor, and the faithful care of a good patient wife, together with the new lesson I have learned to be more careful, I have so far recovered I am able to preach again. I have lost all my previous arrangements and appointments, and I must begin anew. I have not been able to make my annual visit in N. H. and Maine the times I usually do; so I propose going a month later. I can be out some six or seven weeks before cold weather.

I wish those of my friends who wish my labors, and have an opening on the Sabbaths before December, would drop me a card, telling me when and where to come, that I can arrange my appointments so as to be as economical as possible in these hard times. The Advent people are my choice, and were they to emigrate, to be saved, to a foreign land, I would start with them, if I fell in the wilderness. They are a prophetic people, as bad as some of them have behaved. There are so many good, honest ones, I want to see them again. The Lord must be very near. I was much disappointed to be deprived of seeing my friends at Alton Bay, but hope to see many of them during this proposed visit.

From Bro. J. H. F. Varney.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—It has been a long time since I have spoken to you through the Crisis. Although I am not able to preach but little, yet I am able to go to hear others, and O, such a privilege! only appreciated by those who, like me, have been deprived of it.

While at Alton Bay, listening to sermons burning with thrilling eloquence, to the cheering testimonies of the dear children, to the songs of praise, to me more sweet than any to which I ever listened, and looking at the leafy temple, and its charming surroundings, made sacred by the presence of the Spirit of the Mighty One, I asked a brother if he thought that paradise could excel it. I suppose it will; and yet this, if sickness, death and its author could be kept away would be good enough. The little church here, I think, were much benefitted by the meeting at Alton Bay. There is a disposition to draw nearer to God, and, as a result, I expect a revival of God's work.

Pray for us, that we, a little band, whom the devil has tried so hard to destroy, may, in the morn of Zion's glory, share with you the sweet privilege of crowning our Jesus Lord of all.

Obituaries.

MORSE. In Brookfield, Mass., Aug. 24th, 1876, of typhoid fever, Elder Charles F. Morse, son of Amasa Morse, Union, Ct., aged thirty-two years.

Bro. Morse was one of the few independent, noble young men of these last days, who, standing upon the Word of God, preached its glorious truths fearlessly. After years of thorough preparation he gave himself wholly to the work of saving the lost. Through the providence of God he was called to labor about one year ago with the Congregationalist people in Brookfield. Here he was enabled to present a Biblical Christianity—an essential qualification to meet with joy our coming Lord. God greatly blessed his labors, and many were led to Christ who will shine as stars in his crown of rejoicing. To know him was to love him.

Many dear friends are left to weep over his sudden death; among them is a dear companion, who only six months ago gave him her heart and hand to aid him in his glorious work. But how short that work! His parents also feel this stroke heavily, for they had hoped that when father could no longer sound the gospel news to dying men, that this son would fill his place; but Charles was first to fall in the conflict, and their hopes lie buried.

"Victorious his fall—for he'll rise where he fell,
With Jesus his Master, in glory to dwell;
For in ardor he led in the van of his host,
And he fell like a soldier; he died at his post.

And can we the words of our brother forget?
O no! they are fresh in our memory yet:
An example so sacred shall never be lost;
We will fall in our work; we will die at our post."

Funeral services were conducted at Brookfield the 26th, by C. P. Blanchard, Congregationalist, assisted by F. G. Morris, Methodist, and on Sunday 27th at Union, by the writer, assisted by Brn. Butler, Blanchard, Watson and Curtis.

His last words before reason left him was a prayer, in which he thanked God for life till that hour, and then wholly committed himself into the hands of his Maker, come life or death. We laid him away to rest "till the day dawn, and the shadows flee away." HEZEKIAH DAVIS.

DEMERITT. In Natick, Mass., Sept. 13th, 1876, of diptheria, Cecelia P., aged six years and twenty-seven days; and only two days later, Sept. 15th, 1876, Anna B., aged ten years, ten months and sixteen days, the last of four daughters of Bro. and Sr. John W. and Exa C. Demeritt.

For a number of years sickness and death has visited this dear family, and out of six lovely children that cruel enemy death has taken five, leaving them only one son, eight years old, and he and his mother now very sick. May God's grace sustain them in all their afflictions. The writer tried to speak words of comfort at the funeral of the first, and Eld. A. Simpson at the funeral of the other. They sorrow not as others, for they believe that Jesus has risen, and these loved ones will come again from the land of the enemy at the resurrection when Jesus comes. J. N. S.

COWLES. In Chester, Mass., Aug. 16th, 1876, of consumption, Katie Cowles, aged twenty-eight.

Her strong faith in the Lord enabled her to endure her sufferings without a murmur; and when assured that she must die, she bowed in sweet submission to the will of the Lord, assured that her life was hid with the great Lifegiver, and at his coming she would have a part in the glorious resurrection. Words of comfort were spoken to the mourners by Bro. Teeple from Ps. 16: 15. J. HEMENWAY.

YORK. At Marshfield, Vt., July 30th, 1876, Bro. Calvin York, aged seventy-three years.

Bro. York was one of the first who embraced the truth of the speedy coming of the Lord. He has been strong in the faith since 1842—a pioneer in the Advent cause; a kind companion and father, and a christian. He rests but a little while, to awake early at the sound of the last trump. Text selected by the deceased. Job 19: 25. N. WHEELER.

FOREIGN NEWS.

The Eastern War.

London, Sept. 18. A dispatch from Belgrade says Tchernajeff's army on Saturday proclaimed Prince Milan King of Servia.

The Porte intimates that the truce will cease on the 25th inst., but expresses the hope that by that time the European powers will have fully considered the terms of peace. The general opinion in Belgrade is that peace is farther off than ever. The Russians continue to pour in, and great preparations are making for a winter campaign.

Minister Ristics has made an official complaint that the Turks do not respect the truce, and states, on authority of General Tchernajeff, that they made an attack on the Servians on Sunday.

A Berlin dispatch to the Standard says that it is probable that the Porte will resume hostilities at the expiration of ten days, because the Servian army has declared Prince Milan King of Servia.

A dispatch from Tabriz to Reuter reports that frequent violations of the boundary line between Turkey and Persia have occurred. Small encounters between the Turks and Persians take place daily, and several frontier villages have been burned. The authorities are hastily dispatching troops to the scene.

The Belgrade correspondent of the Daily News telegraphs that nothing definite has been settled. It is problematical whether the suspension of hostilities will preclude a formal armistice or peaceful settlement of affairs in the East.

Russian influence is understood to be against any arrangement at present, under the apprehension that peace now might not include the autonomy of Bulgaria, Bosnia and Herzegovina. Nothing less will satisfy the Sclavonians.

London, Sept. 18. An immense meeting on the Eastern question was held at Guild Hall to-day. The Lord Mayor presided. There was some disorder. An address to the Queen was voted, deploring the outrages of the Turks and praying England no longer to support Turkey from the considerations of political expediency. An amendment expressing confidence in the Government was rejected by an overwhelming majority. A motion in favor of the immediate convocation of Parliament was carried. The crowd was so great that a large number of persons were unable to get into Guild Hall, and another meeting was held outside.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

New York, Sept. 10. A Dubuque, Iowa dispatch states that the storm on Friday night carried away six railway bridges between there and Julian. Telegraph wires were injured and rain has fallen steadily for five days.

Sept. 21. By the caving in of a mine at Harlem last Monday half a dozen laborers were crushed or smothered by huge masses of rock and earth falling upon them. At last accounts the bodies had not been recovered, as it was necessary to remove the superincumbent weight by blasting.

The steamship Rebecca Clyde, of Wilmington, N. C., for Baltimore, has been wrecked at Portsmouth, N. C., off Pamlico Sound. Twelve lives were lost.

Nine barges which were being towed from Havre de Grace to Baltimore last Saturday were sunk on the Susquehanna river during a severe gale, and eight persons were drowned.

During the gale on Cape Henry last Sunday the wind blew eighty miles an hour, and seven inches of rain fell in twenty-four hours.

Savannah, Sept 20. The total interments to-day were forty-five thirty-six being from yellow fever. This is nine more deaths from the fever than on any previous day. The epidemic is increasing in violence and fatality.

Notices.

South Boston.

The brethren in South Boston, believing in the near coming of Jesus and kindred truths, desiring to let their light shine, have leased a Hall corner of Dorchester and National Streets (close by Broadway), where they mean to have "the gospel of the kingdom" preached. They do not mean to ride, or allow hobby riding, but desire a place where the Lord's coming may be kept before the people. They desire the prayers and cooperation of all the lovers of the truth in Boston. Where there are more than three hundred thousand souls, there ought to be a place where those of "like precious faith" can meet together, and where these truths can be proclaimed unmixed with the traditions of men. Pray for this meeting. For the brethren, A. P. MOORE.

New Hampshire Adv. Chris. Conference.

The next annual session of the New Hampshire Advent Christian Conference will be held with the church in Manchester, N. H., commencing Tuesday evening, Oct. 24th, and hold over the following Sunday. Our Constitution requires all our preachers to report personally or by letter. We wish all our churches to make an extra effort and send their quota of delegates. Each church is entitled to one delegate, and one additional one for every twenty-five members. Fare will be reduced on the Concord and Claremont and Northern Railroads as usual. Passengers will purchase their tickets on these roads of the conductors in the cars. Call for Conference Tickets.

Notice of reduction on other roads when heard from.
A. ROSS, President.
C. H. FLETCHER, Secretary.

Connecticut A. C. Conference.

The Lord willing the Connecticut A. C. Conference will be held at New Britain, commencing Wednesday evening, Oct. 18th, and continue over Sunday, Oct. 22nd. As this is the annual meeting, and officers are to be chosen, a full attendance is requested. The business session will begin Thursday, promptly at 10 o'clock A. M., and it is hoped may be finished the same day, that the remainder of the time be devoted to prayer, conference and preaching the Word of life. Pray that the blessing of the Lord may attend.
O. D. WOODRUFF, Secretary.

Tent Meeting.

The Lord willing there will be a Tent Meeting at East Woodstock, Ct., on premises of N. S. Child, to commence on Thursday, Sept. 28th, at seven o'clock P. M., and continue as long as the interest demands. Bro. Clark, Leslie and others, with Sisters Hitchcock and Crumb, are expected to preach the gospel. Preaching at two and seven o'clock P. M. A cordial christian invitation is extended to all. Per order of Committee.

A Card.

If there are any churches who desire to secure a pastor, and feel that they are able to support a man in that capacity, I would say I am now ready to correspond with them. I have sold out my interest in The Biblical Messenger, so I am now free from the entanglements of publishing, and have nothing to hinder me from devoting my entire time to the interest of some church. My health will not admit of my traveling as I have done for a few months in the past. If I move this fall, I prefer to do so before cold weather sets in. WM. C. STEWART.
Exeter, N. H., Sept. 14th.

NOTICE.—We intend to commence a series of meetings at Pleasant Valley (Wolfboro), N. H., Thursday evening, Oct. 5th, and continue them over the following Sunday. We hope that brethren and sisters in the regions "round about" will "come over and help us." C. H. SWEET.

THE Hoosick Valley A. C. Conference is appointed for Wednesday evening, Oct. 25th, at Castleton, Vt., and continue over the Sabbath. More next week.
H. K. FLAGG, President.
ROBERT CANDLISH, Sec.

QUARTERLY MEETING.—The first Quarterly Meeting of the Minona District A. C. C., Minnesota, will be held at Utica, Minona Co., Oct. 27th, to commence at seven o'clock P. M., and hold over Lord's day. PETER MITSON, Sec.

A QUARTERLY MEETING will be held in Edinboro, Pa., Sept. 30th, at half-past one o'clock P. M., and continue over Sunday, Oct. 1st. Love feast at 9.30 A. M. Preaching morning and evening. Baptisms Saturday afternoon.
G. W. STETSON, Pastor.

NOTICE.—A protracted meeting will commence Oct. 4th, at Hatley, P. Q. (Old meeting-house) and hold over the following Sabbath. A general invitation is given to all the lovers of the Lord to come. C. S. SHATTUCK.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.—The A. C. Quar. Conf. of Central Kansas will hold its next session at Aryonia, Osage Co., Kansas, Saturday, Sept. 30th, and continue over the Lord's day, Oct. 1st. In connection with this meeting, it is thought best to have a State Campmeeting, commencing Sept. 27th, and continue as long as thought best. We hope all of our brethren and sisters in the State and elsewhere, who can come, will prepare for this meeting. Let fervent prayer be offered that we may have a rich season in the Lord. Those that can, bring tents. Now, brethren and sisters, let us make a general rally to this meeting. Bro. Burr, Editor of the A. C. Times, we trust will be there to preach the word.
J. C. SMITH,
AARON PRESTON, } Committee.
M. MCGUIRE,

CAMPMEETING NOTICE.—The Kansas Campmeeting will be held in the grove, three miles east of Arvonia, Osage Co., Kansas, commencing Friday, Sept. 29th, and continue over Oct. 8th. We hope to see a general gathering of those who are looking for the return of the Nobleman throughout the State, and also from Mo. Bring tents, provision and bedding, and let us tent together in the forest, and worship the Lord of hosts. We expect Bro. Burr, Editor of the A. C. Times, will be with us to preach the word of life. The Kansas Mission Tent will be on the ground, and will afford shelter for many.

Committee of Arrangements: N. L. Brian, J. C. Smith, D. Webster, L. L. Smith, J. A. Beauchamp. LEVI L. SMITH, for the Com.

NOTICE.—There will be a tent meeting at Tonganoxie, Leavenworth Co., Kansas, commencing Oct. 11th, and will continue as the interest may demand. Bro. Hunt and others are expected to be present to preach the Word. Let continual prayer be offered that the Holy Spirit may do its office work, and that sinners may be converted unto the Lord. J. C. SMITH.

NOTICE.—There will be a Conference in Mercer Village, commencing Sept. 28th, at seven o'clock P. M., and hold over the following Sunday. A general invitation is given. Homes will be provided. Come filled with the Spirit to labor for Christ. Call on Brn. E. Watson, Eldridge Thomas, and others. For the church,
H. B. SEVEY.

THE next session of the Advent Christian Conference of Nova Scotia will be held at Scott's Bay, King's Co., Sept. 28th, and continue over the following Lord's day. All are cordially invited.
J. M. TOZIER.

NOTICE.—A Conference will commence in Wesley, Me., Oct. 4th, and continue over the Sabbath. All are invited. M. W. CORLISS.

I would like to inform the churches, and individual friends waiting for Jesus, and all others, that I am ready to assist them in protracted meetings and Sabbath services to the extent of my ability. Let me hear from all as soon as possible.
G. W. BURNHAM, Newburyport, Mass.

NOTICE.—My health having considerably improved, I am willing to devote a portion of the Sundays each month to preaching, if the Lord will. Any church or community wishing my labors, please write me at Lawrence, Mass., No. 10 Fulton Street, as that is my present address.
F. M. DRAKE.

ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

This is an ably conducted weekly paper, edited by Elder Frank Burr, and published under the auspices of the Western A. C. Publishing Society. It also insists on a holy life as essential to an admittance into the coming kingdom. $2.20 a year. Address Advent Christian Times, 91 South Green St., Chicago, Ill.

The World's Crisis and Adv. Chris. Times sent postpaid to subscribers who will take both, at the reduced rate of $4.00 per year in advance for both papers. Address World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Appointments

☞ APPOINTMENTS MUST BE RECEIVED AS EARLY AS TUESDAY MORNING (as our paper goes to press about noon) to insure insertion for the coming week.

☞ The following RESOLUTION was passed at the late meeting of the A. C. P. Society:—

"RESOLVED, That no appointments be published in the CRISIS henceforth for persons unknown to the Editorial Board (by which is understood the Editors, Editorial Committee, and Business Agent), unless satisfactory reference shall be given.

The Committee appointed by the Adv. Chris. Association, at its last Annual Meeting, to advise with the Editorial Board "in relation to the publication in the World's Crisis of the appointments of men unworthy of recognition as preachers," having attended to the duty assigned them, recommended, and the Editorial Board have adopted, and ordered to be published, the following resolution:—

"RESOLVED, That when the Editorial Board is properly notified by any of our Churches, or Ministers, or responsible persons, by a written allegation that a certain minister, or ministers, lack moral character, that they be instructed to notify such minister, or ministers, of the information received, as a reason for withholding their appointments till after a proper trial and acquittal."

All communications in relation to this matter should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board—GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass.

WEAVING.

Standing in a corner,
'Mid the dust and gloom,
Day by day I'm weaving
At my humble loom.
Plain and coarse the fabric,
And the hues are dim;
But God gave the pattern,
And I work for him.

Not for me the sunshine
That on others falls,
Who are weaving gaily
In their stately halls;
Rich and rare the texture
Of their web so fine;
How those gorgeous colors
My dull tints outshine!

But I will not murmur,
Since my task is set
By a loving Father
Who will not forget.
He knows all the weakness,
All the pain and care,
All the heavy burdens
That his children bear.

When life's thread is broken,
Warp and woof complete,
We shall lay our fabrics
At the dear Lord's feet.
None too plain and humble,
None too dark or dim,
If the work all faithful
Has been wrought for him.

He will smile approval
On the finished toil,
As we go to meet him,
Free from earth's turmoil.
Joy to those who, waiting
At time's setting sun
For the Master's coming,
Hear his sweet "Well done!"

IS IT SECTARIANISM TO LOVE THE TRUTH?

I. K. LOMBARD.

Much is said in these days about a union of all christians, as though it was the one thing needful in the way of a reform in religion. By this is meant a union of the popular professors generally, and as many of the unpopular as will consent to compromise whatever interest they may have in the truth for the sake of peace with those who are wedded to error. Those who cannot compromise their devotion to present truth, or any other distinctive Bible truth, not current among the mass of professors, would not be welcomed to this fraternity.

This restriction is often expressed by the rule, "We can't allow any isms to be introduced." Thus the Bible doctrine of baptism by immersion would be scouted by them as an "ism;" and nothing would be allowed in any of their meetings against the error of sprinkling because a large majority of the popular professors are wedded to it. Such a devotion to God's truth would spoil their harmony, and ruin this "Christian Union" at once. Should anything be said in their assemblies against the error of the Trinity, it would doubtless meet with scorn, for this idea is made more sacred in the popular churches than the other. And should anyone venture to urge the plain Bible doctrines of the sleep of the dead, the destruction of the wicked, or the coming of Christ, he would be turned out of the synagogue without ceremony. Indeed, any attempt to enforce a practical Bible truth, and especially present truth, upon the attention of their assemblies would be almost like throwing a firebrand among them.

This is the kind of union which its advocates presume to call a "Union in Christ;" as though a general union of whitewashed worldlings and compromisers, with a few, sickly, weak christians, deserved to be called a "Union in Christ!"

I find that those who clamor so loudly for union on this broad plan, are disposed to denounce as "sectarianism" a loyal and uncompromising devotion to the great truths of revelation; and especially those truths designed for the church in these last days; the same as the preaching of a flood was designed for Noah's day. This might be expected when it comes from those who have always opposed the truth, but when it comes from those from whom we have a right to expect different things, it grieves us to the heart.

The prominent doctrines which Adventists contend for, and for which we are hated by the mass of popular professors are the standard doctrines of christianity. One of the issues between us and them is substantially this:—Whether God has a real existence. For while we contend that He is a real, personal, tangible being, located in heaven, they protest that he is "a spirit, pervading all space," "without body or parts," "whose center is everywhere, and circumference nowhere."

Another issue between us is whether we have really the death of Christ; and whether we have therein a Divine sacrifice for sin. For while we claim that Christ was the divine Son of God, and as such did as truly and completely die as the lamb which represented him, they all with one voice claim that "Divinity could not die."

Another issue between us involves The reality of his second personal coming to earth again. For while we are marked for our zeal in advocating this event as near at hand, and destined soon to become a solemn reality, they treat the matter with scoffs and jeers, and have substituted a spiritual coming for his personal return, and are looking for the world's conversion instead of his coming for judgment.

Another issue is The reality of the resurrection of the dead, which we are constantly contending for, while they protest that the real man does not die; if he does there is no hope for him.

Another issue is The reality of the judgment of the Great Day, which we are constantly preaching is just at hand, and will prove a terrible reality to the world; while they contend that all men are judged at death, and must therefore hold to the confusion of having men twice judged, or reject the future judgment. Besides, they make it very improbable that the world will be assembled into God's presence for the purpose of judgment, as the Bible declares, since they make his presence everywhere in general and nowhere in particular!

We are at issue, too, on The reality of the future punishment of the wicked; for abandoning their past zeal for the horrible fiction of eternal torment, they have vibrated to the other extreme of alloting to the wicked only the punishment of a troubled conscience, which operates severely upon the scrupulous, and lightly upon the hardened villain; and hence is worse than no punishment at all.

And then we are at issue on the question of the saints inheritance in the kingdom of God on the New Earth; for while we faithfully contend for these doctrines so plainly taught in the Bible, they denounce them as "Millerism," and are wholly in the fog as to what and where will be the future home of the saints.

And last, but not least, they refuse to believe the Bible doctrine of the sleep of the dead, God's antidote for Spiritualism; and as a consequence are fast drifting into "that strong delusion," as the only alternative.

These doctrines, which Adventists are everywhere contending for, are, as I have said, the fundamental doctrines of Christianity—the bone and sinew of the christian system—the essence and glory of the christian hope. No doctrines are more manifestly and abundantly taught in the Bible. None are more essential to christianity. It is for this reason that Satan has them all counterfeited, as I have shown, and is bending all his energies to make these doctrines odious, and his counterfeits popular in the church and world. Shall we join with Satan in enforcing and popularizing his refuges of lies, or shall we stand up for God's truth with a bold and uncompromising front?

These doctrines are not only divine, as being manifestly the doctrines of Scripture, but they are in perfect harmony with each other. To change either one is to make confusion in the divine plan, tarnish the glory of the christian's hope, and make the Bible both uncertain and contradictory in its plainest statements. Indeed, the counterfeits of Satan on all these doctrines have become so popular, that to admit a substitute for either one of the genuine is practically to adopt Satan's counterfeit for the same; and to yield our zeal in defence of the genuine is virtually saying that we would as soon have the counterfeit prevail.

But does it seem possible that any, who have once expressed these truths, and proclaimed them with a zeal and faithfulness worthy of a servant of God, could turn away from them with a careless indifference? Yet such cases may be found.

While Satan is arousing the church and world to aid the Spiritualists in rendering his false counterfeits popular among the masses, how can those who love the truth, abandon its defence in this hour of its peril, and silently acquiesce in the popular repudiation of it.

I have no confidence in a "Christian Union" that requires us to abandon as "sectarians" and "heretics" those who love the truth, and fellowship as "evangelical" those who despise it! It cannot be denied that such a demand is constantly pressed upon us; and I fear that some among us have given this demand altogether too much countenance. But it is a fearful thing for a man of God, who has seen and loved the truths due this generation, to be courting the smiles of those who despise them, and weakening the hands of those who defend them.

It seems as if there never was a time when the truth was more bitterly, and generally assailed than now, by those who profess to be the people of God. This departure from the truth has been pointed out in different prophecies, referring to the last day church. Hence if there ever was a time when the friends of the truth ought to show themselves loyal to it, by a zealous, uncompromising defence of it, it is now. As they "resist the truth," let us draw nearer to it. As they show that "they receive not the love of the truth, that they might be saved," (2 Thess. 1: 10, 11), let us show such that "for this cause God shall send them strong delusion." As "they turn away their ears from the truth, and are turned unto fables," we ought faithfully to declare and denounce this departure of the church unto fables, lest the honest seekers after truth should thoughtlessly drift with them.

Never did the church of God occupy a more responsible position than now, in view of her being put in trust with the truths due this last generation. Christ asked in view of this important trust, "Who then is a faithful and wise servant whom his Lord hath made ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season?" He then adds, "Blessed is that servant, whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing." He seems to emphasize "then," "who then is a faithful and wise servant," showing his faithfulness and wisdom by zealously giving to the household the truths due them then, just prior to Christ's coming.

Where are such in our day? Are they to be found among those who are faithfully preaching the signs of his coming, or with those who despise these things, and denounce them as "Millerism?" In these truths we have a very important trust, a great responsibility, which God has committed to us to proclaim to the world.

Shall we show ourselves "wise and faithful servants" in the proclamation of them, or shall we basely abandon this important trust, by courting the smiles of those who oppose and denounce them? May God help us to prove worthy of the trust imposed upon us.

2 KINGS 9: 34.

J. P. MARQUAND.

"Go, see now this cursed woman and bury her; for she is a king's daughter."

This was spoken of Jezebel, the wife of Ahab, who reigned King over Israel twenty-two years. Her character is a very marked one, and exhibits itself in unmitigated selfishness. She was proud, haughty, arrogant, and full of deceit; and the prophets Elijah and Elisha both spoke of her and her husband, as having "sold themselves to do evil." Among other evil acts, they conspired against their next door neighbor, and had him killed, in order to get his lands; and the prophet told them that the dogs should lick up the blood of King Ahab, in that very field of their neighbor, where he was stoned to death, and that his wife should be eaten up by dogs near the wall of Jezreel. Both of these events took place exactly as the prophet foretold.

Jezebel was not only a bad woman, but she was typical and prophetical. You will find her name in Revelation, second chapter, and her character in the seventeenth chapter of Revelation, as being the head of the false church. In the Bible, the church is represented under the figure of a good woman, and the false church by a bad woman. So you will hear people say in speaking of a bad woman, "Why, she is a perfect Jezebel." Turn to Prov. 31: 31, and there you will find a description of a good woman. Would that such were more numerous. But we turn our attention again to this woman Jezebel. It seems she was the daughter of a king, brought up in the home of luxury, and possessing many advantages and privileges, of education, science and art; not profiting by her favorable situation, becoming wise, good and virtuous, she grew up vain, proud and indolent; and there is no doubt she early became so self-willed and wayward as to give great solicitude to her teachers and friends, and by and by there came a bad man by the name of Ahab, a son of a king, and a union was formed between the two. Now mark the result. For twenty-two years they reigned over the Jewish people, and spread bad government, misery and death, so that they were feared and hated by their subjects, and caused the good Elijah and Elisha to utter forth the heavy judgments of God upon them.

Ahab was wounded in battle some distance away from his home. The blood flowed from his wounds into his chariot. He was driven home quickly, but his chariot was taken to his neighbor's field to be washed. While there, the dogs came and licked up his blood, thus fulfilling the words of the prophet Elijah. In a short time after, his wife Jezebel was in Jezreel. The palace was near the wall, and she looked out of the window, and gave the taunt to one below. He said throw her out, and they did so, and she lay there until the dogs came and ate her up, except her skull and hands; so was the word of the prophet fulfilled.

The true church of God is represented in the Bible as a bride adorned for her husband, and as possessing the nature and character of her husband (Jesus Christ). Oh, when shall this earth be redeemed, and woman be made what God intended she should be, a bright image of her Maker. Great God, hasten the hour, and hear the woman's cry, her agony and tears, her doubts and fears, her trials and temptations, her sighs and groans; hasten the hour of her victory and deliverance; for never shall man stand up in his true dignity and manhood, until woman stands by his side, washed, redeemed, sanctified, purified, glorified, his faithful friend and companion through the long ages of eternity. Amen.

COMING OF THE SON OF MAN.

"And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory."—MATT. 24: 30.

What a shame, that learned men should spend their pains and talents in attempts to tie down this language to the destruction of Jerusalem by the Roman armies!

I take it as an axiom,—a settled verity which demonstrates itself—that two events which are specifically described as successive,—the one as coming after the other—cannot be the same. But if this axiom had always been observed in the interpretation of this twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew, the students of the Scriptures might have saved themselves much inconsistency and confusion, and many a misapprehension of God's Word. If we ask most of our popular commentators what is meant by "the tribulation of those days," described in the twenty-ninth and preceding verses, the answer given is, that it means the calamities and sufferings of the Jews, induced by the siege and overthrow of their city and State. And if we ask them again, what is meant by the mourning of the tribes of the earth "after the tribulation of those days," the answer is about the same,—the calamities and sufferings of the tribes of Israel in connection with the fall of their city and State! If we inquire of them what is meant by the coming of the Son of man as the lightning in the clouds of heaven, with some twinges of uncertainty they nearly all finally agree upon the reply that it means the flashing judgments which were brought upon the rebellious people of Israel by the coming of the Roman armies against Jerusalem.

The coming of which the Savior speaks was to be "out of the east" towards the west, and the coming of the Roman armies was out of the west and north and towards the east and south; but the reply is, No matter for that; we are not to expect all the particular circumstances to hold! The coming of which the Savior speaks is specifically said to be "after" the tribulation induced by the invasion of Palestine by the Romans, as well as "after" that great unparalleled tribulation of which the Jewish troubles were the commencement and first fruits; but no matter for that, we are told, as though effect could go before its cause, and if priority or succession were nothing in the interpretation of a book such as the Word of God. I question indeed, whether the annals of learning can furnish a parallel to the absurdities which characterize the great mass of our popular disquisitions upon this portion of the inspired record. No wonder that the doctrine of Christ's personal return to our world has lost so much of its weight, certainty, and rightful importance in the minds and hearts of the church, when its great foundation text is thus sacrificed to a false and supercilious erudition!

One of the strangest things in the world is the manner in which some people read the Bible. It would almost seem as if they turned it upside-down, and read it backwards. "Eyes have they but they see not." They praise it, and hold it in holy regard, and insist that everybody ought to have it; yet they look into it only as some recondite volume, which is a good text book for preachers, but which is quite beyond the reach of their understanding. They adore it more for the unknown mysteries which they attribute to it, than from their personal appreciation of what their own eyes have beheld upon its pages. Many seem to view it as a sublime riddle book, full of mystic poetry and unsearchable wisdom, rather than a plain piece of information and advice given by a Father to his inexperienced and exposed children. And many who sit down to write commentaries upon it, seem to be continually haunted with the idea that there is something recondite in every word, or that the real mind of the Spirit is not to be found in the plain import of the letter, but in some abstruse or mystic analogy which it is their business to dig after. I hold that the Bible is a book for every body, in which God speaks for the purpose of being understood by every body; that its language is conformed to the ordinary uses of speech; and that it is to be interpreted in the same common-sense way in which we would interpret the will of a deceased parent, or ascertain the meaning of a letter of business. It was not written to tax our ingenuity, or to test men's skill at learned exposition. Its design is to instruct, and in the most familiar way to express to men the mind and will of God.

When Christ speaks of "the Son of man," he means the Son of man, and not the Roman armies. When he speaks of his "coming in the clouds of heaven," he means his coming in the clouds of heaven, and not the sailing of war ships on the Mediterranean, or the march of soldiers over the fields of earth. When he says after the Jewish tribulations are ended, he means after those tribulations, and not before they began, or while they were yet in their incipiency. And when he says that all the tribes of the earth "shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory," expositors might as well attempt to demonstrate to me that day is night, as to attempt to make me believe that he means the march of an army of boorish heathen soldiers. Christ knew what he wished to say, and how to say what he meant; and I feel bound to understand him to mean just what he says. And what he here predicts respecting his coming in the clouds at the close of the tribulation no more refers to the coming of the Roman armies into Palestine than to the flight of Mohamet, or the next eclipse of the moon. He is describing the scenes of the judgment period, and nothing else.—DR. SEISS, in Messiah's Herald.

AN EXPERIENCE.

C. MENDENHALL.

At an early age the writer was converted under the labors of the well known Baptist Evangelist, Elder Knapp. From that time my religious pathway has been a devious one. Sinning and repenting, at times on the mountain peak, then in valley; at times full of confidence, then in doubting castle, filled with fear.

For several years this vacillating state was my lot. Yet I would never cease to pray, nor neglect other means of grace; but notwithstanding this my heart condemned me.

Eight or ten years ago my attention was turned to the subject of consecration. I read a number of works by Presbyterian and Methodist writers upon that theme, and became a mental convert to the doctrine of a higher life. Finally I felt that it was my duty to preach the tidings of a soon coming Lord. To this end I studied earnestly, and prayed much for two years or more.

After entering the ministry, I taught the doctrine of holiness of heart, because I believed the Bible taught it, but experimentally I was conscious that there was a lack in my own experience. I was of those that hungered and thirsted, yet I could not say that I was filled. The devil made me feel that it was a desperate step to consecrate everything to the Lord. Then, too, he suggested, What will people think of you for having taught a doctrine of which you experimentally know nothing? Other things were suggested, such as the unpopularity of the thing; the new trials one might be put to because of confessing what the Lord hath done, etc. etc.

But to the issue. Last winter, while Bro. Grant was speaking upon the necessity of being ready to meet the Lord, I felt that now I must give myself wholly to him. The thought occurred—You can do this in your closet; people may think you have been worse than you really are; it may bring reproach upon the ministry, etc. However, I offered a mental prayer, and then and there yielded everything into the Lord's hand.

Peace, deep, calm and settled was at once mine. A new energy was given me. It seemed I could preach more earnestly, and with greater fluency than ever before. However, I have had no such experience as some have had, but it is enough to convince me that there is more power in the love of Christ than nine-tenths of the christians themselves ever imagined.

At present I can say, that doubts fears, condemnation are all gone. Self has sunk, and Christ is a satisfying portion.

Yes, beloved, we may be more than conquerors. There is a way of escape provided; a full salvation; a freedom from the power of sin may be found in Him who came to destroy the works of the devil. To God be all the glory. The power is not ours, but we are "kept by the power of God, through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time."

"Being confident of this very thing, that he which hath begun a good work in you, will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ."

Let us then, beloved, rally around the standard that Jesus has set (not a lower one), looking for his revelation from heaven, knowing that "Every man who hath this hope in him, purifieth himself, even as he is pure." Ascribe all the praise to Jesus.

"Not unto us. O Lord of lords supreme,
Whate'er we work, thou workest: thine
the praise.
O wake us, cleanse us, light us with thy beam,
And work in us, through us, to endless days."

May we buckle on the whole armor of God, that we may enter the pure and holy city, is our prayer.

Embreeville, Penn., Sept. 11th, 1876.

WITHOUT A SACRIFICE.

Astonishing and startling as it may read, those who do not believe in the death of the real personality of Jesus the Christ are without a sacrifice; hence without atonement, and still in their sins. And how can they believe in the death of the Lord, who do not believe that man dies in death, but simply that his house or body drops away from him, while he, the real man, ascends to heaven, or sinks to hell? In order to forgiveness of sins, it is necessary to believe that the real Christ, and not simply something belonging to him that was himself, went into death.

You do not believe that Jesus died; you believe he went down alive into an underworld of spirits. Very well; we faithfully hand you the consequences of your faith,—you have no sacrifice, and are unforgiven; there is no escape from this conclusion. Better believe as it is written: the Christ died for our sins,—was put to death in the flesh,—that his soul was exceeding sorrowful even unto death,—that he was in the earth three days, that the Lord lay in Joseph's new tomb. Better believe his own words:—"I am alive; I was dead; but now I live for all the ages." Thus you have a real individuality who died for you; thus you have a sacrifice; thus you have a ransom; but believing that what was the true Jesus did not die, you have no Savior, you are not delivered, your case is hopeles.—The Bible Echo.

REAL greatness does not depend on the things we do, but on the mind with which we do them.

THE NEED OF MORE LABORERS.

SILAS HENN.

There are many men amongst the laity of the church, of cultivated minds, of varied and extensive learning, and of the highest talents, who are doing but little to aid the cause of truth. Born of wealthy parents, they have been favored with a first-class education, and therefore possess great abilities for usefulness in various spheres of Christian labor. No inconsiderable number have had a far superior training to many ministers of the gospel, and therefore, might even excel them in some departments of Christian work. And in no age of the church have such laborers been needed more than in the present.

In no previous age has so much scientific learning been employed against christianity. The faith of thousands has doubtless been unsettled by several very eminent skeptical writers during the last twenty-five years. And the Church needs a greater number of men of learning, and culture, and talent, who shall meet these skeptics on their own ground, and show the fallacy of their reasonings. The Church needs such men, having leisure and wealth as well as mind, to come out as advocates of the Christian religion. By tracts, by books, and by lectures they should endeavor to arrest the spread of skeptical views. They should set the evidences of the divine origin of Christianity in a clear, simple, and forcible light before the people. Specially should they endeavor to instruct the minds of young men that they might be fortified against the numerous attempts which are made to rob them of the Christian faith.

Many as there are laboring in this direction, they do not meet, but in a small degree, the real wants of the times. Where there are now a hundred such laborers, there needs a thousand; and where there are now circulated thousands of Gospel tracts, there needs hundreds of thousands. Who amongst those who are now standing idle, will engage in this work? Sad, indeed, will it be for him when the Master comes, who is found to have buried his talents.

THE JEWISH TABERNACLE OR SANCTUARY A TYPE.

L. A. WHEELER.

The Jewish tabernacle was a movable tent made of the most costly materials. Before it was the court, one hundred and fifty feet in length, and seventy-five in breadth, inclosed by curtains made of linen. In the center of the court stood the altar for sacrifice, and one side the laver, with water. The tabernacle was west of the court. It was thirty cubits from east to west, and ten from north to south, and divided into two apartments. The outer was called the holy place; the inner the holy of holies. In the former, on the north side, was the table of shew bread, on which were placed twelve loaves of unleavened bread, sprinkled over with frankincense and wine in bowls; on the south side was the golden candlestick, in which seven lamps burned; in the center was the altar, on which incense was offered daily, morning and evening. Paul, in his epistle to the Hebrews, when commenting upon this tabernacle arrangement, said it "was a figure" of the "true," a greater and more perfect tabernacle.

Now where and what is the antitype of this first apartment or holy place? John, when on the isle of Patmos, heard a voice, and turning around he saw seven golden candlesticks, and in the midst of the candlesticks one like the Son of man, clothed with a garment, extending to the feet and girt about with a golden girdle. After he had introduced himself to John, as the "one that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive forevermore," explained to him the mystery of the seven golden candlesticks, as representing the seven churches (Rev. 1st chap.) In St. John, 6th chap., we find Christ telling his disciples "I am the living bread which came down from heaven; if any man eat of this bread he shall live forever; and the bread that I will give is my flesh; . . . for my flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed." In 1st Peter 9, the apostle, when speaking of the church, says, "Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people." None but priests, who had been robed in the prepared garments and anointed with the holy oil, were allowed to eat the typical shew bread; here, all are priests, and all must have on the white raiment and be anointed with the Holy Spirit, and eat of this bread, or "have no life in them." Incense and prayer are synonymous. Rev. 5: 8 (margin).

Now, having found the seven golden candlesticks, the bread, wine, incense, priests, and priestly attire and anointing, we conclude the earth is the "true tabernacle which the Lord pitched, and not man;" besides this, we find the vail composed of blue, scarlet, purple, and fine twined linen, wrought with needle work (in appearance) whenever we look towards heaven, especially on a beautiful summer sunset. This vail not only formed the covering of the tabernacle, but also parted the holy place from the most holy. To find the antitype of the most holy place, we must look beyond this vail. We read in Heb. 9: 8, "The Holy Ghost this signifying, that the way into the holiest of all was not yet made manifest, while as the first tabernacle was yet standing." So we must wait until the end of the "very image" (Heb. 10: 1), or the present tabernacle arrangement, or the rest into which believers do enter (Heb. 4th chap). Not only the keeping holy of one day in seven, as in the "shadow," but by ceasing from our own works all the time (verse 10th), and being like Christ, who came not to do his own will, but the will of him who sent him. "He taketh away the first that he may stablish the second" (Heb. 10: 9). No doubt this is what Peter had in mind when he spoke about "putting off this my tabernacle;" and Paul, when he talked about "our earthly house of this tabernacle."

We read that Moses "took the blood of calves and of goats, with water and scarlet wool, and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book and all the people;" . . . "likewise with blood both the tabernacle, and all the vessels of the ministry" (Heb. 9: 19, 21), which shows that all that was sprinkled was to be cleansed in due time; for "almost all things are by the law purged with blood."

Sanctuary and tabernacle are identical, and Daniel tells us when the sanctuary is to be cleansed (Dan. 8: 14). Why should not those who have felt the power of the cleansing blood on themselves, feel interested to know the time, as far as it is revealed, when it shall take effect on the tabernacle or sanctuary? Do they not "err, not knowing the Scriptures," nor the power of the cleansing blood, even to the creating of "a new heavens and a new earth," or the making "all things new"? "And I, John, saw the holy city, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, Behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God." Rev. 21: 1, 3. The antitype of the most holy place will then be made manifest, where our high priest has now gone, and is sitting upon the mercy seat at the right hand of the Father. Then we shall be "made unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth."

How broad and firm is the foundation of the christian's hope. It reaches back into the past, and forward into the future. As well might skeptics think to blot the sun from the firmament, as to destroy the foundation, Jesus Christ being the chief corner-stone.

DISGUISED BRAGGING.

WM. SHELDON.

Ministers of Christ should never degrade themselves by bragging of their ability. While there are but few so stocked with egotism as to engage in this work in an undisguised way, there are many who do it slyly, and that, too, at the beginning of nearly every sermon, in the form of apologies, excuses or explanations. The essence of these excuses is, In view of these things, I shall not make so good an effort as I might make under other circumstances; or, This is not a fair sample of my talent; I am really a smarter preacher than I shall appear to be in this discourse. Down on such bragging.

If you have anything to say for God, at it at once, without making it redolent with personalities. Put Christ and truth ahead, and keep self out of sight. Stand behind the message, and let men look at that. Do not detract from it by first consuming time in disguised bragging about yourself, thus directing attention to yourself and your talent, that you might have brought out under other circumstances.

A minister of Christ has no business to make excuses. It is no part of his work. It is a blot on his sermon before being delivered. If he is to make a poor effort, it will be found out by the people in time, without being told of it beforehand. No matter about hinting to them that you could do better under other circumstances. That bragging will do them no good, nor you either.

MY PRAYER.

O come, Lord Jesus, quickly come,
Thou Lamb for sinners slain,
And rid this dreary, sinful earth
Of sorrow, death and pain.
Long have thy people waited
For the coming of that day,
When heaven and earth and all therein
Shall quickly pass away.

When thou shalt make this sinful earth
All beauteous and new,
And come to take up thine abode
With the righteous, just and true.
When we shall be with Abraham,
And the many saints of yore,
And griefs and tears and sighing
Shall come again no more.

This earth is but a wilderness;
Few are our pleasures here;
And did we not expect thee soon,
Life would be still more drear.
Then come, oh blessed Jesus,
We long thy face to see;
But until then help us, oh Lord,
To wait most patiently.

COVENTRY R. I. CAMPMEETING.

The fifth session of the R. I. Campmeeting met at Coventry Center, Sept. 6th, for a ten days' meeting. The pleasant grove of pine, oak and hickory, about one third of a mile from the depot, is in all respects adapted to campmeetings. Good water in abundance, a soil that readily drinks in the rains, so that it is never muddy on the campground.

There were about fifty tents in all, including cottages. Two large tents; one owned by E. Bellows, the other the Mass. Mission Tent, of I. I. Leslie, whose meetings were held evenings, also between hours of worship.

The average attendance at preaching service, Sunday excepted, was perhaps one thousand. Sunday, although the cars did not run, thousands gathered at an early hour at the grove. At noon an effort was made to count the carriages. The number approximated two thousand, filling the grove, fields, and roadside for nearly a mile.

The social meetings were pleasant, and the preaching generally good. In both preaching and exhortations but very little excessive denominationalism cropped out to prejudice ears of other christians who gathered to worship with this people. Our brethren who are looking for the coming of our Lord have grown wiser and kinder in this respect; and we are glad that this "thanking God that we are Adventists," or "thanking the Lord that we are Methodists," is fast becoming a thing of the past.

One very grave fault, however, at this series of meetings, was the lack of a laboring spirit for the unsaved. There were but few sinners converted, and few backsliders reclaimed. The brethren and sisters think too much of going to campmeetings for a good time; and neglect, while there, secret prayer, forget perishing men and women, and forget that God requires soul saving at their hands. But few of the preachers exhorted the church in this direction, so this most important element of all religious gatherings was nearly a failure.

Most of the preaching brethren from R. I. and Eastern Conn. were present; also from abroad were I. I. Leslie, H. H. Tucker, H. K. Flagg, D. S. Clark, J. W. Brittan, Mrs. Durand, Mrs. Stoddard, and Mrs. E. L. Crumb. From the south came J. A. Cargile of Alabama, full of faith and zeal; and from England Bro. Kellaway, of kindred spirit, whose presence and words of cheer made glad the hearts of his fellow workers in this country. H. L. Hastings was with us two days, preached twice from the stand, and gave two exhortations in the tent. He pressed on the people the importance of more praying and more labor to save men.

Meeting closed on the evening of Sept. 15th, with the commemoration of the Lord's Supper. V. P. SIMMONS.

HOME AND HEALTH.

RULES FOR PRESERVING THE HEALTH.

Health requires that we breathe the same air only once. The solid part of our bodies are continually wasting, and requires to be repaired by fresh substances: therefore, food, to repair the loss, should be taken with due regard to the exercise and waste of the body. Decomposing animal and vegetable substances yield various noxious gasses, which enter the lungs and corrupt the blood; therefore all impurities should be kept away from our houses, and care taken to secure a pure atmosphere. Equal bodily warmth should be maintained by exercise, clothing, or fire. Exercise and clothing are better than fire. The skin should be repeatedly cleansed.

Late hours and anxious pursuits exhaust the nervous system, and produce disease and premature death. Man will live most healthily upon simple solids and fluids. Strong drinks, tobacco, snuff, opium, and all mere indulgences should be avoided. Sudden alternations of heat and cold are dangerous (especially to the young and aged). Therefore clothing in quantity and quality should be adapted to the alterations of night and day, and of the seasons. Drinking cold water when the body is hot, or hot tea and soups when the body is cold, cause many evils.

Moderation in eating and drinking, short hours of labor and study, regularity in exercise, recreation, and rest, cleanliness, equanimity of temper and equality of temperature, these are the great essentials to that which surpasses all wealth, health of mind and body.—Sel. by J. N. Berry.

HEAT AND VENTILATION.

The warmer the air is, the greater its capacity for moisture. If air, then, has ready access to water as its temperature increases, it absorbs moisture in accordance with that increase. It is very much the fashion with those who warm their houses by means of furnaces placed in the cellar, to have a basin or pan, holding water, in the top of the furnace. This arrangement we do not deem philosophical or healthful, for the plain reason that the water, being so close to the fire, becomes heated frequently to the boiling point, and, as a consequence, a large amount of steam is thrown into the ascending current of heated air, and the atmosphere of the rooms above becomes too moist for healthful respiration.

It were better to have a pan of clean water placed in some convenient part of each room having a register or stove; then the air would take up its normal quantum, and would not become saturated. We think that if a room can be so arranged that the supply of fresh air shall be obtained directly from outside, it will prove much more healthful than to depend upon the supply from the heater, although that air may come from outside through the cold-air pipes connected with the heating apparatus. Perfect ventilation, in connection with a furnace, is one of the accomplishments as yet unattained, although every year experiments and inventions are made with that object in view.—Science of Health.

HOW TO STOP BLEEDING AT THE NOSE.—There are many remedies recommended, such as putting a large key down the patient's back, and so on; but the most effectual, based on scientific principles, is so effectual as to be infallible. The entire blood supply of the face comes from two little arteries, each supplying one side of the face, and each passes over the outside of the jaw-bone, about two-thirds of the way back from the chin to the angle of the jaw under the ear. These arteries can be found by the finger, and in case of bleeding in the nose can be pressed against the jaw bone, thus stopping the flow of blood from the nostrils. One of the arteries supplies the right nostril and the other the left. It can therefore be easily determined on which side to apply the pressure which should be continued long enough to allow contraction of the finer arteries of the nose.—Boston Journal.

A LORD IN THE FAMILY.—A pompous, silly school boy was one day boasting how many rich and noble relations he had, and having exhausted his topics, with an important air he asked one of his school-fellows:

"Are there any lords in your family?"

"Yes," said the little fellow, "there is one, at least, for I have often heard mother say that the Lord Jesus Christ is our Elder Brother."

Blessed are they who have the Lord in their family, and who know him as their Elder Brother.

ONE of the most important things to be considered in dress is the careful covering of the chest and back. Exposing the lungs by inadequate shielding of these portions of the body from cold is generally practiced, especially by ladies. To cover the chest alone most carefully is not enough. There should be thick covering between the shoulders.—Ex.

AN idle man or woman is a discredit to the race, and usually liable to fall into disease, whilst an industrious person adds to the wealth of the country, and is more likely to be healthy and happy.

ADDRESS OF MILES GRANT,

President of the American Advent Mission Society,

HELD AT SPRINGEIELD CAMP-GROUND, AUG. 17TH, 1876.

(Concluded.)

During the mission year, now closing, many hearts have been gladdened as the result of the labors of our faithful, self-denying, self-sacrificing missionaries in the South and West, while their needs were supplied by the gifts of the generous-hearted. As you have read their reports in the Crisis from week to week, we need not repeat them on this occasion. They find new and wide fields continually opening, and the "Macedonian cry" waxing louder and louder. A vast amount of prejudice has been removed, thus affording an increased demand for liberalities. We believe the time has come when we should devote our best energies to mission work. Let the strong men, full of faith and the Holy Spirit, go forth and carry the gospel of the kingdom into "the regions beyond," and let them be assured that they will be sustained by those who tarry at home.

"Hark! the voice of Jesus crying,—
Who will go and work to-day?
Fields are white and harvest waiting;
Who will bear the sheaves away?
Loud and strong the Master calleth,
Rich reward he offers thee;
Who will answer, gladly saying,
Here am I; send me, send me?

If you cannot be the watchman,
Standing high on Zion's wall,
Pointing out the path to heaven,
Offering life and peace to all;
With your prayers and with your bounties,
You can do what heaven demands;
You can be like faithful Aaron,
Holding up the prophet's hands."

Why do this? To save men from eternal destruction. No higher motive for liberality can possibly exist. All others sink out of sight before this one. It not only saves from destruction, but it secures to them a new earth, full of glory, and a life eternally free from all pain, sickness and sorrow, in the continued society of every pure being. Then let our gifts be noble, generous, and cheerful to secure such infinite results.

There is no time for delay. It is evident that the closing scenes of the last drama in the present dispensation is now opening. The well-known "sick man" is on his death-bed. The prospect is alarming, and the result must be terrible to the Lord's enemies. Satan is mustering his forces for the great conflict. Soon the decisive blow must be struck. The kingdom to be gained or lost is the whole world. When Jesus was here tho first time, Satan offered to give him the kingdoms then existing, on condition that he could be worshipped by the Son of God. Jesus refused the offer. Diabolus has now carried on his war against the saints about six thousand years. The prophetic chart shows that the time is at hand when they shall take the kingdom. But this they cannot do till the return of the King of kings. When he shall have come in the glory of his Father, and overthrown the arch enemy, then Jesus will say: "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Matt. 25: 34.

But just before that great event, the Scriptures inform us that Satan will send out his demon angels to stir up "the kings of the earth, and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty". (Rev. 16: 14); thus causing great "perplexity" and "distress of nations." The spirits of devils will work their miracles, and some will depart from the faith," and be caught in the Satanic snare. Just before the opening clouds reveal the coming King of glory, to take possession of his kingdom, "perilous times" will prevail. The great mass of mankind will be on the side of Satan, as in the days of Noah and Lot. Many members of churches will love sensual pleasures more than God, while they seek to cover their moral nakedness by "a form of godliness." Pride, covetousness, boasting, deceit, blasphemy, lasciviousness, social, financial, and political corruption, and all other forms of wickedness, will prevail to an alarming degree, thus giving Satan an apparent triumph but a short time before his final and eternal defeat, before the power of the all-conquering Conquerer, who once hung on Calvary's cross, as a willing sacrifice for all who trust him for salvation.

The signs given by Jesus, which would show when the last generation had come, have been seen by those now living; hence we consider the matter settled, that the great day of the Lord is at hand. The new order of things is about to be opened to an astonished world; the dead are to be raised, the wicked to be cut off, paradise is to be restored, when the "tree of life" will again adorn the saints' happy Eden home, and all may partake of its life-giving fruits. Satan's wicked kingdoms have had their day, and the Lord's comes next. We join heartily in the prayer, Let "thy kingdom come."

As railroads from varied directions in the great city; and ships from the four winds come to anchor in its harbor, so the many series of prophetic events, that reach to the return of Christ, are about to meet in a common centre. There is no room for a doubting wedge. Said Jesus: "The Scrip tures cannot be broken." John 10: 35. Daniel says, "the God of heaven "made known" to him that the Medo-Persian kingdom would succeed the Babylonian; that the Grecian would conquer the Medo-Persian, and then an unnamed fourth kingdom, of great strength, would follow; and after a time be divided, then wear out the saints for a long time, lose its dominion, and then the next great event would be the coming of the Son of man to set up the "everlasting kingdom," and give it to the saints. The first three kingdoms named arose and fell in harmony with the prophetic Word, uttered by Daniel some twenty-four hundred years ago; the fourth is so perfectly described by the prophet, that we are certain he was speaking of the Roman. During the last eighteen hundred years, that kingdom has done all its foretold work, the last of which has been accomplished in our own day. The prophet foretold that just before its end, it would lose its dominion by piece-meal, expressed by the word "consume," and that it would also prevail till the "Ancient of days" should come at the great day of the Lord. The last vestige of its political dominion was taken away Sept. 20th, 1870. On Nov. 1st, of the same year, the Italians issued the following decree: "All the political authority of the Pope and the Holy See is abolished, and will remain so." (Abbott's History of Italy, p. 619.)

While this has been going on in Rome, the Papal system has been prevailing, or spreading, wonderfully in this country. In seventy years the Roman Catholics in the United States have increased from thirty thousand to four millions, and four hundred thousand. They more than double their number every ten years. The population has increased about ten-fold, and the Catholics from one hundred and thirty to two hundred fold. At the beginning of the period named, they had one to every one hundred and thirty-one; now from one seventh to one fourth of the population. Thus, in harmony with the prophecy, while the "little horn" is losing its "dominion," in the Pope's empire, it is prevailing on this continent. Since 1859, the Italians have suppressed eighteen thousand four hundred and fifty-three ecclesiastical houses, and confiscated church property to the amount of two hundred and twenty million of dollars. Garibaldi says: "I believe there is not in all the world a country less Catholic than Italy." The Pope is now enormously in debt.

The Roman "woman" is passing through the period by prophet foretold, when he said: "Therefore shall her plagues come in one day, death, and mourning, and famine, and she shall be utterly burned with fire; for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her." Rev. 18: 8. Her last days have come. Her career has been a long and bloody one, but her cup of iniquity is full, and she must now receive her plagues.

Her neighbor, the "sick man," is also dying, and both must come to their end at the return of the Son of man. That his coming is at the door, we must admit. Then what is duty to our fellow men in an hour like the present? These grand and glorious truths have become our happy possession; of more value to us than thousands of gold and silver. Shall we make a sacrifice to send them to others, and hear the Master say, "Well done?" or put our light under the bushel? We admit the importance of these truths, the good they have done us, and that others need them as much as ourselves. Let no spirit of covetousness cause us to withhold the helping hand, and thus produce spiritual poverty, in our own souls. Said Jesus: "Freely ye have received, freely give." Matt. 10: 8. As the Lord loves the "cheerful giver," let his love be secured by reaching forth a liberal hand.

The question for us to settle at this time is, how much shall we give to send out faithful men to warn our neighbors, and assist them in preparing for the great event now impending? Let us make a generous loan to the Lord, while we lift our own hearts and rejoice over approaching redemptian. It is a glorious privilege to be allowed to assist in the last great struggle against the powers of darkness. To the faithful, victory is sure. Our leader is the all conquering One. His foes are many and mighty, but they "shall be as though they had not been." Oba. 16. Their embattled legions are advancing with bold defiance, that may alarm the faint-hearted and the doubting, but he who is clad with "the whole armor of God," has nothing to fear. The fiercer the fight, and the bolder we enter, the more sure and triumphant the victory.

"Brother! up to the breach,
For God's freedom and truth;
Let us act as we teach,
With the wisdom of age add the vigor of youth.
Heed not their cannon balls;
Ask not who stands or falls;
Grasp the sword of the Lord,
And—forward!"

One may well covet the privilege of being in the last battle with Satan's forces, and go at once from the scene of conflict to the general triumph of all the saints on the highlands of glory.

Ours is a grand position. Prophets longed to see this day, but died without the sight. They saw it in prophetic light, in the dim distance; but we are about entering the great union depot, where all the lines of prophecy, that reach to the end of the present age, meet harmoniously at the focal point, where Jesus shall appear in wondrous glory, to meet his waiting bridal church. The saints' persecutor, in the seven-hilled city, has lost her dominion, and soon we may expect to witness the bitter end of that blood-drunken power. The last-day formalism and pleasure-loving is abounding abundantly; the "distress of nations," like a rising tide, is pressing at our doors; the faithful watchman's cry that the morning is dawning, all conspire to cause the friends of the coming One to lift up their heads with exultant rejoicing, because of their approaching redemption, where all pain and poverty, darkness and doubts, sickness and sorrow, trials and temptations, death and dying, will be no more felt nor feared, while endless ages unfold their numberless years of boundless glory.

"How long, dear Savior, O how long
Shall this bright hour delay?
Fly swifter round, ye wheels of time,
And bring the welcome day."

THOUGHTS ON MAN.

BY A BAPTIST.

SEEK FOR IMMORTALITY.

"Who will render to every man according to his deeds; to those who, by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory, and honor, and immortality, eternal life; but to them that are contentions and do not obey the truth, but obey unrighteousness, indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish." Is it not evident from this language that some seek for immortality, and will be rewarded with eternal life; while others do not seek for it, and will not have eternal life? In the eighth chapter of this same epistle, in speaking of hope, he says, "For we are saved by hope," and then asks the question, "For what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for?" And here I ask a question, on the same principle and as part of an argument, if man possessed inherent immortality, why does he seek for what he is already in the possession of? And still another question. In the passage first quoted, are not the terms "immortality" and "eternal life" used to convey the same idea? or does it teach that man seeks for one thing, and is rewarded with something for which he does not seek?

In Gen. 2: 7, we read, "and the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." The breathing into his nostrils clearly shows man to have been created, or formed, before life was imparted or breathed into him; but the advocate for the immortality of the soul says that had reference to his body only; but it is called man, and includes all there is of him, except the life principle; and previous to the imparting of that principle by the breath of his Maker, he must have been a dead soul, in the sense of the term as there used. The question asked by Job (14: 14), "If a man die shall he live again?" has been adduced as evidence of the immortality of the soul, and has been used as the basis from which to draw them. To those holding that view, I would suggest the following points for consideration: (1) If the subject then under discussion between Job and his three friends had been the immortality of man, would he not have been likely to have put the question in something like the following form: If a man die, does he not continue to live or be, rather than "live again"? for his question clearly implies both that he had lived, and that he had ceased to live, which had no proper application to immortality, but exactly applicable to the doctrine of the resurrection.

(2) Is it not clearly evident from the arguments of Job's three friends, that they disbelieved in a resurrection and future and final judgment, holding that rewards and punishments were all meted out in this world, and that Job was then and there enduring punishment on account of his hypocrisy; and further, that his hypocrisy had been so flagrant and far-reaching, that justice could not be satisfied by administering punishment to him in homeopathic doses; holding that to be the reason in their judgment, for his present deep affliction? And is it not as evident from Job's arguments, that he was advocating the doctrine of the resurrection and future judgment, and that the present affliction was for some wise purpose, then hidden from him, but that in the future it would be made plain that he was not the hypocrite they had charged him of being; and in all his arguments, he is aiming at one particular point, at which he arrives at the close of the 19th chapter. But just before stating his concluding and culminating point, see how his whole being yearns for sympathy, when he breaks out in the following language: "Have pity upon me, have pity upon me, O ye my friends, for the hand of God hath touched me. Why do ye persecute me as God, and are not content with my flesh? O that my words were now written, O that they were printed in a book; that they were graven with an iron pen, and lead in the rock forever;" and then states the culminating point in his argument, not as a belief, but as a fact of his own knowledge, as follows: "For I know that my Redeemer liveth; and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin, worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, though my reins be consumed within me." Can anything be clearer than that this language applies to the resurrection? Does he not say that he will see his Redeemer upon the earth in the latter day, and that too after his body has been destroyed by worms? And does he not further disclose that his resurrected body will be the same as now, when he says, "Yet in my flesh shall I see God."

But if Paul was correct when he said flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God, neither corruption inherit incorruption; then, we conclude that the resurrection does nothing towards making an immortal being out of a mortal one, but produces man in the same circumstances he was in at his death, and that something remains to be done before man becomes an immortal. Then Job makes a personal remark to his three friends, "But ye should say, Why persecute we him? seeing the root of the matter is found in me. Be ye afraid of the sword, for wrath bringeth the punishments of the sword, that ye may know there is a judgment." Can anything be plainer than that Job's three friends denied the doctrine of a resurrection; and after that a final judgment; and that Job advocated both? If anyone doubts the above conclusions, let them study Gophar's reply in the 20th chapter, and Job's further answer in the 21st, in addition to the arguments already gone over.

It is contended by those who hold the idea that man possesses inherent immortality, that he is a complex being having body and soul, consequently, possesses two kinds of life; the body subject to death, but the soul immortal. But I do not so understand the Scriptures to teach; neither do I understand that the reason and intelligence given to man which renders him an accountable being necessitates the idea of immortality; for as I have before stated, I cannot see how that intelligence can conceive the propriety of passing a death sentence on an immortal being.

In closing this part of the subject, I will express the opinion that the doctrine that man was created an immortal being necessitates more forced and unnatural construction of the Scripture language, than any other doctrine held by the professedly evangelical christians; for it cannot be maintained, only as life and death are construed to mean the same, so far as conscious existence is concerned, differing only in the conditions.

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST.

Sketch of a Sermon delivered Sept. 19th, in the Seventeenth Street M. E. Church, New York, by the Pastor, Rev. J. H. Lightbourn.

"And as he sat upon the Mount of Olives, the disciples came unto him privately, saying, Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world."—MATT. 24: 3.

The "coming of the Son of man" and "the end of the world" are two of the most solemn and awful subjects found in the Word of God. In the text, the disciples associate the coming of Christ with the end of the world, and inquire of the signs which shall foreshadow these events, substantially asking these questions: 1st. When shall Jerusalem be destroyed? 2d. What shall be the sign of thy return to the earth? 3d. When shall be the end of the world?

The destruction of Jerusalem has already transpired, and affords one of the strongest external proofs of the truth of the Christian religion. Everything which our Lord declared should come upon the temple, city, and people has been literally fulfilled in the most wonderful and extraordinary manner. The other two events, the return of Christ to the earth, and the end of the world are yet to come. And as certainly as the first has been fulfilled, so certainly will the other two events yet transpire. As certainly as Christ once came to earth, so certainly will he come again, and the world have an end. Before inquiring concerning the time of the coming of the Son of man, and of the end of the world, it is proper that we inquire into the teachings of Scripture upon the subjects themselves.

We shall confine ourselves this evening to the coming of Christ. The second advent of Christ was one of the first utterances of prophecy, and one of the last that lingered upon its lips. Enoch, the first prophet, and John, the last of the divinely inspired apostles, distinctly announced the second advent of Christ to the earth. In this chapter, Christ no less than six times distinctly refers to his return to the world. No believer in revelation can be a disbeliever upon this subject. While, however, all christians agree that Christ will come the second time, there are differences of opinion with regard to the manner of his coming.

1st. It is held by some that his second advent will not be a personal and visible coming, but a providential and spiritual manifestation.

The Scriptures as clearly teach that the second advent of Christ is to be a personal, visible coming, as that the first advent was personal and visible. If there were no other passage but that in the first chapter of Acts, the question is settled forever. After the Redeemer had given the most positive and repeated assurances of his return to the world in person, declaring that his very murderers should see him, "he was taken up and a cloud received him out of their sight."

Out of that cloud two angels, like two sparkling drops descended, and thus addressed the disciples who were silently gazing up into the heavens, "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." (Verse 11). "This same Jesus"—not his spiritual presence, that never departed from them—"shall so come." How? "In like manner as ye have seen him go up." How was that? Personally and visibly. There is no meaning in words, and there are no fixed principles for the interpretation of language if the personal, visible coming of Christ is not taught in this passage.

2d. Another opinion is that Christ will come in person, and be seen in the clouds and with the holy angels, but that he will not return to the earth; that he will set his throne in the air, there summon the universe before his tribunal, and after burning up the earth and pronouncing the sentence of eternal punishment upon the wicked, he will gather his saints and take them to heaven from whence he came, and thus come and go without having set foot upon the earth.

The Scriptures assure us that Christ is to return to the earth, that he shall stand upon the earth, that "he shall reign with his saints upon the earth." He is to return to that from which he departed. He did not depart from the air, but from the earth. Here on this earth, where he was born, where he lived thirty-three years, where he died, and from which he ascended, to this very earth he is to return, not to annihilate it, but to pass it through its baptism of fire, and bring it out a "new earth." This earth that gave him a manger, will, upon his return, give him a throne. This earth that drank his tears and blood, will by acclamation proclaim him "King of kings and Lord of lords."

Lo, he comes with clouds descending,
Once for favored sinners slain!
Thousand, thousand saints attending,
Swell the triumph of his train.
Hallelujah! Hallelujah!
Jesus comes on earth to reign.

THE GREAT DAY OF THE LORD.

W. J. BOSTWICK.

(Concluded.)

"Multitudes, multitudes, in the valley of decision; for the day of the Lord is near in the valley of decision."—JOEL 3: 14.

Many of the christians of to-day carry about with them the gentle visage and meek and lowly bearing of a saint, when they go forth to mingle with the people of the world; but no sooner do they reach their own doors than the mask is thrown off, and they appear in their true character, with the bearing and visage of a fiend. They are "without natural affection." They do not love their own, and how can they love the Lord?

Many of the christians of to-day have fallen desperately in love with themselves; so much so, that everything they do must be for the peculiar benefit of number one. They have taken down the sign of charity from over the door of their heart, and barred it, and stand ready to make a sacrifice at any moment for self, even at the expense of any other good brother. The maxims of this kind are, "it is better to receive than to give." "Give not to him that asketh of thee, and from him that would borrow of thee turn away." Many of the churches of to-day are nothing more than costly bazars of fashion, where people congregate on one day in the week, in order to compare bonnets, hats, silks, satins and pullbacks, and after a heavily salaried choir, some of the members of which are fresh from the stage and lager beer saloon, get up and perform a few musical perioretts and grand flourishes, and the minister preaches a sermon filled with the good things of this life, they go home and call it worship.

In all our large cities may be seen, here and there, grand and majestic piles of stone and fine masonry, written all over, from corner stone to steeple, and from pulpit to gallery, with debt! debt! debt to the world! while the steeple, which lifts its lofty head far into the etherial blue, and points with silent finger its mute appeal to turn from earth away, looks down upon enough corruption, want, human misery, and true heathenism, to make the most horrible looking heathen god grin with delight. Proud and boastful, they say in their hearts, "I am rich and increased with goods, and have need of nothing," and know not that they are "wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked."

When we look out upon the christian world to-day, we see the professed followers of Christ, bowing and cringing before the god of this world, and seeking, with greed, positions of worldly honor, fame and influence; while, from off your lofty peak in Palestine, comes welling down in majestic grandeur, from the mouth of Him whose name they bare, when offered all the kingdoms of the world for one act of worship, those God-honoring words, "Get thee behind me, Satan, for it is written, thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve."

Evidently, the time has come when they cannot endure sound doctrine. The old, worn-out doctrine of the "everlasting destruction of the wicked" will not do in these days, but in its place is being instituted "the final salvation of all men." The grand doctrine of "salvation through Christ" is fast becoming obsolete, and in its place is being preached a new religion called "the religion of humanity," in which man is exalted to the highest pinnacle of excellency. The man who can preach the most pleasing sermons upon the most popular topics, and who has always something new to present to his hearers, is the man who can command the largest salary. Accordingly, it is common in our churches of to-day to have long rose-tinted sermons, on highly perfumed subjects, in which the name of the Lord is hardly ever mentioned; in which the speaker ascends away up into the dome of the temple in outbursts of eloquence, and scatters down upon his hearers whole boquets of choice phrases, drawn from the vocabulary of gush, and then sits down and awaits with composure the applause which is sure to follow.

Again, many of the pulpits of the churches of to-day are occupied by men who have left the old landmarks of Christianity, so plainly set up by our Lord, and which circumscribed the lives of the apostles, and have gone off into new fields of speculation and philosophy, at each "new departure" getting farther and farther from the source of true light, leading their flocks into pastures heretofore unexplored, filled with a vegetation producing the deadly fruits of doubt, unbelief and unconcern; and finally bringing up in the inextricable thicket of infidelity. They propose, by their new philosophy, to lead them up on to a higher plane of religious thought and experience, where humanity will no longer be looked upon as a depraved and unclean thing; but where it will be exalted into its true position, and given a throne, and worshiped. They propose, by the new religion of the nineteenth century, brought into existence by the grand onward march of humanity toward perfection, (!) but born from the womb of endless night, and swaddled in the clothes of liberalism, to bathe the world in such a flood of light, that man will no longer need to go up to the house of the Lord to inquire of him, but that all he will have to do will be to look within, and there he will find all those purifying elements which are necessary to work out his salvation, and cause him to live forever in the world to come. Ah! they are but following an ignis-fatuus, manipulated by the hand of a white-robed demon, which will some day suddenly go out, and leave them mired in the slough of the damned.

These are truly "perilous times" for the church. The great heart of evil is being stirred to its utmost depths by the intensest passion, and "Satan goeth about like a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour," because he knows his time is short, and is using every artifice in his power, in order to overthrow Christ's people, even to transforming himself into an angel of light, that he may lead them up into ways of thought and practice, which have the garb of righteousness, but which, upon examination, are found to contain the elements of eternal damnation and everlasting destruction. And oh, how he is succeeding. Enter whatever denomination you will, and you will find just such a people as will fulfil this prophecy of St. Paul, in some particulars, hiding behind the folds of Christianity. Enter whatever church you will, and you will meet with men who are members of the church in good standing, who have a form of godliness, but who, when they come in contact with the world, deny the power of it. Enter whatever church you will, and there you will find self-lovers, boasters, idolaters, hearts of pride, heady and high-minded, having a religion of the head, but none of the heart; unthankful for favors received from the Lord, unholy in their lives, without natural affection for the brethren, or for Him whom they profess to serve; truce-breakers, violaters of their vows, backbiters, incontinent, who cannot abstain from fleshly lusts; traitors to the Lord, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God.

But the Lord has a true people in the midst of all this declension, and is just now taking out of all nations a people for his name. In that day, there will come a people out from amidst the jungles and swamps of farthest India, and enter into the kingdom before these. In that day, there will arise a people from amidst the superstition and idolatry of the land of the dragon, and go into the kingdom of heaven, and these be cast out. In that day, there will arise a people from amidst the homes of the maji, who followed the star of Israel's king, and sit down with the old patriarchs in the world to come. One shall be taken and the other left. Thus we see how faithfully the prophecies of our Lord and his holy prophets and apostles have been fulfilled in regard to the condition of the world and the church in the last days.

Then, if these things are true, and none but the most intrepid sceptic can deny them, then it is equally true that the end of all things is at hand. Such a state of affairs cannot exist much longer and any one be saved. Everything points to the speedy dissolution of all things, and the coming of the Lord. Who is ready? Who among us have our lamps filled with oil, and trimmed, ready, at the summons, to enter in to the marriage supper of the Lord? Let us remember and heed the advice of our Lord, who says, "Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning; and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord, when he will return from the wedding; that when he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately. Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord, when he cometh, shall find watching; verily I say unto you, that he shall gird himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them." But, "when once the Master of the house is risen up, and hath shut to the door, and ye begin to stand without, and to knock at the door, saying, Lord, Lord, open to us; and he shall answer and say unto you, I know you not whence ye are; then shall ye begin to say, we have eaten and drunk in thy presence, and thou hast taught in our streets; but he shall say, I tell you, I know not whence ye are; depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity. There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye shall see Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God, and ye yourselves thrust out. Even so, come, Lord Jesus.

DR. CUMMING ON TURKEY.

The Rev. Dr. Cumming, of the Scotch National Church, Crown Court, Covent Garden, alluding to Turkey, said the Scriptures had stated that Christ's second advent would not be far distant. Christ himself had stated eighteen centuries since, that he would come again. Thoughtful and gifted minds of the present age were all agreed that all the great prophetic epochs had expired. All the great epochs of the previous two hundred years referring to the Turkish empire, had pointed out that that empire, represented by the great river Euphrates, through which the Moslem had passed, and contiguous to which he dwelt, should be dried up under the "sixth seal," and that after that period the sixth seal would cease, and the seventh seal would arrive, including the immediate advent of Christ. He had no need to remind them that that moment the Moslem was hurrying to destruction. The empire had practically ceased to exist, and not all the combined efforts of all the nations on the earth would prevent its immediate break up and collapse. He had pointed out these matters years since in Exeter Hall, only to receive ridicule, but at the moment whilst speaking, two thousand of the Church of England clergy held he was right in these matters.—Sel.

SEEK AND STRIVE.

Jesus was questioned if there be few that be saved. He answered by saying, "Strive to enter in at the strait gate; for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able." Luke 13: 24. The great Teacher's answer shows plainly that few, comparatively, will be saved, and those by striving to enter in; while the multitude will be lost because they only seek to enter in.

He exhorted them to strive to enter in, which must be a successful effort; for he would not entreat them to do that which would be abortive; but he taught that many would seek to enter and would not be able; therefore, to strive is, in the sense expressed, a saving act, while to seek is an unsuccessful act.

This includes only those who strive and seek for salvation, and not those who make no effort to gain eternal life. It is very important, therefore, that we who are making some efforts for the kingdom of God know whether our efforts are striving or seeking.

The word seek expresses less force, energy, and earnestness, while strive represents an act employing the highest degrees of might, ambition and zeal. It is plain that when our professed christian service is accomplished in an easy, careless, and quiet way, without any wrestling and fighting, any fearful contests and mighty upheavings of threatening elements, and no terrible battles with a mighty foe, and no bitter opposition from an unbelieving world, that we are in the broad way, where there is no striving, but only seeking for eternal life.

Many suppose that they are the justified people of God when their acts of obedience consist in doing those things which can be done comfortably and conveniently; when the weather is fair and the traveling is good; when they have no friends to displease or foes to excite; no unpopular truth to confess and no cross to bear. But alas! the end of that way is death. Some of the professed servants of Christ verily think that they are doing God service when they are gliding down the stream of pleasure, reading a few finely written essays, carefully guarding against any acknowledgement of truth or principles which the refined auditors will not approve; for the rumseller will not allow himself to be reproved nor the extortioner to be exposed, nor the devotees to fashion to have the gospel mirror presented before them; and so in an easy, pleasant way he hopes to gain the kingdom of God.

A boatman cannot leisurely row his boat against a strong wind and rapid current; the boat will go in the direction of the strongest forces acting upon it. If the boatman does not exert more power than the wind and tide he must go down stream. So it is with the christian. The influence of the world, the lusts of the flesh, and the power of Satan all combine and act upon him with great force, to carry him away from Christ and holiness, down to eternal death.

Every one whose eyes are open to see the situation, and who understands the strength and results of the forces acting upon him will feel that he is in great peril, and that his wisest and mightiest effort, with all the help he can get from a strong Friend, will be required to give him victory. Such an action is expressed by the word "strive;" while the quiet, easy effort made, when the forces to be overcome and the danger incurred are not understood, is expressed by the word "seek."

The case may be illustrated by a congregation in a house suddenly startled by the cry of "fire." Seeing themselves in imminent danger, and that the only chance for safety is an immediate exit, all will make an agonizing effort, and exert all their powers to escape; calling earnestly for help to all who can assist them. Such an action would be properly called striving to escape. But if the congregation were regularly dismissed, and no danger were apprehended, and it should pass out in its usual quiet way, this action would be properly termed seeking to retire from the house.

The Savior clearly teaches that the only successful christian labor will be that of great earnestness; like a drowning man struggling for his life, or like a mariner clinging to the rigging of a ship in the midst of dashing waves and a howling tempest. He may have perfect confidence in the ship, and rest in assurance that the pilot will guide her safely into port, but his personal safety will depend upon unceasing watchfulness, and his constant and mightiest efforts to keep his position and do his duty.

A man cannot "resist the devil" unless he is fully awake, and ready to exert all his powers and receive help from Jesus in the conflict. Christ will help none only those who are ready to do all they can to help themselves.

It is true that in the life of trust there is a sweet peace that abideth,—an undisturbed rest of confidence which is more desirable than all earthly good; but with it there is a sense of danger; a realization of the presence of perils; a knowledge that terrible foes lurk in ambush, and rise up in the open field, seeking to destroy us. These things produce agonizing prayer, ceaseless watchfulness, fearful battlings, and life-long yearnings for eternal salvation for ourselves and others.

Let all be faithfully warned who are dreaming that their enemies are all conquered, and the battle is all ended;—that self is so subdued that lust will no more produce dangerous temptations, and that Satan has yielded the field and retired from the conflict, so that their rest may be undisturbed by night vigils and fierce encounters.

Satan has come in great wrath, knowing that he hath but a short time, and is arousing all the latent powers of wickedness, and charging down upon truth and its defenders with unparalleled malice, so that all who are not shielded by Immanuel's wings and guarded by angel watchers will be fatally wounded and swept into the gulf of perdition.

Arouse, ye careless, idle ones, for the enemy's opiate has blunted all your sensibilities to danger, and closed your eyes to his snares and designs, and you fold your arms in soft slumber, dreaming that your death quiet is the rest of faith. Awake! for the cry of fire is sounding from the throne of Deity, and you have but a moment to escape to the chambers of Omnipotence! O strive—RUSH,—in the agonies of a real faith, from the sinking ship to the lifeboat; from the burning city to the mountain of eternal safety.

Call to mind and heart the Master's faithful warning, and believe he meant you, in your situation, when he said, "Remember Lot's wife." The divine call has summoned you to leave the doomed city—therefore tarry not a moment in your flight; turn not your face to look upon the things about to perish. Take long strides; for death and hell are rising up like a flood to overwhelm you. Hold fast to the divine arm, for it alone can help you over the yawning chasm to the ever-blooming fields of everlasting rest.

O wrestle! fight! throw yourself into the heat of battle, for the conflict of the ages has come. Stand up in the might and courage of sanctified manhood, and show yourself loyal and worthy of divine trust unto the end of earthly conflict. The men of this generation are favored with the most glorious privilege of gaining "a good report" in heaven, by faith, ever granted to mortals. Stand, then, at your post, and fail not now, for the enemy is receiving his death wounds, and must soon sink into his grave of everlasting oblivion. Strike for God once more! Nerve the arm for the last, last conflict! Beyond it is peace, peace, eternal peace. Amen.

THE LATEST EASTERN WAR NEWS.

The war cloud hanging over the valley of the Euphrates is certainly gathering blackness, and its thunder tones hourly thrill us with a deeper sense of coming wasteness and bloodshed in the palaces of all the kings. The lightning voices speak fearful sentences of swiftly approaching butchery. The brief cessation of hostilities has ended with renewed fighting, showing that the mightiest efforts ever made by the great kings for peace is again fruitless. It seems to us that the present circumstances controling the Turkish war clearly justify us in saying that, while the mighty governments of Europe unite their powers to end the war and restore peace, a higher power has determined war. We have from the beginning of the rebellion thought that there was some probability that this skirmish might end for a time, to be renewed with greater fury; but that probability is certainly diminishing. The latest sentences from the great peace-makers utter discouragement, and express fearful forebodings of an approaching terrible war. The latest dispatches (Sept. 30th) thrill us with deep emotions, because they point to events clearly described on the prophetic page, for which we have long waited. They are as follows:—

London, Sept. 29. A dispatch to Reuter from Belgrade says that the English Consul on Thursday renewed his representations and urged the Servian Government to accept a prolongation of the armistice for four days. The Government refused. The Servian forces, under Gens. Tchernajeff and Popovich, simultaneously attacked the Turks on Thursday morning and pursued them beyond Teschitza. During the engagement the fire from the Servian artillery ignited seven caissons of gunpowder in the Turkish ammunition depot. The explosion caused fearful havoc among the Turks.

While the engagement was proceeding Gen. Noevalovich made a flank movement and occupied the heights in the rear of the Turkish position. It is stated that the Turkish army is now threatened on three sides, namely: Gen. Tchernajeff, with the bulk of the Servian army, threatens their front, Gen. Popovich their left wing and Harvatovich their rear. The fighting ceased at 8 o'clock last night and was recommenced this morning.

The Times' dispatch from Belgrade reports that the situation continues gloomy and becomes more complicated. The only chance of peace is Turkey's agreement to the conditions proposed by the powers. If these are agreed to by the Turks Russia will have an excellent opportunity of vindicating her sincerity. In fact all the parties in this game of diplomacy would then have to show their hands.

The war party here mock all allusions to peace. They declare that Ristics does nothing except what Russia likes. They even assert that whatever Russia may profess to the other powers, she is really for war until the Turks are driven from Constantinople.

It is idle for Russia to talk of neutrality with a Russian army in Servia. The same correspondent says the accounts of the operations at the front are confused. Both sides claim the victory on Thursday. The Servians are constructing winter quarters.

Should the war continue, there will be nothing but raids during the winter. Field operations must be deferred until spring, when the war party expect that Russia will be on the ground for the great campaign which is to bring her to Constantinople.

NOW READY—A NEW BOOK.

The book entitled, "Mormonism Examined and Refuted," is now ready for delivery. It is a 12 mo. work, of 184 pp. Owing to the increase of its size, it will be sold at 50 cts. per copy hereafter. Send orders to the Crisis Office, or to Wm. Sheldon, Brodhead, Wis.

LORD DERBY'S CHANGE OF TACTICS.

Lord Derby occupies the same position in the English government, that our Secretary of State does in the United States Government. Before he occupied that position, in speaking, in 1864, of the future of Turkey, he said:—

"I believe the breaking up of the Turkish Empire to be only a question of time, and probably not a very long time. The Turks have played their part in history; they have had their day, and their day is over; and I confess I do not understand, except it be from the influence of old diplomatic traditions, the determination of your older statesmen to stand by the Turkish rule, whether right or wrong. I think we are making for ourselves enemies of races which will very soon become, in Eastern countries, dominant races."

In 1876, as exponent of the English government, he says:—

"It would be as much a mistake now as formerly to let the Turkish Empire take care of itself. The value to us [England] of its territorial integrity was real and permanent. Any attempt at partition would be the signal for a European war. The relations between Turkey and her subject races has been repeatedly modified, and they might be modified again.

The great statesman in looking at this grave question from a personal stand-point, where the influences of official responsibilities did not affect his judgment, could say that "The Turks have played their part in history; they have had their day, and that day is over." But now he thinks that the Turks have not quite spent their day; but hours must be added for the protection of English interests in India, and to prevent the Russians from occupying Constantinople. But when the Lord's time comes that "none shall help" the Turks, Lord Derby and all the "young lions" will be powerless to assist.

A PROVIDENTIAL ESCAPE.

Bro. W. C. Hall, of Fort Howard, Wis., writes us that he had a very narrow escape from being fatally shot, or rather was very remarkably saved from the fatality of a shot fired at him by a very careless, childish man, who, holding a revolver, and thinking it was not charged, and purposing to intimidate him, snapped it at him, and it being charged, the ball struck Bro. H. on the shoulder, penetrating his coat, vest, and shirt, without doing him any harm. God be thanked for his ceaseless care and safe protection of his people. But how insecure is mortal life when the divine protection is withdrawn.

CORRECTION.—The lines entitled, "The Consolations of Prayer," in Crisis of Sept. 13th, should have been accredited to Miss Ada M. Passage, of Mich., instead of E. A. Boynton.

THE CONFESSIONAL.

The following statement of facts relating to the Catholic "Confessional" should be known by everybody. The one who gives the information has had good opportunity to be correctly informed in the case. Satan displayed great skill in arranging the Papal system. Thank the Lord, its days are numbered, and soon its judgment doom will come. It has corrupted kings and nations. When speaking of this power, symbolized by a corrupt woman, the pen of inspiration says: "With whom the kings of the earth have committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornications. Rev. 17: 2. The following shows one means by which she has accomplished her work.

M. G.

LETTER BY THE REV. B. E. OURRIER, FORMERLY PAROCHIAL VICAR AND PROFESSOR OF THE GRAND SEMINARY AND DIOCESAN MISSIONARY OF AMIENS, DEPARTMENT OF SOMME, FRANCE.

Sir: You desire to have my opinion of auricular confession. It would be sufficient if I told you that I have carefully perused Rev. C. Chiniquy's work on the subject, and none of the statements made by him are contrary to my own personal experience. I may add my short testimony to the lengthened details he has given.

I. There is an article of furniture in the Romish Church of a peculiar shape; but this article plays a most important part in the destinies of humanity. When the daylight is beginning to pass away and the shades of evening darken the sanctuary, a dark object is seen slowly gliding through the aisles to this mysterious box, which it enters, shutting the door noisily. This signal being given, you behold a number of fugitive shadows, one by one furtively approaching this box, some with eagerness and others with terror depicted on their countenances; they murmur a few words in a low suppressed voice, they disappear, reappear a moment afterwards to disappear once more. This is the Confessional! that dark, mysterious cave, where the chains are forged, that bind humanity. It is the fatal spot, where society in all its ranks is demoralized, degraded, seduced and corrupted. It is that dreadful pit, where children, young people, grown-up men and women, the aged, the insignificant, the great, rich and poor, servants and potentates see rivited on their wrists, those frightful manacles, which render them thenceforth the victims of the priest, slaves of the priest, did I say? Ay, his very goods and chattels. It is the impure and fœtid source from which the priest draws, nourishes, strengthens and renews day by day that terrible power, whose weight crushes the conscience. It is the abyss whence issue those pestilential exhalations and miasmas which corrupt, infect and poison alike the imagination, memory and intelligence, as well as the will and the heart, shall I say even the body, of all those who have the folly to approach it.

Happy, a thousand times happy, are those whose religious faith has kept them far removed from this filthy sewer, a single smell of which is enough to infect one for ever! But what shall I say of the man condemned by force of circumstances to live in this unhealthy atmosphere, to taste these deleterious principles, to stir up its abominable filth, condemned in short to inoculate himself, eyes, ears and mouth, and all the pores of his body with these dreadful impurities. Permit me now to lay before you proofs to support these assertions, grave, but not the less true.

II. A seminarist had concluded his theological studies. He was ordained a priest and sent into a country parish. Six months after his departure I met him, and we conversed about his situation. Ah! said he, what they preached to us at the Seminary is but too true. They told us that the priest is the God of this earth. Post Deum, terrenus Deus! (After God, the God below on this earth.) Saints, angels, even Mary must yield the place to him. Their power is nothing in comparison to his. Indeed, said he, I see it now more than ever. Every time that I enter the Confessional, and see it surrounded by the highest in the town and neighborhood, when I see the Prefect of the district kneeling at my feet and saying, "Pardon me, father, for I have sinned," oh, then, young as I am, I feel myself increased immeasurably in importance, my head seems to touch the skies, and I feel as if a divine blood were circulating through my veins. Such was the fruit of a clerical education, and six months experience of the Confessional.

The above circumstance recalls to my mind the memorable saying of Vespasian. He was on the point of death, and ridiculing the custom of the Romans, who were in the habit of deifying their Emperors, after their death, he said to a friend, "I feel I am becoming a God." Well, then, look at the priest at the Confessional. Does he not think himself God, by the strength of the power that is delivered unto him, and by the almost idolatrous flattery of the ignorant and besotted crowd that flocks around him. And indeed how could it be otherwise? Seated in the confessional, he has the power of pardoning sins, and who is it that has the power of pardoning sins but God? He can refuse to pardon, and the penitent is not pardoned, his sins are retained, he is unforgiven, and who has that power but God?

Who is thus the only door-keeper of heaven, if it be not the priest? He alone has the key. He is then more than man, he is God. The people believe he wields the power of God. He himself ridicules the idea, as Vespasian did, but nevertheless he cannot help believing it, especially when he sees meekly kneeling at his feet, the exalted ones of the city, and the potentates of the earth. Ah then there is no longer a limit to his tyranny and authority. Go, ye wretched body of slaves, run humbly, ask of this priest chains for your heart and mind, chains for your wife and children. Abdicate all liberty, conscience, virtue and principles. Prostrate yourself before this retish, who takes advantage of you, and then laughs at your stupidity.

III. One day I was sent for by the Bishop of Amiens. I was one of his diocesan missionaries. "Will you do me a great service," said he. "You know that very extraordinary things are taking place in the parish of B. There are over thirty young women there, very devout, and much given to the service of God, communicating every day, confessing three times a week; in a word, edifying the parish by a most exemplary life and a zeal ready to do all things for the glory of God. The devil, jealous of so much holiness, and fearing the influence of such good examples, has determined to overthrow them. Thus, he troubles and torments these young women in the most frightful manner. One day the villagers hear with terror, that one of these holy damsels has thrown herself into a well immediately on issuing from church, where she had partaken of the holy sacrament; another day it is reported that another has disappeared, carried down by the force of the current of the river, on leaving the confessional. Latterly, the townspeople were awakened from sleep by night by the sound of strange and terrible cries proceeding from one of those young women, dancing a Satanic dance in the public square. I sent two of my holiest and most experienced priests to exorcise the spirit, but they have not been able to effect any good. I wish you to go and take up a mission in that district. I trust that God will bless your efforts, and that these sad scandals may disappear."

I accepted; my experience of the confessional told me that I required neither springling bush, nor holy water. At the end of three days I discovered the true devil, but not without difficuty. A fine looking devil it was, in truth, but in flesh and blood. It was a priest; he was the confessor of all these holy maidens, and had bound to his triumphal car the whole of that band of beautiful penitents through the vows of virginity and perpetual obedience. The wretch; in the name of holy obedience, they were bound to give glory to God. They were led to adore this confessor, and were compelled to submit to his most infamous proposals. It was no violation of chastity, so long as they submitted only to his embraces. Yes, indeed, the confessional is a two-edged poignard, cutting both ways, which, with one blow, assassinates both the confessor and his victims.

IV. I shall conclude this letter, already far too long, by my own experience. The first notions of evil I received in my infancy were from the confessional. The preparation for confessions, the act of confession itself, and its consequences all concur in forming a systematic course of impurity and hypocrisy.

Infamy in all its hideous nakedness was revealed to me at the seminary, where in order to learn the trade of a confessor, I was obliged for five years to steep a mind fashioned after the image of God, into the most follated common sewers of moral theology.

But the sixteen years that I have passed in the confessional, give me the right to speak before God and my conscience. So long as this engine of the devil shall exist, purity, simplicity and individual right can have no place on earth—it saps the foundation of domestic tranquility and destroys all confidence. It strikes at the root of the peace, the liberty and dignity of nations.

Oh! ye peoples, ponder and reflect well upon this. Suppose you were to deprive the priest of his spiritual power; suppose even the priest made the most liberal promises in public, if you leave him the confessional, ye have gained nothing. Ye are slaves in his power. Such is my most profound and sincere conviction.

THE TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, held at its rooms, 144 Hanover Street, Boston, on the 5th of September, 1876, it was voted that the Society make diligent effort to raise the sum of Two Thousand Dollars for the Tract Fund. This is one of the most important departments of our field of labor, and the Society intend to make more earnest efforts than ever before to publish the soul-stirring message of Christ's speedy second advent, and the precious truths connected therewith. To this end the Society solicits the aid of its friends and sympathizers, and hopes that donations to this object may be prompt, liberal, and hearty.

ALTON BAY CAMPMEETING.

WM. KELLAWAY.

In our last letter to the Crisis we parted with our readers at the separation of the Springfield campmeeting. We now desire to meet them again, and have them accompany us to Alton Bay.

We leave Boston by the steam cars. These cars are far better than those in common use in the old country. Each coach is open lengthwise, and we may pass from coach to coach, making the whole extent of the train at will. The ceilings and sides are elaborately decorated with gold and colors. The seats are stuffed spring and covered with velvet, with a luxurious rest for the back, and a place for the feet. There is also an elbow support right and left. It is very hot to-day, and a boy goes through the cars with a can of ice-water to give to him that asketh—"whosoever will." Books are distributed; and one may become a purchaser, or return again the volume to the agent employed to scatter them. We see we are in truth in the land of our former residence. But we do not feel strange. O, no! that feeling has already worn off; and were it not for wife, child, relatives and our English work we should be as much at home in one land as the other. The poet sings—

"I'm a pilgrim, and I'm a stranger."

We feel that we too are a "pilgrim," but as for being a "stranger" we know no such diffidence; for christian love has brought about an acquaintance with holy men and women of God, so that we are pleased to reflect that here some of our best friends and kindred dwell. But, to return to these cars. In England, the generality of cars are divided into four or five box compartments, with doors on each side of them, instead of fore and aft as in the American coaches. And in the ordinary car—that used by the multitude—there is no such comfort for the sitter as is provided by the catering railway companies of the States. There are no boys attached to the cars with water to refresh the thirsty traveller. Literature is not sold on the train while in motion as in this free realm. Here comes the conductor. He wants our ticket. We hand it, and he punches a hole in it. That, too, is un-English. There is no making holes in your ticket in England. You take it at your start-point and give it up whole at your destination, as you pass the door or barrier leading out of the station.

We are rushing through magnificent scenery. The physical geography of the country is varied and interesting. Here is a beautiful vale with prodigality of verdure. There is a very Lebanon for gigantic trees. Here is a peaceful stream of water. And there a massy river. Our Father made all these. And surely He is worthy of praise for this marvellous handiwork. We sympathize with Him in His holy jealousy in not liking this multiplicity of wondrous construction credited to an idol or idols. And we think He must be just as indignant with those scientists who try to do Him away, attributing all things to matter and chance.

Here! suppose we step in at Seabrook campmeeting for a couple of days—for we have written to say we would do so—and from thence we can continue our way to Alton Bay. We stop at Dover and change trains. By night we are at Seabrook.

About three minutes from the depot and we see the encampment. There is one large tent, in which a meeting is being held. It is moderately well filled, and all around it stand men and women listening to the voice of the speaker. His sound reaches us before we come near the cloth house, and we know there is unction in his heart and breathings. Now we stand just inside the tent and behold in the stand a good old father, who is talking common and christian sense as though he had made up his mind to impart to some of his hearers the same wisdom.

Saturday but few persons are out. There are but three tents pitched besides the large one. There are two wooden houses, and an eating house, with a model preaching-stand and seats facing for the accommodation of thousands of listeners. The meetings are not large, but they are good. Bro. Leavitt is here, and he appears, to such a novice as we are in these meetings, to have good managing tact. Other laborers are also on the ground. And the day wears away pleasantly until the night falls, the services are over, and the ministers find their way to the neat and commodious chapel, where they recruit themselves in balmy sleep—ourself with the rest.

Sunday is the great day. It is great in every respect. Great unanimity prevails among the workmen. Great truths are uttered. Great crowds attend. Great impressions are made. And we hope that great glory to God is and will yet be the result of that day's service. The evening meeting is the best of all. Three discourses are delivered by three speakers, Bro. Bowman finishing up with an impassioned appeal to all present to act on the truths advanced, and decide to be on the Lord's side.

Monday is break-up day. O, earth's partings! But we submit to the inevitable. Let us now off to Alton Bay. We ride through country scenery composed of mountains and ravines. Now we are on the road, let us say something of our Father, of His kind providence and watchful care. For He made our hearts glad but a few days since. We were at Chelsea, and had been reduced to but a fraction of the famous "bottom dollar"—had but just over fifty cents left. We had dropped a card into the post box to say we intended to be at Seabrook, God willing. Our expenses would be two dollars, or thereabouts. We looked up for necessary means, saying nothing to anyone on earth, nor mentioning our circumstances. Nor was there anything in our dress or appearance calculated to arrest the attention or excite the sympathy of any. A brother, we did not know him—if he reads this we hope he will write to us—shook our hand, and without solicitation or a word left fifty cents in it. We thanked him; and he afterwards returned and gave us another dollar. We blessed God, feeling that we were a kind of special favorite of heaven. Well, never mind about adding more to this, except to say, that when we left we not only had enough, but two dollars to spare. "Whatsoever we ask, we receive of Him, because we keep His commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight," so says John. Brethren, let us obey; and then "let us pray."

Alton Bay at last! O, Alton! Famous are thy memories! Well reclaimed is thy long solitary soil! Thy forests are melodious with worshipful song! Thy walks echo with the voice of prayer! Thy wave-washed shore has become dear to many! "Ay, ay!" says a voice near us; and a thousand hearts will respond "Amen."

Yes, we are really at Alton Bay! Winnipesaukee Lake is where it was years ago. The depot looks natural. Every thing is as of old.

How our heart throbs. What confused thoughts and feelings crowd our minds. We are glad; we are nervous. We are thankful; we are overwhelmed. We are stepping off the cars, and our brain swims.

How shall we be able to go up the steep hill that brings to the tents? How stand the gaze of so many observers? How endure the greetings of those whose hearts we shall presently feel in the palm of our hand? How answer the inquiries of friends who wish to learn about the truth in England?

And who are we that we should have such love? what our father's house? what our attainments? what our service of Christ? We have not yet "resisted unto blood," although it is true we have nearly sacrificed our life in the work. Why should God put honor upon us? 'Tis mysterious all. And we almost sink under the crowding legion of thoughts that arise within.

But we must stand upon the depot platform, and walk up the dusty ascent, and—we do. Conscious of our existence, yet sensible of our nothingness, we manage to pass with the throng up the main way. And now we are recognized—here, there, everywhere! Springfield is repeated. Hearts are as warm in the "Granite State" as in the State of letters. Many and many familiar faces succeed one another, and we hold and are held with brotherly love. Salutations in Christ! how trancendent of mere clique or society receptions!

At last we are on the crest of the hill looking about us. We stand in the great open space that is first entered, and cast our eyes in all directions. Is this Alton Bay? Is it? Are we not in some well ordered town? Where is all the canvass gone? Now wooden houses, some of them neatly finished, furnished with balconies, well painted, stand to the right of us, to the left of us, before us and behind. How the place has grown! How it has altered! But there are yet some landmarks that assure us of our position.

Now Alton Bay boasts its streets and avenues. Now it owns its cleared spaces. It has grown immensely. And it is even said to be the largest purely religious campmeeting in the States. Thanks be to God, it is religion that is exhibited and taught here, and not vanity and fashion. It compares more than favorably with other campmeetings. May it ever do so.

It is not long before we meet with its President, our Bro. Couch, who is, in our judgment, the right man in the right place. The perfect order of the campmeeting is strikingly exceptional; and no doubt much of this pervading quietness is due to the President's very plain and decided remarks from the grand stand, in which he repeatedly reminds us all that Alton Bay is not established to be a great picnic, nor a fashionable visiting or watering-place; but for the higher and holier purpose of hearing of the salvation that there is in Christ, and of working for the Master. It is really astonishing to see how easily and harmoniously everything glides along. Especially at night, after the bell has been rung, is this apparent. At ten o'clock there is the "ding dong" consigning each one to his tent; and ten minutes afterwards, as we walk through the streets and lanes of the campmeeting ground, everything is as solitary as an uninhabited land—except perchance one falls across a patrol, who is doing duty as a policeman.

We will not attempt to tell at length the meetings held at Alton Bay. They were so many, that the thing would be impossible. Concord had its separate meeting-house. So also Lawrence, Manchester, etc., etc.; but excuse us the enumeration. There were so many places of prayer and preaching, singing and shouting, that we would have to be ubiquitous to give account of them. But we are very glad to notice one thing, and that is—that the purpose and aim of one and all seems to be to exhort the christian laggard to run in the way of God's commandments, the christian sluggard to arise and work, and the ungodly to heed the words of salvation proclaimed. Of course the grand-stand was good, in its teachings, its persuasions, its entreaties. Prophecy was treated on by Bro. Couch in his own way on Sunday afternoon to an immense concourse of spell-bound hearers; and it might have changed the mind of some of our enemies who say we are "no soul" men if they had heard the emphatic and clean-cut words and thoughts that leaped from the lips of our venerable Bro. Stockman—whose acquaintance by the way was new to us, and is deeply valued. There was the mission tent where Bro. Potter and Company held forth the divine Savior as the sufficient refuge, the rock of faith, and the blessed hope. And in this meeting we had close and heavenly communion, such as we can never properly speak. We felt like getting down where we were small, and nothing at all, and our Christ was indeed "all." We invite you back, blessed seasons! Repeat yourselves, ye times of sensible nearness to God! And there was Bro. Grant's tent-meeting for the promotion of holiness—a blessing of Christ's salvation, and necessary to qualify for possession of the age of the Kingdom, put in whatever terms we will. Brethren, it will be far better to see that we ourselves are holy to the Lord in thought, motive, act, members, than to dispute bitterly about the manner in which the thing should be set forth as a doctrine. The meetings as a whole were no doubt channels of blessing to many. They were to us; and that is our first concern. If there was a little more noise in some of them than there should have been, and a corresponding lessening of sense; if in some meetings some few brethren were indiscreet and scarcely exhibited enough of christian courtesy; they are the unavoidables of so great a meeting, where so many hundreds of individuals of different degrees of education and varied temperaments come together: the wise and the good will know how to treat such things; and sucking the good and the sweet, they will refuse the unpalatable and uncouth. We truly thank God for Alton Bay; for sacred and delightful were the days we spent on its grounds. The tone of the meeting was slightly different from Springfield; for while at the former meditation and feeling seemed to reign supreme, at the latter doctrine was incorporated to a large degree; imparting to the services somewhat more of the hardness of matured manhood. Both are good and necessary; and in turn both are profitable.

It will be impossible for us to write who we saw and whom we missed seeing—and we don't know that it matters much to any of our readers; but there was one face that we looked upon of whom we must very briefly write—it was that of Dr. Quint. We hope if the Doctor sees this he will pardon the liberty we take in introducing his name into our gossipy letter. And if any one that knows him reads it, he is to understand that we speak of him entirely without his knowledge. But Dr. Quint was an old friend. When we were pastoring the church in Fair Haven, Mass., we were permitted the privilege of attending a Monday-morning ministerial meeting held at New Bedford. It took place in a class-room adjoining the Sunday-school room belonging to the church of which the Doctor was the leader. Often as we showed ourselves at that meeting, after a hearty shake of the hand and an assurance of welcome, we were greeted with the exclamation: "Well, Bro. Kellaway, what was it yesterday? signs of the times?" And after we had given a brief synopsis of our discourses, when other ministers would crowd us with their criticisms—which we confess we were never afraid of, or unprepared to answer—the Doctor would help with some burning thought that shut up the assembled representatives of religious faiths. By the way, there was once a reference made to this very campmeeting, which, now that we are no longer stationed in the country, and the meeting has ceased to exist, we may be allowed to mention. The Doctor had preached a very conclusive discourse against the popular notion of the conversion of the world by means of the gospel. When he concluded, he told his church that he had only discharged his conscience in what he had done, and if he remained their pastor he must be left at liberty to say what he honestly believed to be true; but if any two or three deacons or elders (and, if if we are not mistaken, members) would come and tell him to go, he would go. He told all this at the minister's meeting. When some one of the company insinuated that he had become to a considerable extent an Adventist, and suggested as the cause his attendance at Alton Bay, he replied,—"Well, brethren, I like to go to Alton Bay. It is refreshing to meet with men who believe what they talk about. I must confess that I heard some of those Advent preachers speak upon the prophecies, and Daniel's image, and the dates of the Bible; and I could not even follow them, I was so ignorant of these matters. I was down at Martha's Vineyard, but everything was flat and tame, the sermons cut and dried. I like to listen to men who believe, and speak earnestly their faith." Then, as if he thought he had said enough in favor of the despised Adventists, he turned round to Bro. Brown and myself, and complained that they were so persistent in prayer (having one time it seems been engaged far into the morning) that they caused him to lose sleep. We always admired the Doctor for his manly candor, and great was our delight to find him on the campground. We spent a pleasant evening with him, lounging on a bed, and speaking of old times. It was almost worth a visit to the States to meet with such a friend. We wish the Doctor would more publicly identify himself with the cause of truth.

Happy were we to see the many who in baptism put on the Lord Jesus Christ What fulness of heart was ours as we stood at the edge of Winnipesaukee Lake and saw one after another, young and old, buried with our Lord to the world and its lusts, and rising again heirs of life and children of God in righteousness. O how we wished we were the baptizer! And how vividly we recalled that never-to-be-forgotten day when we were the willing subjects of this Divine command! Then rose up our lives; and we detected many a fault: but we hope in that mercy that we at first received, and spite of our unwisdom and instability we felt we loved the Lord, and were at core and in the great main of our lives most truly His. The last baptismal scene was the most affecting;—it was performed by moonlight! O, as the stars looked down from heaven, what a sight did their eyes beam upon! But what made the scene so precious to us was this,—once, in advocacy of the truth, we wrote a story in its interest, and in our story had the heroes of it brought to the knowledge of the truth, baptizing them by the pale light of the lesser orb. Some of our readers, who were not partial to this precept of Christ's gospel, said it was ridiculous and preposterous to think of disciples of Jesus being immersed into Him by night; but here was an actual instance of dear ones being baptized by night. Solemn hour! Hallowed season! Night, so significant of the state of the world morally! O may these beloved brethren and sisters hold fast the profession of their faith in integrity until Jesus comes—which we hope will be soon.

On Monday we had a treat that was a real treat to us, if to nobody else. Two cases of new books that we had over from our English repository were unpacked, and we took out a book that we are proud of being the publisher of. Its title is Earnest Words for Honest Skeptics. (The book can be obtained at the Crisis office for 80 cents, with 10 cents extra for postage.) It is by that talented lady, Mrs. H. V. Reed, author of "The Bible Triumphant," a reply to the Infidel work, "144 Self-contradictions of the Bible." The manuscript had been sent us in the rough to England; and we had edited it, and prepared it, leaving it finished all but the binding. Right anxious were we to see what sort of a book it was when bound. And really glad did we feel when we beheld the nice volume it made. It is a credit to its author; an addition to our Advent literature; a work of intrinsic and substantial merit. It is also a standing reproof to those of our adversaries who maliciously accuse us of infidel tendencies. Glad were we to look on a work upon which we had labored, in every respect presentable. The few that are at present in the country will not nearly supply the demand when the work is known. Our first sight of Earnest Words afforded us no small amount of pleasure.

The stand where the principal preaching was done was backed with a question that ought really to arouse every preacher's interest. Worked in green leaves,—pointing the fact, that it will soon be no more, like the leaves that made it—it remained for the whole session of the campmeeting, "Watchman! what of the night?" intimating the true agenda of the preaching ministrations—the declaration that "The Morning cometh; and also the Night," part of which was formed in leafy characters under the rudely constructed pulpit or desk.

And what more shall we say? With the beautiful lake of Winnipesaukee so near,—studded so it is reported with as many islands as days in the year, rich with luxuriant verdure,—a piece of water affording bathing accommodations for all who in a literal sense would "Wash and be clean," surely Alton Bay can have no superior, if it has an equal. "Beautiful for situation," for a campmeeting; desirable for its christian associations; Alton Bay will remain in the minds of many, a precious spot, until Jesus comes; when, so a brother told us on the ground, he would have his farm there. But we are not so sure that he will be right. Let the Master come however, and then we shall know all; and we would almost be satisfied to live forever in such a place as Alton Bay.

Dear Bro. Couch:—The following interesting communication to the New Bedford Standard will be read with a feeling of satisfaction by those of "like precious faith," where the excellent Crisis may go. It gives in a nutshell the position taken by the friends whose reassured confidence in the prophecies of the end and second advent, lead them now boldly to say that the events of our own time, in the East, proclaim the close of Daniel's great programme, and the day of the Lord in power and deliverance to the waiting church.

This is supposed to be the testimony of a former clergyman of this place, and not the production of an Adventist. The truth on this great question is taking deep root.

W. S. CAMPBELL.

New Bedford, Mass., Sept. 26th.

THE ADVENTISTS.

To the Editor of the Standard:—There is much interest now among this denomination. The Eastern war is to them a strong indication that the advent of Christ is at the door. They believe that the Turkish power is the subject of the prophecy found in the last verses of the 11th chapter of Daniel; that the Turk is shortly to be driven out of Europe into Asia and the Holy Land, where he will make his last stand, and in the words of the prophecy, "Come to his end and none shall help him." They believe that in connection with the destruction of this power, there will be war throughout the Eastern world, brought on by the great powers there in their struggle each to obtain Constantinople and the Turkish territory. They also believe that this war will introduce the time of trouble mentioned in the first verses of the 12th chapter of Daniel, when Michael (Christ) will stand up, and the resurrection of the dead will take place. They are very positive in relation to the fulfillment of the above prophecy here, and there is an increasing interest among them throughout the country as the events in the East transpire in harmony with their view of the prediction.

There have been twelve campmeetings held this fall in the New England States by this denomination. The most of these have been largely attended, and numbers have been converted.

Those who have supposed that this sect would become extinct, will have to change their minds; for perhaps there is now no denomination that is increasing in numbers so rapidly as this. They are somewhat divided in respect to certain minor doctrines; but so long as men can believe that the prophecies which relate to the close of the present dispensation are fulfilling, and events throughout the world seem to confirm their faith, this sect will exist. The passing of the times to which many of them looked for the end of probation, has caused some to waver in their faith respecting the fulfillment of prophecy; but those who have continued to examine and stand the trial, are as firm and positive in regard to the correctness of their position as ever they have been. A strange people; and if they should be right, they will appear stranger than they now do. L.

From Bro. P. S. W. Deyo.

BRO. COUCH:—I am desirous of obtaining a new field of labor, and will move if need be. I am free to receive letters from brethren who desire a minister to labor for, or to settle among them. Should any desire my labor, will they please write me the kind of inhabitants, health, advantages and prospects of the place. If it be a church who do not want labor all the time, I might do some business as missionary in the regions beyond. If strangers wish, I can give good references, or visit them if need be, and hold a protracted meeting. Address Eld. Peter S. W. Deyo, Charles City, Iowa.

Married.

Obituaries.

BOWLBY. In Clementsport, N. S., Aug. 15th, 1876, Sister Mary, wife of Bro. Solomon Bowlby, aged sixty-three years.

Sr. B. became a follower of Jesus in the early years of her life, and about 1849 identified herself with those who were looking for the Son of God from heaven; and to the end of her pilgrimage remained firm to her christian principles, and died in the triumphs of faith, in the sure and certain hope of a resurrection to eternal life at the coming of Christ. Our sister will be long remembered by the early pioneers of the Advent cause, and later ones will not soon forget the kind words and ready welcome which always awaited them at Bro. B's hospitable home. But her place is vacant. Her voice is hushed in the silence of death, and our brother's home is desolate; but he mourns not as those who have no hope; "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first." May this glorious hope of a resurrection of the dead and a meeting again of the loved of earth, comfort our brother in his deep affliction. Funeral services by Eld. J. J. Woodworth.

J. M. TOZIER.

Died in Roxbury, Mass., July 27th, 1876, Sister Ruth L. Perkins, at the advanced age of seventy-nine years, eleven months, and fifteen days.

Sister Perkins had long been a firm believer in Christ as her Saviour. For thirty years she had been patiently waiting for her Lord from heaven. For many years she lived with her two daughters, with whom she died. She was a Mother indeed, and is greatly missed by her children. She died calmly, and in the faith of soon living with her Saviour in his kingdom. May the Lord's blessing abide with the surviving friends. J. S. WHITE.

ILLINGWORTH. In Sabattusville, Me., August 15th, 1876, Sr. Ann, wife of Bro. Wm. Illingworth, aged thirty-two years and nine months.

Left with a family of little ones to watch and care for, the stroke falls very heavily upon our brother. A dear mother also is sadly bereaved. Coming from England a few years ago, they are without kindred here, but in the depths of sorrow the blessed gospel sustains them. Bro. and Sr. I. a few months since fell in love with its truths, and now wait, the one sleeping, the others weeping, for the consummation of the blessed hope. Funeral sermon by the writer.

J. ALBERT LIBBY.

MORRILL. In Albany, Me., Aug. 2nd, 1876, Sr. Belinda, wife of Bro. Thos. Morrill, aged forty-eight years.

While Bro. M. and the children bereft of wife and mother mourn in sadness the loss of one they so dearly loved, yet hope springs up in each believing heart that soon in a clime exempt from the sad scenes of sickness, death and burials, they may meet the death divided to part no more. Funeral services by the writer.

J. ALBERT LIBBY.

ALLECOTT. In North Reading, Mass., Sept. 15th, 1876, Thomas Allecott, aged seventy-one years.

He embraced the Advent faith under the labors of Eld. Edwin Burnham, thirty-two years ago, from which time he has remained a steadfast, consistent believer in the faith up to the time of his death. We mourn his loss, but looking with the eye of faith we can say it is only for a little while that we have laid him away.

THOMAS ALLECOTT, JR.

ROLLINS. In Alton, N. H., June 30th, 1876, of consumption, Sr. Betsy J. Rollins, wife of E. J. E. Rollins, aged thirty-five years.

Our sister was a very conscientious, self-denying christian. Her amiable qualities endeared her to all who knew her. She was a firm believer in the speedy advent of Christ, and fell asleep with the sweet assurance that Christ would awaken her to a glorious immortality. May God bless the bereaved husband and children. Funeral sermon by E. A. Stockman. M. S. LANGLEY.

VANDYKE. In Savannah, Wayne Co., N. Y., June 1876, Bro. Ralph Vandyke, aged fifty-four yrs. Sermon by the writer. E. F. SERGISSON.

MERRIAM. In Rochester, N. Y., July 4th, 1876, from injuries received by railroad accident, John W. Merriam, aged sixty-one years. Sermon by the writer. E. F. SERGISSON.

BROWN. In Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 25th, 1876, James Brown, aged fifty-eight years. Services by the writer. E. F. SERGISSON.

FOREIGN NEWS.

London, Sept. 25. British ship Lammermuir from Calcutta to Demarara, is reported at Lloyd's as missing. It is believed she foundered, with all hands and three hundred Coolies.

Melbourne, Sept. 16. The "Dardenong," bound from Melbourne to Sydney, foundered near Jervis Bay, during a hurricane on the 11th inst., and sixty of the crew and passengers were drowned.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

New York, Sept. 23. A special from Reading, Pa., says the recent storm caused floods in the lumbering region of Forest county.

The cabins of the Parks and Cooper families were swept into the stream and they were all drowned.

The Parks family comprised the father, mother and five children. The Cooper family comprised father, mother, six children and Mrs. Adams.

Two persons were also drowned near Smithport, three more in Tioga county and four more at Wellsport.

Louisville, Sept. 25. At midnight on Sunday houses were shaken and glasses rattled throughout the city, by an earthquake, causing no damage however.

Evansville, Ind., Sept. 25. Two successive and heavy shocks of earthquake were felt in this city at twelve o'clock last night. The effect was to to cause a general alarm throughout the city, and people left their beds. Globes were shaken from chandeliers. Many persons supposed it was caused by a steamboat boiler explosion. No damage was done to the city, so far as ascertained.

New York, Sept. 27. A Panama letter of the 12th says efforts for peace in Cauca have failed, and a battle between six thousand Conservatives and four thousand Government troops, lasting seven hours followed, resulting in the former being defeated. Losses over one thousand killed, one thousand wounded, and four hundred taken prisoners. Sixty mule loads of ammunition were captured. The troops then occupied Cardago, and will soon march to Antioquin, where the Conservatives sought refuge.

Notices.

South Boston.

The brethren in South Boston, believing in the near coming of Jesus and kindred truths, desiring to let their light shine, have leased a Hall corner of Dorchester and National Streets (close by Broadway), where they mean to have "the gospel of the kingdom" preached. They do not mean to ride, or allow hobby riding, but desire a place where the Lord's coming may be kept before the people. They desire the prayers and co-operation of all the lovers of the truth in Boston. Where there are more than three hundred thousand souls, there ought to be a place where those of "like precious faith" can meet together, and where these truths can be proclaimed unmixed with the traditions of men. Pray for this meeting. For the brethren, A. P. MOORE.

New Hampshire Adv. Chris. Conference.

The next annual session of the New Hampshire Advent Christian Conference will be held with the church in Manchester, N. H., commencing Tuesday evening, Oct. 24th, and hold over the following Sunday. Our Constitution requires all our preachers to report personally or by letter. We wish all our churches to make an extra effort and send their quota of delegates. Each church is entitled to one delegate, and one additional one for every twenty-five members. Fare will be reduced on the Concord and Claremont and Northern Railroads as usual. Passengers will purchase their tickets on these roads of the conductors in the cars. Call for Conference Tickets.

Notice of reduction on other roads when heard from. A. ROSS, President.
C. H. FLETCHER, Secretary.

Connecticut A. C. Conference.

The Lord willing the Connecticut A. C. Conference will be held at New Britain, commencing Wednesday evening, Oct. 18th, and continue over Sunday, Oct. 22nd. As this is the annual meeting, and officers are to be chosen, a full attendance is requested. The business session will begin Thursday, promptly at 10 o'clock A. M., and it is hoped may be finished the same day, that the remainder of the time be devoted to prayer, conference and preaching the Word of life. Pray that the blessing of the Lord may attend.

O. D. WOODRUFF, Secretary.

Hoosick Valley A. C. Conference.

It was voted at our July Quarterly Conference to hold our next Annual Conference for Oct. with Bro. Mathewson and the church at Castleton, Vt. It has been appointed to commence Wednesday evening, Oct. 25th, and continue its meetings over the following Sabbath. The election of officers, the reports of preachers and delegates from the churches, and other business of importance, comprise the order of business for these meetings; and it is very important that all the preachers of this Conference should be present, or at least be represented by letter; and it is also expected that all the churches will report by delegates, or letter. The chapel is only a short way from the depot, which stands at the junction of railroads from the South, East and West. Let all be prompt to at the first meetings, as the first meeting for business will probably be on Thursday.

H. K. FLAGG, Pres.
ROBT. CANDLISH, Sec.

Dedication.

To all ministers of the Second Advent Christian denomination: The people of Plains, Luzerne Co., Pa., who believe in the doctrine delivered to the saints, have by the help of the Lord built a chapel which they intend to dedicate to God on the 8th day of Oct. We give a hearty invitation to brethren and sisters, and desire that as many embassadors of Christ come over and help as can make it convenient to do so. We will endeavor to make it profitable for them. Committee of arrangements: John E. Cook, David Giles, George F. Cook, Wm. Wetheral, Zachariah Thomas, Lysander Sunerson. JOHN E. COOK.

NOTICE.—There will be a meeting of the friends of Jesus and his truth on Rattle Snake Creek, Lincoln Co., Kansas, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 26th, and holding over the Sabbath. A movement will be made at the same time to form a conference of Christian Adventists. It is hoped that all of those interested in the spread of truth in Western Kansas will be present, and come ready to labor for the welfare of the cause.

ELD. J. S. THORP.

NOTICE.—The South Wakefield, N. H., Free Baptist and Advent Union Society have completed their new house of worship, and will dedicate it to the service of God on Friday, Oct. 13th, at ten o'clock. Meetings will continue over the Sabbath. H. L. Hastings will probably be present.

JOS. SPINNEY.

NOTICE.—The Ohio State Advent Christian Conference will convene at Norwalk, Ohio, on Thursday, Oct. 26th, and continue over the following Sabbath. Let every church in the State be represented by delegates. Bro. Frank Burr is expected to be present.

A. I. FLAHARTY, Secretary.

QUARTERLY MEETING.—The next Quarterly Meeting of the A. C. Church at Ontario, N. Y., will be held Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 7th and 8th. Eld. M. R. Miles is expected to be present to preach the Word. Homes will be provided for all who come. JAS. E. WELLS, Pastor.

THERE will be a meeting of days at Kennedy's Corner, Jay, Me., commencing Oct. 11th, and continuing as long as thought best.

F. E. BLAISDELL.

A Card.

If there are any churches who desire to secure a pastor, and feel that they are able to support a man in that capacity, I would say I am now ready to correspond with them. I have sold out my interest in The Biblical Messenger, so I am now free from the entanglements of publishing, and have nothing to hinder me from devoting my entire time to the interest of some church. My health will not admit of my traveling as I have done for a few months in the past. If I move this fall, I prefer to do so before cold weather sets in. WM. C. STEWART.

Exeter, N. H., Sept. 14th.

NOTICE.—We intend to commence a series of meetings at Pleasant Valley (Wolfboro), N. H., Thursday evening, Oct. 5th, and continue them over the following Sunday. We hope that brethren and sisters in the regions "round about" will "come over and help us." C. H. SWEET.

THE Hoosick Valley A. C. Conference is appointed for Wednesday evening, Oct. 25th, at Castleton, Vt., and continue over the Sabbath. More next week. H. K. FLAGG, President.
ROBERT CANDLISH, Sec.

QUARTERLY MEETING.—The first Quarterly Meeting of the Minona District A. C. C., Minnesota, will be held at Utica, Minona Co., Oct. 27th, to commence at seven o'clock P. M., and hold over Lord's day. PETER MITSON, Sec.

NOTICE.—There will be a tent meeting at Tonganoxie, Leavenworth Co., Kansas, commencing Oct. 11th, and will continue as the interest may demand. Bro. Hunt and others are expected to be present to preach the Word. Let continual prayer be offered that the Holy Spirit may do its office work, and that sinners may be converted unto the Lord. J. C. SMITH.

I would like to inform the churches, and individual friends waiting for Jesus, and all others, that I am ready to assist them in protracted meetings and Sabbath services to the extent of my ability. Let me hear from all as soon as possible.

G. W. BURNHAM, Newburyport, Mass.

NOTICE.—My health having considerably improved, I am willing to devote a portion of the Sundays each month to preaching, if the Lord will. Any church or community wishing my labors, please write me at Lawrence, Mass., No. 10 Fulton Street, as that is my present address.

F. M. DRAKE.

THOSE wishing to preach at East Weymouth, Mass., will please correspond with Jos. Hacket, of Abington, or Alonzo Manuel, of East Weymouth, before sending their appointments.

G. W. GILLESPIE is corresponding Secretary of Hartford, Ct., Stedman Hall.

ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

This is an ably conducted weekly paper, edited by Elder Frank Burr, and published under the auspices of the Western A. C. Publishing Society. It gives prominence to the personal coming of Christ, the resurrection of the dead, the final destruction of sinners, and the eternal salvation of saints on the renovated earth. It also insists on a holy life as essential to an admittance into the coming kingdom. $2.20 a year. Address Advent Christian Times, 91 South Green St., Chicago, Ill.

The World's Crisis and Adv. Chris. Times sent postpaid to subscribers who will take both, at the reduced rate of $4.00 per year in advance for both papers. Address World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Appointments

☞ APPOINTMENTS MUST BE RECEIVED AS EARLY AS TUESDAY MORNING (as our paper goes to press about noon) to insure insertion for the coming week.

☞ The following RESOLUTION was passed at the late meeting of the A. C. P. Society:—

"RESOLVED, That no appointments be published in the CRISIS henceforth for persons unknown to the Editorial Board (by which is understood the Editors, Editorial Committee, and Business Agent), unless satisfactory reference shall be given.

The Committee appointed by the Adv. Chris. Association, at its last Annual Meeting, to advise with the Editorial Board "in relation to the publication in the World's Crisis of the appointments of men unworthy of recognition as preachers," having attended to the duty assigned them, recommended, and the Editorial Board have adopted, and ordered to be published, the following resolution:—

"RESOLVED, That when the Editorial Board is properly notified by any of our Churches, or Ministers, or responsible persons, by a written allegation that a certain minister, or ministers, lack moral character, that they be instructed to notify such minister, or ministers, of the information received, as a reason for withholding their appointments till after a proper trial and acquittal."

All communications in relation to this matter should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board—GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass.

TWO NEW TRACTS.

We have just published two new Tracts.

"THE DIVINE ARTILLERY."

BY I. C. WELLCOME.

This is a valuable tract, addressed to theologians and thinkers, critics, Bible students and ministers, concerning what the Lord has furnished to be preached to sinners as motives and inducements to repentance, and to saints to induce activity and endurance. The Bible hope is clearly and forcibly stated. Price 50 cts. per one hundred, or 15 cts. per dozen by mail.

"THE FEARFUL OUTLOOK."

BY I. C. WELLCOME.

This attempts to show those who are anxious, perplexed and fearful about what is coming on the earth, that the wars and preparations of the last thirty years, the present distress of nations, and struggle with Popery and Turkey, will result in our Lord's return and the destruction of the nations. This will be read by all. Price $1.00 per hundred, or 20 cts. per dozen, by mail.

Address I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

☞ For sale as above at the Crisis Office.

NOAH'S ARK.

TUNE.—Millennial Dawn.

MRS. M. M. STETSON.

When Noah's ark was building, by God's divine command,
The wicked then beheld him, but would not understand;
Though Noah often warned them, the counsels they withstood;
They ridiculed and scorned him until they saw the flood.

They lived in ease and pleasure, deriding God's own plan,
And married at their leisure, and mocked the righteous man.
For their ungodly carriage, to ruin they were hurled,
With all their forms and marriage they could not save the world.

Christ gave his people warning that they must watch and pray,
And that his second coming would be like Noah's day;
The wicked who beheld him refused to obey,
Until the flood descended and swept them all away.

The gospel ark is building; and Christ will come again,
And all his faithful children may freely enter in.
Was Noah's ark a figure to show the final end?
Then let each soul consider before the flood descend.

West Hartford, Vt.

THOUGHTS BY NIGHT AND DAY.

C. COLEGROVE.

After some months' delay I resume my pen to write an article for the Crisis; resume it with both thanks and sorrow, the thanks predominating.

First of all, let me say and do what I said I would do when I was in trouble. I promised outright that if God would restore some sick patients whom I was attending as a physician, and for whose recovery I earnestly prayed, I would give him all the glory. Here then is my tribute, without hesitation or reserve.

Thanks be to God that all things are as well and kindly as they are. Thanks for the sweet sun shining, soft and generous through the September haze, and the earth, tranquil and silent, basking in the light. Thanks amid sorrows and trials. Yet I see trials are good and powerful to provoke prayer. When in sadness and pain, pray we must. Pain gives edge to pleading; gives energy and persistence. Without these seasons of sorrow we should not plead so.

Often at night I awake, feeling desolate and poor, and thus needy and in want, I turn to God. I come and lay myself at Jesus' feet, and say, "Lord I am not worthy to look up. Here I lie helpless and empty and very low before thee. I do not ask thee to lay thy hand on me. I beseech thee put thy foot on me, as the token of thy vine and absolute mastery. Put one foot on my head, and another on my heart (I know thou wilt not hurt me with thy blessed feet), and so let me be subject to thee, totally, heartily and forever. Let not one thought or impulse of my rebellious mind be unsubjugated. Subjection is the perfect necessity—perfect subjection. And now, O God of Majesty, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, I commit all things unto thy hand and care; all things, without exception, every interest of God and Christ in all the wide world. If anything would threaten to escape, I would not let it go. Let there be no exception. Every interest of every creature, so far as it will be pleasing to God, let me commit to thee.

It is written that Jesus said, "Of all the Father gave him, he should lose nothing;" so now let nothing be lost that is dear to God and his son. Let no interest be forgotten, which he will please to care for; not one.

And now being thus far brought on my way, and having been comforted by bringing with such entireness all things into trust and care with God, I will speak of certain other things of the deepest interest, whose grandeur and power ought to stir up every devout looker on with solemn influence.

Precedent to that though, and having great power and great bitterness, are the blood-curdling Turkish atrocities. O the bitter cup the poor creatures have to drink at the hands of these wretches! Are the Turks like tigers, like hyenas, like vultures? What are they like? In them are the uncaged villanies of modern wickedness intensified. My heart bleeds for the poor Bulganian women and children. How long can God endure it? God is more long-suffering than any man, but God is not blind. O no! He deeply pities his suffering creatures, and he will bring light out of the darkness and good out of the evil. Do we not read in Daniel of a time "when the transgressors are come to the full?" That we do. And when we see the monstrous ferocity of these fiendish Turks, what more can we have to fill up the work of wickedness? Does not creation cry out? Does not humanity plead with a bursting heart? Is not God determined that these scenes shall come to an end, and is not Christ coming and rest coming? Do we not stand on the threshold of the mightiest changes?

The Great Pyramid points to the period between 1876 and 1882 as the most momentous in history. Apparently the period has commenced. And I say here, as I say to my family—as I said to them this morning, "Here we are in the very beginning of events, the most wonderful and grand in character; here we are in the very culmination of the christian epoch. You attended the Baptist association in Arcade yesterday, (two of you) and was anything said or hinted in regard to the solemn and majestic times in which we live, majestic and awful? Nothing! Not a word in regard to the prophetic meaning of affairs abroad." But let us see what the British Thunderer, the London Times has to say. "The Russian people seem approaching a state of popular excitement when even a false report may make peace impossible. Every day of warfare adds to the likelihood that the srife may overflow its present limits."

It is with the deepest interest that I am reading some numbers of an ably conducted paper, called "England's Glory Leader." Some articles on the Eastern question are pointed and pertinent; and it is interesting and startling to consider a possibility that England may seek to indemnify herself for losses in vast amounts of loaned capital to Turkey, by seizing some of her territory. This is a great subject, worthy of an entire article in the Crisis.

England has an iron-clad fleet in the Mediterranean, among the rest the monster —"the Devastation"—that perhaps can crush any floating thing on any ocean or sea in the world. And my friend, Mr. Russell, writes me from Canada that England is casting cannon balls that weigh a ton each.

The "Glory Leader" which represents a growing and powerful sentiment among earnest students of prophecy in England, while advocating the soon coming of Christ, earnestly maintains that England is to have a great work to do, nay much more than I can stop here to describe. Indeed I see so much that is developing of the most thrilling interest on every hand, that I can but say, would to God that others might see too. Jesus said once, "I have many things to tell you, but ye cannot bear them now."

Let us be ever wide awake, and most intelligently attentive; for unless we are greatly mistaken, events of the sublimest interest are before us, and we need to be very candid, very teachable, very observing, as well as very humble and full of prayer. We can well conceive what a delicate and dangerous matter is this Eastern question to the peace of Europe. If there is great disturbance in Turkey, Europe feels it sensitively. Europe is like a man in whose eye the point of a needle is beginning to be thrust, when such a political soreness is developed in the organism as there is now in that delicate, critical, dangerous and debateable ground.

England is a great nation,—may God guide her in all she is to do. Connected with the wonderful testimony of the great pyramid, are very surprising developments relative to the position and functions of Britain, as well as the Anglo-Saxon race in general; while at the same time there is the most abundant cause for diligent attention on the part of all who hope to be embraced in that mercy and grace which Jesus will give to the heirs of immortality at his coming.

By the way, before I close let me say that I received a postal gently criticising and regretting what I wrote on the question of time or time setting. Now I do not remember exactly what I wrote, and I tried to write what was good and due and true. I immediately prepared another letter on the same subject for the Crisis, but after putting it into an envelope and directing it, have let it lie for weeks unsent. Here is what I have to say. Is it not enough that we are in the current of grand events ending in the advent? What more can we want! Who can go to sleep at such a time and in such a prospect? Must we know the day or week or year of Jesus' coming? Can we not be always ready? Is it not inspiring to think that he is coming speedily,—that his advent is imminent; that it may occur this year or next; that it is the time of the on-coming of the great day of God? Is not this enough? I dare not put off the advent until next year, neither dare I say it will certainly occur this. Without reasonable doubt great events are upon us, nothing less than the crisis of the world; and every man has occasion to be grave, solemn, thoughtful, vigilant, in league with God, subject to him, hid in him, clothed with salvation and waiting. What a blessed way is just the waiting way! Blessed are they that wait.

I have many things to write, but I have come to the end of this sheet. What froth and folly overflow the political papers. Blind and deaf, men will go on babbling and gabbling, not to put too fine a point upon it; not at all heeding what the Monarch of all world has in hand to do, nor the things so interesting to angels and to Christ and to God! Let us tremble and rejoice, even if baptized in sorrows. What manner of persons ought we to be! Grace to all who love God.

AMENDED CONSTITUTION.

ART. 1st. This conference shall be called The Advent Christian Conference of the Province of Quebec, being members of the same "numerous body of Protestant Christians resident in Lower Canada, and denominating themselves Adventists," for whose benefit a bill, act, or law was passed and assented to the 14th of June, 1853 (See 16th Victoria, chap. 217) then designated and styled, "The Second Advent Conference in Canada East," and may include territory, churches and ministers in Northern Vermont and New Hampshire, as may be hereafter definitely and amicably arranged, mutually deemed best for the general good of the cause and truth we unite to sustain.

ART. 2nd. This conference shall be composed of preachers, ordained or simply licensed, whose names shall follow and subscribe to this Constitution on the Conference book; the official members of all churches recognized by it as acting in harmony with its objects and work, as deacons, local elders, or appointed leaders, and clerks or scribes; and all such local churches have besides, the right to send duly appointed and certified delegates, annually chosen, in number not to exceed six; or as it regards the number, as may be from time to time provided by vote of Conference; each of whom shall have an equal vote when present, and visiting bretheren may be made eligible to act as advisory members by vote of Conference, but shall have no power to settle by vote local questions of interest, about which the Conference may be divided.

ART. 3d. The sole objects of this Conference shall be to promote personal piety of a spiritual kind among all its members, and all within the reach of its influence; to secure harmonious co-operation, and the greatest possible efficiency in the proclamation of all Bible truth, especially those truths relating to the christian's hope, now soon to be consummated in the glorious appearing and kingdom of Jesus Christ, the resurection of the dead saints, and change of the living ones, so that both shall put on immortality, and reign with Christ upon the new earth, and the world's solemn judgment.

ART. 4th. The officers of this Conference shall be a President, Vice President, or Vice Presidents, Secretary and assistants as deemed best, and Treasurer; also a business committee of three, to be chosen annually by a proper nomination and fair show of hands, dividing the house; or, if in any case required by a majority of the members present, by ballot; and in case of withdrawal, removal, or death, their places to be filled immediately by a majority vote of the remaining officers of this Conference as named in this article.

ART. 5th. The duties of the several officers shall be as follows. The President shall make an opening address, preside as Chairman in all meetings of the Conference while in session, unless relieved by his request by a Vice President, take an advisory oversight of the general work of the Conference in all its districts, be present at as many of the district meetings as he can well attend, and do his utmost by precept and example to advance all the interests of the Conference. The Vice President, one or more, shall do all the duties of the President in his absence or inability, or by his request shall assist as may be agreed in his work. The Secretary shall do the writing, and keep the books and reports of Conference, subject to the order of the other officers. The duty of the Treasurer shall be to keep safely all monies put in his care by the Conference, subject to the order of the President, as authorized by the Official Board; to keep in writing, in a suitable book kept by him for that purpose, an exact account of the same, and make an annual written report to Conference of all monies received, and from what sources; paid out to whom and for what purpose; giving dates, and also the amount if any in hand. The business committee of three shall attend to and prepare all proper business that shall be brought before it for the action of Conference.

The above board of officers, to be called "The Official Board of Conference," shall fully represent and do necessary business for the Conference in the time between its annual sessions, subject to its annual inspection, and shall make an annual report of its proceedings, to be read in Conference, and entered in full in the Conference book; and besides the above, conference may annually appoint other committees as deemed by them best, especially as a first act, a committee of three on credentials and membership, according to this Constitution, who shall be elligible to vote; it being their duty to enrol their names as they arrive, and report them when called upon. And this committee on Credentials shall be appointed by the chair.

And it shall be the duty of the Official Board to examine all proper candidates who apply for ordination, as to christian character and ability, and ordain as they deem best; their ordination certificate being signed by the President and Secretary of Conference. And all ordained or unordained preachers belonging to this Conference shall have certificates of membership given by the above board, and signed by the last named officers.

ART. 6th. It shall be the duty of this Conference to meet annually at such time and place as shall be decided at each session by a majority of the members present, and after duly appointed by the President; and its business shall be done somewhat after the following order and form: 1, Hear an opening address by the President. 2, Take the names of members present as provided in article 5. 3, Examine the character, fellowship, standing and work of its ministerial members. 4th, Hear a report of the Official Board. 5, Unitedly to devise Scriptural ways and means to extend the influence and promote the usefulness of the Conference. 6, The election of officers, who shall take the place of the old immediately upon election. 7, Hear and read reports from the churches belonging to and in fellowship with the Conference. The Treasurer's written report to be read before the Conference if called for, and each such annual written report shall be put in the care of the Secretary. And this article provides further that none but duly enrolled constitutional members have a right to be present at any of the sessions of this Conference, unless specially permitted by vote of Conference; and also that 5 shall constitute a quorum for the legal transaction of business.

ART. 7th. This Conference, as now organized and constituted, may be divided, and it is the intent that it shall be divided into four districts, bounded and described, as to be decided by proper Conference action from time to time, as the best interests of the Conference may seem to demand; and general district meetings shall be held about three months apart, or as shall be appointed by the President, the officers of the district concurring, one in each district, each conference year; at which all the ministers and official members of the district, as church officers, shall be present, or endeavor so to be, or report the condition of the cause in their vicinity by letter; and the Lord's Supper shall be administered, and a business session be held, at which the President of the Conference shall preside if present; and each district shall have a resident chairman or President, and a Secretary, which chairman shall preside in the absence of the Conference President, or jointly with him, and have the oversight of the district.

ART. 8th. This Conference will recognize the right of private judgment in all matters of faith as belonging to all his members; so that the objects stated in article third of this constitution may best be carried out. Its only test of fellowship shall be christian character of the scriptural kind. It shall study the things which make for peace and union, and those things especially by which the body of Christ may be edified and built up in love. And each of the ministerial members whose names follow this Constitution, will conscientiously and faithfully endeavor to keep all its provisions and requirements as being consonant with the spirit and letter of the Bible.

ART. 9th. It is also provided that each member of the Conference at an annual session shall be entitled to an impartial hearing upon any question brought before it and duly received for discussion; but no member shall have the right to speak upon any such question more than three times, 15 minutes each time, without permission of the President, by vote of Conference, he standing on his feet and facing the chair; and all members of this Conference shall be held amenable to the same for their moral and christian conduct; and the Conference may withdraw fellowship from those who, upon proper examination, written charges being preferred and well sustained, are found, after an impartial and amply sufficient hearing, to be unworthy of the same; and the guilty member shall be cut off, unless duly and acceptably penitent. This Conference shall exercise no unscriptural legislative power over the churches belonging to it, but shall be advisory to them. Moreover it is expected, and the plain intent of this constitution and quite essential to the proper existence and working of this Conference, that each and every local church belonging to it should adopt the same scriptural form of organizations, with its board of officers duly filled and acting.

ART. 10th. It is further and flually agreed that each member shall always speak well of every other member, and not by word or action either say or insinuate ought against them to the injury of their feelings or influence; but shall say all in each other's favor that can in truth and modesty be said to augment their influence for good, and by all scriptural and laudable means be workers together. And this article shall not be so construed as to conflict with the provisions of Article 9th.

This Constitution may be revised or amended only by vote of three quarters of all the members present at a regular annual session of this Conference, suitable public notice being given at a previous business session, so that it may be known that revision or amendment is by some thought to be desirable. C. P. DOW.

FIRST AND SECOND DEATH.

The first death is the death of the body; the quenching of that undiscovered spark, which warms and animates the human frame; the return of our dust to the earth as it was; the event which happeneth unto all men; "the sentence of the Lord over all flesh." We cannot prevent it. Like birth, it is inevitable. Helplessly, and without our own will, we open our eyes first to the light of day; and then, by an equal necessity, we lie down to sleep, some at this hour, some at the next, on the lap of our mother. This death is an ordinance of God. It . . . can do us no essential harm. It disturbs not the welfare of the soul. . . .

The second death is more awful and momentous . . . It is the death of reputation, the death of love, the death of happiness, the exile of the soul. It has no connection with the first death, for its causes are all engendered in the life of the body. Unlike the first, it is a death which all men do not die. Unlike the first, it is a death from which there is a way of escape. And yet there are more who are terrified with the first death, unimportant as it is, than there are who fear the second, though it includes every woe. And almost all men attempt to fly from the first, though they know it to be impossible; while few take pains to avoid the last, though it is within their ability to do so.

The first death, then, is invested with complete power over all men. It withers human strength, it respects not human authority. Rank is not exempt from it, art cannot elude, riches cannot bribe, eloquence cannot soften, nor can even virtue overcome it. But with the second and far more dreadful death it is not so. There are those over whom it hath no power. Any one may join their number. There is no mystery, no hardship, in the terms of the blessed exemption. All may read, all may comply with them. They arise from the nature of the second death. For as nothing but vice and disobedience towards God can affect . . . life . . . and invest the second death with its power, so it is righteousness only, and the healthful fruits of religion, which can defy and render it powerless. "In the way of righteousness there is life and in the pathway thereof there is no death." So little is the first death considered, and so little account of it is made, in many parts of the Scripture, that we are told, in some of its sublimest strains, that the believer in in Jesus, the true Christian,—"though dead shall live" and "shall never die." Goodness carries with it the eternal principles of life, deeply engrafted into its constitution; so that it cannot lose it, nor part with it. It is the good, the benevolent, the pious, and the pure, to whom life is promised; and on such "the second death has no power."

THE PLAINVILLE CAMPMEETING OVER SUNDAY, SEPT. 10TH.

The meeting was one of great interest to the brethren, and of special interest to those who are scattered over the western part of the State of Conn., and to some also from other parts. It is not my province to make any report, nor do I attempt it; but I would simply refer to some things I saw, and speak of experience.

There was an intense desire, with some, to hear on the absorbing question of the coming of Christ and the establishment of the kingdom of God on earth. I only arrived on Saturday evening; but am glad to say that it was in season for the evening prayer-meeting, which was conducted on the "two minute system," because there were so many to speak. It was very edifying and profitable. I was interested in the discourse of the evening, and the very good season which followed in the New Haven tent—a meeting for the work of bringing souls to Christ.

All the meetings that I attended were of a first class order. Union and harmony prevailed. I spoke on "the Eastern Question in the light of prophecy," between times, on Sunday midday, to the crowd, who gave me great attention, and many of the brethren who are entertaining a most sanguine looking for the glorious day, were much gratified and stirred up in mind to wait for the hour of redemption, and stand by the signs which so clearly mark the close of this dispensation. There is a growing interest in this most mighty question, and there will be more seen soon. With such wonderful fulfilments of the prophetic Word as we have had, and so perfectly harmonizing with present facts as they do, we can feel that in the main we have been led over a track which God himself has prepared.

I spoke nearly an hour; but could not say much. Many wished they could have heard more, and I only wished I could have gone through with the whole subject. They will hear and know more; more from me, more from others; for some of the preachers in this part of the field will give the trumpet a certain sound on the subject of the ending of this dispensation.

I am now invited to visit several important places, to speak on the later series of fulfilments of the Word, and so far as is possible I shall comply; indeed, I intend as I have help from God, to spread this light in Conn. everywhere. I hope we shall see the old State shaken anew. It has been a great field for the Advent labor from the first. We can never obliterate the footmarks of this doctrine in our little but very forward and right smart State.

William Miller's lectures were given under the very eaves of old Yale College, in New Haven, and they were attended by Professors. The truth took root in Hartford, where, at an early date, there was a large church to which I often preached. This State has been a battle-ground for the Advent truths, and I hope to see it ablaze again with the burnings of the faith-fire.

I felt very grateful that I had the opportunity of saying what rests on my soul, and with most respectful consideration would say that I regard the reception I had among the brethren as most cordial and christian. I was happy to meet with the old veterans, and to speak on the prophecies again to those whom I had often addressed in days which are numbered in the silent record of the past. If not sent by high apostolic authority, I was received as a brother beloved.

I should state that I was not on the ground in time to have received any especial request to speak until Sunday eve., when I was invited, and complied.

That meeting has done good. I am glad I was there. I hope there may be a united effort by all classes to make the fulfilment of prophecy and the coming glory the great theme for the people.

Let us, one and all, awake to the matter which we have had in hand so long, and remember that regarding the prophecies, we are to "hold fast that which we have received, that no man take our crown." God will give the special message to others, if we refuse to take and employ it.

There were two Campmeetings at Square Pond (near Stafford), at one of which Mr. Miller was present. There were two at Huntington (near Hartford), at the first of which Mr. Miiler was present. There were important campmeetings, from '43 to '46, in the west part of the State, and near where this was held, very early. I could give many interesting reminiscences of these first days of the great struggle in this State. Lectures on the prophecies of Daniel and the book of Revelation with a view of the signs, as taught by Christ and Paul, were the truth-sword by which we fought and won at first. It may be we shall use the same in the close. W. S. CAMPBELL.

A TEST FOR CHRISTIANS.

Some of the counsels of the apostolic letters, addressed to believers, appear so contrary to the feelings and inclinations of human nature, even when it is partially sanctified that the thought will force itself upon the intelligent student whether obedience is possible. Can God have given directions to his children with which he knew they could not comply? Are these directions to be understood as requiring only a limited and occasional, instead of a constant and complete obedience? Or do modern christians come so far short of the first churches, in matters of faith and practice, that what was easy in apostolic days is difficult, if not impossible, now?

These three questions seem to cover the entire ground in relation to this very important matter. The first must be dismissed with an emphatic negative; for it is impossible to conceive of the heavenly Father asking his children to be or do anything beyond the limits for which his grace qualifies them. The law of both being and doing was declared by the Lord when he graciously said to his troubled servant, "My grace is sufficient for thee; for my strength is made perfect in weakness." The divine service is in the highest sense "reasonable." God is not a slave owner, imposing tasks which it is impossible to perform, and then inflicting punishment at the dictate of an arbitrary will without respect to righteousness. He never asks without first giving. He lays upon us no more than we are able to bear. His ways are righteous, and his mercy is over all his works.

Neither can the second question be answered affirmatively, without disastrous practical consequences. To limit christian obedience to times and seasons is more than absurd, it is monstrous, for it is a virtual abolition of all christian obedience. He who obeys Christ only where and when, and to what extent he pleases or finds convenient, does not obey Christ at all. However imperfect our obedience may be, that is to say, in the sense of coming short, it must be perfect in relation to its quality. We must have a constant and abiding sense that we are "under law to Christ," and whatever we do must be done for and in reference to him. And the idea that christian counsels are not to be literally understood, must be rejected without a moment's hesitation. Take this, now, and look at it; look it full in the face without blinking or changing color: "In every thing give thanks."

We shall come to our third question presently, but we must first ask the intelligent reader, who is looking this remarkable precept full in the face, how the thought of partial or occasional compliance with it strikes him. You see the absurdity. It allows no loophole of escape for occasional gratitude. It is a marvellously comprehensive law for the hearts of God's children, and therein consists its blessedness. "In some things give thanks," which is the only sense that partial obedience suggests, is, in reality, no sense at all, for the simple reason that such words would be no law. The worst of men are sometimes moved to gratitude. We have now and then heard a thoroughly sincere "thank God!" from lips that usually had no reverent word for the holy One; but to say that this burst of feeling from a bad man, in recognition of some act of kindness, was in obedience to the christian precept under notice, would be simply foolish. It was nothing of the kind. The man new nothing about apostolic precepts, or if he did he cared nothing for them; so that the professing Christian who gives thanks only for those things that are pleasant to flesh and blood, has really not got much farther on the road to child-like faith and obedience than our poor rough friend whose surprise at your kindness forced him to say "thank God!"

Now the third question claims notice. To the church of the Thessalonians Paul, by divine direction, wrote thus: "In every thing give thanks, for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you." To the saints at Ephesus thus: "Give thanks always for all things unto God and the Father, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ." To the brethren at Colosse, thus: "Whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him." Surely no one will imagine that these injunctions were intended to be of only temporary duration. If the followers of Christ in the three churches named, were under obligation to obey them, so are the followers of Christ now. Union with Christ creates the obligation. That is the standing law of the case; that is the gracious motive power which prompts obedience; and that is the heavenly influence which clothes the law with love. Nor will any thoughtful person suggest that there were circumstances in the case of the early christians that made it easier for them to give thanks for every thing that befel them than it is for us. Easier! Why, if circumstances are to influence the feeling of the heart toward God, men steeped to the lips in affliction might well be excused, from every human point of view, for refusing to "give thanks" for bonds and imprisonments, and every other form of suffering which the genius of merciless persecution could invent. But those grand souls who lived before the church lost her first love, did not refuse. Nay, it was their joy to obey, and the peace of God was their song in the darkest night of tribulation.

There is a subtle unbelief in many hearts, suggesting that we should walk by sight as much as we can. To walk partly "by faith" is admitted to be right; indeed, it must be done, for in relation to many things there is really no other way of walking. For all "good things," that is to say, things which sight pronounces good, we are, as a matter of course, thankful. Divine Providence is easily credited with things that please us. When our plans of self-advancement succeed, when our worldly property increases, when all things in the domestic circle are pleasant to the eye and music to the ear, and when our name is esteemed in the market-place and the church, it requires no great strain upon our piety to trace all this to the kind Providence of God. Indeed we begin to think, although we would not venture to put the half-formed thought in so many words, that we are heaven's special favorites, very good children indeed! But let our plans fail, our property decrease, our prayers get no answer, our domestic joys be darkened by heavy bereavement, and our name be cast out as evil for believing some things which "the church" rejects, and rejecting some things which the same imaginary authority is supposed to believe, what then? Is Providence to be recognised in all this? Shall we—can we—give thanks for these things? To both questions Paul, under divine direction, would have promptly answered "Yes."

In reality, there is no difficulty in giving a clear and satisfactory reason for this prompt apostolic reply. The sublime meaning of it all is easily apprehended. There is no labored argument required to remove a difficulty, either intellectual or theological. A simple fact solves all, this fact, namely, that the Lord's precepts are given only to the Lord's people. The modern pulpit often speaks as if it wished men of the world to bear Christian fruit, but the writers of the Bible never commit themselves in this way. They knew better. Their idea is in perfect harmony with the Lord's doctrine, that the good fruit is found only on the good tree. The Bible never gives christian precepts to men who are not christians; but upon men who belong to Christ, in the high sense of which the apostolic letters speak, it lays the most sacred obligations to live in the world as Christ did—a life of pure, earnest, unwavering, uncomplaining, child-like faith. Every thing must be left to God. They are God's family, his children, his younger born sons, in whom is the life of "the first-born among many brethren," and he has promised to take care of them, to feed and clothe and train them. Their Father's promise should be to them enough, and it is to them enough if they are what they profess. All things work together for their good; this is their grand charter; and he who said this loves them too well to allow anything finally to hurt them. An entire surrender to the will of God, means perfect safety, the sanctified influence of all sorrow, and ultimate victory over all evil. The child of God who implicitly trusts his Father, will never be—can never be—forsaken.

"But," says some one, "I can't see how this deep sorrow that has wrung my heart, can be a blessing." No, brother, you can't "see," and, what is more, it is divinely determined that you shall not see the end of the heavenly discipline through which you are passing. You live by faith, not by sight, and this condition of the christian life will not be changed until the return from heaven and visible manifestation to his friends of your Redeemer and Lord. You will learn then, to the shame of your present unbelief, that the sorrow which wrung your heart wrung his heart, too. He had no pleasure in chastening you, and felt the deepest sympathy with you in your affliction. But he saw what was hidden from you. The ages to come were under his inspection; and he knew that to prepare you for your position and work during those ages he must deal with you as he has done, in a love which never grows cold, and a wisdom that is never at fault; therefore, "in every thing give thanks!"—The Rainbow.

BE PATIENT.

Be patient with your friends. They cannot see your heart and may misunderstand you. They cannot know what is best for you, and may select what is worst. Their arms are short, and they may be able to reach what you ask. What if also they lack purity of purpose and tenacity of affection? do not you also lack these graces? Patience is your refuge. Endure, and in enduring conquer them, and if not them, then at least yourself. Above all, be patient with your beloved. Love is the best thing on the earth, but it is to be handled tenderly, and impatience is a nurse that kills it.

Be patient with your pains and cares. We know it is easy to say and hard to do. But, dear child, you must be patient. These things are killed by enduring them, and made strong to bite and sting by feeding them with your frets and fears. There is no pain or care that can last long. None of them shall enter the city of God. A little while, and you shall leave behind you the whole troop of howling troubles, and forget in your first sweet hour of rest that such things were on the earth.

Be patient with your deferred hopes. The heart is sick, no doubt, but sick hearts must take the tonic of patience. All that is worth hoping for will come to the christian. The hope itself is put in peril by the impatience that weakens and prostrates your strength. Here also you have no better resource than patience. You will reach next year just as soon by taking it quietly; the end of your preparation for life's work—your apprenticeship or college course—will come of itself. The end of all your labor is not far beyond and need not be sighed for or impatiently expected. Clad in patience, you walk in an invisible armor, against which temptations to repine and murmur fall harmless. Put on patience against your hungry hope.

Be patient with yourself. You are full of faults, and your life abounds in blunders. Do not lash yourself sore with self-debasement. Some confidence in yourself is needful to your success. A servant who is always scolded and flogged and kicked will end in utter worthlessness. You are your own servant and ought to be a severe master, but not a tyrant in your own house. But a worse than tyranny is capricious treatment of yourself. To-day you call this servant a dear and perfect one; to-morrow you upbraid him as an ass and coward. Be patient with him; it is the only way to get work out of him.

Be patient with God. It seems almost irreverent to counsel you so. And yet, you know that even against God you have cried out in your impatience. Your garden did not bloom in season or bear fruit in abundance, and in your heart you said, "God will never reward me according to my works. He has flowers for others and fruit even for the ungodly, but me he leaves in want. When shall my turn come?" Be patient. He has one time and you have another. Your time is when you desire; his time is when you can use. He sees your day of real want; you see only the hour of capricious wishes. For him and for you there is abundance of time. His years shall not fail; nor will yours. You can afford to wait. Be patient.—Methodist.

IT is necessary for those who would have a close walk with God, to beat down, and cast away their very thoughts; so that God's Spirit alone may lead, teach, and guide them; and that the human will, which is so determinate and strong, be wholly broken off from its own lust, and wholly resigned to God.

WHEN grief sits down, folds its hands, and mournfully feeds upon its own tears, weaving the dim shadows that a little exertion might sweep away into a funeral pall, the strong spirit is shorn of its might, and sorrow becomes our master.

HOME AND HEALTH.

A WORD TO FATHERS.

We have read a story of a little boy, who, when he wanted a new suit of clothes, begged his mother to ask his father if he might have it. The mother suggested that the boy might ask for himself. "I would," said the boy, "but I don't feel well enough acquainted with him." There is a sharp reproof to the father in the reply of his son. Many a father keeps his children so at a distance from him, that they never feel confidentially acquainted with him. They feel that he is a sort of monarch in the family. They have no familiarity with him. They fear him and respect him and even love him some, for children cannot help loving some, everybody about them, but they seldom get near enough to him to feel intimate with him. They seldom go to him with their little wants and trials. They approach him through the mother. They tell her everything. They have a highway to her heart on which they go in and out with perfect freedom.

In this keeping off plan, fathers are to blame. Children should not be held off. Let them come near. Let them be as intimate with the father as mother. Let their little hearts be freely opened. It is wicked to freeze up the love-fountains of little ones' hearts. Fathers do them an injury by living with them as strangers. This drives many a child away from home for the sympathy he craves, and often into improper society. It nurses discontent and distrust, which many a child does not out-grow in his lifetime. Open your hearts and your arms, oh, fathers; be free with your children; ask for their wants and trials; play with them; be fathers to them truly, and then they will not need a mediator between themselves and you.—Selected.

UNBOLTED FLOUR THE MOST HEALTHFUL.—Having been raised in a good wheat country, we can not well overcome an early attachment to "mother's nice white bread." Yet science plainly teaches that the most healthful bread is made from wheat ground without separating the bran. The coarser portions of bran keep the finer particles of flour separated, so that the gastric juice of the stomach more readily penetrates and dissolves the mass, and hence is better for digestion. These coarser particles also produce healthful action of the intestines, and prevent constipation, which is one of the prolific causes of disease in these days. It would be far better, doubtless, if every flour bolt were removed from our grist-mills, and people consumed the meal of the whole wheat kernel, just as the several parts are combined naturally. Taste depends mainly upon habits; those accustomed to the unbolted flour eat it with a relish.—American Agriculturalist.

THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

GO TO JESUS.

Go in the depth of thy weakness,
Go in the spirit of faith;
Think on his love and his meekness,
Remember how sweetly he saith,
"Come unto me, all ye weary—
Come unto me for your rest."
Let thy life tale be ever so dreary,
There's pity in Jesus's breast.

Why art thou doubting and waiting?
Vain are all efforts of thine!
Fetters, too strong for thy breaking,
Stronger about thee shall twine.
Of thy prison, so dark and so cheerless,
One, only One, holdeth the key;
To a mansion all radiant and peerless
He'd bring thee, if thou would'st be free!

Give over thy wearisome sighing,
Give over thy struggles and fears;
Why is self so slow in its dying?
It has lingered too many long years!
Sink down at the feet of thy Savior,
Sin's conqueror, oh, let him be thine!
Thou shalt rise in the light of his favor,
And grow like the branch in the vine.

THE THREATENING RUIN;

OR,

Our Times, our Prospects and our Duty.

BY JOSEPH A. SEISS, D. D.

"And now also the axe is laid at the root of the trees: therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire."—MATT. 3: 10.

The Scriptures frequently speak of men, of systems, of combinations and of nations, as trees, and of their character and products as fruits. The trees directly referred to in the text are the Jewish institutions, cities and people. All these were on the eve of being overthrown, hewn down, scattered and wasted. Fearful judgments were pending, and had already given symptoms of their presence. Jerusalem, with all her fame and glory, had well-nigh filled out her days. Armies were soon to encompass her walls and dig down her sanctuary. Her inhabitants were about to be given to the sword, to famine, to pestilence, and to untold distresses; to be dispossessed of their land, and to be made a reproach, a hissing and a byword among all nations. And the fact that such judgments awaited the Jews and their state, and that the time had arrived for these judgments to commence, and that there was now nothing that could any more turn aside the impending stroke, is what the preacher in the text meant to signify by the expressive figure of the axe being laid at the root of the trees.

There are two ways in which interpreters have explained the allusion. It is said, when a woodman has found and marked the tree which he is about to fell, he lays his axe at its roots, while he strips off his outer garments that he may strike the more effectually. It has also been observed, when a woodman begins to fell a tree, that he first lays the sharp edge of his axe to the place near the root where he means to make his assault, and first cuts out a small notch to guide and facilitate the effects of his subsequent blows, and that this is the laying of the axe at the root of the tree. Either will explain the figure, although the latter seems most natural, and best accords with the historical facts to which it is applied. Judea had already been visited, assailed and considerably cut into by the powers which were soon to destroy it. It was even then no longer a united or independent nation; and all the elements were present and at work which were soon to bring every thing to desolation. And thus had the woodman laid his axe at the root of the trees. The first act of the great judgment had been performed as the prelude and earnest of what was to follow.

The text was, accordingly, a statement of existing facts, and a prophecy of impending and inevitable destruction to all that was represented by the Pharisees and Saducees, whose hypocrisies and sins the wild preacher of the wilderness so terrifically denounced. Nor need I tell how truly his words, in this aspect, were fulfilled. Josephus, who mingled in those scenes, has given the account. In consequence of the revolt and murders which provoked the dreadful war which was their ruin, a great commotion seized upon the Jews throughout all Syria. Everywhere they were assaulted and slain without mercy; so that whole cities could be found filled with unnumbered bodies of the dead of all ages and classes; whilst the entire province was full of indescribable distress. Thousands upon thousands of men, women and children fell by the sword, famine and other forms of death, in the capture of the various towns and cities.

When Titus invested Jerusalem, about three millions of people were gathered within its walls, whose provisions were soon exhausted, and among whom famine and plague soon began to make dreadful havoc. The soul sickens over the accounts of the oppression, the disregard of all natural affection, the remorseless cruelties and the living death which reigned in that doomed city. The people perished by houses and families every day. The dead soon became too numerous for the living to bury them. So terriffic was the plague, many fell down and died upon those whom they were trying to bury. Others hastened to the tombs before death, that after their decease they might seem to have had a decent burial. So intense was the general distress, that even the most sympathetic forgot to weep. Affection itself seemed to die. The city became a sepulchre, and every house a tomb. Every thing was full of dead and dying. As many as could be, were carried to the walls and thrown over into the ditches below. The Roman general, when he passed around and saw these piles of dead bodies, was moved, and groaned heavily, and, raising his hands to heaven, called God to witness that this was none of his work. Even the soldiers had to tear the hides from their shields for food, and mothers to devour their own infants to satisfy the cravings of hunger; until, at last, the scene ended in carnage and destruction, which scattered the Jewish race to the ends of the earth, and left their land a fearful desolation. The trees were cut down.

I mention these particulars for the reason that they are the foreshowing and earnest of what is, in a measure, to happen to all nations and people. This is declared in the Scriptures in every variety of address. The great image of Nebuchadnezzar's dream, which represented all great potencies from the days of Daniel to the judgments of the great day, is to be completely broken up,—"the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver and the gold broken to pieces together," and made "like the chaff of the summer threshing-floor," scattered to the four winds. Jeremiah tells us, that the same cup of which Jerusalem and Judah have been made to partake, is to be handed round to "all the nations," whom God will also compel to "drink it," so that they shall "be drunken, and spue, and fall, and rise no more, because of the sword which he will send among them,"—even all the kingdoms of the world which are upon the face of the earth." The word of the Lord by Zephaniah is, "Wait ye upon me, until the day that I rise up to the prey: for my determination is to gather the nations, that I may assemble the kingdoms, to pour upon them my indignation, even all my fierce anger; for all the earth shall be devoured with the flaming fire of my jealousy."

The Savior hinself tells us, "there shall be sighs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth: for the powers of heaven shall be shaken." "This know also," says the inspired apostle, "that in the last days perilous times shall come." "In that day," saith Isaiah, "the Lord shall punish the host of the high ones that are on high, and the kings of the earth upon earth; and they shall be gathered together as prisoners are gathered in the pit." And the Revelator of Patmos, in his visions of those times, beheld that "the nations were angry," and that "the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains and the mighty men, and every bondman, and every free man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains; and said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of Him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb: for the great day of his wrath has come; and who shall be able to stand?"

From these, and many other like passages of Holy Scripture, it is clear to me, that very sore trials and most trying judgments are yet in reserve for all the nations of the earth; that as we draw toward the close of the present order of earthly things we must expect "troublous times,"—times of great social and religious disturbances,—times of political disasters and perplexities,—times of commotion and war and revolutionary upheavings,—times of civil earthquakes, disruptions and overturnings,—times of calamity, and distress, and judgment, and all sorts of perfidy, and bloodshed, and usurpations,—times when the whole earth shall reel and stagger with delirium and madness under God's terrific visitations for its long-accumulating sins. There is to be a fearful hewing down of the trees, and plucking up of the plants which the heavenly Father hath not planted, and gathering to the burning of all that is unproductive of the fruit of righteousness. And one prominent point which I desire to impress in this discourse is, that the axe is already laid at the root of the trees.

I need not say that we are living in very mysterious and critical times. For years past, knowing and thoughtful men, in various spheres of life, have been giving out their convictions, that the world was verging toward some great and trying crisis. Ministers of the church and of the state, historians and philosophers, students of the Scriptures and observers of the current of human events, have been telling us of approaching changes, revolutions, troubles and manifestations in every direction, baffling all human understanding and control. Sir Robert Peel had said, "Every aspect of the present times, viewed in the light of the past, warrants the belief that we are on the eve of a universal change." Dr. Arnold, in his historical Lectures, had given it as his view of the case, that "modern history appears to be not only a step in advance of ancient history, but the last step: it appears," says he, "to bear marks of the fulness of time, as if there would be no future history beyond it." Professor Bush had written, "We are now actually arrived at the very borders of that period which is to be signalized by the winding up of the great drama which has been for ages enacting in Christendom." Professor Robinson had put upon record that, "before another half-century shall have rolled away in the providence of God, there will be seen revolutions in the Oriental mind, and over the world, of which no one has even a foreboding." And many more, equally high in standing, in various sections of the world, had proclaimed similar convictions.

Few, however, were willing to believe their report. Many scoffed, and said, These men are croakers, and know not what they are talking about; they are crazed enthusiasts, and are not to be heeded; they are mere foolish dreamers, whom it is not worth while to answer. But the skepticism of their revilers has not been able to postpone what was thus foreseen and declared. The stern realities are beginning to be seen and felt, and are growing too serious for jest. Things have come to a pass around us at which the hearts of brave men tremble, the wisest have reached their wits' end, "and all classes are in a state of confusion and dismay." Indeed, "the whole world is shivering on the brink of a terrible sea,—distrustful of its old charts, ready to fling overboard its pilots, and quenching the very stars with the mists that rise from its own turbulent and yeasty intellect." Every thing is more or less in a condition of apprehension, of suspense, of ferment, of portentous trembling. Alarming footsteps have been heard in the wood; a solemn tremor is abroad; the axe is laid at the root of the trees.

Look, for example, at the religious affairs of the world. See what a sad eclipse has come over faith, and what incertitude has taken possession of the minds of men. There are many who believe, and believe the truth, and contend earnestly for it. Never has the gospel been so wide-spread as now. But the common christian mind is full of discomfort and misgivings. What was once settled as fundamental othodoxy has, in various particulars, become strangely disturbed. The old ways of thinking no longer fit and satisfy and command the stern and unfaltering consent, as they once did. "Compare," says a close observer, "the sacred literature of our day—the published sermons of all denominations, the religious newspapers of all sects—with the bodies of divinity, the articles of faith, the catechisms and creeds of fifty, a hundred, and five hundred years back. Notice the contradictions, the inconsistencies, the vascillations of theological opinion, in all statements of our time,—how vague the language chosen, how uncertain the note struck, how many the loopholes of evasion! Examine the children of our Sunday schools of all orders, and see whether they are indoctrinated in any positive system. Try if you can get a definite declaration of theological faith from your intelligent friends of any denomination. Question the professed teachers of religion, and notice how slowly, how guardedly, how vaguely they answer direct inquiries." It would seem as if nobody knew any more what to believe, and as if those who profess to believe are too unsettled and uncertain to avow anything with confidence. There has been an almost universal loosening of old moorings, a breaking away from the firm fastenings of other days, and a drifting no one can tell whither.

In a recent London book, on The "Religious Tendencies of the Age," it is said, "The edge of our religious belief has been dulled, the objective truths of religion are comparatively ignored, the sterner features of Christianity are veiled and passed over. If we examine the religious tone of our popular authors, or if we observe the general feeling of society, we shall find that an eclectic system, consisting of the more attractive doctrines of Christianity combined with the latitudinarian philosophies, is everywhere the predominant belief." How has the Bible itself come to be frittered away by cold analysis and false and conflicting systems of interpretation! People respect it as a sacred book, and circulate it industriously, and bow reverently to it in the general; but how little is it really pondered! how little do men feel bound by its particular statements! how easy do even christian people feel in setting aside its direct announcements when they conflict with their party or their prepossessions, their wishes or their feelings!

I heard a doctor of divinity say, not long since, that "all true theologians interpret the Bible by ideas, not according to its literal terms;" that is as much as to say, we must mould the Bible to our notions, instead of subjecting our thoughts to the Bible. Much of its language has indeed passed over into common use, and serves to dignify man's poor thinking; but the mind of God that once dwelt in it is well-nigh departed. The crown with which the Father crowned it has become dim, and the glory which dwells in its expressions has become soiled and hidden by the questionable way in which men commonly deal with them. The great mass of sermons in these days are prepared to be admired, and heard to be criticized, not obeyed. The ministry, somehow, is also beginning to be viewed with suspicious malignity and sneering contempt, except as it can be used for literary gratification, or ends ill accordant with those for which Christ instituted it.

Lecturing disseminators of treason, disaffection and infidelity, can generally command the public ear and sway the public mind, with the corrupt utterances of their own decived hearts, as effectually as the ministers of the great God with messages direct from his everlasting throne. "It is our lay writers," says a critic, "who are moulding the characters and forming the opinions of the age;" and forming them, too, to anything but a pure Christianity. Error of all shapes and hues, teachings the most silly and professions the most absurd, are readily accepted by millions and put forward in place of the faith which the apostles taught and for which the holy martyers died.

INSENSIBILITY OF THE WORLD TO THE WARNING VOICE OF CHRIST.

If the prospect of the future be bright and consolatory to the true christian, so ought it to be dark and oppressive to the unbelieving and the impenitent. The glory of God will receive its two-fold manifestation in the awards of justice, and in the gifts of mercy. The time of vindication at length will come. During many a long year the name of Christ has afforded occasion for the exercise of mockery, contempt, and superstition. Recognized in the theory of human societies, whether political or ecclesiastical, he is practically despised; and the principles of worldly policy supersede his counsels, and nullify his decisions. The majority of nominal christians are utterly careless of their responsibility to his tribunal; and expect the course of the world still to proceed in the same manner as it has done from age to age.

In vain the Scriptures announce a limited period to the forbearance of God; in vain they call for repentance, and faith and godliness; in vain they proclaim "a day in which God will judge the world in righteousness" by the august Ruler, "whose goings forth are from everlasting;" "whereof God hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead." A death-like torpor and incredulity rests upon the human soul, and all the judgments and mercies of the Almighty make no impression. In private life tear chases tear, and death succeeds to death; but no man learns wisdom save the despised saint whom God deigns to enlighten and heal. In public life, wars and commotions, pestilence and earthquake, anarchy and blood, attest, during successive centuries, the controversy which God has with national impiety; but national reform, humiliation and godliness are conditions of public life unfelt, unseen, contemned.

If there be zeal for social rights—for mental freedom—for commercial greatness—for intellectual progress—it pauses short of the claims of God. Secularity pollutes the church; and while civil policy expands the enactments of legislation to the multiplied interests of the citizen, it contracts their influence over acknowledged rights of God. On this theatre of human action, man is everything, God is disregarded. His name is indeed upon their tongue, and his authority is registered upon the page of the public liturgy; but his will, his decisions, his warnings, and his promises, are matters of cold speculation or of excitement. In the day of sorrow, sickness, or death, there may be a transient reference to his mercy; but it is the refuse offering which the world will no longer ask for nor receive.

The approaching day of account, the government of the world in the hands of Christ, the results of his incarnation, his connection with mankind, the responsibility to him incurred by talent, wealth, rank, and power, these ideas are rejected as illiberal, onerous, and enthusiastic. The secondary interests of man chase his primary necessities from his sight, and three-score years of life are preferred to eternity. The care of the body is preferred to that of the soul; and the applause of man is deemed a brighter heritage than the enduring approbation of God.

It appalls the thoughtful mind to contemplate the fearful upshot of this state of human things. The day of God approaches; but where is the preparation for his advent?

When our almighty Redeemer foretold his return in glory to the world, in which previously he had been rejected, he announced the very manifestations which we witness of this incredulity and contempt: "As the days of Noah, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be; for as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came and took them all away, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be."

The flood came upon the world unexpectedly, though the theme was of incessant prediction. During one hundred and twenty years did the warning voice of God utter its mournful accents, and entreat a cessation in the work of ungodliness and sin. The accents were scattered to the air; they reached no rebel heart of man. The shortness of time, the approach of death, the brooding darkness of the gathering storm, interrupted not the career of sensuality, the progress of licentiousness, nor the noise of sin. They ate, they drank; the harp and the viol, the tabret and pipe, and wine were in their feasts; they formed alliances; they built up many a domestic dwelling place; they coveted individual and national renown; but they regarded not the work of the Lord nor knew the operation of his hands. They ridiculed the prophetic word. They smiled in idle scorn, while the prophet built and surveyed his ark, the appointed refuge from the apprcaching wrath. But the insensibility of man delayed not the purpose of God; the neglected warning canceled not the recorded purpose; the mirth of the criminal arrested not the hand of the executioner; the horizon blackened; the tempest burst; and the teeming population lay buried beneath the waves!

And so it shall be, we are told by infallible authority, in the last judgment of the great day. The same insensibility; the same licentiousness; the same preference of sensual to spiritual joy; the same complacency in ungodly gratifications; the same oblivion of justice and mercy; the same contempt of divine law, and attachment to human schemes, will characterize the period of time, proximate to the second advent of Christ, as characterized the period antecedent to the terrific flood of Noah. It would be an awful employment to portray to the mind, with anything like historical accuracy, the tremendous alarm which must at length have seized upon the world, when the threatened judgment actually commenced; when the torrents of the skies and the tides of the ocean united their fearful strength; and by successive ravages marked out a storm—unlike the wintry desolations of later years—a storm directed by the same hand which had hitherto restrained the furious elements, and made them subservient to human welfare. Creative power was now charged with retributive indignation, and the arm of God had shattered the schemes of man. The business of earth at length paused; the din of pleasure ceased; the strife of individuals was suspended; the politics of nations was arrested; all classes of society mingled together, appalled by a common ruin; the landmarks of property were annihilated; armies were useless; wealth was a name; and science a delusion. The avenging scourge of Omnipotence passed over the whole earth, and no criminal remained behind to tell the tale. Conviction came too late; remorse could be no substitute for repentance. The hour for contrition was forever gone.

And to this scene of utter disaster the Redeemer refers, in order to illustrate the consternation which will arrest an impenitent world when he shall return to the earth on which he has been so long despised.

The day of his advent will arrive, and who may abide his anger? Insensibility and scorn will characterize human society. The voice which warns will excite contempt; and the hand which, not in anger but in love, points to predicted judgments, will be met by no friendly eye. The business, pleasure, gains, and philosophy of life will occupy the world, until the sign of the Son of man shall appear in the heavens, and the authority of Christ shall allow of scorn no more. It were fearful to portray that final alarm which will overwhelm a guilty world, when, too late for refusal, the cup of trembling is held to its lips.

The destruction and calamities of the last days of the times of the Gentiles are delineated on the page of Scripture with a force and energy calculated to shake to the foundation the strongest confidence of the world. But the men of this world will not read; they will not listen; they pursue the game of life, and sport upon the precipice of perdition.

True religion is despised, and the authority of the Son of God is forgotten. But the obduracy of man cannot invalidate the claims of God. The records of the Omniscient no human hands can erase; resisted or received, they hasten to their accomplishment. Would to God that the great and the rich of the earth, the wise and the intelligent—the princes and the prelates, the nobles and the clergy of every land—would that all to whom God has entrusted the use of power, and influence, and eloquence, and wealth, might remember the condition of man and the tribunal before which he must stand. And would that the mingled multitudes, doomed to toil, obscurity and penury, might alike receive the message of the eternal world. Would that if any human being hitherto occupied but with the details of earth, should now scan these feeble lines, he might hear the warning voice, and remember the Savior of whom it speaks. Painful is it to think of a ruin which no human skill can avert, of a degradation which no art of man can reclaim, of a waste for which no after thrift can atone.

Whoso is wise will ponder these things, and he shall understand the loving kindness of the Lord.—Hon. G. T. Noel, in Restitution.

THE OLD MUSIC.

The New Testament is the christian's chief book. It contains two hundred and sixty chapters. But in these chapters the Lord's coming is named three hundred and eighteen times. There are therefore, more allusions to the second coming of Christ than there are chapters. This being so, why is it that the professed disciples of Him who is to return are so reluctant to think and speak of his appearing? Why are they so shy and still, so reticent and dumb, or so apathetic and indifferent—not to say often hostile—when this eminently Scriptural topic is introduced? In private I have seen their lips instantly close when I spoke of Christ's coming. In public religious meetings I may have been frowned down for quoting Scriptures relating to this last glorious event. There is nothing that will shut the mouths of a company of lukewarm professors, and send a chill to their hearts so quickly as to introduce into a parlor circle this tabooed theme. Who can explain this state of things with thousands in the church? Can we love an absent Savior and not desire his presence? Can we love an unseen Lord and not long to see him? Can the thought of Christ far away in heaven be pleasant, and at the same time the thought of him near at hand and visible, be irksome and dreaded? Is not that Christianity to be suspected that indulges itself in such contrarieties? In fine, is it not a christian grace to love our dear Lord's appearing? 2 Tim. 4: 8.

Beloved, we are to think of "whatsoever things are pure;" and is not that epiphany pure? We are to "comfort one another with these words" (1 Thess. 4: 13–18), were not the words all about that advent? Is the wife loyal to her lord, who dislikes when he is absent to think or speak of his return? When the Lord ascended and angels proclaimed his return; when Paul wrote to the church at Thessalonica, and they wrongly interpreted his letter as teaching an instant coming; when the closing promise, "I come quickly,"—his latest message—was first read by the early believers, I doubt not "Marantha! "The Lord cometh!" was shouted from mouth to mouth, and all hearts thrilled with thoughts and hopes "of that last advent long desired!" He that doubted that coming was an anti-Christ; he that failed to love it, an apostate.

Where now is this old, first love? Tertullian wrote that the judgment trump perpetually sounded its solemn, joyful strain in his ears. What wonder, when, as often as once in every chapter, as often as if it were on every page of the sacred Letters, there is the ringing cry, "Behold, he cometh!"

In sympathy with this Scriptural expectation, Luther said to a friend, "I would readily eat up this necklace (of white agates) to-day, for the judgment to come to-morrow," while Calvin, catching the same spirit, said, "Ardently desire the day of Christ's coming." "I half call his absence cruel—O when shall we meet?" cried Rutherford. "If the Lord return not, I profess myself undone," sighed Alleine. With exulting pertinence, Baxter asks, "Would it not rejoice your hearts if you were sure to live to see the coming of the Lord?" Do you respond affirmatively? In harmony with these divine echoes from the past, how refreshing to hear this strain of music taken up and prolonged by a few to-day—Cumming, Spurgeon, Bonar, Muller Radstock, Varley, Palmer, Guinness, Brooks, Burnham, Tyng, Seiss, Bosworth, Buddington, and Moody: God bless them for echoing the old glad message—"The Lord cometh."

The Earl of Shaftesbury says that "for many years the coming of the Lord has been on his heart, and in his inmost soul, as the very joy of his life." "It is more christian-like and scriptural," writes Dr. Buddington, "to think of the coming of Christ than of the coming of death. Near as the last is, the first may be nearer." "The sooner Christ comes, the better," echoes Dr. T. H. Stockton. "The glorious doctrine is reviving again throughout all Christendom," writes Dr. E. P. Marvin. God grant it! we cry. "Thy saints shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power." Psa. 145: 11.—D. T. TAYLOR, in The Christian.

IMPORTANCE OF HOLINESS.

SILAS HENN.

The importance of holiness will be seen if it is regarded in its relation to the will and glory of God. We are commanded to be holy, and that which is commanded by Infinite Wisdom and Infinite Love must be the best thing for our welfare, and the neglect of it must entail upon us untold misery And nothing can promote the divine glory so much as a life in union with the divine will.

We are required to witness for Jesus, to stand up for his cause, to proclaim and recommend his gospel; and if our neighbors discover in our tempers and conduct anything contrary to christianity, dishonor is thereby cast on the cause of God. It is only by a holy life that we can be faithful witnesses for Christ. We must be pure in heart for the Saviour to be honored by our motives, our principles, and our daily walk. Oh, take heed to your spirit and your behaviour. If you desire to glorify our Redeemer, to exalt his name, to spread the truth, be ye holy.

Its importance will be farther seen if we consider that it is the only thing that can fit us for great usefulness. It is said that knowledge is power, and so it is; but holiness is a power much greater. Our great need as preachers and as christian workers is pentacostal power; and until that power come upon us, our efforts will be weak and our success small. There are a few upon whom the power has come, and they are a power for good amongst their fellow-men. God works most powerfully through those who are most holy, and have in consequence most power in their own souls. Under the labors of such, and in answer to their mighty pleadings, God will, as far as it is consistent with men's free will and the divine administration, produce conviction of sin in the minds of sinners, and conviction of the need of heart purity in the minds of believers. This power, therefore, this fitness for winning souls, which can only coexist in a large measure with entire sanctification, is the want of christian teachers and christian laborers generally. Oh, brethren, if you value souls and desire to save them, get this power.

The importance of holiness will be seen also in its own real value and excellence, and in its capability of imparting true happiness in this world and securing immortality in the world to come. There is in the very nature of holiness the greatest moral worth and beauty. Nothing is comparable with it. It is a light that outshines all the natural lights. It is a glory that excels all earthly glory. And it belongs to the nature of holiness to give its possessor peace, felicity and joy. The peace it gives is the only true peace, the only abiding peace, the only peace which is God's peace, which is divine and heavenly in its nature. But many professors of religion are not happy. That is true. But it is for the want of holiness. Holy men and women are always happy, and the most holy are the most happy. And nothing but this can prepare us for the coming of the Lord. Nothing but this can secure us a part in the first resurrection and lead us to eternal life.

Brethren, let us be settled fully, securely, and always within the borders of the fair and sunny land, which we are called to possess. The blessedness of the state and the glory it will bring to our Redeemer, will be worth all the prayer and watching and self-denial and labor of attaining it, and living in it.

THOUGHTS ON MAN.

BY A BAPTIST.

THE DEATH PENALTY.

As the term "death" is used in different senses in the Scriptures, how are we to determine its meaning in the penal clause of the law, as first given to man? Not by a critical exegesis of detached passages; nor by the opinions held by particular sects of the Jews; but by a careful study of redemption, as practically wrought out by the death of Christ, on the plan of substitution.

After the first examination of man in reference to his guilt, a promise was made of a substitute in the seed of the woman, so that man might not be in constant fear of execution. In the fulness of time the promise was redeemed by Christ, who made his appearance in the same nature in which he had been promised. As a man, he lived under the law, and obeyed its requirements to the letter, in every particular. As a man, he was subjected to the same trial as was Adam. As a man, the temptation was presented to him through the same medium; viz, the appetite; but under far more trying circumstances; for Adam was surrounded by an abundance and great variety, of which he had entire liberty to partake; while Christ had been without food forty days, and "was a hungered," and in a desert place, where food was not to be obtained; thus demonstrating that the law required no more than man was able to give; consequently, the penalty was just, and justice could not forego its execution, and still be justice; and in proof that all these things came to him, as a man, I would cite Heb. 4: 15: "For we have not an High Priest which cannot be touched with a feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." Upon what other basis can we understand the doctrine of substitution, only that the substitute took the place of the criminal, and paid the debt?

If Christ did not suffer eternal torment, it is the most conclusive evidence of which I have any conception, that the death penalty in the law did not include that idea. No one who as any faith in the Bible as a revelation from heaven, or any respect for its teachings, as a standard for their religious belief, will deny that Christ was a perfect and holy substitute for the sinner, and that it was the demand of justice that caused his death, as a substitute; although human means were used to accomplish it.

In the State of New York, the penalty for the crime of murder is death; but who will affirm that a man who is guilty of the crime, however much he may suffer either mentally or physically, between the commission of the crime and its expiation, that he is suffering the penalty of the law? But when he is hung by the neck until he is dead, then he suffers the penalty of the law, and not before; all other suffering being the legitimate fruit of his crime, but not the penalty of law. So Christ, although innocent, in order to be an effectual substitute, must take the place of the criminal, and suffer the exact penalty of the law pronounced on the sinner.

That man was created purely a mortal being, I think has been clearly shown. That he was capable of becoming immortal, and that ample provision was made in the tree of life, is as clearly shown. That man forfeited his right by sin to that provision, and in consequence of that sin was debarred access to that provision, needs no further argument; and that death in the penal clause of the law meant nothing less or more than the cessation of conscious being, as evidenced by Christ's death on, the cross, in which was furnished a substitute for the sinner.

Under the law, when in consequence of poverty and inability to pay just debts, an inheritance had passed out of a family, the right of redemption rested in the nearest male kinsman; but if there was a widow, as in the case of Ruth, he was to marry her, pay the just debts, and then the title of the property vested in him, and as the head of the family, remained there during his life; so, when we as a race became bankrupt in our federal head, totally unable to pay; the right of redemption vested in Christ our Elder Brother; and when he had paid all the debt on the cross due from us, the title to the estate vested in him; and as head of the family, he holds the title deeds in his own name, and for our perfect and entire security, giving us the full benefits of all its provisions.

Under the law, titles descended from generation to generation; but as our elder Brother and Redeemer lives forever, the vested right will never change hands, but will be eternally secure in the keeping of him who bears in his hands, his feet, and his side, the indubitable evidence that he has paid the exact debt; and that the title to the inheritance legally rests in him, and that he holds it expressly for the benefit of those who accept it on the offered conditions.

EUSEBIUS claims that Enoch was celebrated as the inventor of writing, arithmetic, and astronomy; and is said to have filled three hundred books with revelations which he received. Be this true or untrue, he was a living epistle, which will be handed down to all future generations, of the power of God to save.

LIVE, as it were, on trust; all that is in you, and all that you are, is only loaned to you; make use of it according to the will of Him who lends it, but never regard it for a moment as your own.

OUR BENEFACTOR.

"But my God shall supply all your need, according to his riches in glory, by Christ Jesus."—PHIL. 4: 19.

Man in this world is in a state of dependence, want and poverty. He is powerless to supply his need. He is dependent for life and all its blessings.

Our first parents fell into bankruptcy, and left all their posterity in absolute poverty. By our first birth we gain no right, by divine law, to anything; so that we are subjected to the liability of death the first hour we live. By our second birth we gain an heirship to all things through Christ, as our "everlasting Father." When we are admitted into Christ's family we receive the covenant promise that all our "need" shall be supplied by God, through Christ. Glorious promise from a divine Benefactor! It is the fruit of infinite goodness and boundless mercy.

Man, by a satanic seduction, a willful and persistent rebellion against his Creator, justly forfeited every right to heaven's bounties. Everything he receives from God, while a rebel, is by sufferance, and not by any just claim or right. Our life is forfeited, and every hour of its continuance is an appropriation from heavenly grace.

When we voluntarily end our rebellion by submitting to Christ, we are received into the family of God as his children, heirs to boundless wealth, to receive in this life all that we are able to use to our advantage and the glory of God; the remainder to be enjoyed in the future world, where our capacities for using and enjoying will be infinitely increased.

The child of God in this life has the sure promise that all his need shall be supplied, although he may be "as having nothing," yet he is as if he were "possessing all things." God will withhold "no good thing from them that walk uprightly." "He will give grace and glory;"—grace in this world, and glory in the world to come.

If we do not receive in this life all that we desire, it is because we desire many things which we do not need. A child may desire many things which a loving parent withholds because he knows they would injure it; so our heavenly Father withholds from his dear children those things he sees would injure them.

Humanity is weak, and can bear but little prosperity; therefore, chastisements and the cross are always essential for us, to dim earthly prospects, so that the heavenly may appear brighter; to wean us from the earthly and wed us to the heavenly.

It is a blessed consolation, in the midst of poverty and distress, to know that we have a rich Friend, who is able and willing to give us all we need. He will give us strength because we are weak; and wisdom because we are ignorant. The promise is that "God shall supply all your need, according to his riches in glory."

A man might be very poor, and need many things, and have a friend who could supply one of his wants, but who was able to do no more. The man would still be needy. But a rich friend might be able to supply all his needs. A poor family, in St. Petersburg, might have many wants; but if it could get the promise of the Emperor Alexander, that he from his throne would supply all their need, they would feel an assurance that they would lack no good thing; for the Imperial Treasury would be opened to supply. So God assures his people that the heavenly treasures are, by a divine covenant, sealed and ratified by the blood and resurrection of Jesus Christ, opened to all his saints—to all their need through time and the eternal ages.

Let the curse blight the fruits of earth, and the howling tempests desolate all lands; God can send bread from heaven to feed his servants. Let Satan rage, and come with great wrath to tempt and destroy the trusting friends of Jesus; they can smile at his fury, for Jesus holds them in the hollow of his hand. Let wicked men scoff, and say, "Where is the promise of his coming?" and threaten the faithful with ignominy and disappointment; but the prophet says—"He shall appear to your joy; and they shall be ashamed." Isa. 66: 5.

But greater needs than these shall press upon the heirs of divine promise, when the period of mercy for a cursed world shall have passed, and the softening, restraining influences of grace shall have departed, and hoarded-up revenge be let loose to deluge the world with blood. Thrones and armies will then have no power to shield from the libertine's lust or the warrior's steel. All human and earthly protection will fail, when the armor-clad millions, fired with a satanic inspiration of lust, destruction and murder, shall disgorge the seething vileness of depraved hearts by outraging the pure and helpless, burning quiet habitations, and butchering and torturing all in opposition. O then will a place of safety be of priceless value!

When the heavens gather blackness, and the tones of judgment thunder arouse a frenzied generation to the fact that Jehovah is calling all men before his bar of justice; then shall we "need" spotless garments and sinless hearts. When the Judge of quick and dead shall run his eye through the ranks of assembled humanity, to fix the seal of approval upon the blood-washed, and the seal of guilt upon the wicked, then shall we feel the infinite need of sinless innocence and holiness. When the sentence of divine Justice is executed upon the ungodly, and they are driven down to the pit of eternal death, and the righteous, bearing the boon of everlasting life, shall be invited to enter the gates of Paradise, and eternally enjoy the glories, riches and happiness of Messiah's kingdom, then will it be an infinitely glorious blessing to have our need supplied—God's approval and the Messianic benediction.

WAR NEWS.

The news from the land of blood increases the hopelessness of peace every day. The Turks seem to be still carrying on the same savage mode of warfare, which has incensed the masses of the nations against them, thus rendering it more difficult to end the war. They could not have done anything which would more surely seal their fate in Europe. These atrocities have so enraged the people of the different nations that their governments cannot control them; they are becoming determined to be avenged on the savage Turk. These shameful barbarities cannot be stopped, for the Porte's government is losing its control over the people, as appears from the following:

London, Oct. 4. A Therapia letter dated Sept. 26, says the Porte grounds its resistance to the demands of the Powers on its alleged inability to crush the passions of the mob. Its ultima ratio is a threat of a massacre of Christians. The Turkish ministers allege that they are constantly receiving anonymous letters, and that placards are posted at every corner of Stamboul, threatening popular vengeance on the government, if they accept conditions incompatible with the dignity of the empire."

M. Ristich, Servian Minister of Foreign Affairs, has given notice that the Servians are so enraged at the Turkish cruelties that they cannot be restrained from revengeful acts. These horrible deeds are so stirring the Russian people that in spite of the Czar's pacific intentions, he is being driven to war by his infuriated subjects. The latest news also shows that the Germans are being aroused by these bloody deeds, and many of them are hastening to join the Servian army. The English are also furiously incensed at the awful reports which are continually pouring in of horrifying deeds perpetrated upon defenceless women and children. There is evidently an overwhelming majority of the Queen's subjects, who clamor for a new government, which will not consent to the sacrifice of any more British gold or blood to support the abominable Turkish government. They feel indignant, that a British fleet should be sent to encourage and strengthen the Turks, when they were savagely outraging, torturing and butchering helpless and defenceless Christian men, women and children, and to intimidate those who were seeking to defend and relieve the sufferers.

That our readers may judge of the magnitude of the trouble and the probabilities of its future, we present an extract from a speech of Sir John Lubbock, member of Parliament, who certainly has advantages of understaning the subject as well as any one. We quote him from the London Times as follows:

"One of the most sensible speeches made at the numerous public meetings was that delivered at Maidstone by Sir John Lubbock, who reminded his hearers that to talk of driving 3,600,000 Turks out of Europe was to propose a difficult task. He said, 'In Bulgaria there were 1,250,000, and in Bosnia the whole of the land owners were Turks,' and asked 'would they drive out all the Turkish land owners from Bosnia because some atrocities had been committed in Bulgaria?' If such an attempt were made, he observed, it would be 'raising up people against people, creed against creed, and spreading abroad a feeling which might extend to Asia and Africa, and lead to horrors and atrocities compared to which those which had hitherto occurred would be as nothing.' In his opinion the war should be stopped at once, and a conference held to see what the people desired, and to what Turkey would consent to give the provinces the blessings of peace.

Stopping the war is the great practical step that ought not to be delayed upon any pretext. The news from Servia, and especially a letter from Dr. Sandwith, must make the blood of every Englishman boil. The Turks cannot carry on the war like human beings. They make it an appalling combination of cruelty, lust, and ferocity that must be arrested summarily at any cost. Their treatment of women and children cannot be described in any words fit for a decent newspaper to employ. The horrible outrage upon a young girl mentioned by Dr. Sandwith, is, unfortunately, only a specimen of their diabolical exhibition of every evil passion that could disgrace man or beast. Their obscenity and brutality is so hideous, that in the name of humanity it must be stopped; and it would be far better that the English fleet should force their defences and lay Constantinople in ashes, rather than allow their frightful devilry an hour's more play. By this should Mr. Disraeli and Lord Stanley be judged. It will be a tremendous crime if they fail to make the Turk immediately understand that the might of England will be against him if he does not at once stop the war."

John Bright, a great leader in the Lower House of Parliament, expresses his views upon the subject as follows:

London, Oct. 3. At a meeting of the Reform Club in Manchester last night, John Bright made a speech on the Eastern question. He thought the meeting of Parliament desirable. It would result in a new policy, probably under a new ministry. It would stamp the future policy of the country with the solemn decision that blood and the treasure of England should never again be wasted in behalf of the Ottoman power. Turkey should be left to the fate which Providence had decreed for her corruption and tyranny.

It seems to us that the last sentence of this quotation is almost prophetic. If Mr. Bright has not learned the future of Turkey from the Scriptures, he certainly echoes their predictions most remarkably.

Austrian subjects are also aroused against the Turks, and volunteering to assist the oppressed Christians, as will be seen from the following:

London, Oct. 2. A dispatch to the Times from Serajevo states that one thousand five hundred armed Austrian Sclavonians entered Bosnia on Saturday. They are attacking the Moslems and inciting the Christians to insurrection. The Turks are marching against them from Banjalerka.

The Greeks are also being stirred by the spirit of war, which is sweeping like a flood over the world, as the following testifies:

Athens, Oct. 2. At a meeting held here to-day, which was attended by eight thousand persons, the intolerable position of the Greek provinces of Turkey was discussed. A proposal for the augmentation of the Greek army and navy was enthusiastically greeted.

We give a brief extract to show what Russia is doing in this dark hour of universal excitement. It shows that she expects battle and destruction at Constantinople:

London, Oct. 5. A Times dispatch from Berlin states that Russia is arming with energy, and that valuable furniture and other valuables have been taken out of the Russian chapel and hospital at Constantinople and sent to Odessa. The Russian journals speak of redoubled activity in the Government gun manufactories.

It seems to us that those who are not aroused by these alarming and clearly prophetic warnings of the speedy approach of God's last judgment, must be sleeping most soundly. O, ye saints! can ye not watch one hour?

QUESTIONS.

Bro. C. Richardson inquires—"Is there any proof that the apostles baptized in the name of the Father and of the Holy Spirit?" We do not doubt that the apostles baptized as they were commanded to do by the Master, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit; still the sacred names are not given by the inspired historians, in making a record of the apostolic immersions; but this is no proof that the faithful servants of Jesus did not strictly adhere to the divine instructions.

Again Bro. R. inquires,—"Is there any proof for Trine immersion, in the sixth chapter of Romans?" In this chapter Paul clearly explains the object of baptism, which is to represent the believer in a state of death to sin; this death being produced by the death of Jesus Christ. As dead men are buried in the grave, so Christ was buried, after his sacrificial death, in Joseph's tomb, from which he arose the third day, having previously to leaving the grave recieved a new life. So baptism, according to Paul, represents the believer as having lost his life of sin, which makes it proper that he should be "buried;" for dead men are buried; and having received a new life of righteousness, by faith in Christ, it becomes proper that he should be raised out of that grave, as the reliving Christ came out of his grave. Therefore water baptism naturally and beautifully illustrates the burial and resurrection of Christ. We bury them in water because they are dead to sin; raise them out of the water because they have recieved a new life from a resurrected Christ.

If Christ was buried three times and raised out of the grave three times, then trine immersion would properly illustrate it; but if only once, then three immersions would very blindly misrepresent it. We believe that trine immersion is not proved by this passage, but it most clearly disproves it.

The figure of planting is also employed in this chapter as in other passages, to illustrate man's position in death; and baptism is made to represent the same thing; therefore, as the seed is buried but once in planting, so one immersion is established by Paul as the gospel mode of baptism.

AN OVERSIGHT.

The following card from Bro. T. M. Preble was published in the A. C. Times, with a request to be published in the Crisis. By an oversight it was not seen until our present issue. Will Bro. P. and the interested friends please excuse us.—ED.

"I have at last been able to make arrangements, in part, for my labors in the west. Next Sabbath (Sept. 24th), my appointment is with the A. C. church in Arena, Wis., and probably hold meetings on Monday and Tuesday evenings. Then go to Rockford, Ill., and commence on Thursday evening, Sept. 28th, and continue as the Lord may direct. I may stop there two Sabbaths—the interest in the meetings will decide this.

If there is time, and my strength holds out, I intend to visit Foreston, Genoa, Sycamore, De Kalb, and Chicago; and perhaps a place or two besides, before we return east; but cannot now arrange definitely for any other place except Rockford. Brethren in the above-named places will hold themselves in readiness for meetings in their respective places, and I will give definite notice as soon as possible. I may not be able to hold meetings in all the above-named places, but will do the best I can, and will try to labor every evening during the week except Mondays and Saturdays. Hope all the lovers of Jesus, who can, will attend these meetings as laborers for the salvation of sinners. We expect to start for home about the first of November."

FAST APPROACHING.

It is a joyous fact that a large number of people are being satisfied that we are fast approaching the great day of the Lord. Many prominent men in the ministry, and among the lay membership of the churches in Europe and America are becoming specially interested in the signs of the times, and the prophecies that point to the time of the end. As a sample, the following is given from the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Cavan:

"The subject of our Lord's second advent is one that has been too much overlooked, but now in these latter days, those who have closely studied the word of Christ, and are looking forward to his glorious appearing, cannot but rejoice to give the more earnest heed to it, because it is evidently indicated to be fast approaching.

Just as on the occasion of the first coming of our Lord, there were some, of whom mention is made in Holy Scripture, who were looking for and expecting that first coming; so in like manner, how much more essential and important is it for us who are living in the last days, to be anxiously looking for and expecting a speedy return of our blessed Lord, when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and admired in all them that believe on him. We read in the second chapter of Luke about Simeon, who, it is said, was "just and devout, waiting for the consolation of Israel, and the Holy Ghost was upon him." We find still further in that chapter that "Anna, coming in that instant, gave thanks likewise unto the Lord, and spoke of him to all them that looked for redemption in Jerusalem."

And at the further end of that gospel by St. Luke, we find that Joseph of Arimathea, a city of the Jews, was another one, "who also himself waited for the kingdom of God." Now I believe that the Lord's people at the present day ought to be in a similar expectant and waiting attitude, looking for the speedy pre-millenial advent of our blessed Lord. And I hold it to be clearly shown in Scripture that the personal return of Christ, as foretold in Acts 1: 11, will take place before the millennium of a thousand years, and that he will reign during that period with the saints of the first resurrection."

A GOOD WORK.

In 1804, the British and Foreign Bible Society was formed for the purpose of circulating the Scriptures, without note or comment, in all the world. Since that time, a great work has been done. When this society commenced operations, it is believed there were not more than four or five million copies of the Bible in the world. It had then been translated into about fifty languages. Since then, the number of translations have been increased to over two hundred, and this society has distributed over seventy-six million copies, and other societies some over fifty-five millions, making in all over one hundred and thirty-one million copies distributed in the last seventy-two years. In over thirty cases, the language employed had not been reduced to a written form before.

The work of the society has been extended to all European countries, the principal nations in Asia and Africa, Madagasca, the South Pacific islands, South America, Mexico, Greenland and Labrador. All christians should feel interested in this good work of sending the Word of light and life to those living in the region of darkness and death. The question comes home, are we all doing what we can for Jesus, in this direction?

CHRIST WILL AVENGE.

E. A. STOCKMAN.

The attitude of man has ever been that of flagrant disregard or insolent contempt of divine goodness and government. In vain has pitying Heaven sought to touch and soften revolted human nature by perpetual displays of grace and love, made royal by the gift of the only begotten Son.

The tears and blood of Calvary have fallen upon an ungrateful race, like rain upon adamant. The glowing Word has wasted its pathos and its power on hearts callous to all heavenly tenderness. The Holy Spirit has illumined, wooed and warned; and in return, been grieved, insulted and driven away.

The patient Jesus has prayed at the high court of God through the long centuries, crowding the garden, cross and triumphant ascension, the merit of an immaculate nature and the weight of a divine sacrifice into his ceaseless pleading for self-destroyed, helpless, doomed sinners, only to be coldly rejected or openly contemned. The great Father of all is denied even a hearing at the bolted door of man's obdurate heart. The carnal nations flaunt their bloody ensigns in the face of silent justice, spurning God's holy law and claim to homage.

The crime-stricken "Man of sin" vaunts titles and prerogatives which belong to uncreated Majesty alone; blasphemously exalting himself "above all that is called God," heedless of the impatient cry of martyr-blood—"How long, O Lord, dost thou not avenge."

"Sin rages loose; crime has her fill; and death enough."

Is all this to go on forever? Are wicked men and deceivers to wax worse and worse for ages still to come? Is error to be always on the throne and truth forever on the scaffold? Is there no victorious mayesty in right? No self-vindicating force in moral government? No penalty in righteous law? No respect in Heaven for injured Mercy? No defence for the rejected, insulted, crucified Messiah? Has God forgotten to be just? Has the oft-threatened "day of wrath" passed out of divine remembrance? Is "the terror of the Lord" obsolete? Why does not avenging justice send its burning bolts down among the enemies of God? Why does not insulted Heaven strike?

The answer to all this is found in the Redemptive Plan. This is the day of grace. The world is under mediation. The Lamb is now the Intercessor. This is the age of mercy; and while it lasts Christ bears all, suffers all; God is silent and justice waits. But when this long era of patient waiting and gracious pleading is finished, Truth will lift up its voice and Justice will be heard.

The meek, suffering, pleading Lamb will then become the Avenger. "For the day of vengeance is in my heart and the year of my redeemed is come. Isa. 63: 4. "To proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord and the day of vengeance of our God." Isa. 61: 2. "Hide us from the face of Him that sitteth on the throne and from the wrath of the Lamb." Rev. 6: 13.

The fierceness of wrath will be measured by the fullness of rejected mercy; for, infinity of character and government requires absolute equality of attributes and essential forces. O! what a day of unutterable anguish will that be for all wicked, bloody men; haters of the truth; despisers of God; murderers of the saints; "When the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven, with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power." 2d Thes. 1: 8, 9. Then will have come—

"The day of the great avenging,
The day of the burning ire." Mal. 4: 1.

The rejected Word, the resisted Spirit, the slain martyrs—long waiting in bloody graves, the insulted bride, the rejected, hated Jesus, the holy name of God, long and bitterly blasphemed with ribald jest of wicked men and taunt of devils,—all these shall be avenged. Just retribution, swift, sure, relentless, will the long-suffering but now avenging Lamb (Rev. 6: 13) mingle in the cup of sorrows which all the unsaved nations shall surely drink.

O, that exposed sinners may see impending wrath and secure divine favor before the storm descends!

THE SITUATION.

There appears to be no improvement in the aspect of the Eastern war. The Russians now have the controlling power among the Servians. About all the prominent officers are Prussians. The leading governments of Europe are making earnest efforts to close the war; but thus far their success has not been worthy of mention. If not stopped soon, it is well understood that terrible scenes must follow. It is expected the war storm will become so furious, that all Europe, and Asia too, will feel the effects. It will become "the war of the nations." The bloody onset may not take place this season, but the purpose seems settled on the part of Russia to put down the Turkish power. The present aspect of things may be properly expressed in the following language from the Chicago Inter Ocean:

"Every reader of history knows the terrible consequences of a holy war, and should the fanatical Moslem once begin his work of massacre, we shudder at the very thought of the terrible consequences. The great powers, anxious to avoid if possible the collossal war, which, once begun, must draw within its vortex all the leading nations of Europe, have cautiously avoided any show of force or armed interference. The question becomes a more complicated one every day; the rushing to and fro of diplomatic messengers, and the wild rumors flying over the wires, all seem to point to the slow but steady uprising of a volcano which may burst at no distant date. In the meantime men-of-war and gunboats are ready, diplomats are listening for the first cry for help from Christian Turkey, and we must rest prepared for news of a startling character at any moment."

QUITE A CHANGE.—There has been a great change in Italy during the last twenty-eight years, and especially since 1859. Gavazzi recently reported that fifty thousand persons are regular attendants at the evangelical churches in Italy, but previous to 1848, there was not one. Greater things may be expected soon. The current is changing rapidly.

LETTER FROM BRO. BOUTELL.

Dear Editor:—The time since I last wrote to the Crisis has been long. The first day of August, after three days of pleasant riding, we drove on to the Alton Bay campground. We found there many of like "precious faith" to welcome us to the Second Advent oasis of New Hampshire, made sacred by thirteen yearly convocations of those "looking for that blessed hope." We spent most of the month at the cottage, but occasionally rode out into the country to visit the saints, and have meetings. This broke the monotony of our stay and added to our usefulness with the people.

Soon after our arrival at the camp, meetings were held daily till the great meeting commenced, which was thought to be one of the best ever held on the ground. The weather was delightful and the attendance large. The preaching was timely, and adapted to stir mightily the lovers of Jesus' coming, bring into action the church, and alarm those who are within the reach of mercy, and cause them to secure eternal life. All the faithful in Christ could heartily say, amen; so may it be.

We enjoyed these blessed, heavenly privileges of hearing the voice of thanksgiving and prayer, together with the songs of praise and joy unspeakable. The divine Presence seemed in the very atmosphere, so that nothing did, or could prevent the holy ones from making progression in the christian race, and full preparation for the hour of translation into the kingdom of God. The prayer meetings were blessed. Brotherly love prevailed and grew stronger till the close of the meeting.

The two last days of the meeting I lost, on account of the sickness of my wife, with what the doctor pronounced typhoid fever. As we were alone, I had the care of her night and day. When the camp broke up, and all left, it was the most lonesome time of my life. I would look out for comfort, but it was only to see some one with carpet-bag in hand, running to the cars to make his escape. I stayed nine days after the meeting, and finding wife getting no better, I concluded to get her home, where we could better care for her. With much effort I took her to the cars, and arrived home at Chelsea after a day of great anxiety and care, but with heartfelt thanksgiving to God for his goodness in wonderfully sustaining her. We have been home most three weeks, and wife is now fast recovering, for which we feel grateful to the Giver of every good gift.

TURKEY IN PROPHECY.—The first of a series of discourses on "The Political and Prophetical Aspects of the Eastern Question" was delivered at St. Paul's, Old Ford, on Sunday, Sept. 9th. The preacher, the Rev. W. Adamson, selected for his text 1 Kings 22: 25. Whilst denouncing the terrible barbarities in Bulgaria, which had never been equalled save by the burning horrors of the Roman Inquisition, the preacher pointed out, from the Book of Daniel, that the end of the Turkish "woe" in Rev. 16 was not the end of England's troubles, or of the sufferings of Christendom. After alluding to the eloquent sentiments of Mr. Gladstone in his pamphlet, the preacher, with impressive earnestness, urged upon his attentive audience to prepare for grievous time in connection with the coming contest between the kings of the north and south under the seventh vial, and to plead with God unceasingly to shorten the period of the present and coming woes in Christendom.—ED.

THE TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, held at its rooms, 144 Hanover Street, Boston, on the 5th of September, 1876, it was voted that the Society make diligent effort to raise the sum of Two Thousand Dollars for the Tract Fund. This is one of the most important departments of our field of labor, and the Society intend to make more earnest efforts than ever before to publish the soul-stirring message of Christ's speedy second advent, and the precious truths connected therewith. To this end the Society solicits the aid of its friends and sympathizers, and hopes that donations to this object may be prompt, liberal, and hearty.

C. E. BARNES, Sec. Adv. Chris. Pub Society.

Remittances should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass., or they may be enclosed with remittances to the Crisis Office.

FAREWELL!

WM. KELLAWAY.

The time has arrived when we must say "Farewell" to those we love, and take our way homeward, to work in that portion of God's field where He has allotted to us our task. And this brings to our mind our last parting with our brothers and sisters when we returned to England for the first time. Never will that parting be forgotten by us. Until memory perishes, it cannot be erased from our recollection.

There are some, no doubt, who will remember Tremont campmeeting of four years ago; and the sobs that came from a deeper spot than ever before or since. The cries that rent the night air moved many a heart, and bathed sympathetic souls in feeling unutterable. Tears and prayers, groans and agony, were commingled on that eventful night. O, what hours were those hours of separation! If Heaven did not hear, then Heaven is deaf! But Heaven did hear. God and His Christ and the holy angels beheld a scene of weeping perhaps alike only to that recorded in the Book of the Doings of the Apostles, where brethren beloved fell on the neck of the Apostle Paul, and wept sadly, and almost inconsolably, because they were to see his face no more in the mortal state. That scene by the river side! what pen can write it? And the pangs of separation at Tremont as felt by our poor heart were too much to be overcome by the most manly effort, as they are too deep to tell even at this day. The imprint they have made in our consciousness no events of time can efface.

To tear living, quivering flesh from one's bones,—to rend member from member,— to rack long and unmercifully, though awful, awful to think about and write of, would not equal the mental struggles and anguish of that hour. The only thing we can imagine for comparison is that separation which will now shortly take place between the deceived who think themselves Christ's, and are not, and Jesus Himself. What wrung hands there! What smitten hearts! What dumbfounded lips! What abashed faces! What sighs, and tears, and moans! Lost! All lost! Christ lost! Grace lost! The Kingdom lost! Life lost! Pleasure lost! Honor lost! God forefend us against such deception; and save us from hearing "Depart," when we have lived in expection of "Come!"

The society of God's people was to be lost. We were to be away from them. We were to stand alone. We were to brave the storm. We had to buffet the waves. We had imposed on us the duty of service of Jesus. Well, altogether, the separation was hard. Thank God, time has proved it was not to be forever.

He who worketh all things and makes many a mercy return, has returned us for a while to the faces and love of His saints. With them we have gone in and out. To them have spoken. Have listened in turn. Have prayed with them. Have engaged with them in asking back the One Presence—that Presence that impressed all with its power when for a little while it was seen in the world.

And now, the boisterous wave will roll between us again. The great ocean in its everlasting tossings will toss on. The currents will run, the storm-wall be built, the trough carry it away, the white caps appear, and all things go on as ever; and we be sundered. Three thousand miles at the least will lie between us. Barrier of sea! Dividing line of water! Gulf of separation! thou knowest not nor carest that thou art so cruel as to part those whose hearts flow together and would remain in union, like thine own little drops that in infinite number make thee what thou art!

Alas separation! Alas the partings of this evil age! The re-unions of eternity, would God they were here! Would that risen dead and changed living, every one chosen of God, were caught up together to meet with each other, and Him who is Lord of all! Well, the thought that consoles us is,—it will soon be a reality.

But while thus separated shall we be altogether parted? Shall we be isolated from you? Will you withdraw yourselves from us? Shall we be to you as though we had never been? Will you be to us as the dead and forgotten? For our part we say, No. We shall think of you. We shall pray for you. We shall write and select for your welcome Crisis. And in any and every way we can think of, shall endeavor to keep up the connection that exists between us.

And may we ask to be thought of by you? Shall our names be mentioned in your secret places? Will you speak to God for us? Will you ever write us an encouraging word? O, we trust, that sometimes you will recollect that there is a brother across the ocean that is working as a servant of Jesus, and that you will help him with your prayers. Our address is 10 Warwick Lane, London, England.

And now, by the time this appears in print we shall be swiftly gliding towards home, where we expect to find that our God has proved a kind protector of our loved ones, and that through His constancy they are well. Farewell! We wave our hand and say, Farewell! Good-bye, receding hills! Adieu, green shorelands! Finally, brethren, farewell!

"Out on the ocean sailing,"

RESIGNATION.

To the Advent Christian Church, Hammond Street, Providence, R. I.:—

DEAR BRN. AND SRS. IN CHRIST:—Having been called by a unanimous vote on your part to become your pastor in the year 1875, yours, with other calls previously and subsequently received, were taken into a prayerful consideration, and after much thought and sincere invocation for heavenly guidance, we concluded that it might be in harmony with the Divine Mind for us to accept and locate among you; accordingly we moved to your beautiful city, called Providence, a name indicative of divine protection; and now, after a brief pastorate among you, I deem it expedient to sever my pastoral connection; and in doing so, would commend you to God and the word of his grace, which is able to build you up and give you a seat among them that are sanctified. I hereby tender to you this my resignation, as your pastor, to take effect on and after this date.

A. W. SIBLEY.

Providence, R. I., Sept. 27th, 1876.

Whereas, Elder A. W. Sibley having been Pastor of the Advent Christian Church, Hammond Street, of this city, one year, and his labors as Pastor having closed for the present with us, therefore,

Resolved, That we heartily give him this Testimonial, recommending him as an able minister of the gospel of Christ to any and all churches where duty may direct; and one that is worthy of the fullest confidence.

J. W. LAKE, Church Clerk.

P. S. Bro. Sibley will supply the desk for the present by request of the church.

TRUSTING IN GOD.

L. B. WEAVER.

"Trust in the Lord, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily shalt thou be fed."—PSALMS 37: 3.

The above lines have given me far more comfort and consolation, and helped me to trust in the Lord far more than any words of mine can express. Oftentimes when passing through the testing process, and things looked dark around, that passage of Scripture has come to mind so forcibly that it seemed to take all the darkness and gloom away. I have felt to praise God that we could trust in the Lord at all times. When worn, weary and tried, I always "Take it to the Lord in prayer," and tell him all my needs. He knows all about it before I tell him; yet he has told us to ask for the things we need, and when in actual want I went to him, alone in my room, and poured out my whole heart to him. I was strengthened, comforted and encouraged. Jesus, I was sure, heard my petition, and it seemed to me whispered, "I'll never leave nor forsake thee."

In my room hangs two mottoes, presents to me from dear ones; one is, "Give us this day our daily bread," and under it "The Lord will provide." I opened my eyes from praying, and they rested upon those two mottoes. I said, "I believe it. I know it. Blesed be his dear name forever more." I did rest and trust in the Lord; for I had no one else to look to for help. Not a penny only as Jesus sends it. Nothing only as Jesus provides. In this extremity even I could rest and trust, feeling all was working for my best and eternal good.

I lay here alone, praising God for his wonderful goodness to me during all the years of suffering and pain, when I heard little footsteps. They came to my room bringing a letter for "auntie dear." I took it, eagerly opening it, not once thinking what it contained, but to my joy and surprise out dropped a bill. I could hardly believe my eyes, it was so unexpected. Five dollars! I looked again. Was it possible? I looked to see who had been so kind to me in my deepest necessity. No name was attached, but a cheering letter dated Laconia, N. H., commencing,—Sr. Weaver, I feel as though the Lord would have me send you five dollars; and when the Lord says Give, I always feel best to obey." And then telling me—"If you get this letter please say, through the Crisis, Five dollars from one that loves God and is striving to keep his commandments."

To the dear one who sent it I would say, I can never express my deep thankfulness for your gift. It came in a time when I so much needed it. I pray God to bless and reward the giver.

North Dana, Mass.

WONDERTUL RELIEF!

I visited Bro. M. Batchelor when in New Bedford, two weeks since, and found him in such an improved state of health that I could but thank the Lord for his wonderful recovery thus far. He assured me that he gained ten pounds in twenty days. He exhibited "Holman's fever and ague and liver pad," which he wore certain days, and says it did wonders for him, and will relieve if not cure every case of liver complaint with its disease destroying agencies. No taking of medicine. Only wear the "medicated pad," which costs but two dollars, and may be obtained of him. This is wonderful if true, and should be known, for it is within the reach of the suffering poor.

YORK CO. A. C. CONFERENCE.

We unhesitatingly pronounce the quarterly session of this Conference, held at South Hiram, Me., Sept. 21st, and 24th, the best that we have enjoyed since its organization. Each and all of our meetings—social, preaching, and business—were blest of God, and greatly enjoyed by the large number of saints who were present.

For preachers we had: J. Gay, M. Stevens, G. H. Haines, C. H. Sweet, I. C. Wellcome, A. Stillings, D. W. Stevens and A. G. Davis, all of whom gave interesting and encouraging reports of labor.

In response to the call for church reports, we were informed that Biddeford, Bonny Eagle, East Hiram and Water Village had been enjoying a precious season of revival during the past three months. Hollis Centre and South Hiram reported an increasing interest in their meetings, South Windham and Freetown had experienced no perceptible change, Bar Mills was losing ground, and at Porter the interest was represented as being very low.

The following is a brief synopsis of the business transacted: After discussing various matters connected with the Evangelist Mission, it was decided to pay Bro. G. H. Haines twenty dollars, and C. H. Sweet ten dollars. The amount voted to Bro. Haines was immediately raised by collection. C. H. Sweet was paid out of the treasury. The people of South Hiram were thanked for the kind reception they gave us, and for the hospitable manner in which they entertained us.

It was voted to hold our next annual meeting at Biddeford, commencing Dec. 7th, 1876.

In the love-feast Sunday morning eighty warm, stirring testimonies were given. During the progress of the meeting a collection was taken up for Bro. Mark Stevens (to supply his pressing needs), which amounted to sixty-four dollars. The whole amount raised during this meeting by collections was ninety-one dollars.

C. H. Sweet, Secretary.

WAY NOTES.

L. BOUTELL.

I visited the Second Advent Church in Lynn last Sunday, and was glad to find them in working order. Their morning prayer and conference meetings are well attended. Their testimonies were blessed, showing that they are alive to the signs of this time, and striving to be in continual readiness for every good work, as well as for the approach of the Master.

Everything indicated that they were getting along well, under the great Shepherd of the sheep. Bro. Coburn, and a score of good, whole-souled workers make the meeting interesting, whether they are provided with a preacher or not. This is as it should be. I enjoyed the day with them, and pray that all our congregations might have the same earnest zeal for the blessed cause, and seek the lost ones, to bring them to the fold.

Correspondence.

From Bro. Kellaway.

Dear Bro. Couch:—Two or three brethren and sisters who read my description of the Springfield campmeeting, have congratulated me upon a donation of a thousand dollars that they imagine was taken up at that campmeeting to assist me in my English work. As there may be others having the same impression, I will thank you to let me say that I had not intended to write any such thing, nor do I think my letter, properly construed, will yield such sense. What I said was, that the Advent Mission Association held its meeting, at which Missionaries Bowman and Cargile represented its work and urged its claims. We, being present from England, were asked to say a few words about the state of the English mind. After which there was pledged or paid—not to us, but to the funds of the Advent Missionary Association,—over a thousand dollars. Please make this correction and oblige,

Your brother in Christ,

"Crisis" Office, Boston. W. Kellaway.

From Bro. E. McCulloch.

Dear Brn.:—We have just returned to our field of labor in Ohio, and find that new fields are opening for the spread of truth. What we do must be done quickly. We will gird on the armor anew for the conflict. May God give us wisdom and strength to be valiant for the truth, and make no compromise with the devil, or his system of theology. All for the Lord.

Huntley. Died of paralysis, at Waterbury, Vt. Sept. 3d, 1876, Sister Trephena Huntley, aged seventy years.

Also, of consumption of the blood, at Waterbury, Vt., Sept. 26th, 1876, Bro. Gilman Huntley, aged seventy-two years.

Thus from the same house, in the same month, these two saints of God are carried to the grave, to sleep side by side; lovely and pleasant in their lives, and in death not divided. Bro. Timothy Wheeler spoke gospel words at Sr. Huntley's funeral, the telegram being too late to bring me there, while I improved at Bro. H.'s interment, in the Congregational pulpit. They were affectionate parents, steady christians and worthy citizens. An honest man and a christian was the town's eulogy of our dear brother. Since 1843 they have been waiting for the Bridegroom, and cherished to the last an ardent devotion to the nearing King and kingdom. Their record is on high. They were helpers to the good cause, and we shall meet them again in the sweet by and by. May the mantle of the parents fall on the son and daughters, now bereaved, and may the Lord come quickly and claim his own. D. T. T.

Allen. In Honeoye, N. Y., Sept. 13th, 1876, Bro. Ira Allen, aged about eighty-seven years.

He was confined to his bed only a few days, but with a complication of diseases. Hope was entertained of his recovery until three days before his death. He realized his situation, and was perfectly calm in view of death. He had hoped to live till translation, but was resigned, trusting in the merits of Christ. Funeral services by Bro. N. H. Barbour, assisted by the Congregational minister, Bro. Day. Text, 1 Cor. 15: 44, "Sown a natural body, raised a spiritual body." We sorrow not as those without hope, but believe in a short time he will come forth in the likeness of his Redeemer. N. E. Withington.

Wells. In Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y., Sept. 1st, 1876, Sr. Emma J. Wells, daughter of Bro. and Sr. John F. Wescott, in the twentieth year of her age.

Sister Emma, though thus young, has passed under the dominion of death; and though a great sufferer, she manifested great patience and resignation to the will of her heavenly Father. The sustaining grace of God enabled her to say in the dying hour, "Glory to God, ma; it is just as good as it can be and be death. Weep not for me; I shall sleep but a little while." A large concourse of weeping friends gathered to carry her to her burial. The funeral services were held in the M. E. Church, and participated in by the pastor. A sermon was preached by the writer from words of her choice about two years before her death, found in Rev. 14: 13. May the deeply afflicted husband be comforted by the words of the text. Dear Emma,

"Sleep sweetly in Jesus till he bid thee arise
To meet him in glory descending the skies."

B. P. Stevens.

Strong. In Darien, Genesee Co., N. Y., Sept. 17th, 1876, Sr. Lepha A. Strong, wife of Bro. Milo Strong, and eldest daughter of the late Eld. Charles Crawford, Jr., aged thirty years.

Sr. Strong leaves a husband and three lovely children, and many relatives and friends to mourn their loss. All of these "sorrow not as others which have no hope;" for we feel confident that the dear departed sister sweetly "sleeps in Jesus;" hence we expect to see her again in the morning, clothed in immortal beauty. A large number of her neighbors and friends attended her funeral, Words of comfort were spoken by the writer.

C. W. Low.

Edgerly. In Rochester, N. H., Sept. 24th, Sr. Mary A., wife of Bro. Addison C. Edgerly, aged forty-six years.

In early life she gave her heart to the Savior. Few fall asleep having a better record of faithfulness to husband, children and God. While her family and a large circle of friends deeply feel her loss, they remember that the One she loved so much said, "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints," and expect to see her in the "morning." May God bless and save the dear children in answer to a mother's prayers.

J. A. F. Varney.

Martin. In Richville, Me., Sept. 5th, 1876, Earnest L. Martin, aged two years, nine months.

Thus death has robbed another household; another chair is vacant. The little shoes and soiled garments are laid aside. The winding sheet, the casket, the little grave, hold the jewel to-day. The welcome sound of the little feet and voice will be heard no more. But the parents, amid their sorrow and tears, are comforted with the hope that little Earnest will soon come again from the enemy's land. Jared Whitman.

Martin. In Richville, Me., Sept. 4th, 1876, Bro. Harmon C. Martin, aged thirty-one years.

In the death of Bro. Martin the church has lost a devoted christian laborer, an ardent lover of the last dispensational truths which are to prepare a world for the harvest day. He waits the resurrection of the just. He leaves a wife and two small children to mourn his loss. May God grant to keep the afflicted family and friends, and bring them to a glorious reunion. Jared Whitman.

Newton. In Albany, Me., Sept. 16th, 1876, after several weeks' sickness, Bro. John Newton, aged seventy-four years.

Bro. Newton was a native of Amesbury, Mass. He has long been serving God and waiting for his Son from heaven, to fulfill the promises made to Abraham and his seed. He rests in hope. The gospel hope sustains his lonely widow and bereaved children in this hour of sorrow. Funeral services at North Waterford, Long Church. Text selected by Bro. Newton,—Heb. 11: 13.

A. W. Taylor.

Brown. At Suwannee Shoals, Columbia Co., Fla., Sept. 11th, 1876, of congestion of the brain and bowels, Orrie J. Brown, aged nine years, five months, youngest daughter of Bro. John V. Brown.

She was a beautiful child, and loved by all who knew her. Her parents mourn, but not as others who have no hope. Words of comfort were spoken on the occasion by the writer, from Jer. 31: 15, 16, 17. We laid her away to await the last trump, when she will be raised in immortal beauty.

"Sleep on, Orrie, and take thy rest;
Lay thy head upon thy Savior's breast;
We loved thee well, but Jesus loves thee best."

Thos. J. Greene.

Bryant. In Hermon, Me., Aug. 23d, 1876, Robert Bryant, aged fifty-four years.

The subject of this notice was a kind and faithful husband and father, and a worthy citizen. Through his long distressing sickness he maintained great patience and an unwavering faith in the promises of the gospel of Jesus. He leaves a faithful and affectionate wife, and two dutiful and loving children to mourn their loss. He will be lamented by all who knew him.

A neighbor—J. K.

Smith. In Granby, Mass., Sept. 15th, 1876, of consumption, Sr. Susan L. Smith, only daughter of Austin and Mary Smith, aged twenty years.

She was baptized at the Springfield Campmeeting in 1869, by Bro. Enoch Morrill. She was steadfast to the end, giving glory to God. It was a heavenly feast to converse with her upon present peace and the coming glory. Words of comfort by the writer. Text, Rom. 8: 23.

[Writer's name not given.]

Strickland. In Palmer, Mass., Sept. 22nd, 1876, of tumor, Mrs. Frances A. Strickland, aged fifty-three years.

Sept. 19th an operation was performed to remove the tumor, but it was of such a nature that no human skill could remove it, and after much suffering she fell asleep in Jesus.

"Asleep in Jesus! blessed sleep,"
From which none ever wake to weep."

Words of comfort by the writer. Text, 1 Cor. 15: 37. [Writer's name not given.]

Esau. In Monson, Mass., Sept. 18th, 1876, of consumption, Dorcas Esau (colored), aged seventeen years.

Words of comfort by the writer. Text, Amos 4: 12,—"Prepare to meet thy God."

[Writer's name not given.]

Knowles. At East Concord, N. H., Sept. 14th, 1876, Sr. Susan R., wife of Bro. Lyman Knowles, aged fifty-one years.

Sr. Knowles was widely known and universally loved and respected. May the grace of God sustain the afflicted husband and sorrowing friends.

Notices.

South Boston.

The brethren in South Boston, believing in the near coming of Jesus and kindred truths, desiring to let their light shine, have leased a Hall corner of Dorchester and National Streets (close by Broadway), where they mean to have "the gospel of the kingdom" preached. They do not mean to ride, or allow hobby riding, but desire a place where the Lord's coming may be kept before the people. They desire the prayers and cooperation of all the lovers of the truth in Boston. Where there are more than three hundred thousand souls, there ought to be a place where those of "like precious faith" can meet together, and where these truths can be proclaimed unmixed with the traditions of men. Pray for this meeting. For the brethren, A. P. Moore.

New Hampshire Adv. Chris. Conference.

The next annual session of the New Hampshire Advent Christian Conference will be held with the church in Manchester, N. H., commencing Tuesday evening, Oct. 24th, and hold over the following Sunday. Our Constitution requires all our preachers to report personally or by letter. We wish all our churches to make an extra effort and send their quota of delegates. Each church is entitled to one delegate, and one additional one for every twenty-five members. Fare will be reduced on the Concord and Claremont and Northern Railroads as usual. Passengers will purchase their tickets on these roads of the conductors in the cars. Call for Conference Tickets.

Notice of reduction on other roads when heard from.

A. Ross, President.
C. H. Fletcher, Secretary.

Connecticut A. C. Conference.

The Lord willing the Connecticut A. C. Conference will be held at New Britain, commencing Wednesday evening, Oct. 18th, and continue over Sunday, Oct. 22nd. As this is the annual meeting, and officers are to be chosen, a full attendance is requested. The business session will begin Thursday, promptly at 10 o'clock A. M., and it is hoped may be finished the same day, that the remainder of the time be devoted to prayer, conference and preaching the Word of life. Pray that the blessing of the Lord may attend.

O. D. Woodruff, Secretary.

Hoosick Valley A. C. Conference.

It was voted at our July Quarterly Conference to hold our next Annual Conference for Oct. with Bro. Mathewson and the church at Castleton, Vt. It has been appointed to commence Wednesday evening, Oct. 25th, and continue its meetings over the following Sabbath. The election of officers, the reports of preachers and delegates from the churches, and other business of importance, comprise the order of business for these meetings; and it is very important that all the preachers of this Conference should be present, or at least be represented by letter; and it is also expected that all the churches will report by delegates, or letter. The chapel is only a short way from the depot, which stands at the junction of railroads from the South, East and West. Let all be prompt to attend the first meetings, as the first meeting for business will probably be on Thursday.

H. K. Flagg, Pres.

Notice.—There will be a meeting of the friends of Jesus and his truth on Rattle Snake Creek, Lincoln Co., Kansas, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 26th, and holding over the Sabbath. A movement will be made at the same time to form a conference of Christian Adventists. It is hoped that all of those interested in the spread of truth in Western Kansas will be present, and come ready to labor for the welfare of the cause.

Eld. J. S. Thorp.

Notice.—The Ohio State Advent Christian Conference will convene at Norwalk, Ohio, on Thursday, Oct. 26th, and continue over the following Sabbath. Let every church in the State be represented by delegates. Bro. Frank Burr is expected to be present.

A. I. Flaharty, Secretary.

A Card.

If there are any churches who desire to secure a pastor, and feel that they are able to support a man in that capacity, I would say I am now ready to correspond with them. I have sold out my interest in The Biblical Messenger, so I am now free from the entanglements of publishing, and have nothing to hinder me from devoting my entire time to the interest of some church. My health will not admit of my traveling as I have done for a few months in the past. If I move this fall, I prefer to do so before cold weather sets in. Wm. C. Stewart.

Exeter, N. H., Sept. 14th.

The Hoosick Valley A. C. Conference is appointed for Wednesday evening, Oct. 25th, at Castleton, Vt., and continue over the Sabbath. More next week. H. K. Flagg, President.
Robert Candlish, Sec.

Quarterly Meeting.—The first Quarterly Meeting of the Minona District A. C. C., Minnesota, will be held at Utica, Minona Co., Oct. 27th, to commence at seven o'clock P. M., and hold over Lord's day. Peter Mitson, Sec.

Notice.

Notice.—To all whom it may concern, and especially to the German brethren in Jesus, greeting: Dear brethren in one faith, as the time is at hand that our beloved Master will return to establish his kingdom on the earth and destroy all the kingdoms and ungodly men of this world, and as there are thousands of German people in this country without being warned of the great and terrible day to come; and whereas, our beloved brother L. Reimer is compelled to give up the publication of the "Bible Searcher," that worthy medium by which hundreds had a true warning; therefore we are resolved to hold a General Conference October 26th, at the German Advent Church, corner Chicago Avenue and Chase street, to consider these matters, and take steps to organize a Home Mission for our German friends; also to take steps to resume the issue of the "Bible Searcher." For this purpose we appeal to every one who loves Jesus and the blessed truth, and has the love of their German countrymen at heart, to respond from east and west, from north and south, by letter or personally, and state how much you can do to aid the cause of our beloved Master and for a perishing world. Brethren, let us come together as one man to this meeting. We can obtain lodging for all that come. We desire each church to send a delegate with power to act. Brethren, do quickly what is to be done, for time is short. Jesus is coming soon, and will reward us according to our works. Our English brethren, who are interested in our German Mission, are cordially invited to take part, either by letter or otherwise. Address Eld. Chas. Koier, 229 Noble street, Chicago, Ill. By vote of the church.

Chas. Koier, Johann Kulicke, Johann Protz, Church Officers.

Conference.—There will be a Conference, if the Lord will, at East Palermo, Me., to commence Friday, Oct. 27th, at two o'clock P. M., and continue over Sunday. Let all come prepared to work for the salvation of the perishing, and the building up of the saints. Homes will be provided for all. Call on B. R. Tibbitts, Rufus Colby, Mrs. Lorana Chadwick. G. W. Weeks.
Jer. Carr.

Notice.—Teere will be a business meeting of the stockholders of the New East Maine Mission Tent, held at the school-house at East Palermo, Saturday, at four o'clock P. M., Oct. 28th.

Wm. H. Wing, Secretary.

The church in Wakefield is supplied with preaching the first and third Sundays of each month, by Elder B. Finney. Brethren wishing to appoint for either of the remaining Sundays, please correspond with G. R. Tyzzer, or B. Finney.

TWO NEW TRACTS.

We have just published two new Tracts.

"THE DIVINE ARTILLERY."

BY D. T. TAYLOR.

This is a valuable tract, addressed to theologians and thinkers, critics, Bible students and ministers, concerning what the Lord has furnished to be preached to sinners as motives and inducements to repentance, and to saints to induce activity and endurance. The Bible hope is clearly and forcibly stated. Price 50 cts. per one hundred, or 15 cts. per dozen by mail.

"THE FEARFUL OUTLOOK."

BY I. C. WELLCOME.

This attempts to show those who are anxious, perplexed and fearful about what is coming on the earth, that the wars and preparations of the last thirty years, the present distress of nations, and struggle with Popery and Turkey, will result in our Lord's return and the destruction of the nations. This will be read by all. Price $1.00 per hundred, or 25 cts. per dozen, by mail.

Address I. C. Wellcome, Yarmouth, Me.

☞ For sale as above at the Crisis Office.

Appointments.

☞ Appointments must be received as early as TUESDAY MORNING (as our paper goes to press about noon) to insure insertion for the coming week.

☞ The following Resolution was passed at the late meeting of the A. C. P. Society:—

"Resolved, That no appointments be published in the Crisis henceforth for persons unknown to the Editorial Board (by which is understood the Editors, Editorial Committee, and Business Agent), unless satisfactory reference shall be given.

The Committee appointed by the Adv. Chris. Association, at its last Annual Meeting, to advise with the Editorial Board "in relation to the publication in the World's Crisis of the appointments of men unworthy of recognition as preachers," having attended to the duty assigned them, recommended, and the Editorial Board have adopted, and ordered to be published, the following resolution:—

"Resolved, That when the Editorial Board is properly notified by any of our Churches, or Ministers, or responsible persons, by a written allegation that a certain minister, or ministers, lack moral character, that they be instructed to notify such minister, or ministers, of the information received, as a reason for withholding their appointments till after a proper trial and acquittal."

All communications in relation to this matter should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board—Geo. T. Adams, Boston, Mass.

JESUS, KEEP ME.

LIZZIE ORESTY.

As I sit alone in the evening,
  And the shadows begin to fall,
When the day with its weary striving
  Welcomes night as rest to all;
I think of the pleading Savior,
  As he knelt in the garden bower,
And prayed for his sleeping disciples
  Who could not watch one hour.

That prayer has been passed through ages,
  And repeated times unknown
By the weary and heavy laden,
  As they sighed for 'home, sweet home."
And now as times grow harder,
  And perils faster come,
May we ever pray with the Savior—
  "Not my will but thine be done."

Dear Father, keep us from sleeping;
  We must work ere the day is past,
To win souls for the angel's reaping,
  To be gathered as jewels at last.
Arouse us still more to action,
  To battle this world of sin,
That we may hear at thy blest coming—
  "Well done! thou may'st enter in."

We want to be more like Jesus,
  To be humble, gentle and mild;
To be patient, kind and trusting,
  To become as a little child.
O, lead us in temptation,
  For we feel we are very weak;
Guide us safe through every trial
  'Till we reach the golden street.

Until the bride is safe in the kingdom,
  From harrassing care and doubt,
With Christ our Redeemer and Bridegroom,
  And the world forever shut out;
Where we'll find sweet rest for the weary,
  In the mansions made without hands,
And the river of Life flows sweetly
  In that bright and better land.

THOUGHTS BY NIGHT AND DAY.

C. COLGROVE.

God has sweetly shut us in, this dark September night, and so curtained us around with clouds and rain, so enclosed us with friendly blackness, that, warned of the headlong speed of weeks and years that stop for no man's bidding, we would venture on an hour's talk for edification's sake, with those who wait for the King. What a happy answer of the good old German, who in his tottering old age declared that once he was a worker for God, but now he had promoted him to be a waiting servant instead of a working servant. So be of good cheer, all you who, though unable to work, are yet able to wait.

Ah! I am glad it is as well with us as it is. Our heart-beating, our breathing, our hearing, seeing and thinking are still preserved. We can walk and read, and talk and pray. How blessed it is to have secret communion with God! Often and often I can do nothing but lie at God's feet. I would rather be thus than be owner and master of millions. If God will only know and notice me, if he will secretly bless me, it is the germ of heaven.

God says, "Surely I have heard Ephraim bemoaning himself." Yes, yes, when David says, "Let the King hear us when we call," the King does hear. And now I imagine there have been many thousand Ephraims bemoaning, naturally self-willed, susceptible of good under divine training, but perverse and fond of freedom, and much given to abusing the freedom. What a gift to man this gift of freedom of action. Dangerous, and wonderful, and terrible, admitting tremendous possibilities of good or evil. And sooner or later Ephraim sees how unfit he is to manage absolutely this awful though exalted trust, and so he puts himself trembling though contumacious, strong though weak, hard yet relenting, contrary but submissive, difficult but still dutiful, into God's hands. Smarting and sensitive with the ordeal of divine discipline, sore with whip-strokes, he cries, "thou hast chastened me and I was chastened." Yes, God! Do whip when Ephraim needs it, though Ephraim does dread it. There is love in God's face when he whips, and love in the arm that strikes, and Ephraim has got good sense enough to see it, and God's wounds are good wounds, and honestly dealt, and healthy, though they start sweat and tears. I would rather be whipped by such a good God, than kissed by a treacherous friend.

Ephraim knows he is like a bullock, hard to break, but God can turn him over into a good ox. What a host of fooolish young steers have threatened to run themselves to death rather than pull in a yoke. But good God! thou knowest what is best, and thou art patient with man's bad and impetuous and wilful manners!

I tell you what it is, if ever there was a prayer any poor tired and crying and self-convicted creature ever prayed, it is Ephraim's prayer, going up from a heart in trouble, and half turned to water with sighs and sorrows. Hear Ephraim's prayer! It is so well feathered with sincerity and impelled upward with such force of conscious necessity, it fairly wins its way, arrow-like, to the mark. "Turn me, and I shall be turned, for thou art the Lord my God."

Ephraim has got it right! Gentle, but Almighty power! The thoughts of Ephraim may run on about this wise.

"I have learned one secret, and that is that I must have God—he is mine, and I cannot get along without him. I must have perfect submission, perfect re-construction, devotion and consolidation of my whole being by his power, and for his glory. I hate the expedients of men. I hate their shallow, time-serving, world-worshiping and man-magnifying nonsense. Men act like insects buzzing about a blaze. And I, Ephraim, I know I am foolish from the day I was born, fugitive, contumacious, unreasonable, undutiful. I thank God I know he can turn me wholly and totally to himself, and that is what I want and I must have."

Now hear him again: "Surely after that I was turned, I repented." O, he will never have done deploring his follies, for he says, "after I was instructed I smote upon my thigh." Who never did that, thinking of some act of commission or ommission puzzling and paining his retrospective mind? Many a man has given himself a powerful whack, as recollection and conviction have laid hold on him with a stout grip. In fact there is no laying down the experience of a just self-reproach any more graphically than Ephraim does it. "I was ashamed, yea, even confounded, because I did bear the reproach of my youth." But there, now, we have another sight, even the compassion of God. Yea, the very God of tenderness, who has seen all this, and said nothing. No doubt there is some strange world in the universe, and there must be some high wall, with some rare gate, and looking through, you may view the most wonderful expanse of sea, clear, pure, beautifully blue, and with such an enchantment in it, you are filled with astonishment and sweet emotion, and when you ask, "What sea is that?" the angel says, "The sea of God's love."

Now God's love is most choice, and marvellous, and great towards this earth and the sons of men, made of dust. Hear the heart of God speak. "Is Ephraim my dear son? Is he a pleasant child?" An affecting way of interrogation, more eloquent than assertion; much as a tender-hearted mother would do, whose love is too precious and too deep for affirmation. So God loves Ephraim, for says he, "since I spake against him, I do earnestly remember him still." How much some people think of being remembered by their friends! It is a joy and a happiness greatly coveted. And then to be earnestly remembered! God does it. "Therefore my bowels are troubled for him, I will surely have mercy upon him saith the Lord." That is the crown of Ephraim's glory.

Happy, happy Ephraim! Let his heart leap, let his eyes dance, let his brain and nerves thrill with ecstacy. To Ephraim the trees look like the million pipes of a great organ, the sun in heaven is full of still and holy mirth, the land is one laugh of happiness, and ocean smiles grandly. When God forgives, what a forgiveness it is! When he loves truly, aches, loads, groans and cryings are gone, gone, and good-bye to the whole troop! Who would not exclaim—"Speak the word, Power resistless, and make thy longing children immortal." (In a parenthesis, let me just say, there is a great stir in Great Britian, a stir with some power, on the question of the identity of the Anglo-Saxons with the lost ten tribes of Israel.)

Still the rain comes down. How willing we are to have the rain pour when every thing is housed! So how glad will they be, to see the royal majesty of the heavens when all is ready with them! These are stirring times. There are great avenues to knowledge. Research is busy on questions connected with the majestic purposes of God. The Centennial Exhibition with all its glory, is but a collection of splendid toys, compared with the grandeur of that programme, in which whoever may share, shall be supremely blest. Truly instructed people are looking earnestly to the East. O, earth, red with the blood of the poor murdered Bulgarians, how unutterably thou needest a restoring hand! How deep have pain and woe and bitterness struck into the very core and heart of created things! If earth had sense and feeling, she must be like a wounded behemoth, pierced with a mighty dart, or a monster of the sea, harpooned and writhing in mortal pain.

Still the rain comes pouring down. I hear the rain and the wind, and the clock-ticking, and with an ejaculated "thank God" for shelter and light within, as well as for darkness and storm without, and with a kind good-night to all the readers of the Crisis, I shut up my pen and ink and yield every thing to silence and rest.

BIRTH SURPRISES.

H. F. CARPENTER.

I notice of late that all our papers teem with spirited articles upon the "new birth," and, lest the subject become stale for want of variety, permit me to introduce my "surprises" at what I have read.

I am surprised to hear brethren ask for information, and then proceed to state their own opinion with a positiveness that at once almost defies instruction.

I am surprised that any one shou'd speak of a mere resurrection from the dead as the "new birth," or as a birth in any scriptural sense at all, while no scripture teaches it, and some texts refuse to bow to such a thought. If to be raised from the dead is to be born, then the first person raised from the dead would have been the first born; but so far is this from being true, that while many were raised from the dead before Christ was raised, no one was ever born from the dead till Christ was raised, because he was the first born from the dead. No other argument is needed to show that a resurrection of itself is denied the name of birth in the Bible, than this simple fact stated.

Neither can we evade the force of the thought by claiming that first-born signifies chief-born, as some have done; for the original Greek for first-born occurs nine times in the New Testament, and in every instance plainly refers to priority of birth and not to pre-eminence. Christ was called the first-born from the dead because the first raised from the dead to an immortal life. It is the change from mortality to immortality that constitutes the "birth" at the resurrection, and not the mere fact of a resurrection itself.

I am surprised that men have not seen the mistake just pointed out as the fruitful source of error. One error leads to or necessitates another. If a mere resurrection be a birth, then no one can be raised unless previously begotten; hence the denial by some of the resurrection of the wicked, in the face of Jesus' plain statement that all in the graves shall come forth; a statement strangely guarded against the limited sense of the word "all" sometimes met with in the Bible, by dividing those included in it into evil-doers and good-doers, thus embracing the wicked as well as the righteous. A man then may have a resurrection according to Christ's teaching without a previous begetting of the Holy Spirit; but a man cannot be born from the dead, changed from the mortal to immortal unless led by the Spirit of God in this life.

I am surprised that the leading idea of birth, used as a metaphor, is not more strictly and forcibly applied. A birth introduces to a new life. That which does not introduce one to a new life is not a birth. A resurrection does not necessarily introduce us to a new life, since one may be raised to the same life had before. The child raised by the prophet, the widow's son and Lazarus raised by Christ, were not raised to a new life, but simply restored to the old one; hence they were not born from the dead, else Christ would not have been the first-born. The wicked are not raised to a new life, but raised to a mortal life, such as they had before in kind though not in circumstance. The change that takes place in the righteous, at the resurrection, introduces them to a new life, a glorious immortal life; hence it can be properly called a birth. Conversion introduces one to a new life also, and that too can be properly called, in metaphor, a birth. In the Bible, therefore, we have both conversion and the change at the resurrection called birth; the one, the introduction of the inner man to a new life; the other, the introduction of the outer man to a new life.

I am surprised that men have not noticed the fact that God uses a distinct Greek word for each of these two great changes in a christian. When the latter change is referred to, the Greek word tickto in some of its combinations is used, as in Rom. 8: 29, Rev. 1: 5; when the former change is referred to, genao is used, as in 1 John 2: 29; 3: 9; 4: 7; 5: 1.

Some may think that 1 John 3: 9, belongs to the future life; but both Christ and his apostle James used equally strong expressions upon speaking of christians in this life. Others still may think that Heb. 1: 5; 5: 5, refer to Christ's resurrection, but Christ was called "begotten son" before his resurrection. See John 3: 16. The two great changes—conversion and glorification, each of which are called, in metaphor, a birth, are thus kept quite distinct.

I am, therefore, surprised when I see brethren stoutly advocating the glorification birth as the resurrection, basing their case in John 3: 3, 7, when the verb used is genao, the very verb which throughout the New Testament is used to designate a christian's experience in this life, as in 1 John 2: 29; 4: 7; 5: 1. Make the glorious change at the resurrection as blessed a birth as you please, but do not use John 3: 3, to preach it from; go find a text where tickto or rather prototikos its derivative is found, and then work away.

I am happily surprised to find the disputants on either side of this blessed question, both right and both wrong, like two ancient knights who disputed about a shield. To say that there is nothing called a birth at the resurrection is wrong; to say that there is nothing at conversion called a birth is equally wrong in the light of Scripture. To say there is a birth at the conversion is right; to say there is a birth at the resurrection is also right.

Yes, both right and both wrong. If any choose to call the first change a begetting, very well. Remember, however, that John 3: 3 is the text that uses the very verb which signifies begotten; so keep that text to preach conversion or the begotten condition from.

I shall be most agreeably surprised if what I have written changes any settled opinion, but hoping to aid some humble student, I submit my "birth supprises."

COMFORTS OF PROPHECY.

H. PRATT.

Prophecy forewarns of coming events, and points out the way of safety in time of danger. The especially interested class are those that live in the time of its fulfillment; as in the case of the flood. No class can be so interested in that event as that class who lived at that time. But the special anxiety, to be salutary, must precede the event. Hence Noah, moved with fear, prepared an ark for the saving of his house, being warned of God of things not seen as yet.

The prophecy of Jeremiah, 31st chap., concerning the children that should be slain by Herod, was to give comfort after the affliction. "Refrain thy voice from weeping and thine eyes from tears; for there is hope in thine end that thy children shall come again from the land of the enemy." So in the case of the death of believers by any cause. Paul said to the Thessalonians, "I would not have you ignorant concerning them that are asleep, that ye sorrow not as those that have no hope. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words."

The false position entertained by the mass of Christendom, of going to heaven at death, robs this prophecy of all its sublimity and comfort, and leaves nothing in its place but the imagination of tradition. No wonder Paul should say, "Despise not prophesying." To reject those prophecies that are applicable to all ages, like those touching the future of the dead, or touching events being fulfilled in our own day, is to reject the light wherewith God designs to benefit us, and grope our way in darkness or blindness.

The prophetic light was never more needful than now, and if people in the past have failed for lack of knowledge, what chance can there be for those now who are "willingly ignorant."

The prophecy concerning the coming of the Bridegroom and the virgins going out to meet him with lamps trimmed and burning, ensures readiness, and brings comfort to those who have obeyed and have been whole hearted in this great Advent movement; and like Noah condemns the world for not taking heed to the sure word of prophecy.

My brethren, if this movement is of God this conclusion is inevitable.

QUARTERLY MEETING REPORT.

The first Quarterly Meeting for the current year, in the Blue Earth district of Minnesota, was held at Alma City, in Waseca Co., commencing Saturday P. M., Sept. 2d, 1876.

At three P. M. sermon by C. B. Fellows, from Eph. 4: 30, after which the Conference was called to order by the President, M. Welcome. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The report of the Treasurer was read and adopted.

Report of ministers. M. Welcome: I have preached every Sabbath to good congregations. A deep interest has been felt, but no conversions. We have had a good Sunday school, numbering from forty to fifty. I have accepted a call from the north part of the State, and therefore ask for a letter of recommendation and dismission from this Quarterly Conference. E. K. Smith: I have been lecturing in the city where I reside upon the prophecies, from a large chart. Have had good congregations and the best of attention. Charles B. Fellows was received as a member of this Conference, and received a license to preach the Word of truth; said license to hold good until the next session of the Annual Conference, and subject to its approval. Eld. M. Welcome's request for a letter was granted by vote of the Conference.

Election of officers: E. K. Smith, President; C. B. Fellows, Secretary. The Secretary was instructed to send the minutes to the Times and Crisis for publication. On motion the Conference adjourned to the call of the President In the evening sermon by Bro. Welcome, from James 1: 27.

Sunday at ten A. M. met for love-feast. At eleven, preaching by Bro. Welcome, text, John 14: 12. At half-past two P. M., Bro. E. K. Smith hung up a large chart and spoke from the eighth and nineth chapters of Daniel. It was very interesting. At seven P. M. a goodly number partook of the Lord's Supper. At eight o'clock Bro. Smith spoke from the eleventh of Daniel, showing that we are in close proximity to the judgment. The house was full and a deep interest felt. This Quarterly Session has been a profitable one.

BORROWED TIME.

H. MUNGER.

I am this day, Sept. 27th, 1876, seventy years old; and have just got up from a month's sickness, the first I ever had. On looking back time seems as a dream; look-forward it looks very short. The signs of old age are sure at seventy to all; the signs of old earth's dissolution is to me just as sure.

When I first heard that the Lord was soon coming it made a deep impression on my mind. This was in 1838; farther back than many of my brethren have an experience in this truth. I have watched the progress of this people and their work, this dispensational truth, up to this time—nearly forty years. Bro. Miller, the old honest farmer, shook this continent and nearly the whole world with his earthquake of truth. It was the work of God, for no man could do this work of himself. On looking back I recollect the great argument against his position was, He is an old farmer. This was sufficient for many. They could not receive truth from such a source. They thought the honors of the world of more value than the cross and truth, and they resisted their conviction of this doctrine being the truth.

But his being a farmer had no effect on my mind. I saw that God began the world with farming. Adam was a farmer; Abraham and his sons were all farmers; his grandsons—the twelve patriarchs—were all farmers; and Joseph raised more corn than any man living. Moses was of no use in God's cause until he left the schools of Egypt and went to learn farming with Jethro; then God called him to see a burning bush, and set him to work immediately in his cause. Elisha also was a farmer, ploughing with twelve yoke of oxen when Elijah called him to work for God. He made a sacrifice of one yoke and started. Look at the history of the work of the man of God—Elisha, the prophet. We see God has taken farmers to do most of the great work man has ever done. So we find Bro. Miller in the line of God's choosing. Looking over his history I find forty-three of the most prominent ministers, within one hundred miles of him, after examining his works, wrote him that they could endorse his exposition of the Scriptures, especially the prophecies. This speaks well for the old farmer as a Bible student. It is just forty years since the forty-three ministers acknowledged Bro. Miller their superior in the Scriptures.

But there are crosses connected with all dispensational truth, and that is why so many shun to declare what they do believe. I have lived to see many refuse to let their light shine, Jonah like, and got into the whale's belly. I fear many will not fare as well as he did.

Now brethren, whether on borrowed time or not, let us who have seen this light not shun the cross. Let every thing else give place to this truth, and a preparation which it will produce, if obeyed, to meet the Lord. My time is now lent, and I mean to be faithful and do what I can for God's cause.

PSEUDO ADVENTISTS.

L. C. KERR.

There are people among us who lay claim to the principles of Adventism, being fully convinced of their correctness, who, like Nicodemus, prefer to talk of them in secret, or "by night," when there is no one of opposite views by to hear what they believe, or from whom they might expect persecution. They will talk and argue zealously for the truths held by Adventists when they meet with persons who believe them, but they are very careful to know who they are talking to, so that they do not state their views to some one who would offer opposition.

They are so ashamed of what they believe, that they do n't want their friends and neighbors to know it. With them it is private property. When they are among Adventists they are Adventists; but when among other denominations you would not know that they had ever heard of such a people.

The truths we hold as a people are so plain and simple, and of such interest, that they relish them; but their relish for popularity and the praise of men is so much greater that it is no task for them to lay them aside whenever occasion calls for it.

We are told in the Scriptures that tribulation and persecution will attend the Word of God (Matt. 13: 21); but these gentlemen prefer having it in peace; hence their caution to conceal it from the public. They are citizens in war, and soldiers in peace. If truth were only popular they would not be ashamed of it. But as it is, only a few humble Adventists advocating it, they do not want to be found among such a despised band. They are not willing to bear reproof for their Master. They seem to have made that one of the conditions upon which they endorsed the views; that they would stick to it as long as it could escape persecution; but whenever it shall meet with opposition and the disapprobation of the masses, then they are silent upon it. Thus the cause of our dear Master suffers at the hands of its pretended friends.

What will be the doom of such people when Jesus comes? I think he will say to them, "You were ashamed to confess me before men, and now I am ashamed of you." They are like Judas Iscariot, they sell their Lord and his truth for worldly aggrandizement. The love of God they do not know. They have learned his truth, but sell it for a mess of pottage. Better for such never to have known the way of life, than, after they have known it, to turn away from it.

DELIVER us from the man whose tongue never made a mistake, and who keeps a note of the fact.

THE NEW WAYS IN RELIGION.

I. K. LOMBARD.

To-day I've been to meeting, John,
  To hear the parson preach,
But how they've changed since we were young,
  In all they do and teach.
They say that we're old-fashioned, John,
  And don't care what we say;
But my old heart can see and feel
  Whene'er they change God's way.

When we were young the world was gay,
  And loved to make a show;
But christians walked the narrow way,
  And could not with them go;
But oh, how things have changed since then,
  The two ways are but one;
They all go in together now,
  And say they've "lots of fun."

When we were young they used to meet
  In our old kitchen room,
And sometimes in the school-house near,
  If many chanced to come;
And Eld. B——, that good old man,—
  I'll ne'er forget his voice,—
How faithfully he dealt with sin,
  And how the saints rejoiced.

But now they meet in palaces,
  So gorgeous, rich and nice;
And every thing that draws the crowd,
  They'll have at any price;
With cushioned seats and carpetings,
  And every thing so gay,
The poor can hardly gather there,—
  They've not the scrip to pay.

The minister, like some vain fop,
  Stands up and reads his prayers;
And how it pained my heart to-day
  To see him "put on airs."
He did not preach, he only read
  An essay in Christ's voice;
No heart was touched, no tears were shed,
  And not a soul rejoiced.

He thought Christ's voice was musical,
  Melodious, rich and clear,
And thus it sounded pleasantly
  Upon the listening ear.
I heard some say as they passed out,
  "Wasn't that a splendid thing!"
And others said, "That can't be beat
  By even Dr. Tyng."

O can it be that such vain fops
  Are called to speak for God,
Who feed the church on worldly slops,
  But never preach his Word?
I thought if Christ himself were there,
  We'd see some sighs and tears;
"Ye pharisees and hypocrites,"
  Would thunder in their ears.

I thought of our old kitchen times,
  When servants sent by God
Would warn us all so faithfully
  To love and keep his Word.
They did not wink at worldliness,
  As ministers now do;—
O give me back the olden ways,
  I do not like the new.

A hoarse machine now grinds their tunes,
  A godless choir joins in,
But neither one can tell of joys
  That come from pardoned sin.
They sung God's praise when we were young
  Because their hearts were blest;
A well-paid choir now chants their songs,
  And so the church has rest.

My heart was pained to see the show
  They tried to make in dress,
All finified from top to toe,
  And some looked like distress.
With frills and flounces, tucks and crimps,
  They seemed almost deformed;
And many had the Grecian bend,
  With camel's hump all formed.

They noticed my plain calico,
  And thought my bonnet "odd";
And frequently they smiled, I know,
  But I had peace with God.
I thought of times when we were young,
  When all the proud and gay
Would make the christians dress their song,
  And jist them every way.

'Tis sad, when all the world runs mad
  In foolish, vain display,
To see the church so fast and glad
  To ape them every way.
The church has changed since former days
  In all they say and do;
But give me back the olden ways,
  I do not like the new.

They're strangely bent on pleasure now;
  They meet most every week
To have some sort of lively spree,
  That worldlings love and seek;
But whether 'tis a festival,
  Or sociable, or fair,
Or Christmas tree, or other scrape,
  The church will all be there.

With lotteries and grab-bags,
  And other tricks and games,
They make God's house a den of thieves
  Without a blush of shame!
Lord of the temple, come with zeal,
  As thou didst come of yore,
With scourge in hand to make them feel,
  Before their day is o'er.

They all attend such gatherings,
  But when they meet to pray,
There are but few who venture out,
  And they've not much to say.
They lightly speak of former days,
  When christian men were true;
But give me back the olden ways,
  I do not like the new.

What means this strange departure, John,
  And when will they amend?
God's day of wrath is hastening on,
  When all earth's shams will end.
That awful hour is drawing near;
  Its signs are gathering fast;
The Judge of all will soon be here
  To scrutinize the past.

Our record then will be made known,
  Our habits, thoughts and aims;
And some must hear from God's own throne—
  "You've brought my cause to shame."
Ah! then what grief and sore regret
  Will reach them in that day,
Because they've chosen worldliness,
  And scoffed at God's old way.

HERESY.

The following is a letter written Bro O. F. Goodwin, of Fort Mills, S. C., giving an account of the trial of Elder G. D. Sherrill, of Lenoir, N. C., before a Council of Baptist ministers.—ED.

BRO. O. F. GOODWIN:—Dear Sir,—In answer to your request that I should write you an account of my trials and examination before the presbytery, which took place on the Second Saturday in April, I send you the following statement. The presbytery consisted of four Baptist ministers, whose names I forbear to give. The church assembled with said preachers (a number of other ministers present) and read the following:

"The church complaining of G. D. Sherrill charge him with, 1st, heresy. Specification 1st. In that he has embraced the doctrines of the Adventists, or Socinians. 2nd. In that he denies the immortality of the soul. 3rd. In that he denies the eternal duration of future punishment. 4th. A history of the case. (This would be too long to give here. It is nearly a fair statement of the complaint the church has had against me for over two years in regard to the doctrines in question.)

The presbytery organized by electing one of their number Moderator, and I was then turned over to them for examination. The Moderator read me the charge, and asked what I had to say. I answered that upon the presumption that the brethren knew my faith, I could only say that "after the manner which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers; believing all things which are written in the law and the prophets." In reply to the first specification I answered that, as to the Socinians I knew but little, what I have read about them being generally the account of their enemies, a very unfair method of learning the faith or character of any people; neither was I well informed as to the doctrines of the Adventists; but as concerning the soon coming of Jesus to take "to himself his great power and reign," and the duty of christians to live daily in expectation of that great event, I was an Adventist—would be ashamed to be anything else.

To the second I answered that I did not believe in the common orthodox view of immortality; that such belief is unscriptural, and has been the means of great deception and dangerous error; that the saints will receive immortality at the resurrection; the wicked will never have it; that the dead "know not anything" till the voice of God in the seventh trump shall rouse them to life or damnation, according to their works here.

To the third I answered that I believed the eternal duration of future punishment; but I did not believe never-ending misery in conscious life; but that in the flames of hell they will suffer what God sees they deserve, and pass back into death from whence there is no redemption or resurrection, and thus suffer an everlasting punishment.

This is but a synopsis, the examination being somewhat long and tedious; many texts being given me as objections to my views, all of which I answered as I understood them.

The presbytery then retired, but returned in a few minutes, and reported—"We find Geo. D. Sherrill unorthodox in the Baptist faith." Upon this the church demanded my credentials, which I surrendered. This ordeal, from first to last, has severely tried my faith, but I hope strengthened it. I have not surrendered the Bible, nor ceased trying to preach it, though I have no authority from my church. I am glad I have your acquaintance, and hope to see you among us often. O! my dear brother, pray for me. I feel willing to live very humble at the feet of Jesus all my days if I may but hear the "Well done" at last.

G. D. SHERRILL.

THE PROMISED INHERITANCE.

T. L. WAUGH.

"For ye have need of patience, that after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise"—HEB. 10: 36.

In the succeeding verse the reason is given: "For yet a little while, and he that shall come, will come, and will not tarry." In Heb. 11: 9, 10, we read, "By faith he (Abraham) sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise. For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." What was the promise made to Abraham? "And the Lord said to Abram, after that Lot was separated from him, Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art, northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward. For all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever. And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth; so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered. Arise, walk through the land in the length of it, and in the breadth of it, for I will give it unto thee." Gen. 13: 14, 15, 16.

Here we see what is the promise referred to. In chap. 17: 8, God said to Abraham, "And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God."

They who are of the faith of Abraham are reckoned as his seed, and are included among the heirs according to the promise. The fulfillment is yet in the future, which is soon to be realized. After our work is done we receive the promised inheritance, which will be in Paradise restored, in the new earth which the meek are to inherit. It is after the coming of Jesus that our fondest hopes will be realized, when those who usurp authority here will be dethroned, and the rightful Heir take the throne and reign forever, King of kings and Lord of lords.

Of the ancient worthies it is said, "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth. For they that say such things declare plainly that they seek a country. And truly if they had been mindful of that country from whence they came out, they might have had opportunity to have returned. "But now they desire a better country, that is, a heavenly: wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God; for he hath prepared for them a city." Heb. 11: 13-16. In verses 39 and 40 it is said, "And these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise; God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." All received the promise at the same time.

The earth has long lain under the curse of sin, which through Christ is to be redeemed and fitted up for the eternal abode of the saints. The morning of deliverance dawns on the world. Signs betoken the speedy advent of our King, who will reign in righteousness over a world blooming in Paradisaic beauty, inhabited by holy beings; when God's will will be done on earth even as it is done in heaven. "He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son." Rev. 21: 7. Here we see who are to inherit the promises. It is only those who endure unto the end who will be among the overcomers. Such are "Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." It is the good and obedient that will eat the good of the land where fruits celestial grow. It is in the new heaven and new earth where God will dwell with his people.

No mortal eye can penetrate within the vail, though oft in vision those rapturous scenes have been revealed.

"We see by faith yon city fair,
And soon shall breathe its balmy air."

In a little while we who have endured faithfully will receive the reward of the inheritance, and every one will sit under his own vine and fig-tree with none to molest nor to make afraid.

Such will be the security of the saints in the future kingdom to be established on the earth, after it has been purified by fire and cleansed, when the sanctuary and the host (the earth and God's people) will no longer be trodden down, but reign triumphant with their Lord.

The last conflict is about to begin. A terrible struggle will precede the reign of peace, and nations are arming for a general war, which will soon burst out in awful fury. Let us be ready to escape the things that are coming upon the earth, and to stand before the Son of man.

Believing the theory of Christ's soon coming will not save us, our hearts must be cleansed from all sin if we ever enter heaven. Every thing unholy must be eradicated from the heart if we would be prepared for that holy and happy place. Holiness to the Lord and the immediate coming of the Savior should be the prominent themes of these times. Shall we refuse to sound the alarm when we see the sword coming, for fear of what men may say or think? Shall we put our light under a bushel? Let us be bold in this cause; stand up for God; live pure and unblameable before the world, that our example will be such that others will be won to Jesus and be led to embrace him as their Savior. He is not willing that any should perish; but if men are not saved from sin they will fail of salvation.

Come sinner, come wanderer give up the world and all its vanities. Give up all to Jesus now. Wait not another moment. What will it avail you to gain the pleasures of sin? Oh seek in Jesus that sweet peace, those pure and solid pleasures the world can never give you. Break away in the name of God from every entangling influence, from every device of Satan, and stand for God though you stand alone. He that is for you is more than all that can be against you. Let the peace of God rule in your hearts, my brethren and sisters, and be ye thankful. Let Jesus in and take perfect possession of the heart. I can say

"Break down every idol, cast out every foe;
Now wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow."

AN EXPERIENCE OF GRACE.

M. JANE LOCKE.

"For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God."—EPH 2: 8.

Having received great encouragement and special benefit from reading the experiences of many of the dear ones in Christ; and most earnestly praying that some poor wanderer may be encouraged to come back to Father's house, I will endeavor to give a little of my experience.

My parents were christians—members of the Congregational church,—and I doubt not were humble followers of Christ. Never shall I forget the prayers of those dear parents, though they are now sleeping in Jesus.

At the age of twelve years I gave my heart to the Savior, and in less than a year from that time I united with the same church of which my parents were members, having been sprinkled in my infancy. By the grace of God I continued to walk worthy of the profession I had made until the year 1853, when God sent some of his servants into our vicinity, who preached that the Lord was soon coming. Among them were Elds. T. M. Preble, J. G. Smith and others. They preached that men should believe and be baptized.

I had believed all these years but had never yet been baptized. I expected the Lord soon, and still had not obeyed the command. I carried my case to God in prayer, and also sought counsel of my brethren and sisters on the subject. I finally made up my mind to bear this cross, and accordingly was buried with Christ in baptism by Bro. J. G. Smith. I continued to walk in newness of life for a few years after the disappointment and the falling away of many of those who had been looking for their Lord, and then with shame, and tears, and godly sorrow, do I tell the sad story that I fell from my own steadfastness. I even fell so far away from the truth of the Lord's coming that I would not read the Crisis,—the dear old paper I once loved so well. But by the grace of God I am what I am, and while I am relating my past wanderings and backslidings from God and his truth, I feel no condemnation at the present time for the sins of the past, for the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath made me free. Praise the name of the Lord forever.

Aug. 24th, 1872, I heard Bro. E. Cotton preach, and God blest his own Word and truth to my salvation, enabling me to consecrate all I have and all I am to the Lord. This was blessed; but I did not receive the full assurance of faith till the next day, when I received the witness of the Spirit, and my poor unworthy soul was unutterably full of glory and of God. This is the baptism of the Holy Ghost. This is being filled with the Spirit.

Four years experience has only served to increase my faith, confirm my hope, and enable me to grow in grace and in the knowledge of God, and to-day I can testify that he is my refuge, and a very present help in trouble.

"I rise to walk in heaven's own light
  Above the world and sin,
With heart made pure and garments white,
  And Christ enthroned within."

I had been seeking this great blessing for two years, but for the lack of faith in the promises of God I failed to obtain it. The promises of God are yea and amen to every one that believeth. It is the faith that takes God at his word, and by faith I stand.

JESUS, KEEP ME.

LIZZIE GRESTY.

As I sit alone in the evening,
And the shadows begin to fall,
When the day with its weary striving
Welcomes night as rest to all;
I think of the pleading Savior,
As he knelt in the garden bower,
And prayed for his sleeping disciples
Who could not watch one hour.

That prayer has been passed through ages,
And repeated times unknown
By the weary and heavy laden,
As they sighed for "home, sweet home."
And now as times grow harder,
And perils faster come,
May we ever pray with the Savior—
"Not my will but thine be done."

Dear Father, keep us from sleeping;
We must work ere the day is past,
To win souls for the angel's reaping,
To be gathered as jewels at last.
Arouse us still more to action,
To battle this world of sin,
That we may hear at thy blest coming—
"Well done! thou may'st enter in."

We want to be more like Jesus,
To be humble, gentle and mild;
To be patient, kind and trusting,
To become as a little child.
O, lead us in temptation,
For we feel we are very weak;
Guide us safe through every trial
Till we reach the golden street.

Until the bride is safe in the kingdom,
From harrassing care and doubt,
With Christ our Redeemer and Bridegroom,
And the world forever shut out;
Where we'll find sweet rest fo the weary,
In the mansions made without hands,
And the river of Life flows sweetly
In that bright and better land.

THOUGHTS BY NIGHT AND DAY.

C. COLEGROVE.

God has sweetly shut us in, this dark September night, and so curtained us around with clouds and rain, so enclosed us with friendly blackness, that, warned of the headlong speed of weeks and years that stop for no man's bidding, we would venture on an hour's talk for edification's sake, with those who wait for the King. What a happy answer of the good old German, who in his tottering old age declared that once he was a worker for God, but now he had promoted him to be a waiting servant instead of a working servant. So be of good cheer, all you who, though unable to work, are yet able to wait.

Ah! I am glad it is as well with us as it is. Our heart-beating, our breathing, our hearing, seeing and thinking are still preserved. We can walk and read, and talk and pray. How blessed it is to have secret communion with God! Often and often I can do nothing but lie at God's feet. I would rather be thus than be owner and master of millions. If God will only know and notice me, if he will secretly bless me, it is the germ of heaven.

God says, "Surely I have heard Ephraim bemoaning himself." Yes, yes, when David says, "Let the King hear us when we call," the King does hear. And now I imagine there have been many thousand Ephraims bemoaning, naturally self-willed, susceptible of good under divine training, but perverse and fond of freedom, and much given to abusing the freedom. What a gift to man this gift of freedom of action. Dangerous, and wonderful, and terrible, admitting tremendous possibilities of good or evil. And sooner or later Ephraim sees how unfit he is to manage absolutely this awful though exalted trust, and so he puts himself trembling though contumacious, strong though weak, hard yet relenting, contrary but submissive, difficult but still dutiful, into God's hands. Smarting and sensitive with the ordeal of divine discipline, sore with whip-strokes, he cries, "thou hast chastened me and I was chastened." Yes, God! Do whip when Ephraim needs it, though Ephraim does dread it. There is love in God's face when he whips, and love in the arm that strikes, and Ephraim has got good sense enough to see it, and God's wounds are good wounds, and honestly dealt, and healthy, though they start sweat and tears. I would rather be whipped by such a good God, than kissed by a treacherous friend.

Ephraim knows he is like a bullock, hard to break, but God can turn him over into a good ox. What a host of fooolish young steers have threatened to run themselves to death rather than pull in a yoke. But good God! thou knowest what is best, and thou art patient with man's bad and impetuous and wilful manners!

I tell you what it is, if ever there was a prayer any poor tired and crying and self-convicted creature ever prayed, it is Ephraim's prayer, going up from a heart in trouble, and half turned to water with sighs and sorrows. Hear Ephraim's prayer! It is so well feathered with sincerity and impelled upward with such force of conscious necessity, it fairly wins its way, arrow-like, to the mark. "Turn me, and I shall be turned, for thou art the Lord my God."

Ephraim has got it right! Gentle, but Almighty power! The thoughts of Ephraim may run on about this wise.

"I have learned one secret, and that is that I must have God—he is mine, and I cannot get along without him. I must have perfect submission, perfect re-construction, devotion and consolidation of my whole being by his power, and for his glory. I hate the expedients of men. I hate their shallow, time-serving, world-worshiping and man-magnifying nonsense. Men act like insects buzzing about a blaze. And I, Ephraim, I know I am foolish from the day I was born, fugitive, contumacious, unreasonable, undutiful. I thank God I know he can turn me wholly and totally to himself, and that is what I want and I must have."

Now hear him again: "Surely after that I was turned, I repented." O, he will never have done deploring his follies, for he says, "after I was instructed I smote upon my thigh." Who never did that, thinking of some act of commission or ommission puzzling and paining his retrospective mind? Many a man has given himself a powerful whack, as recollection and conviction have laid hold on him with a stout grip. In fact there is no laying down the experience of a just self-reproach any more graphically than Ephraim does it. "I was ashamed, yea, even confounded, because I did bear the reproach of my youth." But there, now, we have another sight, even the compassion of God. Yea, the very God of tenderness, who has seen all this, and said nothing. No doubt there is some strange world in the universe, and there must be some high wall, with some rare gate, and looking through, you may view the most wonderful expanse of sea, clear, pure, beautifully blue, and with such an enchantment in it, you are filled with astonishment and sweet emotion, and when you ask, "What sea is that?" the angel says, "The sea of God's love."

Now God's love is most choice, and marvellous, and great towards this earth and the sons of men, made of dust. Hear the heart of God speak. "Is Ephraim my dear son? Is he a pleasant child?" An affecting way of interrogation, more eloquent than assertion; much as a tender-hearted mother would do, whose love is too precious and too deep for affirmation. So God loves Ephraim, for says he, "since I spake against him, I do earnestly remember him still." How much some people think of being remembered by their friends! It is a joy and a happiness greatly coveted. And then to be earnestly remembered! God does it. "Therefore my bowels are troubled for him, I will surely have mercy upon him saith the Lord." That is the crown of Ephraim's glory.

Happy, happy Ephraim! Let his heart leap, let his eyes dance, let his brain and nerves thrill with ecstacy. To Ephraim the trees look like the million pipes of a great organ, the sun in heaven is full of still and holy mirth, the land is one laugh of happiness, and ocean smiles grandly. When God forgives, what a forgiveness it is! When he loves truly, aches, loads, groans and cryings are gone, gone, and good-bye to the whole troop! Who would not exclaim—"Speak the word, Power resistless, and make thy longing children immortal." (In a parenthesis, let me just say, there is a great stir in Great Britian, a stir with some power, on the question of the identity of the Anglo-Saxons with the lost ten tribes of Israel.)

Still the rain comes down. How willing we are to have the rain pour when every thing is housed! So how glad will they be, to see the royal majesty of the heavens when all is ready with them! These are stirring times. There are great avenues to knowledge. Research is busy on questions connected with the majestic purposes of God. The Centennial Exhibition with all its glory, is but a collection of splendid toys, compared with the grandeur of that programme, in which whoever may share, shall be supremely blest. Truly instructed people are looking earnestly to the East. O, earth, red with the blood of the poor murdered Bulgarians, how unutterably thou needest a restoring hand! How deep have pain and woe and bitterness struck into the very core and heart of created things! If earth had sense and feeling, she must be like a wounded behemoth, pierced with a mighty dart, or a monster of the sea, harpooned and writhing in mortal pain.

Still the rain comes pouring down. I hear the rain and the wind, and the clock-ticking, and with an ejaculated "thank God" for shelter and light within, as well as for darkness and storm without, and with a kind good-night to all the readers of the Crisis, I shut up my pen and ink and yield every thing to silence and rest.

BIRTH SURPRISES.

H. F. CARPENTER.

I notice of late that all our papers teem with spirited articles upon the "new birth," and, lest the subject become stale for want of variety, permit me to introduce my "surprises" at what I have read.

I am surprised to hear brethren ask for information, and then proceed to state their own opinion with a positiveness that at once almost defies instruction.

I am surprised that any one should speak of a mere resurrection from the dead as the "new birth," or as a birth in any scriptural sense at all, while no scripture teaches it, and some texts refuse to bow to such a thought. If to be raised from the dead is to be born, then the first person raised from the dead would have been the first born; but so far is this from being true, that while many were raised from the dead before Christ was raised, no one was ever born from the dead till Christ was raised, because he was the first born from the dead. No other argument is needed to show that a resurrection of itself is denied the name of birth in the Bible, than this simple fact stated.

Neither can we evade the force of the thought by claiming that first-born signifies chief-born, as some have done; for the original Greek for first-born occurs nine times in the New Testament, and in every instance plainly refers to priority of birth and not to pre-eminence. Christ was called the fist-born from the dead because the first raised from the dead to an immortal life. It is the change from mortality to immortality that constitutes the "birth" at the resurrection, and not the mere fact of a resurrection itself.

I am surprised that men have not seen the mistake just pointed out as the fruitful source of error. One error leads to or necessitates another. If a mere resurrection be a birth, then no one can be raised unless previously begotten; hence the denial by some of the resurrection of the wicked, in the face of Jesus' plain statement that all in the graves shall come forth; a statement strangely guarded against the limited sense of the word "all" sometimes met with in the Bible, by dividing those included in it into evil-doers and good-doers, thus embracing the wicked as well as the righteous. A man then may have a resurrection according to Christ's teaching without a previous begetting of the Holy Spirit; but a man cannot be born from the dead, changed from the mortal to immortal unless led by the Spirit of God in this life.

I am surprised that the leading idea of birth, used as a metaphor, is not more strictly and forcibly applied. A birth introduces to a new life. That which does not introduce one to a new life is not a birth. A resurrection does not necessarily introduce us to a new life, since one may be raised to the same life had before. The child raised by the prophet, the widow's son and Lazarus raised by Christ, were not raised to a new life, but simply restored to the old one; hence they were not born from the dead, else Christ would not have been the first-born. The wicked are not raised to a new life, but raised to a mortal life, such as they had before in kind though not in circumstance. The change that takes place in the righteous, at the resurrection, introduces them to a new life, a glorious immortal life; hence it can be properly called a birth. Conversion introduces one to a new life also, and that too can be properly called, in metaphor, a birth. In the Bible, therefore, we have both conversion and the change at the resurrection called birth; the one, the introduction of the inner man to a new life; the other, the introduction of the outer man to a new life.

I am surprised that men have not noticed the fact that God uses a distinct Greek word for each of these two great changes in a christian. When the latter change is referred to, the Greek word tickto in some of its combinations is used, as in Rom. 8: 29, Rev. 1: 5; when the former change is referred to, genao is used, as in 1 John 2: 29; 3: 9; 4: 7; 5: 1.

Some may think that 1 John 3: 9, belongs to the future life; but both Christ and his apostle James used equally strong expressions upon speaking of christians in this life. Others still may think that Heb. 1: 5; 5: 5, refer to Christ's resurrection, but Christ was called "begotten son" before his resurrection. See John 3: 16. The two great changes—conversion and glorification, each of which are called, in metaphor, a birth, are thus kept quite distinct.

I am, therefore, surprised when I see brethren stoutly advocating the glorification birth as the resurrection, basing their case in John 3: 3, 7, when the verb used is genao, the very verb which throughout the New Testament is used to designate a christian's experience in this life, as in 1 John 2: 29; 4: 7; 5: 1. Make the glorious change at the resurrection as blessed a birth as you please, but do not use John 3: 3, to preach it from; go find a text where tickto or rather prototikos its derivative is found, and then work away.

I am happily surprised to find the disputants on either side of this blessed question, both right and both wrong, like two ancient knights who disputed about a shield. To say that there is nothing called a birth at the resurrection is wrong; to say that there is nothing at conversion called a birth is equally wrong in the light of Scripture. To say there is a birth at the conversion is right; to say there is a birth at the resurrection is also right.

Yes, both right and both wrong. If any choose to call the first change a begetting, very well. Remember, however, that John 3: 3 is the text that uses the very verb which signifies begotten; so keep that text to preach conversion or the begotten condition from.

I shall be most agreeably surprised if what I have written changes any settled opinion, but hoping to aid some humble student, I submit my "birth supprises."

COMFORTS OF PROPHECY.

H. PRATT.

Prophecy forewarns of coming events, and points out the way of safety in time of danger. The especially interested class are those that live in the time of its fulfillment; as in the case of the flood. No class can be so interested in that event as that class who lived at that time. But the special anxiety, to be salutary, must precede the event. Hence Noah, moved with fear, prepared an ark for the saving of his house, being warned of God of things not seen as yet.

The prophecy of Jeremiah, 31st chap., concerning the children that should be slain by Herod, was to give comfort after the affliction. "Refrain thy voice from weeping and thine eyes from tears; for there is hope in thine end that thy children shall come again from the land of the enemy." So in the case of the death of believers by any cause. Paul said to the Thessalonians, "I would not have you ignorant concerning them that are asleep, that ye sorrow not as those that have no hope. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words."

The false position entertained by the mass of Christendom, of going to heaven at death, robs this prophecy of all its sublimity and comfort, and leaves nothing in its place but the imagination of tradition. No wonder Paul should say, "Despise not prophesying." To reject those prophecies that are applicable to all ages, like those touching the future of the dead, or touching events being fulfilled in our own day, is to reject the light wherewith God designs to benefit us, and grope our way in darkness or blindness.

The prophetic light was never more needful than now, and if people in the past have failed for lack of knowledge, what chance can there be for those now who are "willingly ignorant."

The prophecy concerning the coming of the Bridegroom and the virgins going out to meet him with lamps trimmed and burning, ensures readiness, and brings comfort to those who have obeyed and have been whole hearted in this great Advent movement; and like Noah condemns the world for not taking heed to the sure word of prophecy.

My brethren, if this movement is of God this conclusion is inevitable.

QUARTERLY MEETING REPORT.

The first Quarterly Meeting for the current year, in the Blue Earth district of Minnesota, was held at Alma City, in Waseca Co., commencing Saturday P. M., Sept. 2d, 1876.

At three P. M. sermon by C. B. Fellows, from Eph. 4: 30, after which the Conference was called to order by the President, M. Welcome. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The report of the Treasurer was read and adopted.

Report of ministers. M. Welcome: I have preached every Sabbath to good congregations. A deep interest has been felt, but no conversions. We have had a good Sunday school, numbering from forty to fifty. I have accepted a call from the north part of the State, and therefore ask for a letter of recommendation and dismission from this Quarterly Conference. E. K. Smith: I have been lecturing in the city where I reside upon the prophecies, from a large chart. Have had good congregations and the best of attention. Charles B. Fellows was received as a member of this Conference, and received a license to preach the Word of truth; said license to hold good until the next session of the Annual Conference, and subject to its approval. Eld. M. Welcome's request for a letter was granted by vote of the Conference.

Election of officers: E. K. Smith, President; C. B. Fellows, Secretary. The Secretary was instructed to send the minutes to the Times and Crisis for publication. On motion the Conference adjourned to the call of the President. In the evening sermon by Bro. Welcome, from James 1: 27.

Sunday at ten A. M. met for love-feast. At eleven, preaching by Bro. Welcome, text, John 14: 12. At half-past two P. M., Bro. E. K. Smith hung up a large chart and spoke from the eighth and nineth chapters of Daniel. It was very interesting. At seven P. M. a goodly number partook of the Lord's Supper. At eight o'clock Bro. Smith spoke from the eleventh of Daniel, showing that we are in close proximity to the judgment. The house was full and a deep interest felt. This Quarterly Session has been a profitable one.

BORROWED TIME.

H. MUNGER.

I am this day, Sept. 27th, 1876, seventy years old; and have just got up from a month's sickness, the first I ever had. On looking back time seems as a dream; looking forward it looks very short. The signs of old age are sure at seventy to all; the signs of old earth's dissolution is to me just as sure.

When I first heard that the Lord was soon coming it made a deep impression on my mind. This was in 1838; farther back than many of my brethren have an experience in this truth. I have watched the progress of this people and their work, this dispensational truth, up to this time—nearly forty years. Bro. Miller, the old honest farmer, shook this continent and nearly the whole world with his earthquake of truth. It was the work of God, for no man could do this work of himself. On looking back I recollect the great argument against his position was, He is an old farmer. This was sufficient for many. They could not receive truth from such a source. They thought the honors of the world of more value than the cross and truth, and they resisted their conviction of this doctrine being the truth.

But his being a farmer had no effect on my mind. I saw that God began the world with farming. Adam was a farmer; Abraham and his sons were all farmers; his grandsons—the twelve patriarchs—were all farmers; and Joseph raised more corn than any man living. Moses was of no use in God's cause until he left the schools of Egypt and went to learn farming with Jethro; then God called him to see a burning bush, and set him to work immediately in his cause. Elisha also was a farmer, ploughing with twelve yoke of oxen when Elijah called him to work for God. He made a sacrifice of one yoke and started. Look at the history of the work of the man of God—Elisha, the prophet. We see God has taken farmers to do most of the great work man has ever done. So we find Bro. Miller in the line of God's choosing. Looking over his history I find forty-three of the most prominent ministers, within one hundred miles of him, after examining his works, wrote him that they could endorse his exposition of the Scriptures, especially the prophecies. This speaks well for the old farmer as a Bible student. It is just forty years since the forty-three ministers acknowledged Bro. Miller their superior in the Scriptures.

But there are crosses connected with all dispensational truth, and that is why so many shun to declare what they do believe. I have lived to see many refuse to let their light shine, Jonah like, and got into the whale's belly. I fear many will not fare as well as he did.

Now brethren, whether on borrowed time or not, let us who have seen this light not shun the cross. Let every thing else give place to this truth, and a preparation which it will produce, if obeyed, to meet the Lord. My time is now lent, and I mean to be faithful and do what I can for God's cause.

PSEUDO ADVENTISTS.

L. C. KERR.

There are people among us who lay claim to the principles of Adventism, being fully convinced of their correctness, who, like Nicodemus, prefer to talk of them in secret, or "by night," when there is no one of opposite views by to hear what they believe, or from whom they might expect persecution. They will talk and argue zealously for the truths held by Adventists when they meet with persons who believe them, but they are very careful to know who they are talking to, so that they do not state their views to some one who would offer opposition.

They are so ashamed of what they believe, that they do n't want their friends and neighbors to know it. With them it is private property. When they are among Adventists they are Adventists; but when among other denominations you would not know that they had ever heard of such a people.

The truths we hold as a people are so plain and simple, and of such interest, that they relish them; but their relish for popularity and the praise of men is so much greater that it is no task for them to lay them aside whenever occasion calls for it.

We are told in the Scriptures that tribulation and persecution will attend the Word of God (Matt. 13: 21); but these gentlemen prefer having it in peace; hence their caution to conceal it from the public. They are citizens in war, and soldiers in peace. If truth were only popular they would not be ashamed of it. But as it is, only a few humble Adventists advocating it, they do not want to be found among such a despised band. They are not willing to bear reproof for their Master. They seem to have made that one of the conditions upon which they endorsed the views; that they would stick to it as long as it could escape persecution; but whenever it shall meet with opposition and the disapprobation of the masses, then they are silent upon it. Thus the cause of our dear Master suffers at the hands of its pretended friends.

What will be the doom of such people when Jesus comes? I think he will say to them, "You were ashamed to confess me before men, and now I am ashamed of you." They are like Judas Iscariot, they sell their Lord and his truth for worldly aggrandizement. The love of God they do not know. They have learned his truth, but sell it for a mess of pottage. Better for such never to have known the way of life, than, after they have known it, to turn away from it.

DELIVER us from the man whose tongue never made a mistake, and who keeps a note of the fact.

THE NEW WAYS IN RELIGION.

I. K. LOMBARD.

To-day I've been to meeting, John,
To hear the parson preach,
But how they've changed since we were young,
In all they do and teach.
They say that we're old-fashioned, John,
And don't care what we say;
But my old heart can see and feel
Whene'er they change God's way.

When we were young the world was gay,
And loved to make a show;
But christians walked the narrow way,
And could not with them go;
But oh, how things have changed since then,
The two ways are but one;
They all go in together now,
And say they've "lots of fun."

When we were young they used to meet
In our old kitchen room,
And sometimes in the school-house near,
If many chanced to come;
And Eld. B——, that good old man,—
I'll ne'er forget his voice,—
How faithfully he dealt with sin,
And how the saints rejoiced.

But now they meet in palaces,
So gorgeous, rich and nice;
And every thing that draws the crowd,
They'll have at any price;
With cushioned seats and carpetings,
And every thing so gay,
The poor can hardly gather there,—
They've not the scrip to pay.

The minister, like some vain fop,
Stands up and reads his prayers;
And how it pained my heart to-day
To see him "put on airs."
He did not preach, he only read
An essay in Christ's voice;
No heart was touched, no tears were shed,
And not a soul rejoiced.

He thought Christ's voice was musical,
Melodious, rich and clear,
And thus it sounded pleasantly
Upon the listening ear.
I heard some say as they passed out,
"Wasn't that a splendid thing!"
And others said, "That can't be beat
By even Dr. Tyng."

O can it be that such vain fops
Are called to speak for God,
Who feed the church on worldly slops,
But never preach his Word?
I thought if Christ himself were there,
We'd see some sighs and tears;
"Ye pharisees and hypocrites,"
Would thunder in their ears.

I thought of our old kitchen times,
When servants sent by God
Would warn us all so faithfully
To love and keep his Word.
They did not wink at worldliness,
As ministers now do;—
O give me back the olden ways,
I do not like the new.

A hoarse machine now grinds their tunes,
A godless choir joins in,
But neither one can tell of joys
That come from pardoned sin.
They sung God's praise when we were young
Because their hearts were blest;
A well-paid choir now chants their songs,
And so the church has rest.

My heart was pained to see the show
They tried to make in dress,
All finified from top to toe,
And some looked like distress.
With frills and flounces, tucks and crimps,
They seemed almost deformed;
And many had the Grecian bend,
With camel's hump all formed.

They noticed my plain calico,
And thought my bonnet "odd";
And frequently they smiled, I know,
But I had peace with God.
I thought of times when we were young,
When all the proud and gay
Would make the christians dress their song,
And jist them every way.

'Tis sad, when all the world runs mad
In foolish, vain display,
To see the church so fast and glad
To ape them every way.
The church has changed since former days
In all they say and do;
But give me back the olden ways,
I do not like the new.

They're strangely bent on pleasure now;
They meet most every week
To have some sort of lively spree,
That worldlings love and seek;
But whether 'tis a festival,
Or sociable, or fair,
Or Christmas tree, or other scrape,
The church will all be there.

With lotteries and grab-bags,
And other tricks and games,
They make God's house a den of thieves
Without a blush of shame!
Lord of the temple, come with zeal,
As thou didst come of yore,
With scourge in hand to make them feel,
Before their day is o'er.

They all attend such gatherings,
But when they meet to pray,
There are but few who venture out,
And they've not much to say.
They lightly speak of former days,
When christian men were true;
But give me back the olden ways,
I do not like the new.

What means this strange departure, John,
And when will they amend?
God's day of wrath is hastening on,
When all earth's shams will end.
That awful hour is drawing near;
Its signs are gathering fast;
The Judge of all will soon be here
To scrutinize the past.

Our record then will be made known,
Our habits, thoughts and aims;
And some must hear from God's own throne—
"You've brought my cause to shame."
Ah! then what grief and sore regret
Will reach them in that day,
Because they've chosen worldliness,
And scoffed at God's old way.

HERESY.

The following is a letter written Bro O. F. Goodwin, of Fort Mills, S. C., giving an account of the trial of Elder G. D. Sherrill, of Lenoir, N. C., before a Council of Baptist ministers.—ED

BRO. O. F. GOODWIN:—Dear Sir,—In answer to your request that I should write you an account of my trials and examination before the presbytery, which took place on the Second Saturday in April, I send you the following statement. The presbytery consisted of four Baptist ministers, whose names I forbear to give. The church assembled with said preachers (a number of other ministers present) and read the following:

"The church complaining of G. D. Sherrill charge him with, 1st, heresy. Specification 1st. In that he has embraced the doctrines of the Adventists, or Socinians. 2nd. In that he denies the immortality of the soul. 3rd. In that he denies the eternal duration of future punishment. 4th. A history of the case. (This would be too long to give here. It is nearly a fair statement of the complaint the church has had against me for over two years in regard to the doctrines in question.)

The presbytery organized by electing one of their number Moderator, and I was then turned over to them for examination. The Moderator read me the charge, and asked what I had to say. I answered that upon the presumption that the brethren knew my faith, I could only say that "after the manner which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers; believing all things which are written in the law and the prophets." In reply to the first specification I answered that, as to the Socinians I knew but little, what I have read about them being generally the account of their enemies, a very unfair method of learning the faith or character of any people; neither was I well informed as to the doctrines of the Adventists; but as concerning the soon coming of Jesus to take "to himself his great power and reign," and the duty of christians to live daily in expectation of that great event, I was an Adventist—would be ashamed to be anything else.

To the second I answered that I did not believe in the common orthodox view of immortality; that such belief is unscriptural, and has been the means of great deception and dangerous error; that the saints will receive immortality at the resurrection; the wicked will never have it; that the dead "know not anything" till the voice of God in the seventh trump shall rouse them to life or damnation, according to their works here.

To the third I answered that I believed the eternal duration of future punishment; but I did not believe never-ending misery in conscious life; but that in the flames of hell they will suffer what God sees they deserve, and pass back into death from whence there is no redemption or resurrection, and thus suffer an everlasting punishment.

This is but a synopsis, the examination being somewhat long and tedious; many texts being given me as objections to my views, all of which I answered as I understood them.

The presbytery then retired, but returned in a few minutes, and reported—"We find Geo. D. Sherrill unorthodox in the Baptist faith." Upon this the church demanded my credentials, which I surrendered. This ordeal, from first to last, has severely tried my faith, but I hope strengthened it. I have not surrendered the Bible, nor ceased trying to preach it, though I have no authority from my church. I am glad I have your acquaintance, and hope to see you among us often. O! my dear brother, pray for me. I feel willing to live very humble at the feet of Jesus all my days if I may but hear the "Well done" at last.

G. D. SHERRILL.

THE PROMISED INHERITANCE.

T. L. WAUGH.

"For ye have need of patience, that after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise"—HEB. 10: 36.

In the succeeding verse the reason is given: "For yet a little while, and he that shall come, will come, and will not tarry." In Heb. 11: 9, 10, we read, "By faith he (Abraham) sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise. For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." What was the promise made to Abraham? "And the Lord said to Abram, after that Lot was separated from him, Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art, northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward. For all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever. And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth; so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered. Arise, walk through the land in the length of it, and in the breadth of it, for I will give it unto thee." Gen. 13: 14, 15, 16.

Here we see what is the promise referred to. In chap. 17: 8, God said to Abraham, "And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God."

They who are of the faith of Abraham are reckoned as his seed, and are included among the heirs according to the promise. The fulfillment is yet in the future, which is soon to be realized. After our work is done we receive the promised inheritance, which will be in Paradise restored, in the new earth which the meek are to inherit. It is after the coming of Jesus that our fondest hopes will be realized, when those who usurp authority here will be dethroned, and the rightful Heir take the throne and reign forever, King of kings and Lord of lords.

Of the ancient worthies it is said, "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth. For they that say such things declare plainly that they seek a country. And truly if they had been mindful of that country from whence they came out, they might have had opportunity to have returned. "But now they desire a better country, that is, a heavenly: wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God; for he hath prepared for them a city." Heb. 11: 13–16. In verses 39 and 40 it is said, "And these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise; God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." All received the promise at the same time.

The earth has long lain under the curse of sin, which through Christ is to be redeemed and fitted up for the eternal abode of the saints. The morning of deliverance dawns on the world. Signs betoken the speedy advent of our King, who will reign in righteousness over a world blooming in Paradisaic beauty, inhabited by holy beings; when God's will will be done on earth even as it is done in heaven. "He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son." Rev. 21: 7. Here we see who are to inherit the promises. It is only those who endure unto the end who will be among the overcomers. Such are "Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." It is the good and obedient that will eat the good of the land where fruits celestial grow. It is in the new heaven and new earth where God will dwell with his people.

No mortal eye can penetrate within the vail, though oft in vision those rapturous scenes have been revealed.

"We see by faith yon city fair,
And soon shall breathe its balmy air."

In a little while we who have endured faithfully will receive the reward of the inheritance, and every one will sit under his own vine and fig-tree with none to molest nor to make afraid.

Such will be the security of the saints in the future kingdom to be established on the earth, after it has been purified by fire and cleansed, when the sanctuary and the host (the earth and God's people) will no longer be trodden down, but reign triumphant with their Lord.

The last conflict is about to begin. A terrible struggle will precede the reign of peace, and nations are arming for a general war, which will soon burst out in awful fury. Let us be ready to escape the things that are coming upon the earth, and to stand before the Son of man.

Believing the theory of Christ's soon coming will not save us, our hearts must be cleansed from all sin if we ever enter heaven. Every thing unholy must be eradicated from the heart if we would be prepared for that holy and happy place. Holiness to the Lord and the immediate coming of the Savior should be the prominent themes of these times. Shall we refuse to sound the alarm when we see the sword coming, for fear of what men may say or think? Shall we put our light under a bushel? Let us be bold in this cause; stand up for God; live pure and unblameable before the world, that our example will be such that others will be won to Jesus and be led to embrace him as their Savior. He is not willing that any should perish; but if men are not saved from sin they will fail of salvation.

Come sinner, come wanderer give up the world and all its vanities. Give up all to Jesus now. Wait not another moment. What will it avail you to gain the pleasures of sin? Oh seek in Jesus that sweet peace, those pure and solid pleasures the world can never give you. Break away in the name of God from every entangling influence, from every device of Satan, and stand for God though you stand alone. He that is for you is more than all that can be against you. Let the peace of God rule in your hearts, my brethren and sisters, and be ye thankful. Let Jesus in and take perfect possession of the heart. I can say

"Break down every idol, cast out every foe;
Now wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow."

AN EXPERIENCE OF GRACE.

M. JANE LOCKE.

"For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God."—EPH 2: 8.

Having received great encouragement and special benefit from reading the experiences of many of the dear ones in Christ; and most earnestly praying that some poor wanderer may be encouraged to come back to Father's house, I will endeavor to give a little of my experience.

My parents were christians—members of the Congregational church,—and I doubt not were humble followers of Christ. Never shall I forget the prayers of those dear parents, though they are now sleeping in Jesus.

At the age of twelve years I gave my heart to the Savior, and in less than a year from that time I united with the same church of which my parents were members, having been sprinkled in my infancy. By the grace of God I continued to walk worthy of the profession I had made until the year 1853, when God sent some of his servants into our vicinity, who preached that the Lord was soon coming. Among them were Elds. T. M. Preble, J. G. Smith and others. They preached that men should believe and be baptized.

I had believed all these years but had never yet been baptized. I expected the Lord soon, and still had not obeyed the command. I carried my case to God in prayer, and also sought counsel of my brethren and sisters on the subject. I finally made up my mind to bear this cross, and accordingly was buried with Christ in baptism by Bro. J. G. Smith. I continued to walk in newness of life for a few years after the disappointment and the falling away of many of those who had been looking for their Lord, and then with shame, and tears, and godly sorrow, do I tell the sad story that I fell from my own steadfastness. I even fell so far away from the truth of the Lord's coming that I would not read the Crisis,—the dear old paper I once loved so well. But by the grace of God I am what I am, and while I am relating my past wanderings and backslidings from God and his truth, I feel no condemnation at the present time for the sins of the past, for the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath made me free. Praise the name of the Lord forever.

Aug. 24th, 1872, I heard Bro. E. Cotton preach, and God blest his own Word and truth to my salvation, enabling me to consecrate all I have and all I am to the Lord. This was blessed; but I did not receive the full assurance of faith till the next day, when I received the witness of the Spirit, and my poor unworthy soul was unutterably full of glory and of God. This is the baptism of the Holy Ghost. This is being filled with the Spirit.

Four years experience has only served to increase my faith, confirm my hope, and enable me to grow in grace and in the knowledge of God, and to-day I can testify that he is my refuge, and a very present help in trouble.

"I rise to walk in heaven's own light
Above the world and sin,
With heart made pure and garments white,
And Christ enthroned within."

I had been seeking this great blessing for two years, but for the lack of faith in the promises of God I failed to obtain it. The promises of God are yea and amen to every one that believeth. It is the faith that takes God at his word, and by faith I stand.

"HOME, SWEET HOME."

'Midst meetings and partings
Of this chequered life,
Surrounded by sorrows,
By sin, and by strife,
How precious the thought,
The time's near at hand,
We'll all be at home
In the heavenly land!
Cho.—Home, home, sweet, sweet home,
With Jesus our Savior,
We'll all be at home.

Then let us unite,
While pilgrims below,
And use all our influence,
Wherever we go,
To bring all to Jesus
Who are lost by the fall,
And tell the old story—
Salvation for all.

Refuse not the offer—
Salvation is free—
He purchased redemption
On Mount Calvary;
Then to glory ascended,
And our nature took;
Left the plan of salvation—
There's life in a look.

Then look at the Savior—
His hands, feet, and side,
His head crowned with thorns,
And hear what he cried:
"'Tis finished, 'tis finished,
Redemption for man";
'Tis echoed in heaven,
"Hallelujah! Amen!"

THE THREATENING RUIN;

OR,

Our Times, our Prospects and our Duty.

BY JOSEPH A. SEISS, D. D.

"And now also the axe is laid at the root of the trees: therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire."—Matt. 3: 10.

Look also at the morals of the world,—how virtue is undermined in its fundamental principles, how set aside often in the name of religion itself, and how frequently violated and disgraced by even its professed teachers! In what fearful decay is the spirit of obedience, from which all morality and religion take their rise! Behold the self-will of all classes,—their defiance of restraint, their restiveness under authority, and how they unite in seeking to throw off the laws of God and man, saying "Let us break their bands assunder, and cast away their cords from us"! How fearfully have the words of the prophet been fulfilled,—"The child shall behave himself proudly against the ancient, and the base against the honorable"! How has crime of all sorts increased within the past years, and the certainty and severity of its punishments been diminished! How have the main ligaments of social order been weakened by the relaxation of the laws of marriage, and the breaking down of its sacred sanctions by human courts, socialism and licentiousness! How unscrupulously are the cardinal doctrines of righteousness ignored in commercial, political and fiduciary affairs, and trampled under foot, without rebuke or punishment! The records of the public press on the subject of morals and crime are becoming utterly astounding. In six months, ninety-five murders are counted from metropolitan files, exclusive of twelve manifest homicides and twenty-four murderous attempts. Colossal robberies, swindles, defalcations and embezzlements have occurred in the same time, amounting to ten millions of dollars.

A secular journal recently remarked that "morality has become a pretence, and religion a mere form, with the great mass of our population: our practices of government and social life are such as we cannot defend, or such as we are ashamed to acknowledge. Our cities, neighborhoods, even our houses, are full of injustice, of sorrows, of controversies, leading to ruin. It is an age fair without, and of gorgeous decoration, but inwardly worse than a sepulchre." There are classes of people who see little of this and are very slow to believe it. Their associations with the outside world are not such as to give them the means of ascertaining the facts for themselves. But observing men, editors of public journals, judges, and men acquainted with the business operations and common thoroughfares of life, in all sections, concur in the opinion that we are living in an era of wickedness, extravagance, untruthfulness, and all sorts of moral delinquency, which are as unblushing as they are excessive and general. Even the Church, with all its show of zeal and faith, is almost as hollow-hearted, and as full of worldliness, unbelief, dishonesty, deceit, sham, rivalry and selfishness as the world itself. These verily are the days of which Paul prophesied, when he said, men shall be covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, without natural affection, incontinent, fierce, traitors, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof. (2 Tim. 3.) A well-informed and by no means censorious journal says:—

"The present times bid fair to be distinguished pre-eminently as a period of crime. The progress and the prevalence of even the grossest forms of wickedness, in different places and among diverse classes, are facts frightful to observe, and more frightful to ponder. Every newspaper is laden with the records of such. Dishonesty, licentiousness, violence, murder,—they do not meet us as exceptional instances: they make the staple of the news of the day; they load and darken the columns of all journals; till one trembles almost to take up the morning paper, is afraid to have it read in the family, and lays it down with a sense of heart-sickness, a saddening impression of the ineffectiveness of our means of public moral and religious instruction, a keen apprehension of what is to be expected in the future.

It is not the rich and luxurious alone among whom such evidences of viciousness abound. It is not those who are avowedly worldly and godless in their life. Mechanics, merchants, farmers, teachers, physicians, lawyers, ministers of the gospel, men high in social rank and in political influence, women as well as men, the young not only but the aged, in well-nigh equal measure, the refined and cultivated as well as the coarse,—all seem to be smit with the foul contagion, and suddenly to break out with the vile and hateful leprosy of sin. Not crimes of dishonesty alone are common; but the murder of wives, of husbands, of children, of the most confiding and affectionate friends, a horrible lustfulness, the most flagrant and fiendish violations of faith,—all seem as common as the blossoming of trees, and are coming to be spoken of as familiarly and frequently, and with nearly as little apparent concern, as the most ordinary and trivial facts."

These are the statements of the neutral press, and not the mere malicious criminations of political enemies. They are from men who declare to us that they know the facts. It would seem as if the days of Noah, "when the earth was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence," had really returned upon us, as Christ himself has told us that they would. A clergyman of this city recently remarked, in one of the evening papers, "Wherever we pursue our investigations, we behold signs in religion, morality and government, showing the increasing darkness of the human soul, the increasing corruption of the human character. Dark as were the days of medieval times, fetid as were the days of heathen power, yet now the steps of sin and march of crime surpassed even them;" that is, of course, as compared with our greater light and privileges. Nor is there in all the world a nation which, when thoroughly canvassed, will not be found gravitating toward hell rather than toward heaven.

Look also at the distracted, perturbed, ill-boding condition of church-organizations. Ecclesiastical establishments are everywhere heaving with internal discords and disaffections, disolving in some all the ligaments of cohesion, and in others weakening them more and more, as if dissolution were the appointed doom of each. I recently, on separate occasions, heard three prominent ministers, of as many denominations ranking high in our country, say, that they could see for themselves no ecclesiastical future. Confounded appear all denominational leaders. Move as they will, every thing seems ready to crumble to pieces about them. There is a dissatisfaction and discomfort in the more thoughtful men in the churches which declares that something must be done, that great changes must occur, that the process of disintegration is going on with fearful rapidity; but what to do, or whither to steer, there is no agreement, and can be none.

Multitudes of expedients are suggested, but none command general respect, or give any promise to quell the disturbances or harmonize the distractions which are growing worse and worse every day. Sundry large and influential communions have already fallen assunder into divisions never to be healed and into fragments never to be gathered; whilst others are on the eve of similar misfortunes. State-church advocates and free-church advocates are engaged in contentions sharp and desperate, rendering it impossible for things long to go on as they are, and giving omen of nothing more hopeful in the future. Confessionalistis and anti-confessionalists,—liturgists and hierarchists, and anti-liturgists and anti-hierarchists,—abolitionists and pro-slavery men,—old school and new school of different shades,—churchmen and anti-churchmen,—and still other opposing classes,—are making their demands, and insisting on their views, and clanning and plotting, nor always reputably, for the enforcement of their peculiarities, in ways which need no prophet to tell that there is disaster ahead, and that we are all being surrounded with perils the end of which no human foresight can penetrate.

Look also at the intricate, entangled and threatening aspect of political affairs. "Problems the most perplexing in political science, diversities in moral judgments the deepest, new wants and cravings in society, positively new classes of character cast up by the surging and heated tide of things, are all appealing to our rulers for solution, direction or restraint, and appealinig in vain. Our rulers themselves feel their old laws and formulæ utterly inadequate, and are driven to absolute perplexity and well-nigh to despair. The reins of empire, over the whole earth, were never held in such loose hands. Our ablest men have little confidence in their own political beliefs or enactments; and our very laws seem to be penned with trembling fingers." So says the distinguished writer of "Christianity and our Era;" whilst others in many ways are uttering their painful sense of the same facts. "For the last forty-five years," says one, the world has been rushing on like a runaway horse that has broken loose from its rider. It fancied itself free, because it had broken loose from God; and now, spent and exhausted, it finds itself engulfed in the quagmire of confusion. We are," says he, "on the verge of universal war, and worse than war. If we struggle on, a precipice is before us; and to turn back is impossible. Nothing now but a miracle can save the world."

Some time ago, I asked a man, who was intimately and personally familiar with European politics, whether he had any hope of the salvation of any of the countries now occupying the territory of the old Roman Empire. He considered for a while, and then answered that he had none whatever.

There are those who entertain different views and have been holding out more hopeful prospects; but thus far, things have resulted very contrary to what they have been predicting. They told us that an era of peace was at hand; and the product has been the turning loose of the rampant demon of war. They sought to have us believe the days of oppression, of danger and of anti-Christianism nearly numbered; and, whilst the words were yet on their lips, a shock came which made the world tremble; but, instead of bringing liberty, it only riveted the chains of tyranny, developed a power more dangerous than all that had gone before it, and maddened the nations for a scene of blood and ruin which threatens to leave no interval till Christ himself shall come. Despotism, superstition, slavery, fraud and cruelty, in the Old World, have been on the ascendant since the scenes of 1848. The powers which should check their progress are separated from each other, divided in interest, irresolute in purpose, and without adequate leaders. The people whose help is most to be expected are poisoned with infidelity and spited against religion and government, on account of the connection between kings and priests; and those who would lead them, for the most part, have little or no faith in Christ or Christ's future, and would only conduct from despotism to utter confusion, from dull distraction to furious despair, and from "churches without Christianity and Governments without freedom, to a world without a God, a Judge or a Savior."

And along with this awful breaking down in morals, and faith, and public and social order, there has also come a singular and perceptible loosening in the very elements, and a consequent sacrifice and insecurity of life and property, which is exceedingly remarkable and ominous. Have you ever known such a crowded succession of horrible casualties as have marked the past year? Recall the number of terrific railroad accidents, steamboat-mishaps, shipwrecks, conflagrations, incavations, explosions, destructive inundations, disasters from swollen streams, sudden deaths, and losses of life and property, which are continually filling up our newspapers. Survey the march of fearful epidemics among men, and beasts, and the fruits of the earth. What does all this mean? Shall we take the heathenish position, and set it all down as chance, mere striking coincidence, the common course of things, signifying nothing? Would it not seem as if outraged nature itself could no longer quietly endure the gigantic proportions to which human depravity is growing? Put on it what construction men may, I am satisfied that God is in it, and that these are his sharp warnings of coming judgment, which will also increase upon us as the months roll on. They bespeak the axe laid at the root of the trees.

OUR REFUGE.

"The eternal God is our refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms." Trial and suffering are man's surest heritage. They meet him everywhere, and stand beside him in all the walks of life. No rank is too high for them to reach—no station so obscure that they will not search it out. Life is a troubled sea, and its waves are lashed to madness by the winds of passion and strife. There is only one refuge from the fury of the tempest—only one haven where we may find rest and be sheltered with peace. "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore will we not fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea. Though the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof."

The pitiless storms beat alike upon the children of men, and the troubled waves toss our little barks without distinction of faith or character. But the humblest christian hath an anchor which never fails. The christian hope reaches to the rock of our salvation. The peace of God which passeth understanding gleams with unfailing light amid the darkness. The golden promise that cannot be broken flashes the rainbow of hope across the cloud, for the foundation of God standeth sure, and he knoweth them that are his. The corsair death sails o'er the angry billows, and his black flag waves in triumph on every breeze. He spares not the babe in his mother's arms, and the silvered head of age falls before his breath. The criminal is cut off in the midst of sin, and the good man is smitten down at his post. Neither faithfulness nor truth can ward off his blows or bid defiance to his power. But "as the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people from henceforth even forever." And across the very banner of death is written the words, "I am the resurrection and the life."

Even death hath no power to hold those who have made a covenant with God, for he is our rock and our salvation. Persecution may assail us in the wilderness, but, glory awaits us in the city. Thorns may pierce our brow during the pilgrimage, but we shall find a crown at our journey's end. Temptation haunts our footsteps now, but victory shall crown us on the other side. The crimson waves of sin and suffering beat around our weary feet, but they shall rest on the bank of life's river. Death may claim our loved ones now, but his royal seal shall be broken by One who is greater than he, "for they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in the day when I make up my jewels."

The tempest of life shall be stilled upon the green shores of peace, and the waves of affliction shall be lost in the bright depths of eternity's ocean; for "behold, I will lay stones with fair colors, and lay thy foundations with sapphires, and I will make thy windows of agates and thy gates of carbuncles, and all thy borders of pleasant stones."—Messiah's Herald.

THOUGHTS ON MAN.

BY A BAPTIST.

THE INTERMEDIATE STATE.

What do the Scriptures teach in regard to an intermediate state? In Ecclesiastes, Solomon says, after describing the approach of death, "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it." Eccl. 12: 7. Now, by any just rule of the analysis of language, does not the phrase "as it was," in the foregoing passage, as really and legitimately apply to the last member of the passage as to the first? or, as though it were added at the close, thus: "And the spirit shall return unto God who gave it, as it was"? or in other language, does the preacher not declare that death resolves man back into the original condition, or elements, from which he was created? And the spirit, or principle of life, breathed into him at his creation, returning to God, to me seems one of the necessary facts out of which comes the doctrine of the resurrection.

Now if the foregoing rule of analysis and interpretation is correct, then, if the spirit remains conscious after leaving the dust, and possesses immortality, the pre-existence of consciousness is proved; and if a conscious pre-existing intelligence is established before the creating of man out of the dust of the ground, then Moses' account of the creation of man is not the creating of a conscious, intelligent being, but the putting up of a tenant house for a conscious intelligence, already existing, to dwell in; and this would be proving more than is needed or wanted.

Mr. Moody, in one of his talks from the text, "Seek the Lord while he may be found," is reported as saying: "Let us learn a lesson from men's earthly pursuits. If there is no reality in this gift of God, if it is all a myth, then let us dismiss it. If it is true, and we can find the Lord by seeking him, let us seek him. A man will go around the world for his health. He will cross oceans and climb steep mountains just to get his health. Thanks be to God, you have not got to go around the world to get salvation; you have not got to go out of this building to get salvation. 'Ye shall find me when ye shall search for me with all your heart.' Now there isn't anything a man values as he does his life. You take a man in a wrecked vessel; that vessel is going down; that man may be worth a million, and the only way he can save his life is to give up that million; he would do it as quick as a flash."

The gift of God is eternal life; it is life without end. Christ says, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" Is it possible to understand him as teaching other than the doctrine that existence in another world is all owing to the atonement of Christ, and nothing else? I once went to a Greek scholar to have him read to me Christ's words as recorded in Matt. 16: 25, 26—"For whosoever shall save his life shall lose it, and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it. For what is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul: or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" and he said to me that the words twice translated in the first verse life, and twice in the second verse soul, were precisely the same in the original. Now if it is proper to translate it soul in part, it must be in all; but would you accept the idea that, if a man "seeks to save his soul he shall lose it," as a Scriptural teaching?

One argument, in favor of man's consciousness between death and the resurrection is drawn from Christ's words in Matt. 22: 32, "I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. God is not the God of the dead but of the living." This language was used in reply to the Sadducees concerning the doctrine of the resurrection; and the next verse says, "And when the multitude heard this they were astonished at his doctrine;" evidently supposing it to refer to the resurrection, not their present condition. In Revelations 13: 8, in speaking of the beast, John says, "And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb, slain from the foundation of the world." But who, I ask, would think of proving from that passage, that Christ was actually, and in fact, crucified from the foundation of the world! Are we not assured from other Scripture that he was actually crucified on Calvary, some eighteen hundred years since, and does not the apostle assure us that Christ died once for all? And is it not the fact that the unchangeable nature of the parties to the covenant of grace was the only reason why he was regarded as crucified from the time of the agreement, and so declared as slain from the foundation of the world? And were it not for that fact, neither Abraham, Isaac, nor Jacob, could have been justified, for they lived near two thousand years before Christ. But as before stated, from the unchangeable nature of the parties, Christ was denominated the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world. So Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, were spoken of as living at that time by virtue of their interest in Christ, and a resurrection to a life everlasting; and I apprehend that the same rule of interpretation will apply to the language addressed to the thief on the cross, "To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise;" and still further, I suppose that virtually the language is addressed to every believing sinner, who truly accepts the substitution of Christ, from that day to this; for when faith really lays hold on Christ, it becomes a certainty beyond a peradventure.

In further proof that this language had reference to the resurrection only, and not to the intermediate state, I would refer to Christ's interpretation of it, as recorded by Luke 20: 37, 38: "Now that the dead are raised, even Moses showed at the bush, when he calleth the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. For he is not the God of the dead, but of the living: for all live unto him." And in the 35th and 36th verses, he says: "But they that are accounted worthy to obtain that world, and a resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage; neither can they die any more, for they are equal to the angels, and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection. And here I wish to notice that Christ's language leads us to the following two conclusions: first, that the human race will be finally divided into two classes, one being accounted worthy to obtain that world, and cannot die any more, implying that the other class can die. Second, their being equal in that respect to the angels, also implies that angelic nature cannot die, and is therefore immortal.

By some, the circumstance of Moses and Elijah appearing to the three disciples, talking with Jesus on the mount of transfiguration, is supposed to furnish evidence of a conscious state between death and the resurrection. For one, I see nothing of the kind, but rather see a demonstration of the fact that there was no antagonism, but perfect harmony between the legal or typical dispensation, which was about to pass away, and the new, or gospel dispensation, about to be ushered in. For, as Moses and Elijah were two prominent and remarkable characters under the old covenant, their conversing with Christ on the mount, in reference to his death, which was soon to take place at Jerusalem, showed that they regarded him as the great central and culminating point to which all the types of the covenant, under which they lived, had directed their attention, and in whom all their faith had been centered. Those three disciples were Jews, consequently, Moses' disciples by education; and Christ intended to instruct them that he and his teachings were to supplant Moses and his teachings; that the old covenant had served its purpose and must give place to the new and better covenant, without any reference to man's state or condition between his death and resurrection.

Another reason for the belief in the consciousness of the soul after death is drawn from the phenomena of dreams, while in a state of natural sleep, proving, as they suppose, that the mental is active while the physical is inactive. Is it not the fact that in sleep, the brain is as regularly supplied with life-blood by the action of the physical functions, as it is at any other time; and that only the senses, or organs of the physical system, through which the mind develops itself, are in a semi-conscious state?

Now, if the mental developments are unreliable (as dreams are admitted to be), when the brain is thus regularly supplied with the life fluid, and the physical organs in a semi-conscious state, does it not go much farther to prove the contrary; viz., that the mind is absolutely dependent on our physical organism for its power of development? For in a "disembodied state" there is no beating heart to act upon a living brain.

In closing my remarks upon this point, I will express my conviction that the doctrine of inherent immortality, and consequently a conscious state of being between death and the resurrection, is the prolific source and cause of the present system of Spiritism.

The Scriptures teach that men are to be judged according to the deeds done in the body; consequently, they are not in an accountable condition after death; but if they have a conscious existence between death and the resurrection, they must be in a lawless state; hence those vagaries.

Lest I should be misunderstood, or wrongly interpreted, I will explain what I mean by the orthodox doctrine being the source and cause of Spiritism. When the atmosphere in which we live is largely charged with malaria, we are all affected to some extent, although it does not develop in every instance, in a specific form of disease; but when it comes in contact with an individual, whose system is predisposed to bilious diseases, and in a condition to be readily affected in that direction, it then develops, perhaps in typhoid, intermittant, remittant, or some one of the numerous forms of disease, induced by that cause; so, when the mental or moral atmosphere is largely charged with any particular teaching, as is and has been the case with the doctrine of inherent immortality, and the conscious existence of the soul after death; when it comes in contact with minds in a condition for that kind of reasoning and speculation, they conclude that, if the spirits of their departed friends are conscious, they can communicate with them; and the friendship existing between them all through this life is a sufficient cause why they should do so; and their nervous system becomes so deranged, that they are in a condition, mentally, to inhale any moral virus afloat; and it is this class of persons who usually become Spiritists.

REMEMBER LOT'S WIFE.

The wife of Lot is ever to be remembered. So said the great Teacher. The record, so tersely given in Gen. 19, tells a terrible story. Her doom came swift and sudden. Undoubtedly it was not looked for. Its suddenness was therefore the more appalling. The church of God ever since, has profited by this tale of disobedience and quick retribution; more especially since our Lord so earnestly called attention to the doomed woman, and bade us consider the circumstances and causes of her fate.

But while Christ's words are of general application, and echo a warning for all in every century of the present dispensation, there is without doubt a time when this warning is specially applicable as a mighty present truth. The destruction of Sodom was a similitude and type of the destruction of the whole world at the last day. The wrath on her inhabitants prefigures the divine anger at the end of time. The escape of the righteous Lot was an emblem of the escape of the elect at doomsday. The ærial fire, called "eternal fire" in Jude 7, is of the kind that shall consume the evil (Matt. 25: 41). The whole thing photographs the coming end. The circumstances where this household fled from the city were those of impending ruin. Just at this point of time—while the end of the sinful cities was all unsuspectingly coming to them, while the wicked were intensifying their wickedness, and the pious Lot was holding himself steadfast in watchful integrity, while the family were moving toward a place of safety, while the unseen fires were being kindled—right here under the shadow of looming hovering wrath, just when the sun was hasting to rise, at the very crisis the woman perished!

"Remember" all this, said Christ. His words are pertinent (Luke 17: 24–37). He had in mind his own judgment day when he said it. He was considering the period of its nearness, describing the features of the latest times. He speaks with no uncertain meaning. To the last race of christians on earth who should live prior to the world's doom, to those who would be hasting out from Sodom to enter into the New Jerusalem, going forth to meet the Bridegroom—to these, yea, to us, reader, he says, Remember! How striking! I hear him say it now! The divine warning is a tremendous "present truth."

Not another woman in all Bible history does the stern voice of God bid us remember. This feeble soul, with her doubting heart, her wandering eyes, her uncertain steps, her worldly spirit, her possibilities of escape, and her self-incurred and strange doom, we are not to forget. And the last evil days are here. Clouds gather over the close of man's present economy. The future nears swiftly. The hot, hidden fires are in motion. The heavenly monition has gone forth. Up! get you out of this place; the Lord will destroy it. But the evil yet mock. The scoffers scoff. The night is dark. The hour of departure is near. We are looking out, have stepped out, are going out to the Zoar of Redemption! It is no time for a single soul, who beholds the nearing end, to sit at ease. Right here, and to-day, and on to the consummation, bear in mind the solemn fate of the lone and feeble, but terribly typical woman, who, while seemingly passing out of coming wrath towards a mountain of safety, miserably perished. Perished while mid-way between Sodom and Zoar. Perished in the circle of her loved ones. Perished in full view of the promised and fast-nearing asylum of Hope. And the "foolish virgins" will prove sisters to Lot's wife. O heed, O heed the King; and lest a fate more dreadful than hers come upon you, forever "remember!"—D. T. Taylor.

LOOKING DANGER IN THE FACE.

E. A. BOYNTON.

"A prudent man foreseeth the evil, and hideth himself: but the simple pass on, and are punished."—Prov. 22: 3.

It is not pleasant for one to feel that he is in danger; it is natural for men to try to think that they are safe, though they have some doubts in regard to it. But while we hope for the best, we should always prepare for the worst. It is far better to endure some anxiety and inconvenience for a time, and come off safe in the end, than to glide easily and carelessly along for the present, and not become fully aware of our danger until too late to escape. One would rather be roused suddenly from peaceful slumber, in the midst of the most delightful dreams, than left to perish in a burning building.

There are easy-going men who are convinced that their business is not in a prosperous condition, but they shrink from the task of a thorough investigation, lest they find their affairs in a state requiring the practice of industry and economy. At present their credit is good, and they are living in ease and luxury; so they let things slide along, in hopes that in some way they will come out all right. But by-and-by there comes a crash, and all is gone.

There are others who feel suspicious that they have lurking about them symptoms of a dangerous disease, but they do not like to believe it, and close their eyes against the truth. When the symptoms become more alarming, and their friends warn them of their danger, they laugh it off, saying it is nothing serious. But ere long racking pain and wasting strength tell them the truth in language which cannot be misunderstood. In mortal fear they hasten to make use of remedies; but 'tis then too late, and soon they are gone "the way of all the earth."

Thus do men deal with eternal things. They are persuaded that important matters concerning their everlasting well-being demand their prompt attention. That sin, like a deadly foe, is keeping them away from God, and dragging them down to ruin. That God has provided the only way for their escape. But their ideas of these things are vague and indistinct. They dread a careful examination of the matter, lest a knowledge of their real danger mar their peace, and the steps that leads to safety disturb their joys. So they dismiss the subject from their minds, and go carelessly on their way. But by-and-by, "when they shall say peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them; and they shall not escape." 'Tis sad for a man in comfortable circumstances to come suddenly to pinching poverty, through a willing ignorance of the real state of his affairs. 'Tis still more sad for one to be cut down in the morning of life, before he has lived out half his days, because he was not willing to believe that he was dangerously ill. But saddest of all is the case of him, who, having ample opportunity to secure an endless life of bliss in a world of glory, misses his chance, and is himself lost forever, because he will not ponder the path of his feet and see his danger in time to escape.

"GO YE INTO ALL THE WORID AND PREACH THE GOSPEL."

E. L. BITLER.

To whom does the Lord give this command? We answer—to all, to you and to me, and to that wayward sinner who has never yielded obedience to God. He has given us all talents, and has said, "Occupy till I come." All are not riquired to leave their homes and go out into the world to preach; but all ought to preach the gospel at home if not abroad. "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel." "The gospel must be preached to every nation, and then shall the end come." We infer from these words that some are to leave their homes to preach the gospel, and consecrate their all to God, in order that all may hear the gospel.

Often we are obliged to stand alone when we stand for God and the truth. Many are not willing to hear the gospel, but prefer fables or tradition. If we preach the gospel to them, and they will not hear, we are clear; they are condemned. Many are anxious to hear, and are praying the Lord to send out more laborers. If the Lord sends them among the poor, he will supply all their needs. The promise is—"His bread shall be given him; his water shall be sure." Pray ye the Lord of the harvest to send out more laborers; more who are not afraid to proclaim the whole truth to a gainsaying world; who are not afraid to die for the cause of God. God will bless the labors of such men and women. "He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him." "In due season we shall reap if we faint not." We should not be anxious about the loaves and fishes, for God will supply all our need.

COMFORTS OF PROPHECY.

H. PRATT.

To reject prophecy is to reject every precious promise of the Bible. To reject the prophetic assurance that the meek shall inherit the earth is to cast away our birthright, like Esau. To claim that heaven is to be the future place or abode of the saints is to discredit the Word of God, which says the kingdom, under the whole heavens, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High. To say that it makes no difference whether it is in heaven or on the earth is virtually charging God with folly to have said anything concerning its locality.

There is a class of people, as there ever has been in ages past, that fear God and give glory to him, as did Noah, and that tremble at his Word. Their brethren will hate them, and cast them out, and say, Let the Lord be glorified. But he shall appear to their joy.

The chronology of this class is evidently near the second coming of Christ,—near the time when a nation shall be born at once. People think to gain the approbation of God by building nice churches for him; but the Lord says, "To this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at my word." Isa. 66: 2. To the opposing class he says, "They have chosen their own ways. I also will choose their delusions, and will bring their fears upon them, because when I called none did answer; when I spake they did not hear." Isa. 66: 4. "Hear therefore the word of the Lord, ye that tremble at his word. Your brethren that hated you, that cast you out for my name's sake, said, Let the Lord be glorified: but he shall appear to your joy, and they shall be ashamed." Isa. 66: 5.

Somebody, who is of a meek and contrite spirit, and trembles at the word of the Lord is going to be remembered by him. His brethren will hate him, but the Lord will appear to his joy. Here is the comfort of prophecy.

A brother who recently embraced the truth of the soon coming of Christ was suspended from church-fellowing for six months. He says, "I never loved the Lord so well. I never studied my Bible half as much, and I never delighted so much in the service of God as now; and why my brethren should cast me out of church-fellowshship I can't understand." Brother, "He shall appear to your joy, and they shall be ashamed."

We write our mercies in the dust; but our afflictions we engrave in marble. Our memories serve us but too well to remember the latter; but we are strangely forgetful of the former.

WATCH.

"Take ye heed, watch and pray; for ye know not when the time is." MARK 13:33.

Watching implies danger. It is wakefulness required on account of danger. A knowledge and sense of danger is necessary to produce it. The design of watching is that we may be prepared to escape harm, and not be taken in a snare. The mariner watches to have his ship in order when he sees the signs of an approaching hurricane. The military commander watches to keep his army prepared for immediate action, when he learns that his foe is intending to surprise and defeat him by an unlooked-for attack.

Christ, in the above passage, very earnestly exhorts his people to watch for his second coming, lest he come and find them "sleeping;" that is, not ready to meet him. A man is not prepared for the approach of a thief when asleep; for he is ignorant of his approach, and cannot make any effort to prevent him from robbing his house. The illustration is appropriate to the case, for Paul uses it for the same purpose. See 1 Thess. 5:5.

As watching is the opposite condition from sleeping, and sleep represents an unconsciousness of approaching danger, the exhortation of the Master is that we constantly exercise ourselves to understand the approximation of his coming, so as to prepare ourselves for the grand event.

The first proof, therefore, that we are watching, according to the sense of the text, is that we are diligently applying our minds to learn the Bible evidences that the Savior is about to appear, as the wakeful man looks in all directions to learn if a thief is approaching. The second evidence is that, when the signs appear, showing that his coming is near, we are active and earnest in doing the very work appointed for that time, and to obtain translating grace; so that a perfect readiness for his coming suddenly as the lightning may be hourly enjoyed.

We believe the church has come to the very time Jesus foresaw, when it would be emphatically important to watch.

Who is watching with untiring zeal to understand the signs of the times, and looking into their hearts with earnest prayerfulness, to see if Christ's holiness is reflected there, and that all their acts conform to the divine requirements? Whose eye is running over the world, with particular interest, to see the grand foretold movements, as culminating evidences that the end of all things is at hand? Are our hearts moved with earnest prayer and deep solemnity, viewing the millions of this generation marching, under Divine appointment, with measured tread, to the scene of God's last vial upon the wicked? If the present manifestations of judgments from God upon the earth do not arouse us from the death-sleep in which men dream of coming peace and safety, then we fear that nothing but the trump of doom will awaken us to a sense of danger.

Dear ones in Christ, we exhort you as a father would exhort his only son, to pray earnestly and constantly that God may inspire you with the spirit of watchfulness, that you may know assuredly that you have unreservedly accepted Christ as your Savior. Be sure that your heart is so subdued by grace that you are willing to do or be just what he in his Word and by his Spirit requires of you. Have your heart so filled with God's love, that your will harmonize with his will, and continually and willingly yield to his commandments. Receive our exhortation, when we echo the voice of Jesus, to "Take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, and so that day (the day of Christ's coming) come upon you unawares. Do not suffer yourselves to be so taxed with the cares of unnecessary business, financially or politically, as to take your mind and interest from this great subject, which is a thousand times more important than all others. Let not the devil drag you into political contests and party wire pulling; for it will surely destroy your interest in the soon-to-be-inaugurated government of Jesus Christ.

The nations are preparing for perdition; be careful and not be found in their dragnet, for it will carry you under the last wave of death. Be careful and keep a fulness of the Spirit, for it will keep you from strife about foreign questions and theological quibbles. It will illuminate you, so that you can see present truth and its importance, the woeful condition of the world, and its tendencies to revolution and ruin, the brightening prospects for the church, and her glorious hope of speedy deliverance. Be watchful against cold, ritualistic worship, a theoretical reilgion, which does not separate from the world nor overcome the lusts of the flesh.

As we draw near the end the scenes around us will become more awful and grand, and this will produce strong emotion, and tend to unhealthy excitement; therefore watch to be calm, and not suffer new and exciting ideas to affect you. Cling with undying tenacity to the Word of God, but refuse, as chaff, men's impressions, dreams, and professed revelations. Be not disturbed by arguments which profess to give you the exact time when Christ will appear, for he has taught that your safety will depend upon watching, because "ye know not when the time is." Be sure and obtain the abiding witness in yourselves that you are prepared every moment to hear the last trumpet sound. Do not run the infinite risk of designing at some future time to surrender all to Christ. Do it without a moment's delay. O we beg of every reader, who is conscious that he is not now, while reading this article, entirely the Lord's, to lay this paper down, and fall upon his knees, and earnestly plead for full salvation,—for a thorough preparation to meet his Judge in peace! Escape to the Rock now! for the winds and floods are coming. Hasten! O hasten, ye lingering ones! for the clock rapidly ticks away your brief hour. Ye flock of God, we speak to you for the Master! Cease not to watch, but hold yourselves in readiness every moment for the ending of time! Watch!

ANOTHER SIGN.

Prophetic expositors have generally agreed that when the last national struggle among the Gentile kingdoms should come, Catholicism and Mahommedanism would both share the kingly indignation of the last great battle. We have for a long time believed this position scripturally sound. Catholicism and Mahommedanism have certainly, for the last few years, been drifting rapidly into disfavor with all the Roman kingdoms. The position Turkey has taken in the present Eastern War, and her brutal acts, has aroused the nations to contemplate, if no more, her dismemberment and departure out of Europe.

These circumstances have become to many prophetic students a sign that the last battle is near. For these reasons we have for the last two years, especially, looked with earnest expectation to see a movement inaugurated by the Pope and his satellites, to bring the Catholic wing of Christendom into some position, so that when the Great Powers attempt to crush Mahommedanism they will be under the necessity of putting their heel on Catholicism at the same time. We could not confidently believe that the present raid on Turkey would prove to be the last prophetic item of its history, unless the sound of war in Western Europe should peal forth from the jesuitical bugle. If we are not mistaken, there is now a cloud, "as large as a man's hand," rising in that quarter indicating a storm from the Vatican.

The question of Catholic intolerance in Spain is just now, designedly, we think, being agitated, and the cabinets of Europe are being petitioned in behalf of toleration. If they should interfere in favor of Protestants, then a howl of persecution would be raised, and every one of the faithful aroused to defend the Pope and their holy religion. The Jesuits seek for opposition, so that they can arouse the spirit of war and retaliation among their people. The same movement is being developed among the high officials in the French army. The London Times says:—

"The Ultramontanist zeal which first broke out in General Ducrot's camp is spreading far and wide in the upper grades of the army. After his Syllabist conference in Brittany, at which two generals on active service were President and Vice President, M. de Mun hastened to Lyons to exhort the Catholics there, and head a pilgrimage to Our Lady of Fourvieres, which is patronized by several generals and field officers and their wives. At a dejeuner to nine hundred persons which followed, Major Latour Dupin, of the 7th Army Corps, laid down in a crusading speech the doctrine that the Pope's commands are superior to all other authority. Captain Meysonnier, of the Artillery, descanted on the coming conflict in which he and his brethern might have to shed their blood in defence of the Cross. M. de Mun then made a grand and earnest oration. He said that the social, military and political renovation of France depended on obedience to the Infallible Pope. They must look to Rome as the Israelites in the wilderness looked to the brazen serpent. This religious agitation in the French army is a grave symptom."

We think it "is a grave symptom," and very ominous, under the circumstances, of a dark hour in the future. They look for a "coming conflict," and intend to take advantage of the time when the great armies are called for in the East, to establish the Pope as supreme head in the West. Another feature of the same subject is expressed in an editorial in the Times as follows:—

"The case of Greece is in many respects parallel to that of the disturbed provinces now. The diabolical outrages of the Turks, now as then—but now more quickly—have so horrified and disgusted Europe that there is a general consent in favor of a strong and sufficient intervention; the only parties not going heartily with the general current being those the Pope can influence, his Holiness caring nothing for crimes perpetrated on people who belong to the Greek Church, as it has been the policy of the Turks to show favor to Roman Catholics."

The Turks have understood for a long time that the Christian nations of Europe have contemplated the destruction of their government, and were only delaying to do it until they could agree upon the terms of its dismemberment; consequently they have sought for sympathy and help from every quarter. As there was deadly hatred between the Roman and Greek Churches; and as it has been understood that the Greeks were determined to again occupy Constantinople, the Pope naturally inclined to espouse the cause of the Sultan, not to support him finally, but to use him as a stepping-stone to elevate himself to the rulership of the world.

This Catholic movement is also inaugurated in Germany, and developing rapidly, as the following extract from a London paper will show:

"SOCIAL DEMOCRATS IN GERMANY.—The greatest alarm is being expressed in Germany at the rapid strides which are being made by the Social Democrats, the most extreme of all political parties in that country. They have never bestirred themselves as they are now doing with a view to the approaching elections. Prince Bismarck has a great dread of them. Meetings are held wherever the interference of the police is not certain to render them meaningless; and pamphlets and newspaper articles are freely disseminated among the working classes. The other day a Congress, to whose proceedings the North German Gazette has been giving serious attention, met at Gotha; and the speakers seem to have put no limit on the violence of their utterances. Above all, they made it clear that in their opinion the interests of workmen are separate from, and to a large extent opposed to those of all other classes. The pass word of the Congress was 'Hurrah for the workmen of all lands!' a phrase which excited unbounded enthusiasm. They desire to overthrow all existing institutions in favor of their own class. The powerful Ultramontane party are ready to co-operate with these Democrats to promote revolutionary movements in opposition to Bismarck's Protestant Government."—The Christian Herald.

Surely when the king of the north—Turkey—shall come to his end, and none shall help him, the "lady of kingdoms" will attempt to take the throne of earth, but kings will eat her flesh and burn her with fire; for the Lord hath spoken it.

GIFT OF THE SPIRIT.

Where we consider how willing the Lord is to "give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him," and how much it is needed by every professed christian, it seems strange that so few are in possession of the gift. There is no other one so valuable in this life; hence none that Satan tries so hard to make unpopular, or to keep men from seeking. He knows his chances of success are greatly diminished after the gift is received.

Whoever would receive the gift must first consent to make a full confession of all his sins, forsake all bad habits, and obtain pardon. Then the next thing to be done, is to consecrate his all to Christ for ever, without reserve. After the consecration comes the gift of the Spirit, which produces perfect love and peace; takes away all doubts; removes all worry about the future; produces contentment with the present, and causes one to feel ready to meet Jesus. It gives great freedom in prayer, a love for christian work, love for enemies, and patience towards all men. It also removes the disposition to fret and scold, and produces meekness, with long-suffering, and great forbearance.

Those seeking this gift should keep in mind that after pardon it is their privilege to have it at once, provided the consecration is complete. The gift is not made to depend on the amount of knowledge possessed, or the correctness of one's theological views, but solely on the consecration. It often happens that some special belief, or event, may lead one to be willing to consecrate, when they would not have done it had it been otherwise. This was the case with thousands in 1843–4, when it was believed the Lord was coming speedily. The same is true when one sees death approaching. But one is more likely to continue his consecration, when he does it without some special exciting, or alarming cause.

Some have made a great mistake in supposing it was what they believed in 1843–4 that produced their great peace and love, instead of its being the result of their consecration, and the consequent gift of the Spirit. After one has consecrated all to Christ, and received the gift of the Spirit, of course he would rejoice greatly if he saw evidence that Jesus was soon coming. This would be a natural result. But one who does not see the evidence that we are near the second coming of Christ may consecrate himself just as fully, receive the gift of the Spirit as freely, and have the same perfect peace and love as the one best informed upon the subject of prophecy and signs of the times, who has made a similar consecration; whereas, another one equally well informed on prophetic subjects may be destitute of the gift of the Spirit, because he has not made a full consecration. No doubt there are many at the present time who firmly believe all the known evidences that show Jesus is coming soon, who are not wholly consecrated to the Lord, and hence without the gift of the Spirit; while there are thousands of others who have had scarcely any light on prophetic truth, and yet have sanctified themselves wholly to the Lord, and are filled with his Spirit, thus making them all ready for his coming. All such, of course, love his appearing, and feel ready to meet him.

If the gift of the Spirit was bestowed only upon those who have a perfect knowledge of the Bible, but very few, if any, are ready to receive it; but it is so arranged, that all who will sanctify themselves wholly to the Lord may receive the precious boon. Whoever will come now, as he is, and submit without reserve to be all the Lord's for ever, and remain thus consecrated, is sure of being filled with the Spirit, and of being "kept by the power of God." He has nothing to fear so long as he continues in that condition. He may sing heartily,—

"All is well."

It affords no certainty that one is correct in theology because he has received the gift of the Spirit. It is true he is more likely to get the truth, because he will take increased delight in reading and studing the Scriptures, and will have a clearer comprehension of what they teach. As the gift tends to remove sectarianism and bigotry, and increase one's love for the truth, his heart will be open to receive it as fast as it is understood. M. G.

HOW TO BE HAPPY.

Every one wishes to be happy, yet but few secure the precious boon; for it is a gift. It is not dependent on the possession of houses and lands, gold and silver, honored position in society, pleasure parties, education, or accomplishments; for if it was, the poor, the unlearned, and laboring classes would have but a meagre share. He who is seeking after happiness as an object of pursuit, will seek in vain. It is not an object to be sought, but a result. He who lives most for the welfare of others, forgetting self-gratification, is the one whose heart will be filled with cheerful content. Our Savior spent his life in doing good to others. Let us imitate him.

The following from Thomas A. Kempis gives a true view of this subject:

"Know that the love of thyself doth hurt thee more than anything else in the world. . . . If thou seekest this or that, and wouldst be here or there to enjoy thy own will and pleasure, thou shalt never be quiet nor free from care—for in everything something will be wanting, and in every place there will be some that will cross thee. Both above and below, which way soever thou dost turn thee, everywhere thou shalt find the Cross—and everywhere of necessity thou must have patience, if thou wilt have inward peace, and enjoy an everlasting crown. . . . If thou desire to mount unto this height, thou must set out courageously, and lay the axe to the root, that thou mayst pluck up and destroy that hidden inordinate inclination to thyself, and unto all private and earthly good.

On this sin, that a man inordinately loveth himself, almost all dependeth, whatsoever is thoroughly to be overcome; which evil being once overcome and subdued, there will presently ensue great peace and tranquility. . . . I have often said unto thee, and now again I say the same, forsake thyself, resign thyself, and thou shalt enjoy much inward peace." M. G.

COMING SOON.

The last day tokens are now so plain, that a large number of ministers in the different denominations are beginning to see the signs of the times, and are saying to the people, the Lord is coming soon. Among these are many very able men, well known in the world. Says Bonar, in his Morning of Joy:

"The church's pilgrimage is nearly done. Yet she is not less a pilgrim as its end draws nigh. Nay, more so; for the last stage of the journey is the dreariest portion, and her path lies through the thickest darkness the world has yet felt. It seems as if it were only by the fitful blaze of conflagration that we can now shape our way. It is the sound of falling kingdoms that is guiding us onward. It is the fragments of broken thrones lying across our path that assure us that our route is the true one, and that its end is near,—that end, the morning with its song, and in that morning a kingdom; and in that kingdom glory; and in that glory the everlasting rest, the Sabbath of eternity."

The belief that we are living in the last days is becoming quite general among the best members of all evangelical churches. No doubt this belief will spread rapidly till all the true discpiles of Jesus will be looking for his coming, and ready to meet him when the glorious day arrives. M. G.

SOMETHING LACKING.

There is a kind of religious bankruptcy that shows lukewarmness is coming over the hearts of professors of christianity. A New York correspondent of the Boston Journal writes as follows:

"A wail of sorrow goes up from the workers among the highways, and among the lowly and sorrowing of the city. Mission schools founded with great labor and sacrifice are to be abandoned. Missionaries who have been living on a pittance have been notified that that pittance will be withheld. Stations on which great labor and toil were to be expended are to be given up. The City Missionary Society of the city of Brooklyn—the City of Churches of renowned wealth and huge memberships—is bankrupt."

This same spirit of indifference for the welfare of others is becoming quite general. But few stand ready to make a sacrifice to save others. Selfishness seems to be the ruling principle in most hearts. M. G.

BLOODY PROSPECT.—The outlook in Turkey is bloody for all who will not submit to the Mohammedan religion, as the following shows:

"The situation in Turkey is apparently not so desirable for the Christian missionaries as it might be. Mr. Barnum of Harput, Eastern Turkey mission, notes the arrival there of the Sultan's telegram appealing to faithful Moslems to rally against the enemies of their race and religion. Another missionary writes that in many places in Asia Minor the Turkish peasants take delight in sharpening their long butcher knives before their Christian neighbors, and saying, "Only a few more days and we will give you your choice between Mohammedanism and death."

It seems now quite certain that the war begun will not end till startling events transpire. M. G.

SPREADING.—The evidence comes from various sources to show that a belief in the final destruction of the wicked, and the consequent end of sin and misery, is spreading rapidly. It was stated not long since, at a lecture in London, that "two-thirds of the ministers of the Baptist Union hold these views, and several dignitaries of the Church of England, only they are not bold enough to avow their belief."

It may be expected that it will not be long before these men will speak out plainly, and with decision on the subject. Let us thank the Lord and take courage. M. G.

LEAKING OUT.—The truth keeps leaking out concerning the dark-circle performances praticed by certain Spiritualist jugglers and photographers. The following is a sample:

"A French dealer in "spirit photographs" lately confessed in open court that his calling was a fraud, and produced a box containing a number of dolls which he had employed as spiritual sitters. In spite of this two elderly and educated witnesses refused to believe that the photographs of deceased relations supplied to them were the result of trickery." M. G.

SR. R. C. BROWN, Auburn, N. Y., writes: "My husband is very low with nervous typhus fever, and we most earnestly request the prayers of God's people for his recovery. He has been sick five weeks. 'The prayer of faith shall save the sick.'"

Let all the faithful earnestly pray that our dear brother may be restored to health. ED.

THE TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, held at its rooms, 144 Hanover Street, Boston, on the 5th of September, 1876, it was voted that the Society make diligent effort to raise the sum of Two Thousand Dollars for the Tract Fund. This is one of the most important departments of our field of labor, and the Society intend to make more earnest efforts than ever before to publish the soul-stirring message of Christ's speedy second advent, and the precious truths connected therewith. To this end the Society solicits the aid of its friends and sympathizers, and hopes that donations to this object may be prompt, liberal, and hearty.

REVIVAL NEWS.

Dear Brethren:—Since my last report the Lord has been very gracious to me in the bestowment of his mercies. I have been constantly engaged in the field white with the harvest. I have been laboring in N. Georgia, E. Tennessee and N. Alabama. Bro. W. W. Livingston, of Gaylesville, Ala., has been with me a month, doing efficient service in the cause. He furnished a small mule, which we have rode alternately for some time.

We first met in Dade Co., Ga., Aug. 30th, at Bird's Chapel, once refused but now open to us, and some of her best members heartily co-operating with us. Here we had a fair and attentive audience, some of whom are much interested in the truths some call "heresy."

Aug. 31st we preached at Morganville to an attentive audience. Sept. 1st traveled about thirty miles under a burning sun, almost insufferable. Sept. 2nd to the 6th, inclusive, we preached at Bethel Church, visited the afflicted, the aged and infirm. We had many precious seasons, especially with my very infirm and aged father, Caleb Smith, now in his eighty-seventh year. A cancer has eaten out one eyeball, and though he suffers much from other local pain, he is yet buoyant with hope for the coming kingdom. His patience too is such as to call forth the highest admiration. It would seem impossible for him to read, but he has John's gospel in very large print, which he delights to read, and wishes for the Psalms and other portions of the New Testament in like print, but we cannot find such in the market. Who can furnish him by mail with either? Address Caleb Smith, in care of John W. Smith, Ottewah, James Co., Tenn. Send bill to the writer, at Long Island, and he will forward pay.

Having enjoyed several precious seasons with the dear ones, on the 7th we set out across the mountains for home, riding about forty miles. We reached Bro. J. Stevens' in the stillness of the night, when all was hushed in deep sleep. But we found the latch string out and hospitality within. 8th. I walked home nine miles, and found my family all well, which filled me with gratitude. Bro. Livingston rested at Bro. Stevens.

9th. As we had announced a protracted meeting to commence on the 13th, at Liberty Hall, near my residence, and the Baptists had appointed a protracted meeting to begin near by, on the 9th, I went to their meeting with a proposal to them, to move their meeting to the Hall, and let us all labor together when our ministers should come. Some opposed, others favored the proposal. The church waived a discussion for the present, and finally took no decided vote, but continued their meeting four days at their own house, then closed. Our meeting began the next day. Several Baptists and Methodists were in attendance, and seemed to be interested. At night the Baptist minister, T. L. Quarles, came in and assisted in the meeting. 14th. The meeting was conducted by brethren Quarles, Livingston and Stewart; the meeting assuming a more interesting character. Bro. Geo. Glines, Methodist, preached at night.

15th, 16th and 17th. Brethren Livingston, Stewart, Sims and myself labored in the meeting, teaching, exhorting and praying; in the mean time the audience was greatly increased in numbers and seriousness. Profound stillness pervaded the assembly. There was no disorder known to occur about the premises, though the parties were there of whom it might have been expected. By Sunday night prejudice seemed to melt away like wax before the fire. All were praying for union, love and harmony. All seemed importunate for a blessing. It came in copious showers. Six professed a hope in Christ for life eternal.

Sept. 18th, 19th and 20th. Bro. Quarles having been away to his own meeting, returned and was with us the last five meetings, preaching, exhorting, praying, singing and instructing the penitent. Such a return to fellowship filled me beyond the power to utter my feelings.

About four years ago these same Baptists and myself had parted company because we did not understand some truths alike. An old deacon was made to exclaim—"What good have any of us done since?" He is in for co-operation with all christians, and Bro. Quarles also gave his hand in covenant for union and co-operation with all christians in the future. Oh, thank the Lord for the love that rises above sectarianism!

Before our meeting closed sixteen persons professed a hope of salvation through Christ, and six put on Christ by baptism. Others will at the next meeting. Among the happy converts are two of my own dear children, the last of the seven, for whom I have so often prayed. To God be all the glory.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

T. S. SCOVILLE.

I have been reading several numbers of the Crisis, and articles therein call my attention to conversations I have had with many of the most intelligent men in Western and Northern New York on the signs of the times during the past summer. One wealthy gentleman in this city, last week, was asked,—"Would you like to take hold of any new enterprise?" "No, I have enough; I have all I can do to take care of what I have, and I can't take hold of new enterprises." He is one of the world's best financiers and far-sighted men. So I asked him, "What do you think of the prospects for the future?" He said, "I cannot see anything brighter; there is no prospect ahead that looks like a change for the better. We have not yet touched bottom," etc. I saw another man, called wealthy, and asked him what he was doing. "Nothing at all." "Would you like to engage in new enterprises?" "No; I find the hardest work now to hold on to and keep what I have, which is enough if I can take care of it."

So in Western New York, in Rochester and elsewhere, I have had occasion to sound many men who are large holders of real estate. They are involved almost without exception, and have more than they can do to pay interest and taxes. When they propose to buy or sell any piece of property, the first question is, "How much incumbrance?" They who have the most land, call themselves "land poor," "land paupers," etc. Here we see the fulfillment of the prophecy, "Woe unto you who add house to house and field to field, until there be no place."

Then, too, there is a large class who are piling up all the money in the country in banks. One gentleman in a bank in Rochester said to one of his old customers,—"Why don't you borrow twenty or thirty thousand dollars, and put up buildings, or take hold of some other enterprise? We have more than we know what to do with; we will be glad to furnish you with all you want, and carry it as long as you desire." Answer: "No, sir, you can't loan me a dollar. Business don't pay, now, and I can't get the money back that I invest to pay you for the borrowed money." So the bank must keep its money and sorrow over its loss of interest. "Woe unto you, rich men," etc. "Ye have heaped up treasures for the last days." You will observe here that the heaping up process is going on until the banks are glutted with money, and many of the Savings Banks actually refuse to pay interest on deposits, because they find no use for so much money. Here you see the piling up money for the last days. And when the Italian and other Communists rise to the surface, they will attack these banks, and by force scatter the heaps. Then will the great and wealthy "weep and howl over the miseries that have come upon them."

So, too, the piling up of wealth in great cities in buildings. Cities are taxed beyond endurance, and men by thousands are ceasing to build new places, and those who have built are very anxious sell out, to get rid of the taxes and the mortgages. Here, too, the prophecy comes in: "The lofty city he layeth it low, he layeth it even to the ground; he bringeth it even to the dust. The foot shall tread it down, even the feet of the poor and the steps of the needy." See Isaiah. Here, again, comes in Communism that will not only break open the banks, and take the gold and treasure heaped up for the last days, but they will burn and tear down cities and towns.

So we see land-holders are troubled, bankers are troubled, owners of city property are troubled, and the laborer is troubled. And where shall we look for relief from trial? Men have piles of gold and valuables; and they cannot unpile it unless they give it away, and they are afraid to use it. Men own blocks of houses and stores, and it is very difficult to sell or rent them, and they groan under the presure of heavy mortgages. Men own quantities of farms, which, when cultivated by proxy, pay no interest, while those who own them pay interest on heavy mortgages. Laborers are out of employ, and suffering, and they are blaming the rich for not giving them work, and see not that the rich are as helpless as themselves; and what next? Who knows when the end will be? Echo answers, who? when we inquire of the best, the shrewdest, the keenest of earth's dealers. But turn to God's Word and here is the answer. What says the Word about it. No hope but in the coming of Jesus Christ to set up the fifth great universal monarchy of earth.

The world belongs to him and he will take possession of it soon, and take home his loved and watching ones to the great marriage feast of the Lamb in glory. The days of the past have been days of invitation. "Come, for the feast is ready, and the Bridegroom is ready;" but all say "No." One to his farm, another to his merchandise, one to his oxen, and some to get married, and none care for the feast. Then the order comes, "Go out into the highways and hedges and compel them to come in."

Would to God that men would heed the mutterings of the coming storm, and get ready for Christ's second coming. The signs are nearly all fulfilled. There is only one bright spot, one glorious hope—the coming of Christ. Are we ready for that? For one I can say, yes; ready, waiting and watching.

PIPE LIGHTING.

A dreadful calamity occurred in New York a few days since; five men being suffocated and burned to death, and a ship damaged to the amount of ten thousand dollars; and all from the lighting of a pipe. The one who caused the terrible calamity perished with the rest. This was a costly smoke, but no more so than hundreds of others. If the causes of all the fires and deaths in the land could be known, we think it would be seen that a large proportion of them was the use of tobacco in smoking, chewing, and otherwise using it. Lighting pipes and cigars has resulted in the loss of many lives and much property. But no one complains. Smoking is a necessity(?) and it must be done, even in the most dangerous places, and in the midst of the most combustible matter. No one blames a man for lighting his pipe in a magazine. O, no; it was only a mistake of his lighting it there. He had to smoke; but it would have been better if he had not lighted his pipe just there, and as the sequel shows, blown up the town.

Masticating tobacco is a bad habit, indeed; but smoking is a worse one. The man who chews has it mostly to himself; and if he sits at a respectful distance, and does not spit upon you, he can be endured, and without your having the headache. But the man who smokes defiles all the air you breathe, and poisons your nerves, making you sick. Pipe and cigar lighting is mean business for any one to be in; but for a professed christian it is mean indeed. When I see it, my heart sickens at the sight, and I lose my confidence where I would have it preesrved.

I. I. LESLIE.

THINGS I LOVE TO THINK OF.

L. B. WEAVER.

I love to think, as I look over this vast creation, and see the ruin and misery, wickedness, desolation and want, of that land where none of these things can come; and I love to think, too, that every day brings us nearer to it. I love to think that no sickness, no disease can ever enter there. I love to think that death, the enemy of all mankind, will never be permitted to enter the presence of the faithful, and his footprints will never be seen. I love to think that we shall never be kept away from the dear ones because we are sick and infirm. I love to read everything that shows us we are near the end of all wickedness and strife. I love to hear the dear saints talk and pray, and to see their dear faces (a privilege I seldom have), and I love to think that the time is very near when I shall see them all together in the great city of the living God, and never fear separation. I love to think that in that sunbright clime I shall behold a beloved mother, who was more than life to me, and whom, when I needed her so much in my long years of sickness and distress, the enemy cruelly took for prey. I love to think I shall see by her side my dear father, and sit down with them to the marriage supper of the Lamb.

Dear ones in Jesus, we shall soon be there. You who have laid friends away in the dark, narrow charnel-house will see them again. The pale hue of death will alll be gone, and eternal life and beauty will take its place. Can we help loving these things?—to know that earth is soon to be brought back to Eden-like beauty,—the curse all gone, thorns and thistles, and all that is hurtful destroyed. When I think of these things, I can hardly wait another day for it to come. O break forth, illustrious morn, in all thy beauty and grandeur, and let the tired ones clap their hands for joy. What rapture, what joy and gladness will then fill our hearts! O, who does not love these things? Jesus is to be the joy and rejoicing of all God's people. I love to think of looking at him face to face, and seeing the dear hands that bear the print of the nails, pierced for you and me. I love to think that this is to be ours to enjoy forever; not for a day, a week, a month or a year, but forever, eternally. O, speed the day! My soul is full of longings to be there. O Jesus, come. Let the trumpet sound that bids us come home. I long to see Thee.

No. Dana, Mass.

Bro. Couch:—Allow me to say through the Crisis that several to whom I have sent "Mormonism Examined" have notified me that the book has not reached them. To all such I have now sent a second time. If others are in the same dilemma, let them notify me soon. All ministers may have the book of me (not of the office) at half price (25 cts) for a single copy, trusting such will circulate the work if it suits them.

Correspondence.

From Sr. J. A. Goodrich.

Dear Ones in Jesus:—I have the privilege, through the blessing of our heavenly Father, to write a few lines to those of like precious faith. I am glad that I live and can give in my testimony for Jesus. I love to think and tell of his goodness, but it never can all be told in this life. Christ is a precious Savior,—the chiefest of ten thousand, and the one altogether lovely. For the past few weeks I have had the privilege of meeting in prayer-meeting with a few dear brethren and sisters at our house. They have been seasons of great blessing to my soul. O how good the Lord is! It seems to me as if the very air must praise him.

My Father only knows how I have longed to meet with the children of God to worship. It has seemed many times as if I could not be denied; but God, for some wise purpose, did not think best, and I have tried to be submissive and stay at home; but for the past few weeks I have had the privilege of meeting with them, and it has been blessed. How good it is to mingle our voices in prayer and praise, and to hear one another tell of God's goodness.

The first meeting we had Bro. Bradford preached for us, and the Lord was with us. Some said that was the first meeting of the kind they ever attended; and if that was what they called "Advent" meetings they wondered why they did not have more of them. The next week we had Sr. Childs with us. As she began to pray, my heart was filled with praise to God that I had lived to hear her voice once more. It brought sweet memories back of seasons ten years ago on the Wilbraham campground. I shall never forget that time. It was the crowning hour of my life. There my eyes were opened to see Jesus as I never saw him before; and, bless his dear name, I have been learning to trust him with all my soul ever since. O how much I have learned since that time! I have passed through many trials, but I thank the Lord to-day that I ever was called to walk in the furnace. I am glad the Lord has led me just where he has, and I am willing to be led anywhere that he says is best for me, if I can glorify him. My prayer is—Lord, make me what I ought to be. If it is only to be a broken vessel, fit for the Master's use, I will be satisfied. I know that he will do just right by me. I have not a doubt; my sky is clear as the noonday sun, and I rejoice with all my heart that I live to hear others tell of God's goodness. When I hear them lift their voices in singing the sweet songs of Zion, I praise the Lord that I live, and that I have the privilege of hearing others sing.

I have not been able to sing for eight years, but I dearly love to hear others; and when I have the privilege I am lifted above the world and all its trials, and I feel paid for all I suffer. O praise the Lord for his loving kindness to us all! It seems as if I could not think without praising his dear name.

Last week I had the privilege of attending the tent meeting at Plainville, Conn., which was held by Bro. Grant. It was a feast to my soul. The Spirit of the Lord truly was with us and blessed us. I came home refreshed in body and soul. How blessed it is to wait upon the Lord. We are told that they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength. I have never realized it as I have in the past summer. Every promise I can claim as mine, and I can say, Who is so great a God as our God? Thou art the God that doest wonders.

"I stand upon his precious work,
My soul rejoiceth free;
The glorious light the gospel gives
Is light that shines for me."

Dear friends, while we stand upon this sure foundation, we are safe; nothing can harm us while we cling to the Rock.

New Britain, Conn.

From Sr. E. Phinney.

Dear Brn. and Srs:—It has been a long time since I have spoken to you through the Crisis. We look for that dear paper every Saturday night. I love to read it, and hold it next to the Bible. I am not far advanced in the school of Christ, but hope to know more about the Bible than I do now. O, what perilous times we are living in! Some of the people around here do not respect the the Sabbath, but engage in amusements as on any other day. I have been tempted many times not to try to lead a christian life; but I am determined, by the grace of God, to live right. I want to be prepared to meet Jesus when he comes to claim his own. I am working in a Methodist family this summer. I took a tract with me for them to read. They said they could not believe the tract, but they liked to read the Crisis. There are but few here who believe that Jesus is soon coming. Pray for me, that I may be faithful to the end.

Waterloo, Jeff. Co, Wis., Oct. 1st.

From Bro. C. Carman.

Dear Friends of like precious faith:—We are truly living in the last days of the world's probation. There are but few that can be gathered in. Like the gleanings of the harvest there is only one here and there, in some corner that has been overlooked. A few of these it has been our happy privilege, by the help of God, to gather into his fold. Praise his holy name! The glory is his.

Bro. Hamilton and myself have been holding meetings five miles south of Hamburg, Iowa. Since last spring a church has been organized, and thirteen baptized; eleven of them heads of families. Eight were men and their wives. One old man and his aged companion went into the turbid waters of the Missouri river at the same time. The old brother lacked six days of being sixty-six years old. He had never made a profession of religion before. Truly he came at the eleventh hour. He is a zealous worker in the faithful band. Others, we trust, will come soon. Pray for us.

Obituaries.

Storer. In New Britain, Conn., Sept. 11th, 1876, of neuralgia of the stomach, George Storer, aged sixty-two years.

Bro. Storer was an Israelite indeed. For many years he had been a quiet but steadfast friend of the truth, and a follower of Him who is the Way, the Truth, and the Life. Possessed of inventive talent of a high order, his busy brain had sought out many devices for the accomplishment of the mechanical labors for which the place of his residence is so famed; and the moral influence of his character was still more marked upon those around him. He had no enemies, but many friends. Kind, obliging, benevolent, and sympathetic, his loss is felt, and will be mourned far beyond the immediate circle of his relatives. Many, both young and old, from the highest to the lowest ranks of society, felt that in parting with him they had lost a valued friend.

For several summers he has suffered from attacks of "hay fever." This year we was unusually feeble, but nevertheless attended the annual campmeeting at Springfield, deriving much comfort from meeting there with the friends and loved ones of other days, and seemed greatly refreshed and spiritually strengthened.

He had for some time been subject to severe attacks of distress in the region of the stomach, and these increased in severity from time to time. The day he died he was able to be about the house, but was taken with intense pain, and in a few hours he was dead. The writer spoke words of comfort to his sorrowing friends, and Sept. 15th, on his sixty-second birthday, he was borne away and laid to rest.

A little sheaf of ripened grain, laid above his coffined form, was a fitting symbol of the end of one who came to his grave like a shock of corn fully ripe. The many christian friends who have enjoyed his fellowship, shared his hospitality, and been cheered and aided by his bounty, will drop a tear in memory of the friend they love, and breathe a prayer that the widow and the fatherless may share the kind protection of the Heavenly Father in their pilgrimage, and meet at last with him they so tenderly loved, where partings and farewells shall no more be known.

Tout. At Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 25th, of congestion of the brain, James R., only son of Thomas and Sarah Tout.

Let the prayers of God's people ascend in behalf of the afflicted ones, that in their great sorrow they may have abundant consolation. H. L. H.

Cook. In Hydeville, Vt., Sept. 20th, 1876, Bro. Wm. Cook, aged eighty-two years.

The subject of this notice was born in Deerfield, Mass. At ten years of age he moved to Clarendon, Vt., and at seventeen came to Hydeville and engaged in the business of a clothier, where he spent the remainder of his excellent life, which was of such a character as to draw the same expression from his neighbors and townsmen as Inspiration declares of Barnabas—"He was a good man." Some forty years since he embraced Christ as his Savior, and united with the Congregationalist Church, and when the "joyful sound" (Ps. 89: 15) of his near approach was heralded by Bro. Miller and others, according to the fulfillment of prophecy, he was one of the first in this region to receive and rejoice in the glad tidings. And when under the labors of Bro. Grant, in 1860, a church of Advent believers was formed in Castleton (three miles away), his heart and hand were ready for the work, and thus remained until his death. Only a few days before his death Eld. Mathewson preached in Hydeville, and as soon as the sermon was closed, the venerable form of Bro. C. stood bending under the weight and infirmity of age, to give in a blessed testimony for Jesus, and the hope that sustained his declining years. It proved to be his last. He was called to endure only about five days' illness, and sweetly fell asleep in Jesus. He leaves four children to mourn the loss of a kind father. Their mother died some seven years since. Eld. S. G. Mathewson attended his funeral, discoursing from Rev. 14: 13:—"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." B. M.

Stone. In Charlestown, Mass., Sept. 19th, 1876, Minette De S., daughter of Jasper and Mary P. Stone, aged seventeen years.

The numerous friends who have shared the generous hospitality of Brother and Sister Stone during the years that have passed, will cherish pleasant recollections of Nettie, who with her parents, brother and four sisters, always gave hearty welcome to the weary wayfarer who turned aside to tarry there. Gentle, thoughtful and loving, she has for the last few months of her life given indications of the inward working of the grace of God, conversing with several of her young friends on the subject of religion and the importance of giving their hearts to Christ.

Her sickness was protracted, and for many days her mind was wandering, but in her lucid intervals her words and acts gave token of her interest in those things which pertained to her eternal welfare. She desired the prayers of christian friends, and lifted her feeble voice in snatches of sacred song, and said to those around her, "God loves me."

A wide circle of relatives, friends and acquaintances, deeply mourn her loss; and those who knew her most intimately have hope in her death, and look to see her face when the day shall break and the shadows flee away.

Let the prayers of God's people ascend, that this affliction may be blessed to the welfare of those who survive, and that He who is not unrighteous to forget the labor of love of those who do minister to his saints, may at last gather the whole family to meet an unbroken circle in the paradise of God. H. L. H.

Skerry. In Liverpool, N. S., Aug. 31st, '76, of numb palsy, Bro. James Skerry, aged seventy-eight years.

Bro. Skerry was a strong advocate of and believer in the speedy coming of Jesus, and all the blessed, thrilling truths connected therewith, which we hold as a people. He loved to work for his Master and for the salvation of the perishing, and had been engaged in gospel labor as a Baptist local preacher in the early part of his life. About nine years ago he received the Advent doctrines, and was always active in setting them forth at every fitting opportunity. He bore his sufferings with christian fortitude and Christ-like resignation, telling all those who surrounded his bedside to prepare for the coming of the dear Redeemer. How few shine as brightly in their dying moments as did Bro. S. Another father in Israel has fallen by the power of the enemy. May his waking be to life and glory eternal. He leaves sons, daughters and friends to mourn his loss. Words of comfort by the writer. F. Albert Verge.

Tripp. In Bonny Eagle, Me., Sept. 18th, '76, of consumption, Sr. Eva S. Tripp, aged about 18 years.

After a long and painful sickness of nine months, our beloved sister sweetly fell asleep in Jesus. During a revival which visited the place last spring, Eva, though confined to a bed of sickness, gave her heart to the Lord, and received the evidence that all was well. A sister asked her a few days before her death if she enjoyed her mind religiously; she answered with a heavenly smile, "O yes! I don,t know what I should now do if I did not." She sleeps in Jesus, and rests in hope. She bore her sufferings with fortitude. She was conscious to the last, and made all arrangements for her funeral. Thus has the last of three daughters fallen under this wasting and fatal disease—consumption. May the blessing of God rest upon this mourning circle, and bring them to meet Eva beyond the dark river of death. By request the funeral was attended by the writer.

G. F. Haines.

Knowlton. In Morrill, Me., Aug. 20th, 1876, Bro. Amos Knowlton, aged fifty-three years.

Our brother was deprived of a father's care at an early age, and for years labored hard with his mother, to provide for his sisters younger than himself, who now all sleep except one, who with a faithful wife and an aged mother are left to mourn. Our brother has given of his substance, for years, to help in proclaiming the gospel of the kingdom of God at hand. He will rest until the morning breaks and the shadows flee away. May the grace of a covenant keeping God comfort the mourning ones. Funeral sermon by the writer from a text chosen by the deceased from Job 14: 14, "If a man die shall he live again?" Jer. Carr.

Thompson. In Bath, Me., Aug. 31st, 1876, Bro. Henry W. Thompson, aged thirty-four years.

Bro. Thompson had for many years been a consistent follower of the Lord Jesus Christ, and a firm believer in his speedy and glorious return to earth; and after patiently enduring a painful sickness, he fell asleep in Jesus, in the full assurance of soon coming up in the first resurrection to die no more. He leaves a devoted wife and two little children, the youngest of whom was born only a day or two before his death. May the Lord comfort and sustain them in their deep affliction. A. C. Palmer.

Allen. In North Hyde Park, Vt., Sept. 20th, 1876, Frank L. Allen, son of Leonard F. and Cynthia B. Allen, aged nine years and two months.

This intelligent little fellow, who died of inflammatory rheumatism, being sick only two weeks, realized from the first that he must die, and said he did not want to live, for he might grow up to to do wrong; and now he was ready. He hoped Jesus would come, so he and his parents and brother and sisters might all be together. Services by the writer from Jer. 31: 16, 17.

FOREIGN NEWS.

London, Oct. 16. The Times, in a leading editorial, says: "The conduct of Russia makes it certain that if Turkey does not accept the proposals of the powers Russia will intervene. The crisis is an anxious one. We seem to have reached a position in which six weeks will decide an issue of more moment to Europe than any which has arisen since the great wars at the commencement of the century.

Russia's refusal of the five months' armistice is to be condemned, but the Porte would be extremely unwise to refuse a short armistice. The Turkish rulers have, we fear, determined not to yield much more, and Russia may soon be at the mercy of the storm she has raised.

It is not too late to keep Russia back. If any country can save the world from a tremendous war it is Germany. She has the power to compel the acceptance, at least, of a truce.

It depends on Prince Bismarck whether that power is to be used. Let him only say that Germany will not permit Russia to plant herself on the Danube and the Czar will find means to stop the Sclavonic enthusiasm which is carrying him and the whole world to war. No State has more at stake than Germany.

South Boston.

The brethren in South Boston, believing in the near coming of Jesus and kindred truths, desiring to let their light shine, have leased a Hall corner of Dorchester and National Streets (close by Broadway), where they mean to have "the gospel of the kingdom" preached. They do not mean to ride, or allow hobby riding, but desire a place where the Lord's coming may be kept before the people. They desire the prayers and cooperation of all the lovers of the truth in Boston. Where there are more than three hundred thousand souls, there ought to be a place where those of "like precious faith" can meet together, and where these truths can be proclaimed unmixed with the traditions of men. Pray for this meeting. For the brethren, A. P. Moore.

New Hampshire Adv. Chris. Conference.

The next annual session of the New Hampshire Advent Christian Conference will be held with the church in Manchester, N. H., commencing Tuesday evening, Oct. 24th, and hold over the following Sunday. Our Constitution requires all our preachers to report personally or by letter. We wish all our churches to make an extra effort and send their quota of delegates. Each church is entitled to one delegate, and one additional one for every twenty-five members. Fare will be reduced on the Concord and Claremont and Northern Railroads as usual. Passengers will purchase their tickets on these roads of the conductors in the cars. Call for Conference Tickets.

Concord Road. Conference Tickets, at reduced rates, can be purchased at Concord, Suncook, Hooksett, Nashua, Epping, N. M. Junction, Portsmouth, Goffstown, N. Weare and Lawrence.

The B. C. and M. Road will reduce as formerly. Purchase regular tickets for Concord, and receive return passes at the meeting.

A. Ross, President.
C. H. Fletcher, Secretary.

Hoosick Valley A. C. Conference.

It was voted at our July Quarterly Conference to hold our next Annual Conference for Oct. with Bro. Mathewson and the church at Castleton, Vt. It has been appointed to commence Wednesday evening, Oct. 25th, and continue its meetings over the following Sabbath. The election of officers, the reports of preachers and delegates from the churches, and other business of importance, comprise the order of business for these meetings; and it is very important that all the preachers of this Conference should be present, or at least be represented by letter; and it is also expected that all the churches will report by delegates, or letter. The chapel is only a short way from the depot, which stands at the junction of railroads from the South, East and West.

Let all be prompt to attend the first meeting, as the first meeting for business will probably be on Thursday.

H. K. Flagg, Pres.

Notice.—The next Quarterly Session of the Eastern District of the Massachusetts Conference will be holden with the church at Wakefield, Mass., commencing Thursday evening, Nov. 2nd, and continue over the following Sabbath. We earnestly solicit the presence of the preaching brethren of the District, and of as many of the brethren and sisters as can attend. J. Couch, Com.

Notice.—Should time continue and the Lord will, I will hold a protracted meeting in West Poland, Me., commencing Wednesday evening, Nov. 1st, and hold over the following Sabbath.

A. Ross.

Connecticut A. C. Conference.

The Lord willing the Connecticut A. C. Conference will be held at New Britain, commencing Wednesday evening, Oct. 18th, and continue over Sunday, Oct. 22nd. As this is the annual meeting, and officers are to be chosen, a full attendance is requested. The business session will begin Thursday, promptly at 10 o'clock a. m., and it is hoped may be finished the same day, that the remainder of the time be devoted to prayer, conference and preaching the Word of life. Pray that the blessing of the Lord may attend.

O. D. Woodruff, Secretary.

Notice.—There will be a meeting of the friends of Jesus and his truth on Rattle Snake Creek, Lincoln Co., Kansas, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 26th, and holding over the Sabbath. A movement will be made at the same time to form a conference of Christian Adventists. It is hoped that all of those interested in the spread of truth in Western Kansas will be present, and come ready to labor for the welfare of the cause.

Eld. J. S. Thorp.

Notice.—The Ohio State Advent Christian Conference will convene at Norwalk, Ohio, on Thursday, Oct. 26th, and continue over the following Sabbath. Let every church in the State be represented by delegates. Bro. Frank Burr is expected to be present.

A. I. Flaharty, Secretary.

Conference.—There will be a Conference, if the Lord will, at East Palermo, Me., to commence Friday, Oct. 27th, at two o'clock p. m., and continue over Sunday. Let all come prepared to work for the salvation of the perishing, and the building up of the saints. Homes will be provided for all. Call on B. R. Tibbitts, Rufus Colby, Mrs. Lorana Chadwick. G. W. Weeks.
Jer. Carr.

Notice.—There will be a business meeting of the stockholders of the New East Maine Mission Tent, held at the school-house at East Palermo, Saturday, at four o'clock p. m., Oct. 28th.

Wm. H. Wing, Secretary.

Quarterly Meeting.—The first Quarterly Meeting of the Minona District A. C. C., Minnesota, will be held at Utica, Minona Co., Oct. 27th, to commence at seven o'clock p. m., and hold over Lord's day. Peter Mitson, Sec.

Quarterly Meeting.—A Quarterly Meeting will be held at Brodhead, Wis., beginning Friday night, Nov. 3d. Let us have a general assembly of ministers and members within the district.

Wm. Sheldon.

Dedication.—The Advent Christian Chapel in Exeter, R. I., will be dedicated, if the Lord will, Sunday, Oct. 29th. We hope to see a number of the brethren from abroad. We pray that it may be a profitable season. E. R. Wood.

Notice.—All action in regard to removing the Mechanic Falls Me. Campmeeting to some other locality, is indefinitely postponed.

R. R. York, for Committee.

Notice.

Notice.—To all whom it may concern, and especially to the German brethren in Jesus, greeting: Dear brethren in one faith, as the time is at hand that our beloved Master will return to establish his kingdom on the earth and destroy all the kingdoms and ungodly men of this world, and as there are thousands of German people in this country without being warned of the great and terrible day to come; and whereas, our beloved brother L. Reimer is compelled to give up the publication of the "Bible Searcher," that worthy medium by which hundreds had a true warning; therefore we are resolved to hold a General Conference October 26th, at the German Advent Church, corner Chicago Avenue and Chase street, to consider these matters, and take steps to organize a Home Mission for our German friends; also to take steps to resume the issue of the "Bible Searcher." For this purpose we appeal to every one who loves Jesus and the blessed truth, and has the love of their German countrymen at heart, to respond from east and west, from north and south, by letter or personally, and state how much you can do to aid the cause of our beloved Master and for a perishing world. Brethren, let us come together as one man to this meeting. We can obtain lodging for all that come. We desire each church to send a delegate with power to act. Brethren, do quickly what is to be done, for time is short. Jesus is coming soon, and will reward us according to our works. Our English brethren, who are interested in our German Mission, are cordially invited to take part, either by letter or otherwise. Address Eld. Chas. Koier, 229 Noble street, Chicago, Ill. By vote of the church.

Chas. Koier, Johann Kulicke, Johann Protz, Church Officers.

Notice.—A Protracted Meeting will commence at South Rochester, N. H., Nov. 2nd, and hold over the following Sabbath. A general invitation is given to all lovers of the Lord.

D. F. Leavitt.
Levi Allen.

The church in Wakefield is supplied with preaching the first and third Sundays of each month, by Elder B. Finney. Brethren wishing to appoint for either of the remaining Sundays, please correspond with G. R. Tyzzer, or B. Finney.

Appointments

☞ Appointments must be received as early as TUESDAY MORNING (as our paper goes to press about noon) to insure insertion for the coming week.

☞ The following Resolution was passed at the late meeting of the A. C. P. Society:—

"Resolved, That no appointments be published in the Crisis henceforth for persons unknown to the Editorial Board (by which is understood the Editors, Editorial Committee, and Business Agent), unless satisfactory reference shall be given."

The Committee appointed by the Adv. Chris. Association, at its last Annual Meeting, to advise with the Editorial Board "in relation to the publication in the World's Crisis of the appointments of men unworthy of recognition as preachers," having attended to the duty assigned them, recommended, and the Editorial Board have adopted, and ordered to be published, the following resolution:—

"Resolved, That when the Editorial Board is properly notified by any of our Churches, or Ministers, or responsible persons, by a written allegation that a certain minister, or ministers, lack moral character, that they be instructed to notify such minister, or ministers, of the information received, as a reason for withholding their appointments till after a proper trial and acquittal."

All communications in relation to this matter should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board—Geo. T. Adams, Boston, Mass.

THE DAY IS AT HAND.

Dark over earth the night of doom is sweeping;
Loud wail the winds, and ocean, evermore
Wild with despair and agony of weeping,
Billow on billow piles upon the shore.

What is this horror every heart possessing?
What the sad thought which lurks in every soul,
Vague and perplexed, which neither hand caressing
Nor soothing speech may lessen or control?

Surely a warning of some awful sorrow,
Such as mankind have never felt before;
Surely an earnest of that dread to-morrow,
When in a moment time shall be no more!

Vainly has all the wisdom of the ages
Wearied and spent itself in labored schemes,
Seeking, through science or in nature's pages,
The consummation of its idle dreams.

Dreams of a world no longer half benighted,
Dreams of humanity sublime and pure,
In one great brotherhood at length united,
Happy and peaceful, and from death secure.

Ah! they were beautiful, these hopes, and glorious,
Worthy of minds too subtle for a creed!
Man o'er himself and over all victorious—
That were a triumph and a boast indeed.

Is the world better, wiser for their teachings?
Is there less sin or misery or crime?
Or is it still the 'foolishness of preaching'
Strikes to the heart as in the olden time?

Hark to the answer, oft in vain repeated:
"Only One hand o'er evil can prevail—
Christ with the Father in the highest seated,
Listen, oh! listen to creation's wail!"

What! hear ye not above the strife of nations
The rolling of His chariot wheels afar,
Borne along space in measureless pulsations,
Swifter than sunbeam or the light of star?

What! hear ye not a voice, a whisper saying ('Mid signs and wonders wrought in every land),
"Be sober, O my children, watchful, praying;
Night is far spent—the daylight is at hand!"

Yes; there are tokens not to be mistaken,
Telling of judgment ever drawing near;
Time's last sands are in his hour-glass shaken,
Trembling he sees the great white throne appear.

Lord, in that last dread hour of thy returning,
Grant that we all at thy right hand may be Safe, while in flames a guilty world is burning,
Within the shelter of Thy love and Thee.

—Episcopal Recorder.—Sel. by M. G. Couch.

WHERE ARE THE DEAD?

Dear Sir,—Your correspondent, "M. M.," has in your journal for April last asked a few questions relative to the place and condition of the dead, and requested me to reply to them. I will endeavor to do so, though I do not think I can add anything to what I have stated at some length in my work on "Hades." Time and thought have only convinced me more fully of the truth of the general principles there laid down, and of their extreme importance.

One question which "M. M." puts is—Where are the dead?

I must confess that I feel surprised how any one acquainted with Scripture can be at a loss for a reply to this question. Scripture always represents the dead as lying in their graves. I will refer to but one example, but that ought to be enough. When the women who came to see the sepulchre of Christ on the morning of the resurrection were terrified at sight of the angel seated there, the latter spoke to them in these words: "Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus which was crucified. He is not here; for he has risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay." (Matt. 26: 5, 6). As Jesus, when dead really and truly, according to Scripture, lay in his grave, so, according to Scripture, do all the dead. Human theorists may imagine the dead to be in heaven, or paradise; but God's word tells us they are in their graves, and with God's word we ought to be satisfied.

Your correspondent wishes me to say somethimg of that spirit of man which in death has left man, and which, in my work on "Hades," as well as in my article in the Rainbow for December, 1874, I suppose to continue living during the state of death.

A reference to Gen. 2: 7, teaches us probably nearly all that we know, as to what this spirit is. It is there called "the breath of life," and is said to have been breathed into man's nostrils from God himself, for the purpose, and with the effect, of making man, who was hitherto but a lifeless organized frame, become a living soul. This spirit was not the man himself, but was an emanation or breathing forth from God, and was essential to impart life to man. Elsewhere it is called God's Spirit, and is affirmed to reside in every creature that is possessed of life at all, and whose death is said to result from God's taking back to himself this his spirit and his breath. (Gen. 7: 21–22; Job 34: 14.) This spirit is not the man. The full and circumstantial account of Stephen's death ought to teach us this. We are told that in dying he commended his spirit into the hands of Jesus, while he himself fell asleep. (Acts 7: 59–60). In death the Spirit of Stephen was separated from Stephen. It went back to God, while Stephen fell asleep, and was carried by devout men to his grave (Acts 7: 2.)

More than this is not told us of the spirit. It is not the man, though in life it belongs to man, and is essential to his life. It is not, either before, or during, or after human life, what we call an individual or person. Being God's breath, I do not suppose it it capable of death. Beyond these things I could not, nor have I ever attempted to, explain what the spirit is. If any one can give me further information, I will accept it thankfully.

Your correspondent further inquires, whether "man dies precisely in the same way" as beasts die? I reply that he does. Throughout the Bible we are never told that he does not. In the Bible we are expressly told that he does. In Eccl. 3: 19 we read: "That which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them; as the one dieth so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath (Hebrew ruach, spirit); so that a man hath no pre-eminence above a beast." Here is God's testimony to the humbling truth that man dies precisely in the same way as the brutes. It is the idea of resurrection—which the Christian church seems to regard as a mere trifle, if true at all—which makes, so far as regards life, the difference between man and beast. This idea, however, makes a marvelous difference indeed.

Your correspondent further asks, "Is there any thing kept by God's power more than is kept of a beast, and if so, what is it?"

While the condition of death is, according to Scripture, the very same for man and beast, there is yet, as regards the redeemed, a difference as to that which is "kept by God's power" of an incalculable kind. The beast in death has perished forever. Of his people Christ has said, "There shall not an hair of your head perish." (Luke 21: 18.) Body, soul and spirit are all safe in God's keeping for his people. The spirit which once animated them shall animate them again. They shall rise, the same beings they were before, except that they shall be in a higher condition, being made equal to the angels. Surely such a view as this is a grand and glorious view for the redeemed of Christ, while it does not impose upon us the hopeless task of proving that dead men are alive. It leaves to God's words—"in the day thou eatest thou shalt surely die"—all their proper force; while in doing so, it magnifies that work of Christ which redeems the dead from the power of the grave.

MISTAKES.

G. B. MERRILL.

How many there are who imbibe the idea that peace is feeling—emotion. This is a mistake. Peace is not emotion; it is a state of the mind. It is rest, quietness. It is rest from commotion; reconciliation of differences; a state not hostile. Now let me inquire, Has all differences with us and God ceased? Have we become reconciled to him? Are we no longer hostile to his government? Has war ended between us and the dear Lord? If so, then we have peace, rest, quietness of mind. We are satisfied; we are in harmony with the will and plan of God. Take up those weapons again, disobey, rebel against him, and peace departs. But so long as we obey God we have peace; we have rest. No matter if we do not feel it, peace is ours. "My peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid."

Reader, have you this peace? If not, come to Jesus. He can give it to you. He can give you rest and quietness of soul that none else can give. Nothing can impart such sweet peace as the dear Lord can bestow upon a soul that fully trusts and abides in him. We read: "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee."

Dear ones, trust in the Lord, and have peace. Remember that Jesus said to the sea one time, "Peace, be still: and there was a great calm." He can also say to our troubled souls, "Peace." Come to him, and enter rest. "They that believe do enter into rest"—quietness. O how sweet this rest of faith—this rest in Jesus. When resting in Christ, we can calmly look on the most trying and difficult scenes of this life, and feel that all is well. We may learn a lesson from the fish of the sea. If the ocean is rough and boisterous, they go down deep into the waters, and there rest; for it is all quiet and still down there. So we may go down into God, and there rest secure from the wiles or the frowns of a cold and heartless world.

There are not a few who, after hearing of such experience think that, because they do not have the same, or feel as they imagine others do, their peace is gone, and in the agony of their soul we hear them crying out, "O that I had such sweet peace." This is a mistake. Mow we must not compare our experience with that of another's; for all do not have the same experience—do not feel the same. God does not deal with all alike. We sometimes sing:

"By his own hand he leadeth me," but, he does not lead all over the same road. He leads some one way, others in another. Hence the variation in our testimonies and experiences. Each one having an experience according as God shall deal with and lead them. An experience peculiar to one's self. Such an experience as the dear, loving Lord shall be pleased to give we ought to accept. Do not look to the experience of others, or to self, but to Jesus. Do not expect anything of self, but every thing of God. Accept what he gives; live a life of faith; live in God; have Christ formed within the hope of glory. O look to him who is the author and finisher of our faith. When tried, tempted, or afflicted, when sick or when poor, when forsaken or when dying, look to him. "My grace," Jesus says, "is sufficient for thee."

Seeing so many make the above mistakes, we felt to offer these thoughts to you, and we trust they will be beneficial to all who read; and we, through the grace and mercy of God, be at last safely gathered into the everlasting kingdom of our divine and blessed Lord.

Worcester, Mass.

ALL FOR CHRIST.

What a change would take place in the life of a christian who would carry out the spirit of this caption in his daily life! Who can estimate it? He begins every day with Christ. Spends and closes it with him. He thinks, speaks and works with the simple desire to glorify Christ. In that every act is regulated in accordance with this determination.

Is this possible, practical? Surely, God does not ask impossible things. Jesus, our example, as well as Lord and Savior, did this. Paul, the aged, could say, "For me to live is Christ." Long before this he had urged his brethren to do all things for the glory of God. Who can lay a finger on a word he wrote, or an act, or a speech which is not in the strictest conformity to this? From the day he saw the glorified Christ at Damascas, he lived only for Jesus. What was possible to him is for any other christian who wills to have it so. If possible, how wrong not to do it. Every christian, then, may put this motto over every transaction or duty of life. He may do business, work, recreate, study, think, read, eat, drink, sleep, all for Christ. There is not anything, which he ought to do, which he should not do for Jesus. There are many who carry out this principle in some measure; but who dare say he lives wholly for Christ? Yet this alone is the true life of a christian, its source, sustenance, fashion, end, all centering in the one word Christ.

Estimate, if you can, the effect of one such example in the business world, in the church, in the home. What if all christians would be such examples, as they ought to be! You cannot do business so? Is not God to be trusted? Who has any right to say No, until he has tried it? Think of the blissful life such an one would lead. What peace, what joy, what blessedness! If there is any secret in a happy life, is it not to be found in living as always in God's presence, doing nothing to displease him, everything for his glory? It would cost something, no doubt, because of our unbelief, but would it not pay an hundred fold in joy and happiness? All who want true, abiding, perfect peace, can have it in this way.—Sel.

LOOK AT THIS, THEN AT THAT.

First, this: The Astors, the New York millionaires, are to erect a memorial altar in Trinity Church, at a cost of $100,000. This costly piece of useless extravagance will never benefit anybody to the value of five cents. It will be a minister of ritualistic nonsense, and a cold monument of pride and selfishness. It will not bring the smallest blessing to any of earth's poor and suffering ones. It will not put a single drop of joy into the ocean of human sorrow nor kindle a single smile on the wan and wasted faces of starving widows and children. The little mites of the widow will outshine the gorgeous Trinity altar, as the sun outshines the Will-o,the-wisp. The monument of kind words that Jesus raised to the memory of a grateful woman will stand when Trinity and its wealth have fallen into common dust.

Second, that: In the magnificent Greenwood Cemetery, New York, some one recently discovered an unhappy mother, lying with her four little children huddled about her, on the grave of her husband. The poor sufferers had been turned out of the tenement for which they could no longer pay rent, and the great, wealthy city had no room for them, so they crept away among the silent abodes of the dead, and gave themselves up to starvation! Dying of starvation under the very shadow of hundred thousand dollar monuments! Dying unsheltered and unfed, while Trinity holds millions of wealth, and the Astors pour one hundred thousand on a proud altar! Dying for want of ten cents' worth of bread, while the millionaires of the great city are giving them hundred thousand dollar stones!

Look at this, then at that, and hear the plaintive voice of the Man of Sorrows, sounding through the wailings of our sad world: "I was an hungered, and ye gave me no meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me not in; sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not."—"Inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of the least of these, ye did it not to me."—Protestant Messenger.

Correspondence.

From Bro. F. P. Dingley.

I have a few thoughts on my mind that I would like to express to the brethren and sisters through the Crisis, if the space can be allowed me; it will be all well if it cannot be. I have no new hope to present, but the same blessed one which all our fathers cherished, and which caused them so much suffering and ignominy; but they chose it with its afflictions, rather than to renounce it, looking forward to its glorious consummation. It was their delight, and it is good enough for me. I love it, and am hoping soon to realize the great benefits to be derived from entertaining it.

I think that we who are looking for Christ soon to come, need to have his love down deeper in our hearts; so deep, that it will absorb our entire being, and make us more effectual in the hands of God in saving our friends and neighbors. Our manner of conducting ourselves before all should be honest, upright toward God and with singleness of heart; so we can preach to a perishing world God's revealed truth. This may be the means which God has ordained to bring our friends to a knowledge of the truth, and of saving the ones we love best.

I am glad to read the testimonies of brethren and sisters who are cleansing themselves from all filthiness of the flesh, and perfecting holiness in the sight of God. We are in the cleansing time. God's spirit is abroad in the earth. The fountain is open deep and wide. Grace is freely offered; therefore leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection.

This temple (our body) should be dedicated to God; and whether we eat, drink, or whatever we do, we should seek to please him in all things. Eating to God's glory I think is not to be overlooked by us, especially in this time, when gluttony rages so fearfully. It is detrimental to the cause of Christ. I know this to be true from my own personal experience as well as from what I have seen in others. As far as I have lived healthfully and temperately, the Lord has blest me abundantly, and I believe he will bless his people now as of old, if they seek to glorify him.

The present war in the East, together with the other signs which God has given this generation, bespeak temporary affairs about ended, and a new era about to dawn; and it is high time that the church should awake to righteousness; cast off the works of darkness and put on the armor of light. She should be watching, intensely watching, with much prayer and fasting, for the glorious change soon coming. A little while, and He who died that we might live will come to take to Himself His blood-bought children; and then earth's saved family will live with him in glory.

Seeing that Jesus has done so much for us in the past, and is doing so much for us at present, and has promised so much in the future, and that we are looking for these things soon to come, what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness?

May the Lord bless us, one and all, and help us to think of these things as we should, lead us in all truth, keep us from all perils, and at last present us before the throne of Christ Jesus with exceeding joy. Pray for us, for we trust we have a good conscience, in all things willing to live honestly.

So. Casco, Me., Sept. 26th.

From Sr. N. Stickney.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in the Lord:—I have been a reader of the Crisis quite a number of years, and have become a believer in its teachings. I esteem it a great privilege to have a religious, weekly paper, and hear how the Lord is with his people that serve him. It encourages me to be faithful. I do enjoy meeting with my dear brethren and sisters who have the fruits of the Spirit, which are love, joy, peace and long-suffering. It is our privilege to grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. The way grows brighter as we draw nearer to Christ, and will as long as we keep in the way.

I started to serve the Lord in early life. I heard Bro. Miller preach, and expected to see the Lord in '43; but the vision tarried. Years rolled on, and my privileges were with the Methodists, but as soon as I heard the coming of the Lord again I did really love the sound. The sleep of the dead was a new doctrine to me. My faith was in being with Christ at death; but now I have become a believer in the sleep of the dead until the Life-giver comes to raise up our loved ones. Jesus says, "I am the Resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." We have a sure word of prophecy whereunto we do well to take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place until the day dawn. We know that "no prophecy of the Scripture is of any private interpretation." "For the prophesy came not in old time by the will of man, but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." Oh may I heed the Word, and watch and pray. I believe the Word teaches that Jesus can save from all sin. Is it not a great privilege to be free in Christ?

Orford, N. H.

From Bro. S. Davis.

Editor of the Crisis:—Dear Bro.,—Near three years ago I subscribed for the Crisis, and have recieved it regularly. The time (one year) for which I subscribed having expired, and finding myself too poor to spare the money to pay for another year, I felt greatly depressed to think I should have to live without it. But thanks be to our Heavenly Father, from whom all our blessings flow, you have been able to continue to send it. Enclosed please find a mite to be placed to my credit.

We are poor, and having one of the hardest times to get food and raiment I have ever seen; but while we are burdened heavily with taxation, caused from misrule of our State Government, and such irregular seasons, that for the last two years we have not made a full support, we are not without "hope." I believe we are living in the last days of earth-scenes, and that the time will soon come when we shall be relieved of the heavy burdens of taxation, and a Government will be established where there will be no misrule. Glory to God for the hope!

We have just closed one of our meetings, commenced at Oak Grove, and closed at Deep Creek. O, what a heavenly feast we have had! There were nine persons added to the church. Bro. T. J. Green is laboring hard, and under such disadvantages that it seems no one not filled with the love of God could do what he has done.

Brethren and sisters unite with us in praying for him and his family, the larger portion of whom are sick, that he may be restored to health, and be able to continue the good work of preaching the gospel of the kingdom. His family is very destitute, and he has to labor hard (when able) in the field to make a support for them.

Pray for us, brethren and sisters of the Church, both North and South, that we in our weak condition may hold out faithful to the end.

Benton, Columbia Co., Fla.

From Sr. P. M. Root.

My dear Brethren and Sisters in the Lord:—I have taken the Crisis one year, and I think it is an excellent paper. When I read the cheering letters from dear ones of "like precious faith," it seems to me if I could only see them and talk with them about Jesus and his coming, my joy would be great. But we must wait. The time is coming when we shall meet face to face in the presence of king Jesus; then our joy will be full. Is it not glorious to know that God has a time for all things and all things will be done in his own good time.

When I was reading Sr. Woodworth's letter and saw that her experience was almost precisely like my own, I wept for joy, to think that our heavenly Father has overruled all our sorrows for our good, and helped us to overcome and stand firmly on the Lord's side. I am so glad that my heart was ever inclined to be a worker in the vineyard of the Lord, and that I am numbered with those that are looking for his return.

When I read the Bible, I pray God to lead my mind; and he has led me to see the truth as I never saw it before. A friend asked me not long since if I was one of the "sleepy dead Adventists." "I am," said I, "because my Bible teaches me that the dead know not anything. But I believe that our Saviour is soon coming, then those who have died in the Lord will be raised; for the Scriptures teach us that the dead in Christ shall rise first."

Christian friends, pray for me, that I with you may be wise, and have my lamp trimmed and burning when Jesus comes. I want to see the kingdom, and dwell with those who shall rule as kings and priests unto God.

Fort Edward, Washington Co., N. Y.

From Bro. M. Whiting.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—The Lord has given me one talent, and I mean by his grace assisting me to improve it in such a manner as may be pleasing in his sight.

Some three years ago, God called me out of the English Episcopal Church, and bade me take my Bible and stand out on its teachings, where, thank God, I stand to-day, and where by his grace assisting me, I find sweet peace that I never found in the church in former years.

For a time I studied over my infant baptism, or rather sprinkling. I earnestly prayed the Lord to show me the true way; and what a flood of light broke in upon my waiting soul. Waiting, I say; yes, waiting for a revelation of God's will concerning me. And as the command to repent and be baptized had never by me been obeyed, and the light which I received pointed so directly to this as duty, I could not disbelieve the word, or be mistaken in the Spirit as a witness; therefore in willing obedience I was led into the water by our dear Bro. Leslie, and there, praise be to God's holy name, left all my former tradition. Since that time I have been trying to live as becometh a child of God.

I am no public speaker, but may I not write in honor and praise of the Lord, and tell of his wondrous love towards me? O, my dear friends, I would not be unfaithful, but I desire to do or say something for my blessed Savior. Oh! the unspeakable riches of God's blessing, this frail mind fails to comprehend; and the thought ofttimes arises, What am I, that God is mindful of me, even me? Stupendous love!

I was taught from a child to believe in God, the Father Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth, and in Jesus Christ his Son; but while I was taught God's great principle of justice and judgment I heard nothing said about his mercies. And while I was taught to believe (as I do to-day) that I was born in sin, and under the penalty of death, I was never made to understand fully the great plan of salvation through our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. But thanks be to his holy name, he has caused the scales to fall from my blinded eyes, and I now see clearly and understand more perfectly his great mercies as well as judgments, and the free gift of his Holy Spirit. It is my privilege to sing—

'Free from the law, oh, happy condition!
Jesus has bled, and there is remission."

and I would earnestly thank the Lord for what he has done for me, unworthy as I am.

Pray for me, dear friends who may read this, that I may ever live so near the blessed Jesus that I may recieve hourly blessings from his bountiful hand. I am weak in the flesh, but strong in faith. It would take a volume to detail how the Lord has led me, but suffice it to say he has wonderfully led me, and revealed to me many wonderful things. I feel just as if he wanted me to send this one living testimony and have it published to all the dear readers of the Crisis, which paper we have taken for some three years, and which, I may say, started me in the study of the blessed Word of God. I had read it by course before, but now I read it by inspiration. When I see the prophecies being so clearly and correctly fulfilled, I exclaim, "What manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation." My soul rejoices in the Lord at each fulfillment, knowing that He doeth all things well, and will come in his own good time to gather up his own. Pray that I may be among the ingathered ones, to go no more out forever.

East Weymouth, Mass.

From Sr. A. Hemenway.

Through the kindness of my sister I have the Crisis, and it has been very welcome to me, especially of late. How good that letter from Bro. K., of England, about the Springfield meeting. It almost seemed like being there, to read it. Also that dear letter from Sr. Agnes C. Gray. I could sympathize with every line. O my dear sisters, you who like me are kept from meeting with God's children by sickness and other trouble, let us take new courage. What a good God we have to go to in hours of solitude. It seems to me I never should have really known how good the Lord was without the chastening rod.

The present life is gliding from us, but the glorious "hope" is a strong and sure anchor to the soul.

"On Christ the solid rock I stand,
All other ground is sinking sand."

I hope, through the righteousness of Christ. soon to meet all God's dear children, where none are sick, poor or sorrowful; where Christ will reign in righteousness.

Warren, Me., Sept. 25th.

DRY GOODS CHRISTIANS.

There seems to be in the churches a great strife raging; it is an Austerlitz of ribbons. The carnage of color is seen all over our religious assemblages. Along on the outskirts of the Sabbath audiences you see here and there a packet of fashion; but down in the middle of the church are the solid columns blazing away all through the service. Five hundred "broken and contrite hearts" covered up in rainbows and spangles. Followers of the meek and lowly Nazarene" all a-jingle and a flash! Ten cents for the missionary cause and two hundred and fifty dollars for trappings! Church of God hung by the neck with gold chains, diamond locketed! Unsophisticated person traveling on two yards of silk, dragged by the lady going up the aisle in front of him—diamonds enough to give all India the gospel. The item of dress among the christian people on Sabbath day is an outrage on the christian religion.

For graceful and beautiful apparel we have admiration, but this strife in christian circles, as to who shall excel in costly millinery, and who shall dash up to the church door in the gayest turn-out, and who shall make the most blazonment in wardrobe is one of the greatest hindrances to religious advancement. Our ladies' hats and shawls are so fine, on rainy days we are afraid to go to church lest we get a drop on them. Our head-gear is worth more than our souls. We teeter and swagger up the aisles to the disgust of good men and the grief of angels. Enough money is expended by the christians of a large city in excess of the requisite outlay for dress to relieve all the poverty, educate all the ignorance, and balk all the crime. Much of the piety of our churches is being smothered under shirred basques, and jabot ruffles, and Louisines. The poor are kept out of church because their plain apparel looks so bad in the contrast.

We want a great ecclesiastical reformation in this matter of Sabbath accoutrement. Show these religious peacocks out of the house of God. By your example make subdued and modest costume more popular than gaudy apparel. Do not put so much dry goods on your back that you cannot climb into glory. You cannot sail into the harbor of heaven with such a rigging as that.—Dr. Talmage, in Christian Standard.

PRAYER MEETINGS.

M. W. PIPER.

"Why is it that we have such poor prayer-meetings?" says one. I don't see why there should so much time run to waste, when there are enough to occupy all the time and make our meetings interesting. Another says, "The air was such that it made me stupid;" or, "I was so tired that I could not keep my eyes open; but yet I did my duty as it was made known to me." The best way is to keep awake and inquire for duty at the hand of the Lord.

The trouble, I think, is that we do not go to meeting inquiring for duty, as we should. We are too careless and indifferent about the matter; and if things do not move just about so, we get off our guard, and the opportunity passes, and then, "What a dull meeting we had."

Another thing which is detrimental to a prayer-meeting is for persons to sit and read during meetings. It not only injures the meeting, but it is irreverent. When our minds are on any subject that we may be reading, we of course are not minding the interests of the meeting, and we retard its progress.

Others often sit and grieve the Spirit, and not only feel barren themselves, but cause a dearth in the meetings.

Prayer-meetings are made very interesting by each member doing their duty, without waiting for one another, but waiting on the Lord. Speak or pray as the Spirit prompts. Says one—"I do not wish to go before I am sent." We will do well to go then, and not sit and wait for more feeling. The first impression is always the best.

Paul says to the Ephesians, 4: 30, "Grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption. This blessed Spirit is very easily grieved, and we run a great risk in doing it. If it should take its flight forever, our case would be a hopeless one. O the necessity of cherishing the Spirit! O that God would grant unto us the riches of his grace,—give us heavenly wisdom to direct in all things to divine acceptance, and help us to watch and pray is the prayer of a well-wisher of the cause of Christ.

Melvin Village, Oct. 1876.

VERMONT ANNUAL CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Conference of the Church of God, worshiping in the State of Vermont, held its annual session at Bethel, commencing Wednesday, Sept. 13th, 1876.

The meeting was called to order by the first Elder, A. A. Hoyt. The members and delegates present were twenty-three in number. The reading of the Constitution was then called for, and suggestions being made that some articles would be better amended, three brethren were chosen for the purpose. Their report was accepted and adopted, and ordered to be printed in pamphlet form,—a sufficient number for all who shall desire it.

The Treasurer's report was then read and adopted. The Secretary being absent, his report was not called for. The reports of ministers were very cheering, showing great earnestness on their part, and good results from their labors in the saving of souls and building up the churches where they labor.

The State Mission was then reported by A. A. Hoyt, showing a lack of funds in the Treasury, which has prevented the calling in of efficient help from other States. Bro. Hoyt himself has held protracted meetings most of the time during the year, which has resulted in much good; and the Lord has provided means outside of the Mission to pay the expenses. Much more good might have been done by having employed more laborers, if the people had had a mind to work, and had paid their pledges.

Bro. Allen Wood was then invited to become a member of the Conference, who, having been accepted by the Presbyters, was received into membership.

The Conference then cast lots for its official brethren, which resulted in the choice of A. A. Hoyt, first Elder; A. Damon, second Elder; H. B. Quimby, Recorder; J. T. Edson, Treasurer; A. A. Hoyt, A. Damon and O. Beckwith, Presbyters; S. Whitney, G. U. Lewis, S. Castle, C. B. Tenney, G. B. Whitford, Deacons; A. Damon, State Evangelist.

The new arrangement of the Conference order provides that the missionary work be under the direction of the official brethren, and all communications therefor, should be addressed to A. A. Hoyt, first Elder. The work of the State Evangelist is to visit and set in order the churches where needed and desired, and all communications for this work should be addressed to A. Damon.

The Conference then arranged for a full delegation to represent its interests at the annual meeting of the A. C. A., and empowered each to send a substitute, in case he could not be present himself.

The following resolution was then presented and unanimously adopted:—

Whereas, Since our last annual gathering, one of our number, Bro. D. K. Barrett, has fallen by death, in the triumphs of faith, to await the call of the archangel's trump to bring him to immortal life, leaving kindred and saints to mourn his absence, therefore,

Resolved, That we hereby express our sympathy and sorrow with all who mourn his loss; and also declare our approbation of his faithfulness, and the cheerful aid he gave the cause in this State, from the time he embraced the faith until the day of his death.

The meeting then adjourned without date; the unanimity of which had been much enjoyed by the brethren of the State, and highly complimented by the brethren from abroad.

H. B. Quimby, Recorder.

THE SEVEN BEATITUDES OF REVELATION.

LUCY D. HARRINGTON.

"Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein: for the time is at hand." Rev. 1: 3.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them." Rev. 14: 3.

"Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame." Rev. 16: 15.

"Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb. And he saith unto me, These are the true sayings of God." Rev. 19: 9.

"Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years." Rev. 20: 6.

"Behold I come quickly: blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book." Rev. 22: 7.

"Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." Rev. 22: 14.

Precious blessings, given to us by promise from God. Some of them are yet to be realized in the future—a part are ours now if we will. "For all the promises of God in Him [the Son of God, Jesus Christ 2 Cor. 1: 19] are yea, and in him Amen, unto the glory of God." 2 Cor. 1: 20.

EXCUSES.

Reader, there are many excuses made about religion. But there are no excuses so poor and feeble as those which people make for not praying. Beware of these excuses.

Do not say you do not know how to pray. Prayer is the simplest act in all religion. It is simply speaking to God. It needs neither learning, nor wisdom, nor book knowledge to begin it. It needs nothing but heart and will. The weakest infant can cry when he is hungry. The poorest beggar can hold out his hand for alms, and does not wait to find fine words. The most ignorant man will find something to say to God, if he has only a will.

Do not say you have no convenient place to pray in. Any man can find a place private enough, if he is disposed. Our Lord prayed on a mountain, Peter on the housetop, Isaac in the field, Nathaniel under the fig-tree, Jonah in the whale's belly. Any place may become a closet, an oratory, and a Bethel, and be to us the presence of God.

Do not say you have no time. There is plenty of time, if men will only employ it. Time may be short, but time is always long enough for prayer. Daniel had all the affairs of a kingdom on his hands, and yet he prayed three times a day. David was ruler over a mighty nation, and yet he says, "Evening and morning, and at noon will I pray." Psa. 55: 16. When time is really wanted, it can always be found.

Reader, salvation is very near you. Do not lose heaven for want of asking. Go this day and take the first step. Pour out your heart before God. Tell him that you are a poor unworthy sinner, and that you want to be saved. Tell him that you have heard he will hear all who ask in Christ's name, and that in Christ's name you ask to be saved. But do not put it off. Beware of excuses.—J. C. Ryle.

HOME AND HEALTH.

FLANNEL CLOTHING.

By far the largest proportion of the people in this country wear woolen flannel next the skin, though there are a few who do not seem to understand or believe in the advantage of wearing it in this way. There are two special reasons why flannel should have preference to all other material for this purpose, in this country, with its variable climate—its sudden changes. During the next few weeks when we shall have cool nights, following warm days, it will be particularly valuable as under-clothing. For equalizing the temperature of the surface, protecting from cold and preventing sudden chills, it cannot be surpassed.

Air is a poor conductor of heat. Owing to the coarseness and porosity of woolen fabrics, they retain within their meshes a large quantity of air; hence, they are bad conductors of heat, and so retain it next the body. This property renders flannel especially valuable in cold weather.

Another most valuable property possessed by flannel is its great capacity for moisture, which it takes up and gives off very slowly. It is well known that linen and cotton will become quite wet, while woolen under the same circumstances will be only damp. For this reason it affords a much better protection against wet than either linen or cotton; and giving off its moisture at a much slower rate, it is much warmer while damp than these fabrics. . . .

Practically, as experienced by the men in the army and navy, as well as theoretically, woolen has been proved to be the most valuable fabric in use for wearing next the skin in all seasons.

On this point Parkes says: "During perspiration the evaporation from the surface of the body is necessary to reduce the heat which is generated by exercise. When the exertion is finished, the evaporation still goes on, often to such an extent as to chill the frame. When dry woolen clothing is put on after exertion, the vapor from the surface of the body is condensed in the wool, and gives out again the large amount of heat which had become latent when the water was vaporized. Therefore, a woolen covering, from this cause alone, at once feels warm when used during sweating. In the case of cotton and linen, the perspiration passes through and evaporates from the external surface without condensation; the loss of heat then continues. These facts make it plain why dry woolen clothes are so useful after exertion."—Sanitary Journal.

Reckless Eating.—"Forty-one guests of a hotel in Omaha were poisoned, some of them almost fatally, by eating ice-cream, the flavoring substance of which contained arsenic."

So says the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser. Such occurrences, happening frequently, as they do, should lead frail humanity to be wary in their gustatory enjoyments. But then, ice-cream tastes good, and if hundreds and thousands of the human race should get poisoned "almost fatally" as often as the moon changes, reckless eating would continue, and public feasts and private junkets would still demand the usual supply of foods and drink, unhygienic.—Health Reformer.

Little Women.—Says an eminent physician with reference to the greater disparity in size between men and women in this country than is seen in European countries: "This petite size can be accounted for. Nothing to my mind is plainer. Exercise is the great law of development. Our girls have no adequate exercise. Besides, the organs on which growth depends, viz., the lungs, stomach and liver, are reduced, by the corset, to half the natural size and activity. These two causes, with living in the shade, explain the alarming decrease in the size of the average American woman."—Health Reformer.

In cooking oat-meal, cracked wheat, or any of those nice breakfast dishes, cook it in a covered tin dish in a kettle of boiling water; in this manner there is no danger of scorching. Corn-starch pudding, sea-moss, farina, and all other articles mixed with milk, can be cooked in the same way.

The Crisis is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

FAITH.

Simply trusting every day,—
Trusting through a stormy way,
Trusting where my faith is small;
Trusting Jesus—that is all.

Brightly doth his Spirit shine
Into this poor heart of mine;
While he leads I cannot fall;
Trusting Jesus—that is all.

Singing if my path is clear,
Praying if the way is drear,
If in danger, on him call;
Trusting Jesus—that is all.

Trusting as the moments fly,
Trusting as the days go by,
Trusting him whate'er befall,
Trusting Jesus—that is all.

Trusting him while life shall last,
Trusting him till earth is past,
Till within the jasper wall
Trusting Jesus—that is all.

THE THREATENING RUIN;

OR,

Our Times, our Prospects and our Duty.

BY JOSEPH A. SEISS, D. D.

NUMBER THREE.

"And now also the axe is laid at the root of the trees: therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire."—Matt. 3: 10.

WHAT, THEN, ARE OUR PROSPECTS?

Some persuade themselves that all is well and hopeful; that the reign of evil is about its last; that the long-trampled plant of liberty is putting forth for its world-wide bloom; that Time's great conflicts are so far over, that we have only to pursue the easy victory, to complete the emancipation of the earth from all its ills. And we would fain believe, after a voyage so long and against so many adverse storms, that we are at last touching upon the blessed shores; that at length the gates of final triumph are opening before the steady march of light and inquiry and freedom. But it is not so. The shores we are touching are only islands and marshes of confusion and disappointment; the gates that are opening before us are the floodgates of disaster and judgment. Continents and seas of trials and of storms yet lie between us and the promised millennium.

A few years ago we heard it resounded from city to city that the dawn of that blessed time of peace and holiness had come. The spirit of religious inquiry which was abroad also led many to believe it. But only a few months passed, and a scene of crime and war set in which has shaken the earth. Nor will the revival of such dreams fare any better. All hopes built on this present world are destined to be quenched and disappointed. The powers of darkness will not retreat without a more desperate conflict than we have yet seen. Heathenism, so far from being ready to expire, is reproducing itself on christian soil, under christian names, even in professedly christian pulpits and in the spirit and temper of professedly christian nations. Infidelity, instead of writhing in death under the clear sunlight of christian truth, has become a Briarean monster, meeting us at every point, in every field, with all its rank and degrading products, ravaging social order, and covering earth with crime. And, instead of peace and liberty, the world is full of wars and rumors of wars, with despotism or anarchy about the only alternative which the nations have left to them.

No, the millennium is not yet. That is to be a time of holiness; but these are days of evil. That is to be a period of rest—the world's long expected Sabbath; but these are days of dread and danger, when men's hearts are "failing them for fear, and for looking after those things that are coming on the earth." That is to be a time when the nations are to be at peace, and "beat their swords into ploughshares and their spears into pruning hooks;" but these are the days of war and strife and bloodshed and savage butchery. The millennium may be near. I hope and believe that it is not far off. But darkness yet conceals its dawn, and days of disaster and judgment lie between us and it. The axe is laid at the root of the trees, and every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit must first be hewn down.

And when we come to look abroad over the earth, at the trees that now shade its surface and make up its fashion and adornment,—when we scan the character and movements of its representative men, its most potent systems, its most influential combinations, and the composition and products of its Governments and establishments, both civil and ecclesiastical, and the spirit and temper which reign in nearly all human things,—what barrenness do we behold, and what upas-growths! What are all the kingdoms and potencies that now exist upon the territory of the Cæsars, but branches and modifications of the old Roman monster, with iron teeth and claws of brass, devouring and breaking in pieces and trampling under foot, as beheld in the vision of the prophet?

What throne is there upon earth that has not been built by usurpation and wrong, or that is not sustained by tyranny and stained with blood? In what Government under heaven shall we look for those evangelical foundations which Christianity inculcates, and for that rule of the Father and the Son without which no Government can stand? The world's monarchies are mainly usurpations, and its republics are but experiments upon a Pelagian falsehood. And what are the world's controling theories of human life and destiny, and the essence of the philosophies which mainly fashion modern society and govern in its theology, its science and its politics? Are they not all heathenish, anti-scriptural and corrupt? And even our church-systems, are they not to a great extent mere works of human power and authority? What ecclesiastical establishment on earth can show divine warrant for all its features? Not one; whilst some—and those the largest and most wide-spread—are very mysteries of iniquity, by which Satan has intrenched himself in the very temple of God.

And when we remember, in this connection, the just and undying jealousy of God for his own honor and his own institutes,—when we consider how he has ever dealt with men and nations for their infractions of the constitutions which he has ordained for them, and the severity with which he has ever visited all transfers of his glory to another, and all attempts to displace him and his authority,—when we reflect that the flood was the result of departure from the social ordinances which he had given, that the confusion of Babel was simply his resentment of a new apostasy from his commands, and that the doings of Abraham's God among the idols of Egypt and the nations of Canaan, the overthrow of the dynasties and centres of ancient civilization and the decline and fall of kingdoms in all ages, are to be referred to his purpose to destroy every plant which he hath not planted, and to mantain his rightful dominion over the inhabitants of earth,—I say, when we consider all this, what can we expect but fearful revolutions, overturnings, storms and judgments, which shall carry all existing things to desolation?

For my own part, I have very little hope for any of the establishments or systems, whether political or ecclesiastical, now standing. My learning of the prophecies of God, as well as the inferences to be drawn from the past, both prompt me to recieve it as a truth, that they shall all come to nought. There is not a Government that shall not be shaken and greatly changed, if not wholly dissolved. A similar destiny awaits all present church-arrangements, and especially all establishments and hierarchies. Great Babylon, whose marks and ramifications may be traced throughout the world, must fall, and receive for all her blasphemies and wrongs and persecutions of the saints of God. And all the embodied wisdom of the world is full of folly, and will yet be made so to appear, and hissed from the earth. People may say that we are flighty, and laugh at us as beside ourselves, and hold us up to ridicule. Be it so; but "when they shall say, peace and safety; then," saith the Lord, "sudden destruction cometh upon them, and they shall not escape." The axe is laid at the root of the trees; and that is both the prophecy and the earnest that the great Master of the vineyard has resolved to strike, and that every noxious and barren tree must fall, and that very speedily. Deathward, deathward, is the tendency of every thing earthly.

Call it the shriek of birds who love to fly in storms; denounce it as the Jeremiad of silly people; here stand the words of God as its full warrant, so plain that one may read them while he runs. And man can no more keep back the fulfillment of those words, than pluck the stars from their places, or stay the golden chariot of the sun in the magnificence of its morning ascensions.

There are some who admit these conclusions in the general, and agree that such is verily the scriptural portraiture of this world's destiny, who still have great confidence with respect to particular nations and people. Some persist in having England exempted from the predicted desolations and overwhelming judgments; and others will not at all believe that the gates of hell shall ever prevail against this idolized country of ours. And there are many reasons why private preference might desire to have it so. Many noble lights have illumined both these lands with their brightness. Many dear memories of conflict and victory for truth and freedom cling around them. The ashes of many saints mingle with their dust. And many, many souls rejoice in the gospel which they have borne to the ends of the earth. We can scarcely endure the thought of a fate for them like that of the nations of old. We would fain fall down before God and pray that he might spare these lands of Protestantism and liberty. And whatsoever is truly christian in them, God will spare.

But the bitter end must needs come some time to all present orders of things. And when I behold the licentiousness, corruption and wrong daily perpetrated in the name of liberty,—when I look at the pride and selfishness, the luxurious extravagance and waste, the forgetfulness of God and his laws, which characterize so large portion of our people,—when I see how little our sublime privileges are appreciated and improved, and read God's threatenings against the nations that forget him, and how judgment is to begin even with his own people, I confess to you that my confidence is weak and my apprehensions very great. Ten righteous persons in Sodom might have saved that place in the days of Abraham; but a dispensation of more rigid justice has been proclaimed with the gospel. Not even the tears and blood of Jesus himself could save apostate Jerusalem. And when God's prophet declares it in so many words, that "all the kingdoms of the world which are upon the face of the earth" shall be made to drink of the same cup with Jerusalem herself, and that He whose is the kingdom "will make a full end of all nations whither he hath scattered the children of Jacob," what am I to conclude but that fearful judgments await my country too? We may try to persuade ourselves that it is not so; but that will not alter the purposes of God or stay his chariot-wheels.

Some think our country's youth is argument enough that a long career of glorious promise yet awaits it. But I cannot see the force of such reasoning. Our country is not so youthful, even in years, as some seem to persuade themselves. Full three generations have passed away since the birth of its independence. Is not this quite time enough to develope and decide what manner of people we are? And in experience, self-importance and general advancement our country is older than many nations that have lived five times as long. But, even admitting that we are yet in comparative youthfulness, and that immense capacities and advantages have been lavished upon us, which as yet have played but a small part in the activities of the world, what does it signify? How many a costly and well-built ship, with every thing planned and promising for the service of successive generations, has been wrecked ann lost on its very first voyage! How many a noble young man, with every endowment of nature, position and education for a long life and exalted destiny, has been cut off in the opening of his usefulness and distinction, with all the high promises which clustered round him unfulfilled! And the Sovereign Disposer of all things may just as well deal in the same way with nations.

There are others who believe that the perpetuation and spread of our particular ideas and institutions are so linked with the civilization, enfranchisement and conversion of the world, that we are certainly safe, whatever may transpire. The Anglo-Saxon race, at least, is that to which multitudes assign this sublime mission. This, too, I regard as entirely a delusion. The Anglo-Saxon race, indeed, has much to distinguish it from the general mass of mankind. It has played a conspicuous part in the world's progress in intellectual culture, inventions, enterprise and wealth; but it needs quite too much civilizing, enfranchising and conversion itself, to be looked to for the accomplishment of so much. How can it achieve for mankind what it has never been able to achieve for itself? "Like begetteth like;" and if it could, even in the slow process of centuries, bring the rest of the world to its own status, what would it be but an immoral world,—a materialistic, skeptical, unsanctified world,—a world tenfold more the servant and thrall of the devil than a child and worshiper of the true God? It would neither be at peace with itself, nor in harmony with heaven, and, in the ordinary course of things, never could be. With all the godliness, faith, saintship, missionary fervor, and real nobility which have been developed among the Anglo-Saxons, estimated with respect to their superior privileges, the most wicked, godless, hypocritical, atheistic and heaven-defying people on earth have been, and to this day are, these self-same Anglo-Saxons.

Look at but a few facts. It is the Anglo-Saxon race which claims to be the depositary of the true Christian religion; and yet it is the stay of Mohammedan empire and its antichristianism, and even encourages and protects paganism itself at some points, with their vast, besotting and dehumanizing abominations. It is the Anglo-Saxon race which boasts of being the great apostle of the principles of righteousness and just government, and yet poisons millions of Chinese annually, enforcing the infliction with armed fleets; takes America from the Indians, and the Scinde from its lawful possessors, by robbery and murder; kills races of man to get territory to which it has no claim; makes treaties to plunder those who enter into them, breaks them to gain lands, then blows the helpless to atoms because they dare to remonstrate and seek self-preservation by force of arms. The Anglo-Saxon race professes to be the messenger of peace, yet carries a sword ever warm with blood, and often with the blood of its own immediate kindred. Within the recent years it has slain at least a million and a half of men in a contest between brothers of one family, who could not agree which should hold the balance of power in the administration of their common government. The Anglo-Saxon race gives itself out as the missionary of heaven, and the evangelizer of mankind; yet it is earth's most successful propagandist of atheism, infidelity and resistance to lawful authority; the educator of nations in rebellion, hypocrisy, criminal finesse, refined sensuality and supreme selfishness. In a word, the Anglo-Saxon race is the embodiment of the same depraved humanity found everywhere upon earth, only a little better cloaked with Pharisaism, a little more thoroughly pervaded with Satanic subtilty, daring falsehood and the spirit of worldly gain, a little more pietistically sentimental, a little more unfalteringly self-idolatrous, and a little in advance in the procession of apostate nations on their way to the judgments of God Almighty.

So far from looking to such a people as the predestined instruments to convert and regenerate mankind, I feel rather, with a certain divine of England (Rev. A. R. Purdon), that "the depression of the Saxon race is absolutely necessary for the moral and religious improvement of the world." So far from being the redeemer which men would have it, it needs rather to be put out of the way, that the promised redemption may come. At any rate, there is in it nothing hopeful upon which to calculate upon security for our country.

THOUGHTS ON MAN.

BY A BAPTIST.

THE FINALLY IMPENITENT.

What is the teaching of the Scriptures as to the future state of the finally impenitent wicked? I shall not open this part of the subject as does Dr. Hovey, by citing the opinions held by either Jews or Greeks in reference to a future state. For a portion at least of Christ's public life was spent in showing that many of their religious opinions, as well as practices, were not well founded; and the apostle Paul used his best faculties in showing the errors of their religious opinions; so that to take them for a basis, from which to argue the condition of a future state, seems to be an entirely wrong starting point.

As I understand the term "death" to mean a cessation of conscious existence, as used in the penal clause of the law, and have so used it, so I suppose it to mean the same when used in reference to its final infliction on those who will not accept the substitution of Christ, just as those who would not hearken to the preaching of Noah, were swept off by the flood. In Rev. 20: 6, John says, "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection, for on such the second death hath no power." I believe the first and second resurrection are supposed to be the same, so far as the actual coming to life of the two classes are concerned; the only difference being in the characters and prospective conditions of the two classes. There is good reason to believe also that there is an analogy between the first and second death, as at the close of the same chapter we are told what the second death is, or how brought about.

In the passage in Matt. 25: 41, the term everlasting is applied to the fire, and not to the class of men consigned to it. This figure was drawn from the continuous fire in the valley of Hinnom, kept for the purpose of destroying the filth, garbage, offal and dead carcasses which were drawn from the city, and in which vermin rioted continually. Does not that prefigure the utter and complete destruction of whatever might pollute the moral atmosphere of the New Jerusalem? But some argue that man, being a sinner when condemned, will continue to sin, so of necessity the torment must be continued. I understand that man is to be judged according to the deeds done in the body, not prospectively for what he is going to do. If man is the mortal being that I believe him to be, and which I think to be fairly proved, and as fire is the devouring element, I understand it to prefigure his utter destruction. Jude tells us that "Sodom and Gomorrah, and the cities about them, . . . are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire." But were not those cities utterly destroyed, leaving not a trace of them, or their inhabitants? So if they are the type of those who are to suffer "the vengeance of eternal fire," or wrath of God against the finally impenitent of the race, are we not justified in the conclusion that the finally impenitent will be utterly destroyed, leaving not a trace of them, or their inhabitants? So if they are the type of those who are to suffer "the vengeance of eternal fire," or wrath of God against the finally impenitent of the race, are we not justified in the conclusion that the finally impenitent will be utterly destroyed, or in the apostle's words, "punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and the glory of his power?" Or as rendered in the Bible Union version (2 Thess. 1: 9), "Who shall suffer justice, eternal destruction from the glory of his power."

At the close of the 25th of Matthew, we read: "And these shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal." So that here the punishment is declared to be everlasting; hence the question, In what does this punishment consist? If an individual, claiming to be an embassador for Christ, should proclaim in public that the sufferings of Christ in the garden and on the cross were but of small moment, you would strongly suspect the validity of his commission; but if he should use his best powers, and put forth his best energies, calling to his aid the most fervid language, that he might in the most vivid manner portray the extreme pain and anguish he endured in the garden, in view of the separation that must soon take place between him and his Father, affecting him to such a degree as to drive the blood out of its natural circulation through the pores of his skin, all growing out of the fact of his realizing it must result in his death; and then the awful wail of anguish, when he cried out in a loud voice on the cross, "Why hast thou forsaken me?" you would then have some ground for believing that his commission was genuine.

If then, the death our Savior was about to suffer, as a substitute for the sinner, was to him so extremely appalling, with the full assurance from the Father that he should be raised from its dominion on the third day, will it be contended that that same death penalty will not be infinitely more appalling to the sinner, when about to be inflicted upon him, without the slightest hope of a resurrection from its power, and the punishment, to him, of the greatest magnitude of which we can conceive as applicable to man, in view of its everlasting continuance? And yet some of these same persons who so vividly portray the sufferings of Christ, but hold to the doctrine of everlasting torment, will tell us that the extinction of man's conscious being under these circumstances, would be a mercy or favor to him; when in fact it is the highest possible punishment could be inflicted upon him in his normal condition; for I apprehend that the strongest point in man in a normal condition is to be, and to have that being so circumstanced as to render it enjoyable, both in happiness and in making progress in the knowledge of God and his wonderful works.

Christ, in replying to the question, "Are there few that be saved?" uses this language (Luke 13: 28): "There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God, and ye yourselves thrust out;" showing that the finally impenitent, after the resurrection, will be driven not only from the presence and glory of God, but also from a full view of the glory of the redeemed, who have accepted the substitution of Christ as their righteousness, which substitution they have rejected, realizing the loss they must forever sustain in that utter and total separation from God; the final and exact penalty of a violated law, which must result not only in the loss of their well-being, but of their being itself. The idea that death, under these circumstances, would be a favor, is setting at nought God's idea of punishment when he said to Noah, "Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed;" and also the judgment of the most intelligent of either christian or enlightened nations, that death is the highest punishment that can be inflicted upon man.

"THY KINGDOM COME.---No. 1.

A WORD TO BELIEVERS.

WM. KELLAWAY.

THE PRAYER.

What a prayer is this! And when it is answered,—for answered it will be,—what a transformation will be wrought in this disordered and unhappy, because misgoverned world. How every thing will be altered! How the mighty will be put down from their seats; and the meek be exalted to inherit the earth! O what multiplied joys are in reserve for the heirs of the kingdom in company with Jesus Christ, the great "Heir!" Praises be upon his name!

THE KINGDOM NOT HERE NOW.

"Thy kingdom come!" Every time we so call upon our Father, we witness against the error which is so popular with many, that God's kingdom is already come. We witness that we believe in the "Kingdom to come," instead of the "Kingdom come." We witness that we expect a visible manifestation of Christ as the ruler of the world in righteousness, in contradistinction from Christ as an invisible ruler among the sons of men.

We know most certainly that the kingdom of God is not yet planted in the earth. Up to this day it has neither been ordered nor established. The customs are not those of the kingdom. The favorites of the King are not in authority. The earth is in the hands of the wicked. The godless are in places of power. The saints are in obscurity and suffering. How can the kingdom of God have come? It is a mistake.

Nor do we recognize the cleverness which splits up the one hope of the kingdom into two parts, speaking of the "Kingdom of Grace" and the "Kingdom of Glory." The kingdom of grace is the kingdom of glory; for it is in that kingdom of glory God will show to the saved "the exceeding riches of his kindness through Christ Jesus:" it is in that age he will demonstrate how much he loves us. Yes, we shall know all his grace when we reach the goal of our hopes! And verily, we think it is not long to the consummation.

The kingdom of God come—nay, nay! Beloved, think! At this hour there is one in France who claims the throne by hereditary right. You know his title,—it is Comte de Chambord. He has in various parts of the French empire many who in heart acknowledge him as rightful sovereign. They are attached both to himself and his cause; and the first declaration from his lips, asserting his authority, and saying that he intended to maintain his claim by force, would draw them to his side. These are true to him whom they consider should be king. But the fact of the Count having in the French empire loyal and staunch adherents is very different from the assertion that his kingdom is set up in France; that he lives at the Tuileries; and has around his person the courtiers of the realm saluting him as king; that his seal makes the laws of that empire. Who does not see the difference?

Our Lord Jesus has in this world many who recognize in him the King of the ages and of the world. They know that God has appointed him to the throne; that he has anointed him for the kingship; that his word is law; that the kingdom is his right. These await the appearing of Christ. Loyal and true, they look for his summons; and at his epiphany, they will depart to cluster around him; to be his acknowledged friends and fellow-heirs, all the time of his righteous rule. But this is very different from saying that they are already appointed a place with him, and that power is relegated to them. Surely, the kingdom of God is no more come than is the kingdom of the Comte de Chambord.

The kingdom of God come, and more than nine-tenths of the world despising or disregarding his name? Fallacy! How impotent must be the dominion, and how unimportant the King, if this be a fact! The tiniest State fears him not! The smallest tribe makes no account of him! It cannot be.

Was the temple in existence when its planks of wood were sawn and planed and lying in the forests of Hiram's land? Was it in existence when the stones were blasted and chiselled and polished, and in the quarries of Bible story, awaiting transportation to Zion? You will say, No! and rightly. You will say that the boards and planks were simply ready for erection, and the stones prepared for laying one on another; and that it needed the building of these materials to bring the temple into existence. Precisely so!

So the Lord has his people, etc., in this world; and it only needs the great Master's appearance for the requisite arrangement to take place, and the kingdom would come in reality, and in blessedness. And till this happens, we know you will not cease to lift up your earnest and loving hearts to God in desire for his glory, and you will pray him to send us Jesus to establish the fifth universal monarchy as the joy and praise of the whole earth.

With light from on high, you cannot persuade yourselves of the religious fancy of the kingdom come. "Thy kingdom come!" will surge from your beings with mighty force of faith, hope, and love, until it is really here; and when at last it appears, it will be so manifest and certain, that no single theologian will be found to maintain the soundness of the common belief that the kingdom of God has been established throughout the world for, lo! these hundreds of years.

Thus, in praying to our God (who is also our Father), and desiring of him the coming of his kingdom, we witness that we have no fellowship with the strange delusion that the kingdom of God is already come.

HOW THE KINGDOM WILL BE USHERED IN.

The more we think about the belief that the kingdom of God has come already, the more astonished are we that there is a single person to be found who can persuade himself into the adoption of such an opinion. There are so many things promised in connection with the coming and presence of the kingdom, and signs and the monuments named as synchronizing therewith are of so demonstrative and conspicuous a nature, that it is passing strange how any one can for one moment indulge the thought that God's kingdom has come and is even now here, when not one of the predicted events or tokens introducing it has been seen.

We are distinctly taught that the kingdom of God is to be ushered in with a crisis so sudden and startling that none will be able to overlook its advent. Thrones are to totter, to give place to the throne of the house of David. Kingdoms are to reel, that the "everlasting kingdom" may be established. Judgments are to descend until the whole burdened atmosphere has discharged itself on a wicked world. The Son of God is to gain the realm by conquest—there is to be war, in which the Lamb and those who are with him will be overcomers. War because there will be opposition; and woe to that potentate and nation that does not make peace with the Son; he will be angry with them, and they will perish in his wrath. Such, without elaborating every point in detail, or enumerating every act in its proper place, will be the way in which the reign of the King of kings will be inaugurated, and his kingdom come. And if inspired testimony really teaches that there is to be such commotion immediately before the settlement of the royalty of heaven in the kingdom of God, how can any believe that the kingdom of God has already come? Surely, there has been no such upturn of dynasties and overthrow of nations as far as we have yet arrived. No; no! and it is astonishing how any can believe that the kingdom has come. If it has come, it has slid noiselessly into ascendancy (if any can believe it now in the ascendant), and those inditings of Spirit-gift to which we have alluded are seriously misleading.

No; we hold that the kingdom has not yet come, because there have been no such iconoclastic manifestations as are predicted to take place when Christ and his saints really come into the inheritance and dominion.

WHAT WILL GIVE CERTAIN KNOWLEDGE THAT WE HAVE ENTERED THE KINGDOM.

When the kingdom of God is really gained, and the saints have entered upon possession of its pleasures and honors, how manifest will be the signs of its presence. We shall "see Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob," when we are in the kingdom of God. We shall see the righteous shining as the sun in the beautiful transparency of their persons. We shall know that Satan no longer prowls about on his fell errands. Plenty shall rustle in every valley; and every hill shall be crested with mercies. The name of our Jesus shall be reverenced and praised in all the earth. But for us to attempt to supply anything like an adequateness of description of "the things which shall be hereafter" when the kingdom of God is planted in the earth, would be preposterous. We direct you, beloved readers, to the wonderful Book, to glean thence as much information as you can concerning the good things coming.

We have written some of the things the sight of which would at once satisfy us that we were inheritors of the kingdom which God has promised to those who love him. And, until we see them, we cannot believe that the kingdom is come; and hence, we cannot cease saying to our Father, "Thy kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven."

God's kingdom come! Yes, when the sleeping saints are aroused out of their deathly nap, and God's living are changed. Yes, when the seventh angel sounds the last prophetic trumpet, and there are great voices in heaven crying, "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign for ever and ever." Yes, when Satan is cast out of the earth, and a loud voice makes proclamation, saying, "Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ."

Then we will stop praying "Thy kingdom come!" and will change our employment to song, exclaiming, in ecstasy of heart, "It is come! the kingdom that we heard of in the gospel, that we loved and sought, that we prayed for and expected. It is come! Alleluia!

And let it come; Holy Father, "Thy kingdom come!"

PROPHECY.

Its use—to guide our feet amidst the darkness of this deceptive world. Says Peter, "We have also a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn," etc. Pet. 1: 19.

How can prophecy shine for us? Ans "Whatsoever doth make manifest is light;" and if we will take notice of what is passing around us, marking well specifications of prophecy that apply to our time, we may learn what the mind of the Lord is concerning us, and take the timely warning that we fall not into the snare of the devil.

The devil is the great enemy of our race. He deceived our mother Eve, and brought death upon man. God has provided a way for man's escape. But Satan, ever busy to cheat mankind out of eternal life, fails not to apply himself skillfully to every age, as the circumstances of the case may require. God has shown, by the prophecy of the book of Rev. 16: 14, by a striking symbol, that at the time of the pouring out of the sixth vial there would be a consummation of Satan's deceptive work: it is by "spirits of devils working miracles." It goes now in its embryo state, under the pleasing name of "Spiritual reform." It will also creep into the churches of the world. Then it will be that they are become the habitation of devils.

Now, if in connection with the great spiritual delusion of this age, we attend to the plain, faithful teaching of the apostle Paul, in his second letter to the Thessalonians, chap. 2, we cannot fail to see that "the prophecy came not in old times by the will of man;" for there never was a more clear description given of anything, even in the time of its existence, than is here given of the papacy, and the period from its fall to the second advent of our Lord. "Whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power, and signs, and lying wonders," etc.

It is worthy of notice, that the very things that are the most prominent in this age, to our own personal knowledge, namely, wonderful spiritual manifestations concerning which doubts are entertained, as to whether they are, or are not, of the devil; the manifest disposition to reject the truth, and to be deluded and delighted with the fables of unrighteousness, are the very things that are the most prominent specifications of the letter referred to.

Since the papal supremacy was taken away in the year 1798, there have so many pointed prophecies been fulfilled, in such rapid succession, and have marked our whereabouts so clearly, that it may truly be said as in the prophecy, the day of the Lord hasteth greatly. Martin Luther once said: "A something strikingly awful shall forewarn that the world will come to an end, and that the last day is even at the door.—Selected.

EXPECTING CHRIST.

The second advent of Christ is expected by all believers in the testimony of God's Word. But the most of professing christians of the present day do not expect the coming of Christ until after the millennium, and hence they make no preparation for it, except the general practice of christian duties in view of future retribution. But some, though few in comparison with the former, expect the coming of Christ to take place before the millennium, and in accordance with the exhortation of the Savior himself, they watch and pray, that they may be counted worthy to escape the things coming upon the earth, and to stand before the Son of man.

This expectation is productive of sobriety, watchfulness and prayer. If otherwise, it is a mere sentiment, and devoid of practical influence on the life and conduct. But if it be a thorough conviction, resulting from a firm belief of the Scriptures, there will be a constant looking for and hastening unto the coming of the Lord, and a continual readiness for that event. To be fully prepared for it involves the completeness of the christian character by the diligent daily addition of virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and charity to faith. The acquisition of these traits of character in full development is not a momentary thing which may be put off to the last moment, but is a life work of the most earnest and persevering attention to christian duty. Therefore let us not sleep as do others; but let us watch and be sober; for that day of the Lord cometh; it hasteth greatly.—Watch Tower.

A calm sea after a storm, a blue sky after a black thunder-cloud, health after sickness, light after darkness, rest after toil are beautiful things. But none of them can give more than a feeble idea of the comfort which those enjoy who believe in Christ and have peace with God. It is peace which passeth all understanding.

The Lord's ways are not our ways, nor his thoughts our thoughts. And it is more than probable that many whom we are accustomed to call christians are known to him by a very different title. "Not every one that sayeth unto me Lord, Lord."

WONDERFUL CORRESPONDENCE.

It is wonderful to see the remarkable correspondence between the descriptions given by historians, or journalists, of prophetic events, and the description of them given by the prophets and their interpreters. The expositors get their knowledge from the language used by Inspiration, while the historian gets his from existing facts and probabilities growing out of them. The correct expositor can always precede the historian in describing and anticipating the foretold events, so that he always has the advantage of an earlier knowledge of them, and therefore a longer time to prepare for them.

Our readers have become very familiar with the prophetic history of the Eastern War, as many expositors have interpreted it, and we now present a journalist's description of it, and the probabilities of its future dimensions and results; and we invite all to carefully compare the two testimonies, and see their remarkable correspondence. We quote an editorial from the Boston Herald as follows:

ARE WE TO HAVE A RELIGIOUS WAR?

It is but a few short months since the civilized world stood aghast at the prospect of a great religious war in which Catholicism and Protestantism were to contend, not for supremacy merely, but for very existence. The Chancellor of the German Empire, the avowed champion of the Protestant faith, had imprisoned Catholic bishops, and, in the face of all Europe, hurled the gauntlet of defiance at the feet of St. Peter's successor. Gladstone had published his famous pamphlet on Vaticanism. Apprehension of coming evil had seized upon statesmen and people alike. But the sky soon cleared. Good sense, discretion and diplomacy dispersed the fast-gathering clouds—at least for a time. To-day, there are direr portents in the political horizon. The fiendish revel of blood and lust among the ripening grain fields of Batak has stirred the heart of Christendom as it has not been stirred since the Moslem hosts bore the conquering crescent into the heart of Austria, in the sixteenth century. Since the battle of Lepanto the Mohammedan power in Europe has steadily diminished, but thoughtful men, historians as well as statesmen, have never underestimated the prodigious potentiality of the enormous sect which bears the name of the False Prophet. Nearly one-quarter part of the human race—250,000,000 souls—are Mohammedans. These myriads are for the most part Asiatics. In India they number millions. Warlike, and possessed with all the utter recklessness which fatalism infuses into men, they are the most formidable of all Her Majesty's oriental subjects.

England is tremendously agitated over the question of armed intervention in Turkey. Moncure Conway says the popular excitement is only comparable to the uprising of the North at the sound of the cannonade at Fort Sumter. Millions of English women are signing petitions to the Queen to interfere in Turkey. The air is echoing with the speeches of orators inspired with the enthusiasm of humanity. The Earl of Beaconsfield's ministry is in a greater strait than was Gladstone's at the time of his retirement. A dissolution of the present Parliament, with a consequent new election, is demanded. And a new election means the political downfall of Lord Beaconsfield and the return to power of Gladstone, already pledged, by speech and printed word, to Turkish interference. Intervention in Turkey means the embroilment of all the great powers in a struggle between Russia and England for the possession of the Bosphorus. Intervention means the overthrow of Moslem dominion in Europe. The Turkish Empire cannot fall without the profoundest and farthest reaching results. Already the Mohammedans of India have heard of the danger of the Sultan, who to the Moslem myriads is the head of their mighty sect, the representative of Mohammed, the Defender of the Faith. He is to them what the Pope is to the Catholic world. The disgrace of the Sultan will be the signal for an uprising in India to which the Sepoy rebellion will bear no comparison. The Moslems of India can hold the effeminate Hindoos in check with one hand and drive the British from their richest dominion with the other. They have it in their power to make the proud title of Empress of India as meaningless as that of "King of France," not so long ago discarded by an English sovereign.

Nor is this all. It is but one phase of the mightiest drama of history. The forces of Christendom and Islam are nearly equal. But Christendom does not mean that compact, foamidable unity which is the boast of Islam. The Roman, Eastern and Protestant churches of Christendom are antagonistic. A great religious war might mould them into unity, but it is doubtful. England would, to-day, if she could, throw more troops into India; but she cannot spare a regiment. The crusades were not so very long ago; only five centuries behind us. One of the most sagacious of European observers has just given utterance to a foreboding of a relapse into the dark ages, in the event of a vast religious war caused by driving the crescent across the Bosphorus. This "Eastern question," which has been the toy of generations of European diplomats, may, like the genii in the Arabian fable, rise like a pillar of cloud to the heavens, and assuming shape and feature call on affrighted Christendom, "What will ye have of me?" Again may the plains of Asia be drenched in blood; again may the armies of the crescent be seen beneath the walls of Vienna. The Eastern question will then be one of life and death for our Western civilization.

The Editor anticipates a war of vast dimensions, involving all the religious classes of the civilized world. The peoples he specifies are exactly the same as those specified by expositors. They also agree in the period when the bloody scene shall transpire—during the last half of the nineteenth century. The Editor can see nothing beyond the bloody chasm but "a relapse into the dark ages,"—"death for our Western civilization;" but through the glass of inspiration can be seen, beyond the darkness of a howling night, the radiance of eternal day. Beyond the grating sound of war will be heard the mellow note of heavenly peace. Beyond the demon revenge of a brother seeking the blood of brother will be joyful greetings of undying love. We must pass the night before we can see the glories of the day.

When we look at the world from the Seer's watch-tower our hearts melt with pity and with deep emotion, and we cry, O earth! earth! the hour of thy bloody baptism is come! The scenes of thy deathly convulsions are upon us! The mingled cup of divine wrath is being pressed to thy quivering lips! O Jesus, Immanuel! remember thy defenceless sheep while the gleaming lightnings light up the heavens, and the roaring tempests howl around the mountains! Arise from thy princely seat, fold back the heavens, and come down to their rescue!

WHO SHALL YIELD?

It is a well known fact that, for many years there has not been that fraternal feeling and christian fellowship between Adventists and other denominations of Christian people that exists between the various branches of the so-called Evangelical Church. The barrier to fellowship has never been claimed to be a want of christian honesty, purity of heart or holy devotion on our part, but a heretical faith; the vindication of unscriptural doctrines.

That it is not a defect of heart, but of belief, which has produced the disfellowship is proved by the fact that all representative members of the Advent Church, who have applied for membership in those denominations, have been recieved as worthy of fellowship without professing any change of heart, but only a change of faith; or, as in many cases, only an agreement not to advocate the doctrines peculiar to Adventists. These facts prove that those who disfellowship us admit the genuineness of our christian experience, and therefore must admit that we enjoy the Spirit of Christ; and yet they pronounce us heritics; excluding us from their pulpits and communion, and reckoning our acts of obedience to the gospel as void of Divine sanction.

The proof that we are thus rejected by one of the most numerous and professedly pure people in the land, the M. E. Church, is found in the report of one of its Conference sessions recently held in Minn., in which reference is made to a discussion upon the question of receiving, as scripturally valid, the ordination papers of Bro. and Sr. Mansfield. We quote from the report as follows:

"THOSE RECOGNITION PAPERS.

"Quite an animated discussion was held over the recognition of Bro. and Sr. Mansfield's ordination papers as coming from the Advent Church. They were not finally recognized. But the discussion elicited the fact that Bro. and Sr. Mansfield were held in the highest esteem by the members of the Methodist Conference, and that they would be cordially welcomed among them, as workers in the field of the Lord. And hope is entertained that this may be accomplished. The discussion made referred solely to the validity of the ordination papers as coming from a body which the members of the Conference regarded as unevangelical."

We do not refer to these things to find fault or express disfellowship for any, but to show why we cannot unite with them in union efforts. If our prayers and charge at an ordination are not acceptable to God, they cannot be when we pray for and exhort sinners to escape from the wrath to come. All our labors as christians must be condemned by the gospel, if the decision of this Conference is right. Then a profession of christian union between us in any sense or capacity must be hypocritical.

It is thought by many lovers of christian union that we are comparatively uncharitable and sectarian in our fellowship and religious sympathies; but we wish to say that this is a great mistake. We have never, as a denomination, questioned the validity of ordination papers from any of the evangelical denominations, or refused to let their accredited ministers preach in our pulpits; and have heartily accepted the devotions of their laity in our social meetings. We have ever been ready to exchange pulpits with them and to preach for them whenever the door is opened to us.

We are very sorry that our brethren should cast us out of their fellowship because of our adherence to doctrines which we devoutly believe are taught by the Holy Scriptures. Thousands of us have been voted out of these churches for no other professed reason than our conscientious belief in sentiments proved by the legitimate use and direct application of the words of Inspiration. Christian union between the classes, while these proscriptive laws are being executed, is as impossible as union between light and darkness. While we love the fellowship and co-operation of all good people, we have covenanted with God that we will, by his grace, never, as long as he shall give us life, cease to publish his sacred truth as we find it written in his Divine Book, for the sake of the fellowship or good will of any body living. We believe it is the duty of the servant of Christ to proclaim the gospel as he understands it, kindly but firmly; not to produce antagonism but faith in Christ.

We acknowledge that some men, connected with us by profession, have spoken, written and acted upon principles widely different from those we here advocate, but they did not represent the body. We truthfully represent the spirit and sentiment of our people when we say we are not a bigoted, sectarian class; for we do fellowship and co-operate with christians who in belief differ as much from us as we do from the Minn. Conference.

LATEST WAR NEWS.

The news of the week from Europe has been very exciting and war-like. The prospects for peace are less hopeful and the situation is very gloomy for the nations. The conviction is becoming every day more settled that a war of great dimensions and of a very bloody and revolutionary character is now impending. The fear of such a war, and the prospect that it may immediately commence, has produced a feverish excitement in the money and provision markets in Europe and the United States.

The Russian government is mobilizing its army in its Southern Provinces, and contracting with Rail Roads to transport troops into Turkey at the rate of 25,000 per day. It is also putting in order its Black Sea fleet, to carry troops, cannon and munitions of war to the Turkish Provinces. Millions of the Czar's subjects clamor for the privilege of fighting to be avenged on the savage Turks.

Austria is making field cannon, of the latest and most approved pattern at the rate of twenty-five per day. She is preparing in great haste for the mortal strife.

Germany is ready, and very calmly looks on, biding her time. She is evidently looking towards the Vatican, and watching with an eagle eye the scarlet-vested Turks.

England is preparing for the storm with great earnestness. The Cabinet was summoned to meet Thursday, and made this wonderful decision, which we think is quite prophetic: "That the existence of virtual war between Russia and the Porte does not create a state of things calling for our interference; that we are not called upon either by the text of treaties or by moral obligation to defend one of these empires against the other!" "None shall help him." The government has applied to the Lloyds to have ships ready to transfer troops, probably to Egypt.

The Greek government proposes to call out an army of 50,000 men, and asks for credit of 60,000,000 drachmas.

It is reported confidently that Russia, Austria and Germany are in harmony upon the war question.

The intolerance of the Catholics in Spain is increasing rapidly, and it is becoming more apparent every week that there is a deep laid plan among them, in all countries, to take the advantage of a general war in Europe to put down their Protestant enemies and establish the Pope once more, as the head of all earthly government. This Papal agitation is evidently stirring the officials of the French Republic, as the following from the London Times will show:

AN IMPORTANT CIRCULAR.

M. Dufaure's Circular recommending the prefect to put a stop to the long and frequent absences of priests from their parishes is to be regarded as a new political departure. This circular is based on one of the heretofore dead letter articles of the Concordat, which ordains that priests must not leave their parish for above eight days in the year without the bishop's consent. M. Dufaure finds an opportunity in the habit contracted by the secular clergy of quitting their flocks to agitate and manifest in distant places, and to go on politico-religious pilgrimages. The Keeper of the Seals is, on the whole, a good Catholic, regularly communicating at the principal fasts, and friendly to the Church as such, but he is opposed to her wandering into the sphere of civil authority. He anticipates a sharp struggle for supremacy, into which the venerable person of the Pope may be thrust by ill-advised zealots. His Circular is to those who know how to read between the lines an intimation that if an inflammatory Bull or other Pontifical instrument hostile to legal Government is fulminated, he will directly enforce the Sixth Article of the Concordat, and punish those who shall give the Papal rescript publicity without due authority. Article Six has never been applied before, and Bishops have promulgated the Syllabus and Bulls laying down Papal Infallibility and the doctrine of the Immaculate Conception. An intimation has been received from Rome that the Vatican thunders are being prepared to burst on the head of the French Republic.

ITEMS OF NEWS.

Melbourne advices of the 23d ult. report all hopes abandoned of the safety of any passengers or crew left on the steamer Dandenong, which foundered off Jarvis Bay on the 11th ult. Particles of the wreck have come ashore. The bark Albert William took off twenty-two passengers and twelve of the crew.

There are from 15,000 to 20,000 Miners out of employment in Penn., and a prospect that many more will be thrown out soon. It is expected that about 80,000 operatives in the mills in Manchester, Eng., will be locked out soon to face a cold winter without food of fuel.

We have received for the week an increased quota of shocking murders, incendiary fires and horrible deeds of last-day crimes.

ZOE AND THANATOS.—A brother wishes to know what are the Hebrew words corresponding with the Greek words Zoe and thanatos. Zoe means life, and thanatos death. The Hebrew for Zoe is ghahy. Examples may be found in Gen. 2: 7; 3: 14, 17; 6: 17; 7: 15; Job 7: 7; 10: 12; Dan. 12: 2. The Hebrew word for thanatos is mooth. Examples occur in Gen. 2: 27; 3: 4; Ex. 19: 12; 21: 15, 16, 17.

HOW TO WIN SOULS.

There is no work in this world of greater inportance than winning souls to Christ. The Scripture reads: "He that winneth souls is wise." (Prov. 11: 30); "and they that turn many to righteousness" shall shine "as the stars for ever and ever." Dan. 12: 3. There is no other work that affords such solid comfort, and makes life so valuable. He who has never tried to persuade a sinner to become a christian has not yet tasted of some of the sweetest fruits of christian experience. It should be one of the chief objects of every true follower of Christ to try to persuade others to become his disciples. Salvation from eternal destruction is one of the highest importance. If one possessed all the gold, silver, rubies, diamonds, and other costly merchandise even in this world, he could well afford to give them all for a home in the kingdom of heaven. Eternal life is of priceless value. Well did the Savior say, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" It is marvelous that so few consent to be followers of Christ, when there is no other way to be saved. Truly, "he that winneth souls is wise."

He who would win souls must first secure thier confidence and sympathy. To do this, he must satisfy them he is their friend. It is not difficult to do this, if the heart is filled with the Spirit of Christ, because that produces friendship and love for all, even enenies. It is very rare that unconverted persons will treat those rudely who speak to them in a kind, loving manner, on the subject of salvation. In most cases they will be thankful for the favor. They often wonder why christians do not speak to them on the subject of salvation, if they have any desire to have them escape destruction.

He who would win souls must labor for that object. The aim should be direct. One should watch for favorable opportunities to speak to the unconverted. It is best to speak to them alone, and with great kindness. It is well to avoid, as far as possible, all controversies about disputed points, and urge the importance of an immediate surrender to Jesus. One should be familiar with the Scriptures, so as to direct the mind of the inquirer to the portion suited to his case. Those who are desponding, and fear the Lord will not accept them, need to be directed to the promises of God; those who are careless, or pharisaical in their feelings, should be referred to the pointed Scriptures against those who will not come to Christ. Every one should be entreated to yield immediately, without reserve, to the Savior, being assured they will be joyfully accepted and adopted into his family.

THE TURKISH SITUATION.

There is no prospect that the Turkish war is soon coming to an end. The war feeling is becoming stronger instead of being diminished. Increased preparations are made to continue the bloody struggle. The Russians are entering into the strife with much enthusiasm. The time seems to have come when they may hope to accomplish their long cherished purpose to obtain possession of Constantinople, and the consequent control of the East. This makes England feel very uneasy. She declares Russia shall not have that noted city. She is willing the Mohammedan power should be suppressed in Europe, and would not interfere with the Russians in the work, if they would promise to let alone Constantinople; but Russia will not listen to any such proposition, consequently, the situation is becoming more and more critical, with scarcely any chance of escape from a terrible struggle.

It is not probable that anything decisive will be accomplished this year, as it will soon be necessary for the armies to go into winter quarters. All parties wish for a rest, in order to make more complete preparations to enter thoroughly into the work next spring, when the decisive blow may be struck, and new and grander scenes be opened to an astonished world. We are rapidly approaching the closing events of the present dispensation. Christian people are being rapidly convinced of this fact, and their ears are open to hear with special attention what may be said on the subject. This is the hour for watchfulness and prayer.

R'PHAH-EEM.

"A Scripture student" wishes a list of the passages where the Hebrew word r'phah-eem occurs in the Old Testament. The word occurs eight times, as follows: "Dead things are formed from under the waters." Job 26: 5. "Shall the dead arise and praise thee?" Ps. 88: 10. "For her house inclineth unto death, and her paths unto the dead." Prov. 2: 18.

"He knoweth not that the dead are there." Prov. 9: 18. "The man that wandereth out of the way of understanding shall remain in the congregaion of the dead." Prov. 21: 16. "It stirred up the dead for thee." Isa. 14: 9. They are dead, they shall not live; they are deceased, they shall not rise." Isa. 26: 14, "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they rise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust; for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead." Isa. 26: 19. The words in italics are in the place of the word r'phah-eem.

The word is several times rendered giants in the Septuagint: "Shall giants be born from under the water?" Job 26: 5. "For she has fixed her house near death, and guided her wheels near hades with the giants." Prov. 2: 18. "A man that wanders out of the way of righteousness shall rest in the congregation of giants." Prov. 21: 16.

The Rephaims were giants. The word rah-pah is rendered both giants and Rephaims. It occurs in Gen. 14: 5; 15: 20; Deut 1: 11, 20; 3: 11, 13; Josh. 12: 4; 13: 12; 15: 8; 17: 15; 18: 16; 2 Sam. 5: 18, 22; 23; 13; 1 Chron. 11: 15; 14: 9; 20: 4, 6, 8, and Isa. 17: 5.

THE BEST WAY.

Those ministers who wish to see the best results from their labors, will find that a much greater amount of good can be accomplished by remaining some time in a place. Stay till a victory is gained, and sinners are converted. It usually requires about a week's labor to get the unconverted sufficiently interested to begin to yield to Jesus. And there is another reason why the meetings should be continued for several days or weeks; it is often the case that it takes a week or more to get a church aroused sufficiently to be willing to labor earnestly for the salvation of others, and to get their own hearts filled with the Spirit of God.

If only one Sabbath or evening is spent in a place, one will find their labors well illustrated by the rolling stone that gathers no moss. It is true one may comfort the saints in one discourse, and sow some seed in other hearts, but unless something more is done, Satan will be likely to steal away the seed and sow tares in its place. Let all churches arrange as soon as possible for protracted meetings, and make strong efforts to save the perishing.

PORTLAND.

Sabbath, Oct. 1st, meetings were commenced in Union Hall, Portland, and continued eight days, with blessed results. The interest increased daily. Several decided to start in the service of the Lord, and a goodly number made a full consecration to Christ, and received rich blessings. The audiences were large and very attentive. At the last two meetings, people had to go away for want of even standing room at the doors. Great interest is manifested to hear on the prophecies and signs of the times.

THE SOLAR MUTABILITY.

Is not our sun a power? Is not the moon also a power? Were they not set to rule the day and night from the beginning? The solar orb is the "powerful king of day;" the moon is the "queen of night." The word "rule" in Gen. 1: 18 is applied also to earthly potentates, to a govenor, and to a king; but it is worthy of note that the very first application of "rule" in sacred Scriptures is to the sun and moon. Moses calls the sun the "greater light," and in one passage (Ex. 21: 8) this word "rule" is translated "power." The astronomer, Proctor, calls the sun earth's "ruler, light, fire." So it is. Science confirms the grand title given the central solar orb by Moses. Science asserts that the earth originally sprung out of the sun. We do know it is bound to it with more than silken cords. Its very life depends upon the sun. Darken the sun and the earth is under a pall, while the moon is bankrupt. The solar universe is a vast wheel; the sun is the hub. What is the wheel without the hub? Weaken that, let that be shaky, and the wheel is ready to tumble in pieces. Repair is the only remedy. Surely these grand orbs are the very "powers of the heavens," the rulers of the sidereal expanse, holding sway over earth and every planet.

Take away the sun and our earth would be wrapped in the gloom of death. Extinguish its ceaseless, mysterious fires, and the planets would congeal to barren frigidity. Increase those fires, and men would blaspheme God because of the scorching heat. Rev. 16: 8, 9. Kindle them a hundred-fold, and Nature would be in a blaze. Add to the sun's bulk, weight and density, and our earth would plunge toward its burning face with alarming velocity. Diminish this bulk and weight, and the law of centripetal force would be disturbed and ruin follow. It used to be thought that the sun was a fixed star, subject to no change. Science now dissipates the cherished idea of a stable centre. Recent discovery demonstrates the changeability of its surface, the awful struggle within its body, its diminished or increased light, its terribly spotted surface, its varying appearance in color, and its convulsed condition within and without. The human eye has within a few years detected the sudden presence of magnesium, spread all over its surface to an alarming degree. Cyclones are seen whirling in frightful grandeur. Vortices of fire, cavernous and deep, open to the wondering gaze of mortals. Masses of flame, or something resembling it, shoot up from its boiling seething surface to a height of two hundred thousand miles. Let a solar explosion occur (and they do constantly), and earth feels it in an instant, and thrills with electric fire from pole to pole. The sun magnetizes the earth. It sometimes bewitches it. Disturb the magnetic equilibrium, and all the earth and air is convulsed.

It was only early in the seventeenth century that men first discerned spots on the sun. Whether they existed before, science knows not. To this hour they are a mystery. Within ten years a spot has been witnessed forty times larger than the entire surface of the earth! These excite wonder. How easy for God to shake this mighty orb of his own making! How easy for him to toss, disturb and weaken the forces of the universe so as to cause a general alarm among those who study and watch the starry heavens! That time has come. The entire press of the erudite world has, within a brief period, echoed this general fear. The heart of science fails with foreboding of the coming ill. The safety of the solar system is declared to be in danger. Prof. Proctor has lectured far and wide to thousands on "the death of the world." Scientific bodies grandly discuss the dire aspect of things and cry the coming doom. Our earth, says one, is to be burned up. It is to freeze up, says another. It is to again become chaotic and blank, cries a third. On the sun's scape-goat head is heaped all human woes. Bad weather is charged to the sun. Frenzied mental states are attributed to the sun. National convulsions even come from the sun. Earthquakes and storms are the sun's work. Disease, epidemics and plagues are from the sun. He is more than ninety-two millions of miles away and yet is king. Sometimes he rules benignly, sometimes as a despot, then again like a wizzard. Science is getting afraid of this king. He is becoming a "king of terrors." In other words, we have reached the last signs and the wise world is in mortal "fear of those things coming on the earth." Luke 21: 26. In great apprehension of some mighty catastrophe overtaking our plannet, with all its boast and bravo and hot slang at the meek, this evil generation are fulfilling our blessed Lord's words.

Within ten years, from books and journals, I have taken articles with the following titles, viz: "If the Earth were to Stand Still," The Earth in Trouble," "Nature Witnessing for God," "The Solar Spots," "Wonderful Meteors," "Enormous Spots on the Sun," "Worlds on Fire," "Trouble in the Sun," "A Commotion among the Stars," "A Magnetic Storm," "The Sun in a Fever," "The Coming Storm," "Storms in the Sun," "Wonders in the Sun," "Is the Climate changing?" "Is the Solar System in Danger?" "Is the Earth Sick?" "A Final Zoic Catastrophe," "Our Central Sun in Trouble," "One of the Rings of Saturn Lost," "The Sun a Mutable Body," &c. &c. &c. And now high scientific authority tells us that a perihelion period of all the larger planets is to culminate in 1880–85, that will move the centre of gravity out of the sun's centre a distance of one hundred and fifty thousand miles, and so disturb this mighty controlling force that earth and air will rock with the throes of tremendous commotion, and the world of mankind be smitten with such plagues and pestilence as never before were witnessed on earth.

I believe the powers of heaven are being shaken, are being strangely perturbed, are being loosened from their stability. "They shall wax old as doth a garment." Heb. 1: 11. How like an old, rent, rotten, weakened, shaky coat does science make our world-system. How much is needed renovation, restitution, recreation. The day comes on apace. "The Coming Earthquake" will certainly come. It is coming. "Seek ye the Lord all ye meek of the earth; it may be ye shall be hid in the day of the Lord's anger."

NOTES BY THE WAY.

Dear Bro. Couch:—Thinking of the scattered children that are waiting for the kingdom of God, I thought a few words from one in the highways and hedges would be acceptable. Since recovering from my lameness in part, with Bro. Jer. Carr and F. E. Blaisdell I have held meetings in the Eastern Maine Tent in China Village. This was a new place for our blessed hope. Many came in from the surrounding country to hear. Some asked questions while we were preaching, which only helped the Word. Our meetings continued eight days; and if we can judge by reports and what we saw, we think it will tell in the day of the Lord Jesus. One of the first men in town took a decided stand publicly in behalf of truth. Many were persuaded that we are near the judgment, and thought we had the truth, and were resolved to investigate for themselves. One brother said if our definition of death was correct, he should be an Adventist. He thought it was separation and not extinction of life. I referred him to the Lord's definition as given by Moses in Gen. 7: 21, 22, to show that the same death fell upon all living creatures, both man and beast, in whose nostrils was the breath (or spirit) of life. We made reference to Rom. 2d chapter, 6th and 7th verses, to show that God would render eternal life to the seeker. He objected to that as not bearing that rendering in the above passage. We submitted it to a scholar that was interested, who, after looking the passage over, agreed with us. What harmony we find in the Bible when we believe God's word to Adam, "Thou shalt surely die"; and what jargon when we believe Satan, "Thou shalt not surely die."

We were satisfied that our meetings ought to continue longer, but we were obliged to leave. Bro. J. R. Hall and S. K. Partridge came to our help the last Sunday. We have reason to thank God for the meeting at China. May some fruit be found unto eternal life.

Our next meeting was in Waterville Village, with Bro. F. E. Blaisdell, in the Evangel Tent. This was a new place for our hope. We had full meetings, which continued eight days and evenings. A few seemed to be benefited. One man commenced the service of the Lord, with his companion, who had wandered away. Our meeting was located on a beautiful street, and many could hear in their houses and on their piazzas. Many, like Nicodemus, want to hear, but fear the reproach. One lady said to me, "I heard all you preached last year and this, but was not at your meetings." I asked her if she believed what she heard? She said she did. I told her she dare not confess it, for if she should they would turn her out of the church. We find it requires much courage to stand out free in the Lord. We have reason to hope good was done in the name of the Lord while the tent was in Waterville. Our Heavenly Father must give the increase or all is in vain.

We went to Pittsfield Campmeeting on Monday, the 11th of Sept. This meeting is pleasantly located in a good community, who do all they can by boarding both man and beast very low, which is quite an item with poor people. Bro. J. Carr, with others, has labored hard to make this meeting what it is. But for some reason many had the impression that this was to be the last meeting on that ground, and did not build tents as expected. The meetings were interesting. Preaching by Bro. French, Sheldon, Reed, Baker, Ross, Wellcome and Sr. Pease. We came away Saturday. The preaching was good.

The story has been often told, yet it is to be given line upon line; and it cheers the heart of the lone traveler, whose feet have grown weary in the way, as his eye beholds the sun of this world of sorrow setting. O my dear brethren, give the warning, sound the alarm, make full proof of your ministry by giving the meat due in season! Do not forget what called us out as a distinct people; but let us keep in memory that all scripture is profitable for doctrine as well as reproof. Some were reclaimed, others gave up more fully to follow Jesus. Several went forward in baptism. O how blessed it will be to meet all the dear ones in our Eden home, no more to be separated by death!

THE TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, held at its rooms, 144 Hanover Street, Boston, on the 5th of September, 1876, it was voted that the Society make diligent effort to raise the sum of Two Thousand Dollars for the Tract Fund. This is one of the most important departments of our field of labor, and the Society intend to make more earnest efforts than ever before to publish the soul-stirring message of Christ's speedy second advent, and the precious truths connected therewith. To this end the Society solicits the aid of its friends and sympathizers, and hopes that donations to this object may be prompt, liberal, and hearty.

C. E. BARNES, Sec. Adv. Chris. Pub. Society.

Remittances should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass., or they may be enclosed with remittances to the Crisis Office.

MISSION WORK.

BRO. COUCH:—I received the Union Tent from Maine June 22d, and put it up at New Hartford, Iowa, for the use of the annual campmeeting. My expectations were more than realized. It is a well arranged and beautiful tent, and sheds rain well. We had the tent re-dedicated to the Lord, and to the Western field, under the name of the Iowa Mission Tent. Eld. Frank Burr delivered the sermon and dedication prayer. We trust that its use shall never vary much from what Eld. H. B. Sevey, who formerly owned it, designed; and that the pure gospel may be proclaimed in the Spirit of the Lord, and that the donors may be glad in the day of the Lord that they helped in this good work.

July 3rd. We took the tent down, and I started for home, and then to Clear Lake, and put up the tent. July 14th I put up the tent in the public park, and held meetings until the 18th, assisted by H. H. and M. J. Janes. There was but little desire to hold the meetings at first, but we had a good attendance, and one started to serve the Lord. July 21st. There was a grove meeting three miles east of Floyd, which I attended. Aug. 5th and 6th attended a quarterly meeting in Chicksaw Co., and spoke twice. Aug. 13th, I was at Greely, Delaware Co., and heard Eld. Wm. Rose preach. I was much blessed in hearing him. I felt like the apostle Paul, to thank God that the truth was preached, if it did come from him who once tried to pull it down. The manner in which he presented it is well worthy of imitation, as being the best way to get the people to see the light.

I was here on a visit to my old and tried friend, Dr. Job Gildersleeve. We may never meet again until we meet in the kingdom. Aug. 20th, preached near Edgewood, and met Brn. A. E. Marsh and P. H. Hough. I have been somewhat particular to give the names of ministers that I have jointly labored with for the reason that it has been said that there were no two ministers that could or would work together. I am sure that the charge is without foundation. We worked kindly together, and the old gospel trump pealed forth good and strong, as in days of old. Aug. 31st, I put up the Iowa mission tent, five miles east of Charles City, and was assisted in the meeting by Brn. A. A. Wilbur, A. Raymond and A. Denton, until the first Lord's day. One was baptized, and others started to serve the Lord. The meeting began with the best of prospects, but the rain set in, and it was a dismal day and night. I continued the meetings evenings for a week, and then took the tent down. This closes my tent work for this season.

I have battled for the right for more than twenty years in Northern Iowa. I believe it duty to change my field of labor, and if the way opens, and I can see that is the field for me, I mean to go. Brethren are writing to me from Illinois and Wisconsin, and in the West. I trust others will do so, that the proper place may be found. In the mean time I shall be at liberty to fill calls to hold protracted meetings.

Charles City, Iowa. P. S. W. DEYO.

IN Spain the heat has been so great this summer that the thermometer rose to 166 degrees in the sun at Cadiz. Tallow candles melted and became useless at night, hundreds of people dropped dead in the streets, and field laborers refused to work in the scorching sun. Owing to the recent disbandment of 200,000 soldiers, the labor market was so glutted that many workmen could only obtain about fifteen cents daily for twelve hours' work.

WISDOM does not consist in knowing many things, nor even in knowing them thoroughly; but in choosing and in following what conduces the most certainly to our lasting happiness and true glory.

MITCHELL'S PHONOGRAPHY.

This book, which is a treatise upon the subject of a scientific system of sound and sight writing, has been sent us by the author, and in view of the usefulness of the art upon which it treats, in publishing the great principles important in human associations in the departments of Gospel, Legislation and Justice, we can cheerfully assert in bringing it to public notice. It comes highly recommended by those well qualified to judge of its merit, and we doubt not it will prove a valuable work for any who may desire to practice the art of Short Hand writing. It can be obtained of the author, Thos. Mitchell, 297 Dean St., Brooklyn, N. Y. Price post paid, $1.50. ED.

Correspondence.

From Sr. L. B. Weaver.

Dear Ones in Jesus:—My heart has been greatly cheered to-day by the weekly visit of our dear and much loved paper. I read it over and over again. O how it fills my heart with joy to know we are most home, and to see the evidences that are brought to light by reading of the wars and commotion among the nations, which show we are near the end of all things! If ever I felt to praise and bless the mercy of the Lord, I do that we are so near home. After I read the pieces from Brn. Couch and Grant, I felt to say from the depths of my heart, "Come and reign," O my Lord, and let thy saints all go home! What a blessed thought that we are so near home! Do we realize how pure, and holy, and unspotted from the world we must be? Do we think how much we need to look about ourselves to see if there is anything impure, unholy, or unlike Jesus in us? I want the Lord to search me by his Spirit, and cleanse me from all that is unlike Jesus. If there is anything about me that is not right, I pray God daily to take it from me, and make me all ready to meet him. I am his to do, to bear, or suffer all he says. The Lord only let me know that I am all his own, and ready for translation.

It cheers my heart greatly to read the cheering letters and articles from the dear ones in our good paper, and it cheers me to read of the dear ones meeting in different places, and I often wish I could meet with them. O how sweet it will be to meet beyond these scenes of pain and woe, where we shall never have to separate! O I do long for it more than they that watch for the morning! O let the day dawn! I often feel lonely, for I do love the visits of God's dear saints so much. I had been feeling the need of being cheered and comforted, and had been praying the dear Lord to send some of his dear ones here. And on the 21st I received a visit from Srs. Hemenway and Barnes. It seemed to me like the coming of Titus in ancient days. If we love so much to meet with dear ones here, what will it be when we are all immortal, and are safe, eternally safe in the kingdom of our Redeemer?

I was greatly refreshed by the visit of Srs. H. and B. May God bless them for their pains in coming to see me, and for their kindness to me. I wish more would come. God only knows how much good it does me to see the dear saints. God bless you all evermore.

From Bro. G. H. Wallace.

A CHANGE.

One year ago I accepted a call from the church in Manchester, N. H. The year has passed as all other years are passing, like the bright dews of a summer morning. My experience during the past year has been checkered with sunshine and shadow. I have had sharp trials which have verified the promise of Jesus to be with his servants to the end. I have also enjoyed many precious seasons with the brethren and sisters of Manchester, and on the whole have enjoyed my stay with them very much. There are noble hearts there in harmony with the great truths that have made us peculiar in the eyes of the world.

But I have deemed it duty to make a change. And as the church in St. Johnsbury, Vt., have invited me among them, I have interpreted their call as the voice of God. And on Sunday, Sept. 24th, we bade farewell to the dear Manchester people, and, like those who "have no continuing city," turned our faces toward the Green Mountain State. On the following Wednesday we arrived at St. Johnsbury. Found Dr. Warner waiting for us, who took us to his hospitable home, and despite the fact that we had felt so much like strangers in a strange land, we were soon made to feel that we were with Father's own children. The church here is a young, vigorous little body, who have thus far been spared the ravages of fanatics and hobby-riders, and are at present standing free in the Lord and firm at their post of duty.

This is the home of Eld. J. Smith, and partly under his care and those who have been settled here before with the ever needed blessing of the Lord the church has grown rapidly.

For some years Brn. Smith and Warner stood alone; but within three or four years God has greatly blessed St. Johnsbury. They now have a good house of worship, and on my first Sunday with them we had fifty-four testimonies at the communion service. It was a precious season to all present. May the Lord continue his gracious favor is the prayer of your Bro. in Christ. Pray for us.

From Sr. H. M. Hays.

Dear Brn. of the Crisis:—Enclosed you will find twenty-five cents to pay the postage for the paper the coming year. I wish it was twenty-five dollars instead of twenty-five cents. God only knows how dearly I love the gospel truths contained in that paper. It is meat to my starving soul. Were it not for the Crisis how lonely would the hours be, away from all of like faith, with none but Christ to lean on for all I have of earth or hope of heaven. Praised be his holy name! He never slumbers nor sleeps; his ear is ever open to the cries of his needy children. He has promised to give grace and glory, and no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly. Blessed promise! Glory be to his name forever!

While I write, I fancy to myself I almost see him coming for the deliverance of his saints, and can look up and say, "Lo, this is our God, we have waited for him." Hallelujah! I believe I shall see him coming soon. O ye disconsolate ones, look up! He will soon come to deliver all his saints. What a change from mortal to immortality and eternal life. "Weeping endureth for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." In a little while the shadows of time will be merged in the splendors of eternity. He will then save his people with an everlasting salvation. We are saved now from sin by faith; then we will be saved finally, completely. Then the doors of paradise will be flung wide open, and the bride of the Lamb will enter her everlasting home. No more want, no more pain, sickness or sorrow, no more loneliness, no more mourning the absence of the Savior, but we shall be forever with him at home, and drink from the fountain of living waters.

Though separated from my brethren and sisters here, God grant that I, with you, may share the untold delights of that beautiful home.

Albion, Iowa, Sept. 28th.

From Bro. M. Batchelor.

Dear Bro. Couch:—I should like to write a few lines for the Crisis, but it hurts me to read or write. I gain slowly, but I think surely. The Lord is good to me. He has brought me up from the gates of death, in answer to the prayers of the church. Surely, we are living in a solemn time. I wish I could have strength to give the alarm to a lost world; but I must be content to sit still and watch and wait.

I hope the brethren will not cease to pray for poor me. God bless and keep us in the evil day shall be the prayer of yours in hope of life when Jesus comes.

New Bedford, Mass.

THE YOKE.

D. B. PEARSON.

Jesus says his yoke is easy and his burden light. Do we who claim to have on the yoke of Christ find it so? Is the yoke we daily wear easy, and the burden light? If not, then we must be laboring under some burden that our Savior did not lay upon us. The yoke of Christ cannot be an easy one unless we conform to it, and are willing to be guided by him in all things—to go where he will, and nowhere else. If we really love the Lord, we shall love the yoke, love the cause, and love all connected with the service of Christ. Duty will not be a task, but a pleasure. The burden that Christ lays upon us is light, but Satan will impose upon us burdens grievous to be borne if we will only carry them.

Then let us not be pack horses for the devil, but keep clear of every unneccessary burden, that we may "run and not be weary, walk and not faint," and finally reach the golden streets of the New Jerusalem.

Obituaries

BRYANT. In Hermon, Me., Aug. 23d, 1876, Robert Bryant, aged fifty-four years.

The subject of this notice was a kind and faithful husband and father, and a worthy citizen. Through his long and distressing sickness he maintained great patience, and an unwavering faith in the promises of the gospel of Jesus. He leaves an affectionate wife and two dutiful and loving children to mourn their loss. He will be lamented by all who know him. A NEIGHBOR.

PEASLEY. In Weare, N. H., Sept. 4th, 1876, Alfred D. Peasley, aged forty-five years.

Another of the faithful has fallen—gone down with the armor on. He was an ardent and steadfast lover of the Lord and his truth, and a firm believer in his speedy coming. He rests in hope of the bright morning of the resurrection, which he believed was soon to dawn. Exceedingly comforting was the gospel hope as brought to our remembrance by G. H. Wallace on the funeral occasion. MRS. L. B. PEASLEY.

Notices.

South Boston.

The brethren in South Boston, believing in the near coming of Jesus and kindred truths, desiring to let their light shine, have leased a Hall corner of Dorchester and National Streets (close by Broadway), where they mean to have "the gospel of the kingdom" preached. They do not mean to ride, or allow hobby riding, but desire a place where the Lord's coming may be kept before the people. They desire the prayers and cooperation of all the lovers of the truth in Boston. Where there are more than three hundred thousand souls, there ought to be a place where those of "like precious faith" can meet together, and where these truths can be proclaimed unmixed with the traditions of men. Pray for this meeting. For the brethren, A. P. MOORE.

New Hampshire Adv. Chris. Conference.

The next annual session of the New Hampshire Advent Christian Conference will be held with the church in Manchester, N. H., commencing Tuesday evening, Oct. 24th, and hold over the following Sunday. Our Constitution requires all our preachers to report personally or by letter. We wish all our churches to make an extra effort and send their quota of delegates. Each church is entitled to one delegate, and one additional one for every twenty-five members. Fare will be reduced on the Concord and Claremont and Northern Railroads as usual. Passengers will purchase their tickets on these roads of the conductors in the cars. Call for Conference Tickets.

CONCORD ROAD. Conference Tickets, at reduced rates, can be purchased at Concord, Suncook, Hooksett, Nashua, Epping, N. M. Junction, Portsmouth, Goffstown, N. Weare and Lawrence.

The B. C. and M. Road will reduce as formerly. Purchase regular tickets for Concord, and receive return passes at the meeting.

A. ROSS, President.
C. H. FLETCHER, Secretary.

Hoosick Valley A. C. Conference.

It was voted at our July Quarterly Conference to hold our next Annual Conference for Oct. with Bro. Mathewson and the church at Castleton, Vt. It has been appointed to commence Wednesday evening, Oct. 25th, and continue its meetings over the following Sabbath. The election of officers, the reports of preachers and delegates from the churches, and other business of importance, comprise the order of business for these meetings; and it is very important that all the preachers of this Conference should be present, or at least be represented by letter; and it is also expected that all the churches will report by delegates, or letter. The chapel is only a short way from the depot, which stands at the junction of railroads from the South, East and West.

Let all be prompt to attend the first meeting, as the first meeting for business will probably be on Thursday.

ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

This is an ably conducted weekly paper, edited by Elder Frank Burr, and published under the auspices of the Western A. C. Publishing Society. It gives prominence to the personal coming of Christ, the resurrection of the dead, the final destruction of sinners, and the eternal salvation of saints on the renovated earth. It also insists on a holy life as essential to an admittance into the coming kingdom. $2.20 a year. Address Advent Christian Times, 91 South Green St., Chicago, Ill.

The World's Crisis and Adv. Chris. Times sent postpaid to subscribers who will take both, at the reduced rate of $4.00 per year in advance for both papers. Address World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

TWO NEW TRACTS.

We have just published two new Tracts.

"THE DIVINE ARTILLERY."

BY D. T. TAYLOR.

This is a valuable tract, addressed to theologians and thinkers, critics, Bible students and ministers, concerning what the Lord has furnished to be preached to sinners as motives and inducements to repentance, and to saints to induce activity and endurance. The Bible hope is clearly and forcibly stated. Price 50 cts. per one hundred, or 15 cts. per dozen by mail.

"THE FEARFUL OUTLOOK."

BY I. C. WELLCOME.

This attempts to show those who are anxious, perplexed and fearful about what is coming on the earth, that the wars and preparations of the last thirty years, the present distress of nations, and struggle with Popery and Turkey, will result in our Lord's return and the destruction of the nations. This will be read by all. Price $1.00 per hundred, or 25 cts. per dozen, by mail.

Address I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

Appointments

☞ APPOINTMENTS MUST BE RECEIVED AS EARLY AS TUESDAY MORNING (as our paper goes to press about noon) to insure insertion for the coming week.

☞ The following RESOLUTION was passed at the late meeting of the A. C. P. Society:—

"RESOLVED, That no appointments be published in the CRISIS henceforth for persons unknown to the Editorial Board (by which is understood the Editors, Editorial Committee, and Business Agent), unless satisfactory reference shall be given."

The Committee appointed by the Adv. Chris. Association, at its last Annual Meeting, to advise with the Editorial Board "in relation to the publication in the World's Crisis of the appointments of men unworthy of recognition as preachers," having attended to the duty assigned them, recommended, and the Editorial Board have adopted, and ordered to be published, the following resolution:—

"RESOLVED, That when the Editorial Board is properly notified by any of our Churches, or Ministers, or responsible persons, by a written allegation that a certain minister, or ministers, lack moral character, that they be instructed to notify such minister, or ministers, of the information received, as a reason for withholding their appointments till after a proper trial and acquittal."

All communications in relation to this matter should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board—GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass.

"DELIVERANCE WILL COME."

A. C. PRINDLE.

"Deliverance will come!" sang the loved ones at even;
I heard the sweet promise—I claimed it as mine.
Though old, yet 'twas new—'twas a message from heaven,
Which flooded my soul with a rapture divine.

"Deliverance will come!" sad and long have I waited,
While measuring years by the throbbings of pain;
Bowing my head till the tempest abated,
Hoping and waiting for rescue in vain.

Waiting for Him—for the Lord who delivers;
Waiting for Him who is mighty to save;
Waiting in anguish while every nerve quivers;
Asking for patience and grace to be brave.

Far into night hath my vigil been keeping;
Long, long ago did the last star decline;
Weary of watching, while comrads are sleeping,
Father, I'm waiting deliverance divine.

Weary, thy child to thy bosom I'm fleeing;
Dark is the way; in my weakness I come.
Grant me one star my lone pathway revealing;
Guide and deliver, and welcome me home.

"Deliverance will come!" still their chorus repeating;
I queried (as faintly I joined the refrain)
Should it come only when heart-strings are breaking?
Will the seed-time of sorrow prove fruitless and vain?

Fruitless and vain? 'Tis "through great tribulation"
The ransomed of earth to the Father must go;
Then welcome the trials, the grief, the temptation;
Hereafter their mission of love I shall know.

"Deliverance will come!" still the anthem is ringing;
Faith catches the song and re-echoes the strain;
Though weary the night, the morning is bringing Deliverance from sorrow, from anguish and pain.

MISSION WORK IN KANSAS.

Saturday, July 22d, we left brother's home for Centropolis, Franklin Co., distance thirty-five miles, and scattered seed on the way. Arrived at night, and stopped at Bro. Snyder's. On Lord's day, 23rd, met and had a good season. There are some live members in this church, doing nobly to help spread the truth. 25th, we drove through to Lawrence, twenty-five miles, and made our home with Bro. Chapman. Found him and Bro. Siler scattering the good news in this great city. We went on to the street and helped them. 27th, went out of the city ten miles to the Rens church, and put up with Bro. Ford. They were very anxious for us to stop over and have meetings, but we could not. On the 28th we went to Tonganoxie, Leavenworth Co., and found Bro. Hubble well and glad to see us. After dinner we passed on to Jarbelo. Before arriving at our stopping-place we rode into a field among the threshers, and gave notice of a meeting on Lord's day. The Lord aided greatly in speaking.

Over a year had passed since we had met this people, and since the church was set in order, and I can assure you we were glad to see them and they in turn greeted us. At night all could not get into the house. Monday night a full house again, notwithstanding the busy time. Tuesday, Aug. 1st, we rode into the city of Leavenworth, on a load of corn, with Bro. Bridges and boy, and took tracts and papers to scatter as we went. The boy did nobly in helping spread the seed. The seed which we sowed in the streets and lanes, and along the highways and hedges will not return void. The Lord will bless it.

It was something new to see a stranger in these parts scattering tracts and papers freely among the people. O that I had the means to go through every town, village and city in this great Western country, and warn the people of coming judgment! June 2nd, met again at the Eagle school-house, and continued meetings over the 6th. The last day we had a crowded house. I baptized eight, and it was a blessed season in the Lord. The Lord's supper was attended to in reference to his coming. Bro. and Sr. Hubbel were with us to enjoy the feast. We visited fourteen families or more while there. Those of the dear brethren and sisters there, we trust, will keep all on the altar, and keep up the prayer-meetings till Jesus comes. Aug. 7th, we returned to Tonganoxie, and stopped with Bro. Hubbel, who is standing firm for the truth. At night we met at the Christian meeting-house. Brethren and sisters came eight and ten miles, and we had a blessed out-pouring of truth in the name of the Lord. All wanted us to stop longer, but work ahead would not admit. On the 8th we went to Franklin Co., and tarried at Bro. Snyder's. 9th, came to Arvonia, and stopped with the church there till the 18th, preparing and resting for a southern trip. On the 18th we went to Ottumwa, Coffey Co., and took dinner with Bro. Rose and wife, and called on Bro. Eubanks and Klocks. The latter and wife we found in deep mourning; a dear one had been severed from their embrace, making in all three little jewels that have been severed from them. But they sorrow not as others without hope. God has sustained them thus far and will until Jesus comes, and their children come again from the land of the enemy. O how they mourn now, and we deeply feel for them, and pray the Lord to sustain them in this last and sad bereavement. The Lord pour in the oil of joy for mourning is my humble prayer. Death reigns and little ones die; but soon, very soon Jesus the Life-giver will come to destroy death and him that had the power of death, that is the devil.

We came to Burlington and called on Sr. Cole. She too has been called to lay by in death a dear little boy. O cruel death! How long shall it reign? The answer is, Till the last trump shall sound. Then little ones will live again, no more to sicken and die. Thy children shall come again from the land of the enemy, for there is hope in their end, and they shall come to their own border. "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." Be not disheartened then, dear parents, but press on, for your children will be saved and live again in beauty and glory. Let us live so as to meet them and dwell with them in the renewed earth, where tears, toils, pains and cares, sorrows and death will never come. All tears will be wiped away, and there shall be no more death. We took tea with Sr. Cole and husband, and came on ten miles further, making forty miles drive.

19th. Early in the morning we started for Ward, Wilson Co., distance forty miles. We had a hard day's drive, and were tired when we arrived. 20th. The rain had ceased, and we met a goodly number for worship at the school-house. The Lord blest in speaking. 21st. We started for Longton, Elk Co. We left some seed of the kingdom as we went. Got through to Bro. Lapham's late at night, and found him gone to Independence after the tent. 24th. We put the tent up. 25th. At night had a good season in the Lord. Bro. Preston spoke. 27th. Sunday we had the largest gathering that ever attended meeting in Longton. The tent was well filled, and a third of the people were outside. 29th. Brn. Hunt and Kent came. Bro. Kent is from Iowa. He has been in Texas, and came from there to Kansas. He stopped with us only one night, and spoke from 1 Cor. 15: 48, showing us in regard to the "earthly" and "heavenly." He gave us sound, solid food, that nourishes and supports. All were benefitted. May the Lord send him to this State to labor and to live. 30th. He started for home.

Brn. McFarland, Preston and Hunt were with us to help in laboring for the perishing. Bro. and Sr. Lapham did what they could to help on the good work. We found in them, also in Bro. Preston, a self-sacrificing spirit that few possess. Bro. Lapham said he would have come a hundred and twenty miles after the tent rather than not had it. Bro. Preston told Bro. Hunt that he would go to Sumner Co. and get him, and carry him back, if he would come. Let me tell you, dear brethren and sisters, they believe, and therefore act accordingly. O that we had more noble hearted men and women all over the land that live out the faith of James' gospel! If we had, these glorious truths would be scattered far and wide in a short time. Sept. 3rd was our last day at Longton, and we have great reason to believe that our work has not been in vain in the Lord. Many were stirred up to search the Scriptures, and some have accepted the word spoken, and are endeavoring to live for Jesus.

After meeting at night we took down our tent, and came out of town to Bro. Lapham's. Bro. McFarland took the tent into a place where he has had a few meetings. 6th. We commenced meetings. Bro. Hunt spoke. Since being here we have visited Independence twice, scattering a number of thousand pages of tracts, and a few papers, some of which have been sent into Arkansas and many places in Kansas. We visited nearly every shop in town. 16th. The Lord has blest. Bro. McFarland is a faithful man, and loves to work for Jesus. He often walks twenty and thirty miles to sound the good news. He is poor in this worlds' goods, but rich in faith, and an heir of the kingdom. A helping hand from the rich to aid him in getting a pony would greatly add to their comfort and help our dear brother on his way in the blessed work. Our meeting there was a good one. Bro. Hunt was with us only a short time, and then Bro. Preston came to gladden our hearts and help on the work. The Lord gave utterance to the Word, and conviction rested upon many. Some said they would serve the Lord, and others confessed. The Lord gave the victory, and the seed has been sown that will never die out. One man said that he never knew what he was till he heard these great truths of "Jesus' soon coming," "sleep of the dead," judgment at Christ's coming, resurrection, the glorified earth with saints immortal, and a heavenly King, with a golden city, and a kingdom that should stand forever. Then he said that he must be an Adventist, for he believed them all and was living for them.

Sept. 18th we started for Arvonia, Osage Co.; came thirty-five miles through the dust and grasshoppers. They (the grasshoppers) have come in myriads. Never have I seen so many. They have been flying south for more than a week. The heavens are full of them as far as the eye can see, and the earth is swarmed with them. They reach far and near, over a territory three hundred miles in width and five hundred in length. There are great evidences now that the entire country will swarm with them, and that every green substance will be destroyed. But deliverance is coming, and I am glad. Jesus is coming, and there shall be no more curse. 19th. In the forenoon it rained and we could not travel, but in the afternoon it slacked up and we came to Defiance, Woodson Co. They were anxious for meeting, and the Lord blessed. 20th. We came to Bro. Rich's, Coffey Co. 21st. Passed again through Burlington and on to Arvonia, arriving late in the evening.

22nd. We went to Osage City and received a new supply of books and tracts, having scattered nearly twenty thousand pages. Sometimes in passing through the country we would pick up corn enough that had dropped from loads, that had been drawn to market, to bait our horses, which would save twenty-five or fifty cents. Thus, dear brethren, the Lord has led us on. During the last week we have traveled nearly four hundred miles, had two tentmeetings, and paid our own expenses, and have received only five cents to help on the work, and this was given by a man who could not make change in getting a book. But, thank the Lord, we have had enough, and have lacked nothing. All praise be to the Lord for abundant mercy shown toward us! We felt like trusting him ever, and keeping on in the battle-field till Jesus comes, warning all to prepare, "for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."

We ask you all to pray for us, that we may have strength and health to labor on, and gather with Christ, that sinners may be saved. Tracts and books sent to us at Arvonia, Osage Co., Kan., will be gratefully received, and we will sow in our fields, as the Lord directs, to the glory of God. Yours in gospel labor looking for Jesus.

THE SECRET OF SPIRITUAL POWER.

We must have a consistent christian character to begin with. If there be anything hollow about us, if we be not true and real throughout; if there be any inconsistency against which we have not declared war to the death; if there be any compartment of our life from which the morality of the gospel has been excluded, then power is for us impossible. But power belongs to those who are not merely consistent but eminent christians. It demands the abundance, healthfulness and sweetness of the christian life. Entire consecration is one of its conditions. The purified walk humbly with God, and cultivate that tenderness which fears to grieve the Holy Ghost. It has been the general belief of our people that when reputed christians cease to narrate the dealings of God with their souls, or even to allude to personal salvation, they are in the condition of the man who, being asked, "Have you got religion?" replied, "None to speak of."—Primitive Methodist.

WATCHMAN! WHAT OF THE NIGHT?

THE PROPHECIES FULFILLING.

In examining the order of events at the second coming of Christ, the first thing to be noticed is that the Lord will suddenly descend from heaven to the air with a loud shout and sound of a trumpet (read 1 Thess. 4: 16); and then all the dead in Christ, that is, all the Lord's people, from Abel to the last who died in Christ, shall rise (1 Thess. 4: 17). At the same time, all believers alive on the earth shall in one moment be changed into immortal beings, and with those now raised from the dead will altogether be caught up in the air and never leave Christ again. 1 Thess. 4: 17.

St. Paul gives further details to the Corinthians, of how this change will take place, and how rapid it will be (1 Cor. 15: 51–53); and St. John tells us that we shall be made like Christ when we are thus changed (1 John 3: 2): and our Lord shows that all then living will not be taken. He says, "There shall be two in the field: the one shall be taken and the other left. Two women shall be grinding at the mill: the one shall be taken and the other left" (Luke 15: 37; Matt. 24: 40). "Where, Lord?" was the natural inquiry of the disciples, and from the Lord's answer, "wheresoever the body is, thither will the eagles be gathered together," we infer that where he, "the body" is, there will the eagles or those taken and translated ones "be gathered together."

Nor is it in those passages stated what becomes of those left, but other scriptures contain accounts of vengeance and destruction at that time. "The slain of the Lord will be many" (Isa. 66). But those shall have escaped by translation, who shall be found watching and praying always, that they may be accounted worthy to escape those days of vengeance (Luke 21: 36). Why should any one fear who loves his Lord beyond all things in heaven and earth (and the Lord says that is how he must be loved), and with all his faults and failings, inclination to sin, and falls, and unworthiness, yet clings to his Savior as a drowning man to a rock. While the billows of sin and suffering dash against him and flow over him, he only clings the firmer, and hears in his heart the loving assurance, "It is I; be not afraid."

But for those who will not have this man to reign over them, who have decided to cast in their lot with this world, it would be well if they would examine these passages before it is too late, and, comparing them with all this world has to offer for a few years, at the very utmost, see if it be worth the venture. St. Paul says, "Kowing, therefore, the terrors of the Lord, we persuade men" (2 Cor. 5: 11); and although Christ did not say at the time what would be the fate of those who rejected him, yet it must have been something very sad, for it caused him to weep bitter tears at the very thought, as he looked on Jerusalem, and divine knowledge mingled with a human sob, and gave that sad, regretful cry, "How often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not."

Those that are taken to the Lord in the air, will be gathered out of all earthly churches, sects and denominations, and are the wise virgins who have oil in their lamps, and who go in to the marriage of the Lamb.

As regards the subsequent descent of the Lord to earth, the very spot on earth he will come to, is told in Zech. 14: 4, 5; the passage stating, "And the Lord my God shall come, and all the saints with him." This shows that all the saints must have been previously gathered to him in order that he may bring them with him as St. Paul told the Thessalonians would be the case. 1 Thess. 4: 14.

Although there will be many peculiar appearances in the political, social and moral condition of the world just before the second coming of Christ, which will be recognized as its foretokens by observant readers of the prophecies of the Bible, yet people in general will remain blind to the prophetic meaning of these unusual appearances; and will exclaim in derision to those who expect his speedy advent, "Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation" (2 Peter 3: 4). There will, however, be a goodly company of faithful ones, represented as the wise virgins in the parable of the ten virgins in Matt. 25, who will be found ready to meet their Lord at his advent, just as Noah and his family were ready on the very day the flood came, while the world around him were unprepared, and destroyed. For it is to such that St. Paul says, "But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief in the night."

SIGNS OF THE END.

There is one plain sign after which our Lord says, "then shall the end come." "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness [not for their conversion, but only for a witness] unto all nations; and then shall the end come." Matt. 24: 14. The Bible has been translated into two hundred and twenty different languages and dialects; the American Bible Society has two thousand and thirty-two stations for the sale of the Bible all over the world, and the British and and Foreign very many more. This is the effort of only two societies, and there are numbers of various missions of all denominations scattered over the earth.

There are other signs, but they are so apparant, and now so natural to us, that, except to those watching, they are quite unnoticed. About two thousand five hundred years ago an angel told Daniel, that in the time of the end "many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased." Dan. 2: 4. Some time afterwards, the King of that country wanted to send a message of the utmost importance to his most distant provinces; and it being a matter of life and death, the king's command for haste was exceeding urgent. We learn from Esther 8: 14, the greatest speed that could be attained: "So the posts that rode upon mules and camels went out, being hastened and pressed on by the king's commandment." Such a message could now be sent from one end of the world to the other in a few minutes, or at most hours.

Solomon, in his wondrous wisdom so far beyond his age, yet knew not that there was such an island as Britain; the people of Britain, scarcely four hundred years ago, did not know that there were such places as North and South America, nearly half the world; and yet during the past year many thousand persons left the port of Liverpool alone for America, in steamers, though about forty years ago no steamer had ever crossed the Atlantic. In 1869 large ships passed through the desert; still how little do we think of the Suez Canal as proving the fulfillment of Daniel's double prophecy,—first, the wonderful increase of science enabling man to make two great seas meet in the desert; and then the marvellous going to and fro of man to make such an effort necessary. Such is man's desire for travelling now, that all our increase of knowledge is urged to the utmost to discover means to make the travelling more rapid for a greater number and over longer distances.

We have sad proofs around us that this very increase of knowledge is itself fulfilling another prophecy, given long after, as a sign of the latter days, in the Apostle's writings. The prophecy is that infidelity, skepticism and scoffing will be abroad among men, not paganism as at first; that is, man will not be ignorant that there is a God, but there will be a bold, avowed denial of him, either altogether or in such part as to lower the Almighty to man's own standard, and accept his statements just only in proportion as they reach man's reasoning powers. Some men turn proudly from the Bible, the revealed word of God, saying that now as knowledge is so increased he considers it full of mistakes, and that (to use his own proud words) it does not meet the requirements of this age of progress and enlightenment.

NOTES BY THE WAY IN NORTH CAROLINA AND TENN.

TO THE A. A. M. SOCIETY.

Dear Brethren:—I will give a few notes of my labor on my way home from camp-meeting.

After leaving the good meeting at Coventry Centre, R. I., which was indeed precious, I went to New York, and spent Sunday, Sept. 10th, with the church on 24th street. Monday, at 2.45 P. M., I left Jersey City for Washington, and reached there at 11.30, and remained over twenty-four hours; then on to Bristol, Va., where I arrived on Wednesday evening, but found no train on account of the bridge at Loudon, Tenn., being blown down by the hurricane of Sept. 3rd. Thursday, A. M., took train at five o'clock, and at 6.30 reached Johnson City, Tenn., where I met Bro. Elijah Moore, from North Carolina, who had come for me with a hack, thinking perhaps Bro. S. P. Hayward would be with me.

Here I found a letter from my wife, informing me of the sickness of one of our children. Now came a struggle for me. I first thought I would disappoint the meetings in N. C., and go on home; but was really afraid to do so lest the curse of God should rest on me. After praying over it, I resolved to trust God and do my duty.

We started at 8 A. M., and drove till near dark, through the mountains, and then called at a house to see if we could stay over night; but were informed they could not keep us, as they were crowded with company already. We drove till after nine, passing through hollows and narrow gorges in the mountain where it was so dark we could not see our team or the road, only by the occasional flashes of the vivid lightning, for which we were very thankful. Here I thought of the pleasant camp-ground, where, a few days ago, many dear ones gave me a kind "God bless you." There we were, in that mountain, in the thickest darkness, the clouds threatening rain, hunting a place to lay our weary heads.

At length a good Baptist brother allowed us to rest under his roof till day. On inquiry we found we had rode forty-one miles since eight in the morning. How natural it seems to get back on the battle-field, where we have to "be wise as serpents and harmless as doves," and look to the Lord for help.

Friday, 15th, started at 8.15 for Blowing Rock, feeling very badly. Drove about ten miles and stopped to rest and take some refreshment, being kindly invited by a Mr. Beard. We started again at 1.30 P. M., and reached Bro. B. J. Green's, at Blowing Rock, at 6.30. After supper, we walked through the rain about a mile, to Bro. W. W. Sherril's, where I tried to preach. Then through the rain and darkness we returned to Bro. Green's. We could see neither the road nor each other. Bro. Nelson, who was with us, fell back on a large flat rock, and Bro. Green fell over a log on his face, into the mud and water. I could not see them, but could hear them. We managed to reach the house by stumbling over logs, fences and brush piles. How nice it was to reach a good fire, and a pleasant family.

Saturday, 16th, I preached again at Bro. Sherril's, and, notwithstanding it rained heavily, the house was full. In the afternoon we drove fifteen miles down the mountain to Bro. Moore's. From some of these mountain peaks we can see perhaps hundreds of miles over the hilly State of North Carolina. We were expecting a good rest till morning; but found Bro. Israel Coffey waiting to take us to John's River, seven miles further, to preach that night. It seemed hard, as I had been in the rain the night before and all the way down; but the people were expecting me and I could not say, No. Sr. Moore hastily prepared dinner, and we reached the church just in time. The pastor, Bro. D. G. Sherril, was present. I tried to preach. On Sunday, the 17th, Bro. Nelson, Bro. Sherril and myself filled the desk; large congregations and good attention. Monday, 18th, I felt much anxiety about home, but preached twice and attended the funeral of Bro. Patterson Coffey's child. I preached at night in the church. Sept. 20th preached at 11 A. M., after which we had a social meeting. There were thirty testimonies, something seldom seen here, then sixteen came forward for prayers. At night preached again. It rained so I could not get to my appointments. I spent the day with Bro. Henry Coffey and family, including Bro. C's mother, whose declining years seem to bring to her an increase of love for Jesus and holiness, and to brighten her prospect for a crown of bliss and glory at his coming.

Friday, 22nd, went to Lower Creek. Preached at night at Hartley's school-house. Saturday, 23rd, preached to a congregation in the woods. God gave us a good day. I organized a church with twenty-one members, and a committee was appointed to build a house of worship for them. At night had a blessed social meeting at Bro. Charley Coffey's. Sunday, 24th, preached again in the woods, and eight joined the new church. Here is a band of true believers, who have had to sever former ties on account of God's truth; among them Bro. Sherril, one of the best men the Baptists had in this county. Such men as Bro. R. H. Moody, who gave me "a round" last year, are, by their opposition, forming Advent churches for us.

Sunday night I preached at the house of Bro. Sherril, after which we had a social meeting. Monday, 25th, went to the Yadkin church by invitation of Bro. Nelson. It was a new place for our truth, and we had a large congregation of attentive hearers; and I have reason to believe that the truth due "this generation," found a place in many honest hearts. I hope many of them will be gathered into the kingdom when Christ comes.

Bro. Thos. F. Nelson has been one of the most useful men in Wautauga County. He was pastor of four Baptist churches; but having seen the absurdity of the popular views, and embraced Bible truth as we understand it, he is to be tried before his church for preaching heresy. I feel sure that after his trial he will be God's freeman, and will enter wholly into the work. He is just the man for the field. Pray for him and Bro. Sherril.

Tuesday, 26th, preached at the Berean church, and baptized two sisters; then administered the Lord's supper. Preached again at night, after which we had a social meeting. Then took leave of the dear brethren and sisters, having received four into the body during our visit. Wednesday, 27th, went to Bro. Moore's and found him suffering from a cold. After praying with him, Bro. Crisp took me part of the way to the cars. I went to the favorite summer resort kept by Bro. Sherril, at Blowing Rock, and preached again. This was a hard trial, as I was so worn with labor. I really did not feel able to stand, but the people were out, God helped, and I hope a little good was done. Preached again at night to a full house. Thursday, 28th, I rode fifteen miles to fill an appointment in a place where these glorious truths had never been preached. I had sent appointment to preach on the following subjects: "The promise to the Fathers"—text Rom. 15: 8; and "Redemption nigh"—text Luke 21: 28. On arrival we found a good congregation, but the doors were closed. I spoke twice in the open air. I then walked a mile to dinner with Mr. Beard; and on taking off my hat I found that my forehead was blistered by the heat of the sun. It soon became very painful.

At 3.40 P. M., with Bro. J. Moody (a Methodist brother) who takes me from here to Johnson City, Tenn., I mounted one of his horses, and we rode till dark, and then began to call for lodging, but no; we were informed that we could not stay. After nine o'clock we were received into a humble cottage, where we were kindly treated and charged nothing, but invited to "call again." Friday, 29th, we rode from six till one; then stopped for dinner with a Bro. W. G. Butler (Methodist). He had never heard of our people or doctrines; so he was curious to know, and seemed astonished when I gave such clear proof of our position from the Bible. He invited me to preach next time I pass, which I have promised to do.

Reached Johnson City, where I parted with my dear Bro. Moody. Saturday, Sept. 30th, arrived in Ooltewah, Tenn., at 6.30 A. M., having traveled all night, suffering with pain from my blistered head. Met Bethel church at two P. M., and tried to preach. I suffered extremely with my head; but one thing consoled me, and that is—Father above knows why my head is blistered. Sunday, Oct. 1st, I preached twice, rode ten miles, and baptized two by moonlight. Oct. 2nd, up at three A. M., to start for home, anxious to see loved ones.

At 10.30 A. M., I had the happy privilege of meeting my dear wife and children, also several kind friends and neighbors who had gathered to share our joyous meeting. But alas! how soon are our joys in this world blighted. I found my poor wife wasted considerably by over a week's sickness, during which three letters had been sent me to come immediately, but none of them reached me. She is still very weak, and worn out with toil and care. She wants strength to do God's will. Pray for her especially; for what could I do in the Lord's vineyard without her prayers, sympathy, and help? But we thank God she is no worse. She desires me to say to those dear sisters who so kindly thought of her while at the camp-meetings, that she feels very grateful for all their acts of kindness. Father knows it all, and he will reward them still more abundantly.

To-morrow I start again, if she is well enough for me to go. O God, thy kingdom come! Pray for us.

DESTROYED FOR LACK OF KNOWLEDGE.

In the knowledge of God is peace and blessing. To know him is life eternal. The words in which he speaks to us, and the providences by which he reveals himself, if heeded, result in life and blessing; if neglected, we become involved in ruin through our own misdeeds. Of Israel of old the prophet said: "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge. Because thou hast rest rejected knowledge I also will reject thee . . . seeing thou hast forgotten the law of thy God, I will also forget thy children!"

There are persons who do not perceive the connection between knowledge and safety. But a moment's thought will convince them of the fact. The pilot who fails to study the chart, and runs his vessel on the rocks is destroyed for lack of knowledge; and with him all those who trusted to his wisdom. A man who ignorantly accepts a poison instead of medicine, and dies when he might have been healed, is destroyed for lack of knowledge. The man who is willingly ignorant of coming danger, and neglectful of the means of escape, is at last destroyed for lack of knowledge.

When God warned the antediluvian world of the coming deluge, by his servant Noah, they had ample time and opportunity to provide for their safety, and escape their threatened doom. They neglected the admonition. They would not know the approaching danger, they refused all instruction, despised all reproof, and at last miserably perished "for lack of knowledge." They "knew not, until the flood came and took them all away." The inhabitants of Sodom had warning of their sins and of their danger, and the relatives of Lot were warned by him personally, and exhorted to escape from the city before it was overthrown. But they neglected this, and when the fiery tempest burst upon them they perished;—destroyed for lack of knowledge. When Jerusalem was encompassed with armies, timely warning was given that men might "know that the desolation thereof was nigh," and flee at once to the mountains; and there were people who accepted the instruction, and fled; and it is said that not one christian perished in that siege. But others, despising instruction, and disregarding warning, were shut in by the enclosing armies, and perished miserably in that devoted city.

These instances are but illustrations of the danger of perishing for lack of knowledge. The world to-day is dying in sin and sorrow for lack of knowledge of Him in whom is life everlasting. And when this evil world has run its course and God shall awake to judgment and destroy the men who have sinned against him, the same scene will be enacted; "The wise shall understand, but "The wicked shall do wickedly and none of the wicked shall understand." The day of Judgment will come as a snare upon the unthinking world. As it was in the days of Noah and of Lot, so shall the coming of the Son of man be. Men shall perish for the lack of knowledge,—knowledge of God, knowledge of Christ, knowledge of the Bible, knowledge of God's mercies bestowed, and of his judgments drawing near.

Let us give good heed to the voice of wisdom that crieth in the streets, and that calls us to fellowship and acquaintance with God. And let us pray that in us may dwell that wisdom that cometh from above; that knowledge of God, and that acquaintance with his Word which shall bring peace and blessing and safety to our souls in this world, and conduct us to the rest that remaineth for the people of God, in the glory of the world to come.—The Common People.

PREACHING.

A good many preachers think that they preach the gospel because they don't preach anything else. They don't preach Universalism, or Skepticism, or Darwinism, nor any other ism; and so they take it for granted they are preaching the truth, the real gospel, and that they are all right. They never were more mistaken in their lives. A man may avoid these and all other heresies, and yet not preach the gospel. There are preachers, not a few, who don't preach anything; they stand up and say their say; but there is no life in it; it is destitute of freshness, vigor, vitality. It does not come from the heart, the experience. The speaker does not feel it, and nobody else feels it.

To preach the gospel means two things; it means to preach "the gospel;" and it means to "preach" the gospel. It means something more than not to preach heresy; though, indeed, the worst heresy the devil ever set on foot is preaching the gospel as though it were not the gospel—preaching the gospel so that nobody cares whether it is true or not, whether you preach or not.—National Baptist.

ABOUT HATING.

Hate not. It is not worth while. Your life is not long enough to make it pay to cherish ill-will or hard thoughts toward any one. What if that man has cheated you; or that woman has played you false? What if this friend has forsaken you in your time of need, or that one, having won your utmost confidence, your warmest love, has concluded that he prefers to consider and treat you as a stranger? Let it all pass. What difference will it make to you in a few years, when you go hence to the "undiscovered country?" All who treat you wrongly now, will be more sorry for it then, than you, even in your deepest disappointment and grief, can be. A few more smiles, a few more tears, some pleasure, much pain, a little longer hurrying and worrying in the world, some hasty greetings, and abrupt farewells, and life will be over, and the injurer and the injured will be led away, and ere long forgotten. Is it worth while to hate each other?—Selected.

BE NOT DECEIVED.

MINA F. GOWEN.

"Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the spirit shall of the spirit reap life everlasting." Gal. 6: 7, 8. In these last days, while the idea is so largely obtaining that somehow or other God will save men whether they serve him or not, these words of the apostle are to the point, quick, and powerful, and decisive. Stop and think. Don't be deceived, for God is not mocked. Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap.

The farmer that sows oats, and says he expects to reap wheat, would not be called sane. So the idea that an individual can go on in the service of self, sin and Satan all his or her life, and then reap life everlasting, is equally absurd. It is taught in the text that it is impossible; yet how many are risking their salvation in this vain hope, leaning on a broken reed. Be not deceived. In the 8th verse is brought out the two kinds of seed sown, with the final result at the harvest. We read that the field in which the seed is sown is the world, and that the harvest is at the end. He that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption. This class represents the natural man, the carnal mind that is at enmity against God; whose life is spent in gratifying self, in seeking honor and pleasure, and worshipping the God of this world; indulging the lusts of the flesh, and the lusts of the eye, and the pride of life; whose fruits are murders, adulteries, drunkenness, anger, wrath, malice and evil speaking. All that are in this class, sowing this seed, must reap the harvest of the text. No immortality, no palms, or robes, or crowns. God is not mocked.

But he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting. This class represents those who are born of the Spirit,—those who by faith in the Savior have accepted this offer of pardon and washed their robes white in the blood of the Lamb. Henceforth crucified unto the world, alive to God, and led by the Spirit of God, they deny self, and do mortify the deeds of the flesh, and have for their glorying the cross of Christ, whose fruits are love, joy, peace, long-suffering, goodness, faith. These shall reap everlasting life, and shall come with songs and everlasting joy, while the other class are shut out.

Dear reader, where will you and I appear? Be not deceived; God is not mocked.

HOME AND HEALTH.

HEALTH AND HAPPINESS.

Health and happiness go together. There is no use of talking about it, for they do. Not all the medicines or creeds in the world can make a bilious, nervous, sick person happy. He must be well before he can say, "I am in good condition in mind and body." There are a great many wrong notions in the world, and everybody has imbibed some of them. All have prescriptions for whoever complains. Some take this or that nostrum; others lay all unhappiness to the heart or conscience, while the seat of trouble is the stomach or liver. And it will be so long as the world stands, unless a reform be made in our habits.

In the first place, a man's house should be the most healthful, quiet, restful spot on earth to him. The religion of a man's life should begin here; find its spring and nurture here. All the churches and meetings under the sun cannot do or undo what his home does. When he enters there, and shuts the door behind him, he should feel that the cares, duties, business, noise, smells, and everything else of the outside world are shut out. Here are relaxation and rest. He throws off his former life as he throws off his coat. When he sleeps, he should do it as going into the land of forgetfulness to come back refreshed and new. When he eats, it is to be nourished, the old wastes made up by new supplies. When he reads or chats with his family, it should be as he would sit down in an orchard to enjoy its fruits, or in a flower garden to be delighted and soothed by its beauty and fragrance.

Home should be the club, library, picture-gallery, and sanctuary. But there are material arrangements, connected with our social life; and not least among them are cooking and breathing. Poor or partially cooked food will drive health out of the body, and happiness out of the heart; and bad or no ventilation will ruin the peace of any house. One of the best and greatest blessings in a house is an open fire-place. It is where the members of the family mostly congregate, and are in the best spirits. The hearth-stone has witnessed more cheerfulness, and listened to more pleasant words, and seen brighter happier faces than any other place in the world. The only prescription we give is, go and make your home bright and healthful, and it will be happy.—Providence Journal.

BEST FOOD FOR A WEAK STOMACH.

The term "weak stomach" includes such a variety of diseased conditions that it would really be impossible to describe any single dietary which would be equally well adapted to all. In general, persons who are suffering from impaired digestive organs will find food prepared according to the directions in "Healthful Cookery," admirably adapted to their wants. There are exceptional cases which require a special dietary. Some dyspeptics find it impossible to eat fruits and vegetables at the same meal without suffering from indigestion in consequence. Persons with "weak stomachs" may note this fact with advantage. Other dyspeptics find it next to impossible to digest farinaceous food, but digest nitrogenous food without difficulty. Persons of the latter class may require some animal food—as beefstake or eggs, prepared in the most healthful manner—for a few days, until the digestive organs acquire sufficient strength to allow a different diet.

It is not necessary, in most cases of this kind, to exclude farinaceous food altogether, but only to limit it to a smaller quantity than usual, while substituting some kind of animal food. This substitution is not necessitated by any demand on the part of the system for animal food, but by such a condition of torpidity of the stomach as allows the easily fermentable farinaceous substances to ferment or sour before digestion is effected. Highly nitrogenized vegetable food would be much superior to animal food if it could be readily obtained.—Health Reformer.

BANKING THE HOUSE.—People who have cool houses usually throw up around the sides, on the approach of cold weather, an embankment of some kind. Sometimes earth is used; but very often, especially in the country, stable manure is employed. The latter practice is a very objectionable one. During the coldest months, when everything above ground, out-of-doors is frozen up, no harm may result. But the first warm days of spring, or perhaps a "January thaw," restores the putrescent mass to its native condition, and then foul odors and poisonous effluvia are poured into the dwelling from all sides. The proper way to bank a house is to place about it a sufficient quantity of straw, hay, or leaves, and then cover with dry earth to the depth of a few inches. Even such a banking as this should be removed as early as possible in the spring, to give light and ventilation to the cellar.—Health Reformer.

THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

"FOLLOW ME."

religion upon which to except ours, or upon which we can rightfully hope for that excellent and world-regenerating destiny which public men, in church and state, have been so loud and confident in claiming and proclaiming. Dr. Duffield once said, "I know no safe depositary of power among mortal men for the purposes of government. Tyranny and oppression, in church and state, under every form of government, social, civil, ecclesiastical, monarchial, aristocratical or democratic, have sooner or later, characterized the governments of earth, and have done so from the beginning. . . . . It is the sway of heaven alone that can redeem this fallen world." It was the truth he uttered.

There is but one rightful and competent govenor of earth; and he is a king. He is absent now. And while he is absent, and the literal setting up of his kingdom is delayed, there will be nothing but disappointment, revolation and trouble in all human calculations and affairs. The philosophy of Providence, as conducted throughout the whole period of his absence, is to prove to men, by the failure of all their multiform experiments, that they can neither save, nor happily govern themselves. God has also plainly declared ...

to God is not sentiment and emotion, but practice and life. Religion is a thing to be done as well as felt. To cease to do evil and learn to do well, is one of its deepest essences. "Break off thy sins by righteousness, and thine iniquities by showing mercy to the poor," is the great practical touchstone by which its reality must be tested. "Be not conformed to this world," is the apostolic requisition, which none may safely disregard.

Ho, then, ye that call yourselves Christians but have forgotten your covenant promises! It is for you to renounce the devil and all his works, the vanities of the world, and the wicked desires of the flesh, as ye have promised. It is for you to retrace your wayward steps, and with humble and penitent hearts, to return to your allegiance. Your neglect of duty, and worldly conformity, and fellowship with scoffers, must end by a fresh consecration of yourselves to your God.

Ye almost Christians, lingering these many years upon the margin of the kingdom, looking in through the gates but never quite ready to enter them, intending but never performing, often wishing but still postponing, hoping yet with no right to hope,— ...

est is only to make place for the pleasant field, the beautiful garden, and the joyous home. Man's works are destroyed that the lasting and glorious fabrics of the blessed Redeemer may be set up in their stead. These very wrecks of human calculations are a part of a great redemptive process, and the heralds of a new, heavenly and better order, which Christ is to bring with him when he comes, and which is to girdle the world with unfading beauty and unsullied peace.

For that glorious consummation, therefore, I look, and hope, and pray, and wait, confident that the true redemption is nearing in proportion as earthly troubles multiply and earthly hopes expire.

Eternal Father, hear!
Haste to fulfill thy word!
Let Israel's hope appear!
Reveal to earth her Lord!
We wait for Jesus from the skies;—
When shall his glories greet our eyes?

How long shall death yet reign,
And hell our race oppress?
When shall earth bloom again
In Eden's blessedness?—
We wait for Jesus from the skies;—
When shall his glories greet our eyes?

The waves of ill are high; ...

that is the Word of God, the Bible. Whatever that teaches it is safe to accept as final.

But what is the teaching of that book upon this subject? The law says to man that death is the penalty for transgression. In Ezekiel 18:4, God says, "The soul that sinneth it shall die;" and Paul to the Romans (6:23) says, "The wages of sin is death;" and in 8:13, "For if ye live according to the flesh, ye shall die;" while the apostle James says (5:20), "Let him know that he who converteth a sinner from the error of his ways, shall save a soul from death;" and many others of like import.

If Christ's death met the demands of the law for the entire race, so far as they inherited a sinful nature from their federal head, and so made it possible for the entire race to be raised from the dead, what other construction can properly be put upon the term death, as the final punishment for sin, than a death as represented by the death of Christ. One objection I have seen urged against this view is, that if it was not everlasting torment from which man was to be redeemed, the gain to the human was not equal to the outlay of the divine. The remarks I have heretofore made as to the importance of the atonement in reference to man, would seem fully sufficient ...

advancement of its highest interest. So with the relationship of parent and child existing between God and man. His fall increased the necessities on the part of his Maker to seek his highest interest. But this did not grow out of the simple idea of duty alone, but out of the very attributes of his nature, and was in harmony with all his divine perfections. God's visible works declared to the intelligences he had made his wisdom, his ability, the infinity of his resources, and, as Paul sums it up, his eternal power and Godhead; but not one of them as yet spoke to the intelligences of their sphere of his attribute of love; and right here let me add, that attribute compelled him, so to speak, to provide a way of recovery for his entirely dependent child, although he had forfeited his inherent right to his protection and care; so the results were not all on the side of man, for in thus exalting his dependent, though erring child, this act of love toward him, in addition to his visible works, developed a perfectly rounded and symmetrical character which was worthy of a God, enhancing also his declarative glory in the eyes of all holy or redeemed intelligences.

wife we found in deep mourning; a dear one had been severed from their embrace, making in all three little jewels that have been severed from them. But they sorrow not as others without hope. God has sustained them thus far and will until Jesus comes, and their children come again from the land of the enemy. O how they mourn now, and we deeply feel for them, and pray the Lord to sustain them in this last and sad bereavement. The Lord pour in the oil of joy for mourning is my humble prayer. Death reigns and little ones die; but soon, very soon Jesus the Life-giver will come to destroy death and him that had the power of death, that is the devil.

We came to Burlington and called on Sr. Cole. She too has been called to lay by in death a dear little boy. O cruel death! How long shall it reign? The answer is, Till the last trump shall sound. Then little ones will live again, no more to sicken and die. Thy children shall come again from the land of the enemy, for there is hope in their end, and they shall come to their own border. "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." Be not disheartened then, dear parents, but press on, for your children will be saved and live again in beauty and glory. Let us live so as to meet them and dwell with them in the renewed earth, where tears, toils, pains and cares, sorrows and death will never come. All tears will be wiped away, and there shall be no more death. We took tea with Sr. Cole and husband, and came on ten miles further, making forty miles drive.

ing the last week we have traveled nearly four hundred miles, had two tentmeetings, and paid our own expenses, and have received only five cents to help on the work, and this was given by a man who could not make change in getting a book. But, thank the Lord, we have had enough, and have lacked nothing. All praise be to the Lord for abundant mercy shown toward us! We felt like trusting him ever, and keeping on in the battle-field till Jesus comes, warning all to prepare, "for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."

We ask you all to pray for us, that we may have strength and health to labor on, and gather with Christ, that sinners may be saved. Tracts and books sent to us at Arvonia, Osage Co., Kan., will be gratefully received, and we will sow in our fields, as the Lord directs, to the glory of God. Yours in gospel labor looking for Jesus.

THE SECRET OF SPIRITUAL POWER.

We must have a consistent christian character to begin with. If there be anything hollow about us, if we be not true and real throughout; if there be any inconsistency against which we have not declared war to the death; if there be any compartment of our life from which the morality of the gospel has been excluded, then power is for us impossible. But power belongs to those who are not merely consistent but eminent christians. It demands the abundance, healthfulness and sweetness of the christian life. Entire consecration is one of its conditions. The purified walk humbly with God, and cultivate that tenderness which fears to grieve the Holy Ghost. It has been the general belief of our people that when reputed christians cease to narrate the dealings of God with their souls, or even to allude to personal salvation, they are in the condition of the man who, being asked, "Have you got religion?" replied, "None to speak of."—Primitive Methodist.

his family were ready on the very day the flood came, while the world around him were unprepared, and destroyed. For it is to such that St. Paul says, "But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief in the night."

SIGNS OF THE END.

There is one plain sign after which our Lord says, "then shall the end come." "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness [not for their conversion, but only for a witness] unto all nations; and then shall the end come." Matt. 24:14. The Bible has been translated into two hundred and twenty different languages and dialects; the American Bible Society has two thousand and thirty-two stations for the sale of the Bible all over the world, and the British and and Foreign very many more. This is the effort of only two societies, and there are numbers of various missions of all denominations scattered over the earth.

There are other signs, but they are so apparant, and now so natural to us, that, except to those watching, they are quite unnoticed. About two thousand five hundred years ago an angel told Daniel, that in the time of the end "many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased." Dan. 2:4. Some time afterwards, the King of that country wanted to send a message of the utmost importance to his most distant provinces; and it being a matter of life and death, the king's command for haste was exceeding urgent. We learn from Esther 8:14, the greatest speed that could be attained: "So the posts that rode upon mules and camels went out, being hastened and pressed on by the king's commandment." Such a message could now be sent from one end of the world to the other in a few minutes, or at most hours.

Solomon, in his wondrous wisdom so far beyond his age, yet knew not that there was such an island as Britain; the people of Britain, scarcely four hundred years ago, did not know that there were such places as North and South America, nearly half the world; and yet during the past year many to reach the house by stumbling over logs, fences and brush piles. How nice it was to reach a good fire, and a pleasant family.

Saturday, 16th, I preached again at Bro. Sherril's, and, notwithstanding it rained heavily, the house was full. In the afternoon we drove fifteen miles down the mountain to Bro. Moore's. From some of these mountain peaks we can see perhaps hundreds of miles over the hilly State of North Carolina. We were expecting a good rest till morning; but found Bro. Israel Coffey waiting to take us to John's River, seven miles further, to preach that night. It seemed hard, as I had been in the rain the night before and all the way down; but the people were expecting me and I could not say, No. Sr. Moore hastily prepared dinner, and we reached the church just in time. The pastor, Bro. D. G. Sherril, was present. I tried to preach. On Sunday, the 17th, Bro. Nelson, Bro. Sherril and myself filled the desk; large congregations and good attention. Monday, 18th, I felt much anxiety about home, but preached twice and attended the funeral of Bro. Patterson Coffey's child. I preached at night in the church. Sept. 20th preached at 11 A. M., after which we had a social meeting. There were thirty testimonies, something seldom seen here, then sixteen came forward for prayers. At night preached again. It rained so I could not get to my appointments. I spent the day with Bro. Henry Coffey and family, including Bro. C's mother, whose declining years seem to bring to her an increase of love for Jesus and holiness, and to brighten her prospect for a crown of bliss and glory at his coming.

Friday, 22nd, went to Lower Creek. Preached at night at Hartley's school-house. Saturday, 23rd, preached to a congregation in the woods. God gave us a good day. I organized a church with twenty-one members, and a committee was appointed to build a house of worship for them. At night had a blessed social meeting at Bro. Charley Coffey's. Sunday, 24th, preached again in the woods, and eight joined the

DESTROYED FOR LACK OF KNOWLEDGE.

In the knowledge of God is peace and blessing. To know him is life eternal. The words in which he speaks to us, and the providences by which he reveals himself, if heeded, result in life and blessing; if neglected, we become involved in ruin through our own misdeeds. Of Israel of old the prophet said: "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge. Because thou hast rest rejected knowledge I also will reject thee . . . seeing thou hast forgotten the law of thy God, I will also forget thy children!"

There are persons who do not perceive the connection between knowledge and safety. But a moment's thought will convince them of the fact. The pilot who fails to study the chart, and runs his vessel on the rocks is destroyed for lack of knowledge; and with him all those who trusted to his wisdom. A man who ignorantly accepts a poison instead of medicine, and dies when he might have been healed, is destroyed for lack of knowledge. The man who is willingly ignorant of coming danger, and neglectful of the means of escape, is at last destroyed for lack of knowledge.

When God warned the antediluvian world of the coming deluge, by his servant Noah, they had ample time and opportunity to provide for their safety, and escape their threatened doom. They neglected the admonition. They would not know the approaching danger, they refused all instruction, despised all reproof, and at last miserably perished "for lack of knowledge." They "knew not, until the flood came and took them all away." The inhabitants of Sodom had warning of their sins and of shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the spirit shall of the spirit reap life everlasting." Gal. 6:7, 8. In these last days, while the idea is so largely obtaining that somehow or other God will save men whether they serve him or not, these words of the apostle are to the point, quick, and powerful, and decisive. Stop and think. Don't be deceived, for God is not mocked. Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap.

The farmer that sows oats, and says he expects to reap wheat, would not be called sane. So the idea that an individual can go on in the service of self, sin and Satan all his or her life, and then reap life everlasting, is equally absurd. It is taught in the text that it is impossible; yet how many are risking their salvation in this vain hope, leaning on a broken reed. Be not deceived. In the 8th verse is brought out the two kinds of seed sown, with the final result at the harvest. We read that the field in which the seed is sown is the world, and that the harvest is at the end. He that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption. This class represents the natural man, the carnal mind that is at enmity against God; whose life is spent in gratifying self, in seeking honor and pleasure, and worshipping the God of this world; indulging the lusts of the flesh, and the lusts of the eye, and the pride of life; whose fruits are murders, adulteries, drunkenness, anger, wrath, malice and evil speaking. All that are in this class, sowing this seed, must reap the harvest of the text. No immortality, no palms, or robes, or crowns. God is not mocked.

But he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting. This class represents those who are born of the Spirit, —those who by faith in the Savior have accepted this offer of pardon and washed their robes white in the blood of the Lamb. Henceforth crucified unto the world, alive to God, and led by the Spirit of God, they deny self, and do mortify the deeds of the flesh, and have for their glorying the cross or spring, or perhaps a "January thaw," restores the putrescent mass to its native condition, and then foul odors and poisonous effluvia are poured into the dwelling from all sides. The proper way to bank a house is to place about it a sufficient quantity of straw, hay, or leaves, and then cover with dry earth to the depth of a few inches. Even such a banking as this should be removed as early as possible in the spring, to give light and ventilation to the cellar.—Health Reformer.

"FOLLOW ME."

B. L. STAPLES.

Standing by the restless billows,
 On the Galilean shore,
Are two brothers, lone and weary,
 Waiting, watching evermore.
For their life is one of labor,
 They are fishers of the sea,
And this moment they are casting
 Out their net in Galilee.

As of old they spread the netting,
 Loosing it to let it free,
Suddenly they see a stranger,
 And the group is one of three
To themselves they seem to murmur,
 Seem to question, "Who is he?"
But the stranger only beckons,
 Only answers, "Follow me."

And they followed, little knowing
 That the Son of God was there,
Asking not the why and whither,
 Asking not the how and where;
And the stranger ever led them
 Through the after scenes of life;
By his grace they were victorious,
 By his love they vanquished strife.

And may God in mercy help us
 To accept of Jesus' love,
That we all may meet together,
 When Christ cometh from above.
Loving Savior, O receive us!
 We will answer to thy plea,
And respond, in thought and action—
 "By thy grace we'll follow thee."

THE THREATENING RUIN;

OR,

Our Times, our Prospects and our Duty.

BY JOSEPH A. SEISS, D. D.

(Concluded.)

"And now also the axe is laid at the root of the trees: therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire."—MATT. 3: 10.

WHAT, THEN, ARE OUR PROSPECTS?

God can do without this nation of ours, if he sees fit, just as well as with it. He could reject and humiliate his own chosen people, "to whom pertained the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises," without detriment to his purposes in the earth. No nation, any more than any man, is necessary to him. And for like reasons for which he destroyed Jerusalem he may also cast us down from the eminence of which we have become so boastful and vain. And this idolatry of self and country and substitution of human devices, agencies and arrangements in the place of the proper Savior, and building up of men in hopes not at all warranted in the revealed plan of God, so characteristic of nearly all our thinking and theology, must themselves go far to hasten the coming of judgments to sweep away the occasion and instrument of such mischievous delusion.

There are those, also, who regard our history, doings and economy as such an embodiment of righteousness, justice, truth and wisdom as to render it impossible that it should ever be superseded or materially changed. But neither am I able to subscribe to this. It is the fashion, we know, to glorify the Revolution, and to canonize the men most potent and active in it, as saints; but I have always found great difficulty in justifying it upon any principles in harmony with the plain declarations of the Scriptures. The religious aspects of the Declaration of Independence are essentially deistic. It was written by a skeptic; it knows nothing of Christ, under whose supreme rule every thing must come in order to be abiding; and it acknowledges no relations to God which Jews, Turks and infidels may not alike subscribe. The Constitution of the United States, lauded as our sublimest earthly hope, knows absolutely nothing of God, or Christ, or Providence; and the amendments to it, forever prohibit Congress from making any law "respecting an establishment of religion." It is entirely atheistic.

The spirit which the pilgrim fathers brought with them was about as intolerant as that from which they fled. The enlargement of our territory, in whose vastness and wealth our orators so much glory, has been affected, in a considerable measure, by the butchery or forcible ejectment of its former proprietors. The deepest principle upon which the whole machinery of our Government is built, is a theological falsehood,—a Pelagian heresy. It assumes that the majority of men are pure, intelligent, right-minded, virtuous, and governed by reason and truth; which is contrary to all Scripture, experience and fact. And the framework of our institutions, in general, is subversive of the Divine order, and embraces all the elements of apostasy from God, and ultimate self-destruction.

I do not suppose that other forms of human government are so much wiser and better than our own. All human governments are defective, unreliable and transient; and there is no basis in true theology, morals or religion upon which to except ours, or upon which we can rightfully hope for that excellent and world-regenerating destiny which public men, in church and state, have been so loud and confident in claiming and proclaiming. Dr. Duffield once said, "I know no safe depositary of power among mortal men for the purposes of government. Tyranny and oppression, in church and state, under every form of government, social, civil, ecclesiastical, monarchial, aristocratical or democratic, have sooner or later, characterized the governments of earth, and have done so from the beginning. . . . . . It is the sway of heaven alone that can redeem this fallen world." It was the truth he uttered.

There is but one rightful and competent govenor of earth; and he is a king. He is absent now. And while he is absent, and the literal setting up of his kingdom is delayed, there will be nothing but disappointment, revolution and trouble in all human calculations and affairs. The philosophy of Providence, as conducted throughout the whole period of his absence, is to prove to men, by the failure of all their multiform experiments, that they can neither save, nor happily govern themselves. God has also plainly declared it to be his purpose to "overturn, overturn, overturn," until He comes to whom all judgment has been given, and in whose righteous reign alone, the world, for the first time since the fall, shall have peace. How, then, can it be otherwise than that our particular institutions are also among the things that shall perish and disappear?

WHAT THEN IS TO BE DONE?

These are days in which men are prolific in advice. Sick society has drawn around it many doctors, all with cures infallible. But, like the woman in the Gospel, who "suffered many things of many physicians, and was nothing bettered, but rather grew worse," so it is here; and so it will continue to be as long as depraved man has the charge of things. Upon the country, the excellence of its constitution, the integrity of its union, the strength of its resources, the virtues of its people, the reform of its administrations, the labor of its statesmen or divines, or upon anything that can come out of it, I build no hopes. "The governments and kingdoms of this world are but the organized dominion of human apostasy from God." God will overrule them, and so shape their course as not to be without important effects in filling out the great plans of his providence and the ultimate glories of his elect; but they that put their trust in them, whether republics or monarchies, shall be utterly confounded. To what, then, shall we betake ourselves? On what shall we hope?

It has been an approved custom, in all ages, when public calamities threatened, to resort to special humiliation and prayer. When the Ninevites beheld the judgments that were about to befall them, "the king arose from his throne, laid his robe from him, and covered him with sackcloth, and sat in ashes. And he caused it to be proclaimed and published through Nineveh, by decree of the king and his nobles, saying, Let neither man nor beast, herd nor flock, taste anything; let them not feed nor drink water. But let man and beast be covered with sackcloth, and cry mightily unto God." When Ezra brought up the Jews from their affliction in Babylon, he "proclaimed a fast at the river Ahava, that they might afflict themselves before God, to seek of him a right way for themselves, their little ones, and for all their substance." In the days of Joel the prophet, when invasion, pestilence and famine were pressing upon the nation, high authority gave the command, "Turn ye to the Lord with all your heart, and with fasting, and with weeping, and with mourning; and rend your heart and not your garments; and turn to the Lord your God." And frequent in the history of nations have been such observances. Nor can anything be more appropriate or urgent for the people of these evil times, in view of their crimes and follies, ingratitude and guilt, from the highest to the lowest, than to prostrate themselves in the deepest self-abasement before God, to repent in sackcloth and ashes, and to cry unto the Almighty Deliverer that he may save from the impending judgment. Indeed, this is one of the specific directions of God himself. But it must be an earnest and an honest work, and not mere ceremony and sham. What is the fast which God has chosen? Is it for a man "to bow down his head like a bulrush, and to spread sackcloth and ashes under him? Wilt thou call this a fast, and an acceptable day to the Lord?"

A far different service is that which God requires. "Is not this the fast that I have chosen? to loose the bands of wickedness?" When the wild Baptizer in the wilderness "saw many of the Pharisees and Sadducees come to his baptism, he said unto them, O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance." Fasting is nothing, a sad countenance is nothing, ceremony is nothing, and the most dolorous lamentations and cries to God are all nothing unless accompanied and attested by an honest and practical relinquishment of every known wrong and wickedness. Without this, all our new moons and appointed solemnities and calling of assemblies are but abomination to the Lord. We must wash us, and make us clean, and put away the evil of our doings from before his eyes. Israel must banish her strange gods. Zaccheus must come down and restore what he has taken wrongfully. Felix must send his Drusilla to her proper husband. He that stole must steal no more. Unbelief must give place to faith, and faith verify itself by proper works. We cannot be saved in our sins. We must relinquish them totally. Piety is not poetry, but fact. Conformity to God is not sentiment and emotion, but practice and life. Religion is a thing to be done as well as felt. To cease to do evil and learn to do well, is one of its deepest essences. "Break off thy sins by righteousness, and thine iniquities by showing mercy to the poor," is the great practical touchstone by which its reality must be tested. "Be not conformed to this world," is the apostolic requisition, which none may safely disregard.

Ho, then, ye that call yourselves Christians but have forgotten your covenant promises! It is for you to renounce the devil and all his works, the vanities of the world, and the wicked desires of the flesh, as ye have promised. It is for you to retrace your wayward steps, and with humble and penitent hearts, to return to your allegiance. Your neglect of duty, and worldly conformity, and fellowship with scoffers, must end by a fresh consecration of yourselves to your God.

Ye almost Christians, lingering these many years upon the margin of the kingdom, looking in through the gates but never quite ready to enter them, intending but never performing, often wishing but still postponing, hoping yet with no right to hope,—there can be no doubtfulness as to your duty. This long-opened question must be settled. This neither hot nor cold condition of yours dare be carried no further. You must yield, alter your ways, and be in good earnest what you have all this while only dreamed of being.

Ye people of business, gayety and fashion, living without prayer, without church ordinances, without concern for your immortal good, for God who has blessed you, or for the eternity that is before you—how can you mistake what is required of you? Awake, call upon God, cast yourselves as earnest suppliants at his feet, and give yourselves no more liberty in that loose and careless life which you hitherto have lived, that God may have mercy upon you.

And ye, unbelieving men, and dishonest men, and profane men, and lewd men, and scoffers, hear the voice of your Maker, which goes before the storm and cries, "Prepare to meet your God." It is on account of such as you that the divine judgments are sent upon the world. It is by such as you that wars come, and constitutions are destroyed, and good government is hindered, and that the voice of woe is heard, and that ruin threatens. Stand ye in the ways, and see what blasting indignation you are bringing upon your race, what inexpressible disaster upon yourselves. Behold, and repent. Ask for the old paths, and walk therein. Cast your sins and follies from you, and learn righteousness.

Men must abandon sin, or God will abandon them. They must either accept the government of the Father and the Son, or soon they will have no government, and become the thralls of Satan's malice,—"wandering stars, to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness forever." And if nations, states, office-holders and office-seekers, as well as private individuals, are not willing to repent of their crimes, do right, obey God, and practically acknowledge accountability to him in all things, they may as well make up their minds at once that both they, and the things in which they boast, shall presently go under, never to reappear. For "every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit," must fall, and be given to the fires.

But I have no expectation that such warnings will be received with respect, much less heeded and obeyed. The apostolic prediction is that "evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." (2 Tim. 3: 13). We are not to cease studying, and working, and praying, and doing the best we can for the good of our friends, our country, and our race; but whilst we preach the word, and are instant in season and out of season, and reprove, rebuke and exhort with all long-suffering, we are forewarned that people "will not endure sound doctrine," but after their own lusts will "heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears," and shall turn away from the truth unto fables (2 Tim. 4: 2–4), and shall say, Peace and safety, till their destruction comes.

Still, I am not comfortless. Amid all the darkness there are hopes and consolations far higher than any which lie in the direction of mere earthly progress and development. They also connect essentially with this very darkness and downward tendency of things. It is the gracious Father, after all, who is at the helm, and steering right for a glorious consummation, whatever zones of ill or suffering may have to be passed. The wicked, and the enemies of Christ and his reign, must be brought low, and every plant which the Lord hath not planted must be rooted up; but, with all the wrecks and desolations which yet may strew the shores of time, the ship of God's salvation founders not, but shall come to its destined shores amid joyous shoutings, with all its precious freight secure. Here and there, also, will be a Noah or a Lot, who will believe God, and take warning, and find salvation. When Jerusalem was doomed, there was still deliverance for those individuals who believed in Jesus and followed his word. Not a single Christian perished in that unparalleled tribulation. Blessed hope! that, amid all the commotions and distresses, trials and desolations that may come upon the earth, the Lord's true and faithful people shall be safe! Even in the dark hour, when all human efforts fail, and empires wreck, and trouble and judgment scour the earth, there still is this consolation left, that God holds his true people in his everlasting arms, and will keep them safe unto eternal life.

Nor are these our only hopes. If there is a threatening Ruin, there is also a promised Redemption; and the one is a necessary step to the other. The hewing down of the forest is only to make place for the pleasant field, the beautiful garden, and the joyous home. Man's works are destroyed that the lasting and glorious fabrics of the blessed Redeemer may be set up in their stead. These very wrecks of human calculations are a part of a great redemptive process, and the heralds of a new, heavenly and better order, which Christ is to bring with him when he comes, and which is to girdle the world with unfading beauty and unsullied peace.

For that glorious consummation, therefore, I look, and hope, and pray, and wait, confident that the true redemption is nearing in proportion as earthly troubles multiply and earthly hopes expire.

Eternal Father, hear!
 Haste to fulfill thy word!
Let Israel's hope appear!
 Reveal to earth her Lord!
We wait for Jesus from the skies;—
When shall his glories greet our eyes?

How long shall death yet reign,
 And hell our race oppress?
When shall earth bloom again
 In Eden's blessedness?—
We wait for Jesus from the skies;—
When shall his glories greet our eyes?

The waves of ill are high;
 The world with trouble reels;
All lands and creatures cry,
 Speed judgment's chariot-wheels!
We wait for Jesus from the skies;—
When shall his glories greet our eyes?

The times are prophets now;
 They preach impending doom;
Let each repentant bow,
 And saints prepare for home.
We wait for Jesus from the skies;—
Soon shall his glories greet our eyes!

THOUGHTS ON MAN.

BY A BAPTIST.

END OF THE WICKED.

We are to regard God in his government as absolutely just, and in administering the government, the punishment of the guilty is not to be measured by his almighty power, or infinite resources; but, first, by the penalty of the law that has been violated; for no court of justice may exceed the statute that created it and gave it jurisdiction; second, by the demands of justice, which cannot exceed the penalty of the statute; third, the nature of the party to be punished. When these are met, no higher punishment can be inflicted without injustice being done.

Some tell us that sin is an infinite evil because it is against an infinite being; but I do not understand that to be the true way to measure an act; for, although it is against an infinite being, yet if it fails to affect him personally, or to interfere with the administration of his government, then there is something it does not reach, consequently it cannot be infinite. I have been in the habit of thinking, and still believe it is true that an act cannot exceed in its nature the actor; and if man is a finite being, he cannot under any circumstances either commit an infinite wrong, nor do an infinite good; for, if he can do the one, he must of necessity be capable of doing the other. If a vicious animal kills a man, is it guilty of murder? The effect on the man is the same as though done by another man; but would the law regard and treat the animal as though it was a man, accountable to law? or would it only require that such action should be taken as should secure the community from further danger, not taking into the account the idea of legal punishment?

When but a boy, I listened to a sermon on the punishment of the wicked, in which the nature and conditions of that punishment were argued from the nature of God, and ran thus: "God is an infinite being, and whatever emanates from him must of necessity be infinite. The law which man transgressed came from God, and therefore was infinite, and in violating that law man was guilty of an infinite wrong; consequently must be adjudged to infinite punishment; and as the law was not only infinite dejure, but also defacto, the punishment must be infinite, both in duration and degree; and as the element of fire was used as a figure to represent the punishment of the wicked, and as the figure must of necessity fall short of the fact, so the punishment of the lost must of necessity be beyond any finite conception." The subject, as well as the reasoning, was beyond my comprehension; and, supposing that what came from the pulpit must be correct, and hearing older people talk the same, I supposed it must be correct, although I could not see its propriety. Still the thought would occur to my mind, "Is there any more necessity that God's law should be infinite, than there is that his creature man should be infinite?" Did he attach a penalty to the law under which he placed man that he could not understand? Was man, like the law described, also infinite? I found by Moses' account of the creation, that God's works of creation were in detached parts, and in different periods of time, and separately pronounced "very good," but not infinite; and in trying to understand the teaching of his law, have come to the belief that there may be error taught from the pulpit; and in reading the writings of others, I see a great variety of opinions so antagonistic that I apprehend they cannot all be true.

Dr. Burr, in his work "Pater Mundi," teaches that an infinite God cannot produce another infinite God; consequently, that all his works must be inferior to himself, and illustrates the idea by the inventions of man thus: Man makes a pin machine; that machine is inferior to its maker, although it can turn out a complete pin; yet it cannot turn out a pin machine. If this be true, what becomes of the doctrine that God's law to man was, like himself, infinite? But who is to decide when doctors disagree? Evidently there is but one standard, and that is the Word of God, the Bible. Whatever that teaches it is safe to accept as final.

But what is the teaching of that book upon this subject? The law says to man that death is the penalty for transgression. In Ezekiel 18: 4, God says, "The soul that sinneth it shall die;" and Paul to the Romans (6: 23) says, "The wages of sin is death;" and in 8: 13, "For if ye live according to the flesh, ye shall die;" while the apostle James says (5: 20), "Let him know that he who converteth a sinner from the error of his ways, shall save a soul from death;" and many others of like import.

If Christ's death met the demands of the law for the entire race, so far as they inherited a sinful nature from their federal head, and so made it possible for the entire race to be raised from the dead, what other construction can properly be put upon the term death, as the final punishment for sin, than a death as represented by the death of Christ. One objection I have seen urged against this view is, that if it was not everlasting torment from which man was to be redeemed, the gain to the human was not equal to the outlay of the divine. The remarks I have heretofore made as to the importance of the atonement in reference to man, would seem fully sufficient to answer this objection.

But there is another view of the relations existing between the parties I wish here to notice, as it will entirely do away with this objection, and still further elucidate my view of man's original condition, and that is, the relation of parent and child, which is frequently and forcibly brought to view in the Scriptures. God having made man out of the earth, and not giving him immortality, he was dependent on his Father's especial care and protection for the continuance of his being, as well as for that of his well being.

In thinking over what must have occurred in the council chamber of eternity, when the question of making man was discussed, something like the following scene has been impressed on my mind. The attribute of knowledge said, "If you make man, and place him on trial, he will surely apostatize and become vile." Justice replies, "If that is so, then by creating him you take the self-imposed obligation to provide for his interests in every conceivable emergency. If he violates my law, the penalty will be death; and in my demands I shall be inexorable, and nothing can induce me to make any abatement." Here the Son says, "When the fulness of the time comes, I will go down to earth, assume his nature, take the place of trial, prove my fealty true, and after satisfactory trial will bare myself to the stroke and full demands of justice, submit to death, the just for the unjust, and thus open a way of salvation for the guilty; and that too at my own expense, not asking the least abatement at the hand of justice; and all this will I do publicly that men may know that the provision is made." Justice says, "That will satisfy my demands."

Knowledge again speaks and says, "Man by sin will become so estranged from the right, so in love with the wrong, so completely under the influence of the destroyer, that he will not be inclined to accept the provision when made." Here Love, with a heart overflowing with compassion and kindness, and bowels melting with mercy, interposes with the question, "How can I manifest myself to a lost race in such a way that they may realize my love and compassion for them?" Here the Spirit replies, saying to the attribute of Love, "I will represent you to the fallen race in all the goodness and glory of your character. When the Son shall have performed the work of making provision, and shall have returned and taken his place here, then I will go down to earth and remain there so long as there is anything to be done. I will inspire men to write out the good news, and spread it broadcast over the world. I will lead others to go far and near and tell the story of salvation. I will inspire others to use their means to spread the knowledge of the cross. Many will I inspire with zeal and earnestness for the good of their fellow-men. I will do all that can be done by a continued and untiring presentation of your compassion for a fallen race." "Love responds, "That is all I desire, and I am satisfied." And now what is the conclusion of the council? God says, "Let us make man."

Does any one start at the thought that the creating of man imposed an obligation on the Creator? Did not the endowing of man with a life that was dependent on food for its continuance, obligate the Creator to furnish that provision, and that too before man was created? And did not the Creator recognize and meet the obligation by making abundant provision in advance? But it may be said that was a natural need, while salvation was not, but was a need growing out of man's own act; consequently, the Creator was under no obligation to provide for an unnatural need. But is it not evident that the Creator regarded it in the light of the first obligation, and made provision for that, not only before man was created a living soul, but before providing food to continue that life? For Christ is represented as the "Lamb slain from the foundation of the world."

As man was made in the image of God, so I conclude that the relation of parent and child among us is the image of the same relation between God and man. Are you not as a Father under obligation to the child you have begotten to look after and provide for its well-being? And if that child should violate your rightful command and go astray from the path of rectitude, does that make void your obligation to seek its highest good? By no means. But the necessity of the case increases rather than diminishes the obligation to put forth your best effort for the recovery of that child, and for the advancement of its highest interest. So with the relationship of parent and child existing between God and man. His fall increased the necessities on the part of his Maker to seek his highest interest. But this did not grow out of the simple idea of duty alone, but out of the very attributes of his nature, and was in harmony with all his divine perfections. God's visible works declared to the intelligences he had made his wisdom, his ability, the infinity of his resources, and, as Paul sums it up, his eternal power and Godhead; but not one of them as yet spoke to the intelligences of their sphere of his attribute of love; and right here let me add, that attribute compelled him, so to speak, to provide a way of recovery for his entirely dependent child, although he had forfeited his inherent right to his protection and care; so the results were not all on the side of man, for in thus exalting his dependent, though erring child, this act of love toward him, in addition to his visible works, developed a perfectly rounded and symmetrical character which was worthy of a God, enhancing also his declarative glory in the eyes of all holy or redeemed intelligences.

REMISSION.

O. R. FASSETT.

This word has become almost obsolete in our time. We seldom hear it in public discourse by the ministry, nor do we often meet with it in christian writings, and less is it mentioned in exhortation, prayer and praise in social worship. Why is this? It is certainly a Scriptural term, as many texts demonstrate. Is this important word dropped in this age, while forgiveness, pardon, and justification are retained, for any special reason? Is it because it is supposed that its meaning is covered by more familiar terms? or is it to avoid some doctrine of the Holy Scriptures?

We would not charge upon the ministry and church, that it is to obscure any doctrine of the Bible, that it has fallen into disuse, though it does so; but in our charity would regard it owing to carelessness, indifference, and a want of critical study and discrimination between the meaning of words, that the former terms—pardon, forgiveness and justification—are continually mentioned, while the word remission is so neglected. It is an unfortunate thing for Christianity that so important a word should be lost from the christian vocabulary, and not be connected and associated with its companions, to give us the full knowledge of the great salvation in Christ our Lord.

While forgiveness implies the pardon of sinners, so that they are no longer treated as guilty; and pardon means forgiveness and reconciliation; and pardoned sinners are under no obligation to suffer the penalty due transgression; and justification implies forgiveness and pardon; so that sinners justified by the grace of God are treated as righteous persons; remission teaches all this and more, even the release and relinquishment of the penalty due to all sin.

Let us notice its bearing on the great plan of redemption instituted by the love of God for our lost and ruined race. By the original sin, or the first transgression, the whole human family were involved in one common catastrophe—one dread calamity—death. As says Paul: "By the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation." "By one man's offence death reigned by one." "By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men." Rom. 5. "In Adam all die." 1 Cor. 15: 22. "It is appointed unto men once to die." Heb. 9: 27.

Will the living God, by remission of the original sin of Adam, ever release the human family from the penalty inflicted through all the ages and generations, upon all mankind, indiscriminately, both old and young? or does that sin consign to eternal punishment Adam's posterity, their being no relinquishment of the penalty—death—upon the innocent victims "subject to vanity not willingly?"

Why should this subject be questioned for one moment, since the living God, who is the Savior of all men (1 Tim. 4: 10), cannot do so unjust a thing? For wise reasons he may pass one common judgment of condemnation upon all men, that he may make the greater display of his matchless love, mercy, and almighty power in his salvation by remission. Hence, says Paul, "Therefore as by the offence of one, judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life." Rom. 5: 18. "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." 1 Cor. 15: 22.

In the atonement, the remission of "The offence of one" and the sentence "passed upon all men" for that transgression, are provided for; and as "without shedding of blood there is no remission," the righteous Victim of Calvary, "by the grace of God, tasted death for every man." Heb. 2: 9. "Behold the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sin of the world!" John 1: 29.

With justification and remission from "the sin of the world," "unto justification of life," how can our race, any one of them, remain forever under the dominion of the first death, and without a resurrection to the life forfeited in Adam? With "the sin of the world" atoned for, the penalty is remitted; and there will be in due time a releasement of the prisoners in the dominions of death. The curse upon the earth also must be removed, and the forfeited inheritance restored in the final "restitution of all things," when "There shall be no more curse."

"Jesus shall save his people from their sins." Matt. 1: 21. And those who receive abundance of grace, and by the gift of righteousness, shall [notwithstanding their many offences], reign in life by one, Jesus Christ." Rom. 5: 16, 17. Hence, the living God is the Savior, "specially of those that believe." 1 Tim. 4: 10. "He gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3: 16. "And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." Heb. 5: 9.

God has given "knowledge of salvation unto his people, for the remission of their sins" (Luke 1: 77), in the gift of his Son. And "to him gave all the prophets witness, that through his name, whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins." Acts 10: 43. Jesus himself says of the last supper, as he takes the cup to pass to his disciples, "This is my blood of the New Testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins." Matt. 26: 28.

The penalty of God's law, for individual transgression, is thus announced: "The soul that sinneth it shall die." Eph. 18: 4. "The wages of sin is death." Rom 6: 23. "The judgment of God" is to "render to every man according to his deeds." Rom. 1: 32, and 2: 6. "All have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." All the world is guilty before God." "The gospel of God" announces "justification by his grace, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus; whom God hath set forth to be the propitiation, through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God. To declare, I say, at this time, his righteousness; that he might be just, and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus." Rom. 3.

Will not every one that "believeth in Jesus," and continueth obedient "in well doing," be wholly exempted from the penalty which will be executed upon "the unjust, at the day of judgment"? 2nd. Pet. 2: 9. "He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death.' Rev. 2: 11. "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power." Rev. 20: 6. They are ransomed from the power of the grave, and redeemed from death. By the mysterious and glorious change to immortality and incorruption (1 Cor. 15: 51–57), they, through remission, receive the power of an endless life. Surely there is meaning to this important Scriptural term.

Repentance and remission of sins should be preached in Jesus' name, among all nations." Luke 24: 47. "To give the knowledge of salvation unto his people by the remission of their sins." Luke 2: 77.

By the doctrine of remission of sins the resurrection of the dead is established. If there is no resurrection of the dead, there is no remission. See Paul's argument 1 Cor. 15: 12–18. Is it because the resurrection of the dead is questioned and denied, that the doctrine of remission of sins is untaught? We should like to see christian men prove the doctrine of remission, and at the same time deny the resurrection. If there is remission there is relinquishment and releasement from all the penalty of sin.

To deny the resurrection is to deny remission. The ministry and christian world should be brought to see this fact in glaring light. Let the word, which has dropped out of use and become obsolete, be revived among us, and fastened as a nail in a sure place. The ministry must preach the resurrection of the dead, or cease to preach forgiveness, pardon, justification and "remission from all sin." Christ commanded them to preach remission of sins in his name among all nations. Can they or we neglect the great commission? Let us ring out in clear and silvery tones, in all sermons, in the ears of all men, that there is remission of sins, and telling the people what the meaning of the unfamiliar word is. Preach like the apostles, "through Jesus the resurrection from the dead,' and the "restitution of all things" under the curse. For there must be "regeneration" in the full sense of that word as used by Christ. Matt. 19: 27–29; Mark 10: 28–30. That will constitute "the world to come."

The doctrine of "remission of sins" revived will save the hope of the church and the inheritance of the saints from being disbelieved, denied, ignored, despised and rejected by all true believers in Jesus.

THE HEAVENS AND THE EARTH TO COME.

The condition of the world will be wonderfully improved. The curse put upon the earth on account of man's sin and for man's sake will be removed. Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the briar shall come up the myrtle tree. The deserts shall be clad with waving corn; the wilderness shall blossom as the rose, and every land exult in its abundance. The plowman shall overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes, him that soweth seed; and the mountains shall drop sweet wine, and all the hills shall melt. The fruits of the earth will be excellent and comely, nutritious and wholesome, delicious and refreshing. The air will be pure and salubrious and the inhabitant shall not say, I am sick. The light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun; and the light of the sun shall be sevenfold, as the light of seven days. And all the stars shall shine with sevenfold lustre, as brilliants in the crown of night. O, it will be glorious!—Watch Tower.

No man is so foolish but he may give another good counsel sometimes, and no man so wise but he may easily err, if he takes no other counsel than his own. He that was taught only by himself, had a fool for a master.

The World's Crisis

"FOLLOW ME."

B. L. STAPLES.

Standing by the restless billows,
On the Galilean shore,
Are two brothers, lone and weary,
Waiting, watching evermore.
For their life is one of labor,
They are fishers of the sea,
And this moment they are casting
Out their net in Galilee.

As of old they spread the netting,
Loosing it to let it free,
Suddenly they see a stranger,
And the group is one of three
To themselves they seem to murmur,
Seem to question, "Who is he?"
But the stranger only beckons,
Only answers, "Follow me."

And they followed, little knowing
That the Son of God was there,
Asking not the why and whither,
Asking not the how and where;
And the stranger ever led them
Through the after scenes of life;
By his grace they were victorious,
By his love they vanquished strife.

And may God in mercy help us
To accept of Jesus' love,
That we all may meet together,
When Christ cometh from above.
Loving Savior, O receive us!
We will answer to thy plea,
And respond, in thought and action—
"By thy grace we'll follow thee."

THE THREATENING RUIN;

OR,

Our Times, our Prospects and our Duty.

BY JOSEPH A. SEISS, D. D.

(Concluded.)

"And now also the axe is laid at the root of the trees: therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire."—MATT. 3: 10.

WHAT, THEN, ARE OUR PROSPECTS?

God can do without this nation of ours, if he sees fit, just as well as with it. He could reject and humiliate his own chosen people, "to whom pertained the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises," without detriment to his purposes in the earth. No nation, any more than any man, is necessary to him. And for like reasons for which he destroyed Jerusalem he may also cast us down from the eminence of which we have become so boastful and vain. And this idolatry of self and country and substitution of human devices, agencies and arrangements in the place of the proper Savior, and building up of men in hopes not at all warranted in the revealed plan of God, so characteristic of nearly all our thinking and theology, must themselves go far to hasten the coming of judgments to sweep away the occasion and instrument of such mischievous delusion.

There are those, also, who regard our history, doings and economy as such an embodiment of righteousness, justice, truth and wisdom as to render it impossible that it should ever be superseded or materially changed. But neither am I able to subscribe to this. It is the fashion, we know, to glorify the Revolution, and to canonize the men most potent and active in it, as saints; but I have always found great difficulty in justifying it upon any principles in harmony with the plain declarations of the Scriptures. The religious aspects of the Declaration of Independence are essentially deistic. It was written by a skeptic; it knows nothing of Christ, under whose supreme rule every thing must come in order to be abiding; and it acknowledges no relations to God which Jews, Turks and infidels may not alike subscribe. The Constitution of the United States, lauded as our sublimest earthly hope, knows absolutely nothing of God, or Christ, or Providence; and the amendments to it, forever prohibit Congress from making any law "respecting an establishment of religion." It is entirely atheistic.

The spirit which the pilgrim fathers brought with them was about as intolerant as that from which they fled. The enlargement of our territory, in whose vastness and wealth our orators so much glory, has been affected, in a considerable measure, by the butchery or forcible ejectment of its former proprietors. The deepest principle upon which the whole machinery of our Government is built, is a theological falsehood,—a Pelagian heresy. It assumes that the majority of men are pure, intelligent, right-minded, virtuous, and governed by reason and truth; which is contrary to all Scripture, experience and fact. And the framework of our institutions, in general, is subversive of the Divine order, and embraces all the elements of apostasy from God, and ultimate self-destruction.

I do not suppose that other forms of human government are so much wiser and better than our own. All human governments are defective, unreliable and transient; and there is no basis in true theology, morals or religion upon which to except ours, or upon which we can rightfully hope for that excellent and world-regenerating destiny which public men, in church and state, have been so loud and confident in claiming and proclaiming. Dr. Duffield once said, "I know no safe depositary of power among mortal men for the purposes of government. Tyranny and oppression, in church and state, under every form of government, social, civil, ecclesiastical, monarchial, aristocratical or democratic, have sooner or later, characterized the governments of earth, and have done so from the beginning. . . . . . It is the sway of heaven alone that can redeem this fallen world." It was the truth he uttered.

There is but one rightful and competent govenor of earth; and he is a king. He is absent now. And while he is absent, and the literal setting up of his kingdom is delayed, there will be nothing but disappointment, revolation and trouble in all human calculations and affairs. The philosophy of Providence, as conducted throughout the whole period of his absence, is to prove to men, by the failure of all their multiform experiments, that they can neither save, nor happily govern themselves. God has also plainly declared it to be his purpose to "overturn, overturn, overturn," until He comes to whom all judgment has been given, and in whose righteous reign alone, the world, for the first time since the fall, shall have peace. How, then, can it be otherwise than that our particular institutions are also among the things that shall perish and disappear?

WHAT THEN IS TO BE DONE?

These are days in which men are prolific in advice. Sick society has drawn around it many doctors, all with cures infallible. But, like the woman in the Gospel, who "suffered many things of many physicians, and was nothing bettered, but rather grew worse," so it is here; and so it will continue to be as long as depraved man has the charge of things. Upon the country, the excellence of its constitution, the integrity of its union, the strength of its resources, the virtues of its people, the reform of its administrations, the labor of its statesmen or divines, or upon anything that can come out of it, I build no hopes. "The governments and kingdoms of this world are but the organized dominion of human apostasy from God." God will overrule them, and so shape their course as not to be without important effects in filling out the great plans of his providence and the ultimate glories of his elect; but they that put their trust in them, whether republics or monarchies, shall be utterly confounded. To what, then, shall we betake ourselves? On what shall we hope?

It has been an approved custom, in all ages, when public calamities threatened, to resort to special humiliation and prayer. When the Ninevites beheld the judgments that were about to befall them, "the king arose from his throne, laid his robe from him, and covered him with sackcloth, and sat in ashes. And he caused it to be proclaimed and published through Nineveh, by decree of the king and his nobles, saying, Let neither man nor beast, herd nor flock, taste anything; let them not feed nor drink water. But let man and beast be covered with sackcloth, and cry mightily unto God." When Ezra brought up the Jews from their affliction in Babylon, he "proclaimed a fast at the river Ahava, that they might afflict themselves before God, to seek of him a right way for themselves, their little ones, and for all their substance." In the days of Joel the prophet, when invasion, pestilence and famine were pressing upon the nation, high authority gave the command, "Turn ye to the Lord with all your heart, and with fasting, and with weeping, and with mourning; and rend your heart and not your garments; and turn to the Lord your God." And frequent in the history of nations have been such observances. Nor can anything be more appropriate or urgent for the people of these evil times, in view of their crimes and follies, ingratitude and guilt, from the highest to the lowest, than to prostrate themselves in the deepest self-abasement before God, to repent in sackcloth and ashes, and to cry unto the Almighty Deliverer that he may save from the impending judgment. Indeed, this is one of the specific directions of God himself. But it must be an earnest and an honest work, and not mere ceremony and sham. What is the fast which God has chosen? Is it for a man "to bow down his head like a bulrush, and to spread sackcloth and ashes under him? Wilt thou call this a fast, and an acceptable day to the Lord?"

A far different service is that which God requires. "Is not this the fast that I have chosen? to loose the bands of wickedness?" When the wild Baptizer in the wilderness "saw many of the Pharisees and Sadducees come to his baptism, he said unto them, O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance." Fasting is nothing, a sad countenance is nothing, ceremony is nothing, and the most dolorous lamentations and cries to God are all nothing unless accompanied and attested by an honest and practical relinquishment of every known wrong and wickedness. Without this, all our new moons and appointed solemnities and calling of assemblies are but abomination to the Lord. We must wash us, and make us clean, and put away the evil of our doings from before his eyes. Israel must banish her strange gods. Zaccheus must come down and restore what he has taken wrongfully. Felix must send his Drusilla to her proper husband. He that stole must steal no more. Unbelief must give place to faith, and faith verify itself by proper works. We cannot be saved in our sins. We must relinquish them totally. Piety is not poetry, but fact. Conformity to God is not sentiment and emotion, but practice and life. Religion is a thing to be done as well as felt. To cease to do evil and learn to do well, is one of its deepest essences. "Break off thy sins by righteousness, and thine iniquities by showing mercy to the poor," is the great practical touchstone by which its reality must be tested. "Be not conformed to this world," is the apostolic requisition, which none may safely disregard.

Ho, then, ye that call yourselves Christians but have forgotten your covenant promises! It is for you to renounce the devil and all his works, the vanities of the world, and the wicked desires of the flesh, as ye have promised. It is for you to retrace your wayward steps, and with humble and penitent hearts, to return to your allegiance. Your neglect of duty, and worldly conformity, and fellowship with scoffers, must end by a fresh consecration of yourselves to your God.

Ye almost Christians, lingering these many years upon the margin of the kingdom, looking in through the gates but never quite ready to enter them, intending but never performing, often wishing but still postponing, hoping yet with no right to hope,—there can be no doubtfulness as to your duty. This long-opened question must be settled. This neither hot nor cold condition of yours dare be carried no further. You must yield, alter your ways, and be in good earnest what you have all this while only dreamed of being.

Ye people of business, gayety and fashion, living without prayer, without church ordinances, without concern for your immortal good, for God who has blessed you, or for the eternity that is before you—how can you mistake what is required of you? Awake, call upon God, cast yourselves as earnest suppliants at his feet, and give yourselves no more liberty in that loose and careless life which you hitherto have lived, that God may have mercy upon you.

And ye, unbelieving men, and dishonest men, and profane men, and lewd men, and scoffers, hear the voice of your Maker, which goes before the storm and cries, "Prepare to meet your God." It is on account of such as you that the divine judgments are sent upon the world. It is by such as you that wars come, and constitutions are destroyed, and good government is hindered, and that the voice of woe is heard, and that ruin threatens. Stand ye in the ways, and see what blasting indignation you are bringing upon your race, what inexpressible disaster upon yourselves. Behold, and repent. Ask for the old paths, and walk therein. Cast your sins and follies from you, and learn righteousness.

Men must abandon sin, or God will abandon them. They must either accept the government of the Father and the Son, or soon they will have no government, and become the thralls of Satan's malice,—"wandering stars, to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness forever." And if nations, states, office-holders and office-seekers, as well as private individuals, are not willing to repent of their crimes, do right, obey God, and practically acknowledge accountability to him in all things, they may as well make up their minds at once that both they, and the things in which they boast, shall presently go under, never to reappear. For "every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit," must fall, and be given to the fires.

But I have no expectation that such warnings will be received with respect, much less heeded and obeyed. The apostolic prediction is that "evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." (2 Tim. 3: 13). We are not to cease studying, and working, and praying, and doing the best we can for the good of our friends, our country, and our race; but whilst we preach the word, and are instant in season and out of season, and reprove, rebuke and exhort with all long-suffering, we are forewarned that people "will not endure sound doctrine," but after their own lusts will "heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears," and shall turn away from the truth unto fables (2 Tim. 4: 2–4), and shall say, Peace and safety, till their destruction comes.

Still, I am not comfortless. Amid all the darkness there are hopes and consolations far higher than any which lie in the direction of mere earthly progress and development. They also connect essentially with this very darkness and downward tendency of things. It is the gracious Father, after all, who is at the helm, and steering right for a glorious consummation, whatever zones of ill or suffering may have to be passed. The wicked, and the enemies of Christ and his reign, must be brought low, and every plant which the Lord hath not planted must be rooted up; but, with all the wrecks and desolations which yet may strew the shores of time, the ship of God's salvation founders not, but shall come to its destined shores amid joyous shoutings, with all its precious freight secure. Here and there, also, will be a Noah or a Lot, who will believe God, and take warning, and find salvation. When Jerusalem was doomed, there was still deliverance for those individuals who believed in Jesus and followed his word. Not a single Christian perished in that unparalleled tribulation. Blessed hope! that, amid all the commotions and distresses, trials and desolations that may come upon the earth, the Lord's true and faithful people shall be safe! Even in the dark hour, when all human efforts fail, and empires wreck, and trouble and judgment scour the earth, there still is this consolation left, that God holds his true people in his everlasting arms, and will keep them safe unto eternal life.

Nor are these our only hopes. If there is a threatening Ruin, there is also a promised Redemption; and the one is a necessary step to the other. The hewing down of the forest is only to make place for the pleasant field, the beautiful garden, and the joyous home. Man's works are destroyed that the lasting and glorious fabrics of the blessed Redeemer may be set up in their stead. These very wrecks of human calculations are a part of a great redemptive process, and the heralds of a new, heavenly and better order, which Christ is to bring with him when he comes, and which is to girdle the world with unfading beauty and unsullied peace.

For that glorious consummation, therefore, I look, and hope, and pray, and wait, confident that the true redemption is nearing in proportion as earthly troubles multiply and earthly hopes expire.

Eternal Father, hear!
Haste to fulfill thy word!
Let Israel's hope appear!
Reveal to earth her Lord!
We wait for Jesus from the skies;—
When shall his glories greet our eyes?

How long shall death yet reign,
And hell our race oppress?
When shall earth bloom again
In Eden's blessedness?—
We wait for Jesus from the skies;—
When shall his glories greet our eyes?

The waves of ill are high;
The world with trouble reels;
All lands and creatures cry,
Speed judgment's chariot-wheels!
We wait for Jesus from the skies;—
When shall his glories greet our eyes?

The times are prophets now;
They preach impending doom;
Let each repentant bow,
And saints prepare for home.
We wait for Jesus from the skies;—
Soon shall his glories greet our eyes!

THOUGHTS ON MAN.

BY A BAPTIST.

END OF THE WICKED.

We are to regard God in his government as absolutely just, and in administering the government, the punishment of the guilty is not to be measured by his almighty power, or infinite resources; but, first, by the penalty of the law that has been violated; for no court of justice may exceed the statute that created it and gave it jurisdiction; second, by the demands of justice, which cannot exceed the penalty of the statute; third, the nature of the party to be punished. When these are met, no higher punishment can be inflicted without injustice being done.

Some tell us that sin is an infinite evil because it is against an infinite being; but I do not understand that to be the true way to measure an act; for, although it is against an infinite being, yet if it fails to affect him personally, or to interfere with the administration of his government, then there is something it does not reach, consequently it cannot be infinite. I have been in the habit of thinking, and still believe it is true that an act cannot exceed in its nature the actor; and if man is a finite being, he cannot under any circumstances either commit an infinite wrong, nor do an infinite good; for, if he can do the one, he must of necessity be capable of doing the other. If a vicious animal kills a man, is it guilty of murder? The effect on the man is the same as though done by another man; but would the law regard and treat the animal as though it was a man, accountable to law? or would it only require that such action should be taken as should secure the community from further danger, not taking into the account the idea of legal punishment?

When but a boy, I listened to a sermon on the punishment of the wicked, in which the nature and conditions of that punishment were argued from the nature of God, and ran thus: "God is an infinite being, and whatever emanates from him must of necessity be infinite. The law which man transgressed came from God, and therefore was infinite, and in violating that law man was guilty of an infinite wrong; consequently must be adjudged to infinite punishment; and as the law was not only infinite dejure, but also defacto, the punishment must be infinite, both in duration and degree; and as the element of fire was used as a figure to represent the punishment of the wicked, and as the figure must of necessity fall short of the fact, so the punishment of the lost must of necessity be beyond any finite conception." The subject, as well as the reasoning, was beyond my comprehension; and, supposing that what came from the pulpit must be correct, and hearing older people talk the same, I supposed it must be correct, although I could not see its propriety. Still the thought would occur to my mind, "Is there any more necessity that God's law should be infinite, than there is that his creature man should be infinite?" Did he attach a penalty to the law under which he placed man that he could not understand? Was man, like the law described, also infinite? I found by Moses' account of the creation, that God's works of creation were in detached parts, and in different periods of time, and separately pronounced "very good," but not infinite; and in trying to understand the teaching of his law, have come to the belief that there may be error taught from the pulpit; and in reading the writings of others, I see a great variety of opinions so antagonistic that I apprehend they cannot all be true.

Dr. Burr, in his work "Pater Mundi," teaches that an infinite God cannot produce another infinite God; consequently, that all his works must be inferior to himself, and illustrates the idea by the inventions of man thus: Man makes a pin machine; that machine is inferior to its maker, although it can turn out a complete pin; yet it cannot turn out a pin machine. If this be true, what becomes of the doctrine that God's law to man was, like himself, infinite? But who is to decide when doctors disagree? Evidently there is but one standard, and that is the Word of God, the Bible. Whatever that teaches it is safe to accept as final.

But what is the teaching of that book upon this subject? The law says to man that death is the penalty for transgression. In Ezekiel 18: 4, God says, "The soul that sinneth it shall die;" and Paul to the Romans (6: 23) says, "The wages of sin is death;" and in 8: 13, "For if ye live according to the flesh, ye shall die;" while the apostle James says (5: 20), "Let him know that he who converteth a sinner from the error of his ways, shall save a soul from death;" and many others of like import.

If Christ's death met the demands of the law for the entire race, so far as they inherited a sinful nature from their federal head, and so made it possible for the entire race to be raised from the dead, what other construction can properly be put upon the term death, as the final punishment for sin, than a death as represented by the death of Christ. One objection I have seen urged against this view is, that if it was not everlasting torment from which man was to be redeemed, the gain to the human was not equal to the outlay of the divine. The remarks I have heretofore made as to the importance of the atonement in reference to man, would seem fully sufficient to answer this objection.

But there is another view of the relations existing between the parties I wish here to notice, as it will entirely do away with this objection, and still further elucidate my view of man's original condition, and that is, the relation of parent and child, which is frequently and forcibly brought to view in the Scriptures. God having made man out of the earth, and not giving him immortality, he was dependent on his Father's especial care and protection for the continuance of his being, as well as for that of his well being.

In thinking over what must have occurred in the council chamber of eternity, when the question of making man was discussed, something like the following scene has been impressed on my mind. The attribute of knowledge said, "If you make man, and place him on trial, he will surely apostatize and become vile." Justice replies, "If that is so, then by creating him you take the self-imposed obligation to provide for his interests in every conceivable emergency. If he violates my law, the penalty will be death; and in my demands I shall be inexorable, and nothing can induce me to make any abatement." Here the Son says, "When the fulness of the time comes, I will go down to earth, assume his nature, take the place of trial, prove my fealty true, and after satisfactory trial will bare myself to the stroke and full demands of justice, submit to death, the just for the unjust, and thus open a way of salvation for the guilty; and that too at my own expense, not asking the least abatement at the hand of justice; and all this will I do publicly that men may know that the provision is made." Justice says, "That will satisfy my demands."

Knowledge again speaks and says, "Man by sin will become so estranged from the right, so in love with the wrong, so completely under the influence of the destroyer, that he will not be inclined to accept the provision when made." Here Love, with a heart overflowing with compassion and kindness, and bowels melting with mercy, interposes with the question, "How can I manifest myself to a lost race in such a way that they may realize my love and compassion for them?" Here the Spirit replies, saying to the attribute of Love, "I will represent you to the fallen race in all the goodness and glory of your character. When the Son shall have performed the work of making provision, and shall have returned and taken his place here, then I will go down to earth and remain there so long as there is anything to be done. I will inspire men to write out the good news, and spread it broadcast over the world. I will lead others to go far and near and tell the story of salvation. I will inspire others to use their means to spread the knowledge of the cross. Many will I inspire with zeal and earnestness for the good of their fellow-men. I will do all that can be done by a continued and untiring presentation of your compassion for a fallen race." "Love responds, "That is all I desire, and I am satisfied." And now what is the conclusion of the council? God says, "Let us make man."

Does any one start at the thought that the creating of man imposed an obligation on the Creator? Did not the endowing of man with a life that was dependent on food for its continuance, obligate the Creator to furnish that provision, and that too before man was created? And did not the Creator recognize and meet the obligation by making abundant provision in advance? But it may be said that was a natural need, while salvation was not, but was a need growing out of man's own act; consequently, the Creator was under no obligation to provide for an unnatural need. But is it not evident that the Creator regarded it in the light of the first obligation, and made provision for that, not only before man was created a living soul, but before providing food to continue that life? For Christ is represented as the "Lamb slain from the foundation of the world."

As man was made in the image of God, so I conclude that the relation of parent and child among us is the image of the same relation between God and man. Are you not as a Father under obligation to the child you have begotten to look after and provide for its well-being? And if that child should violate your rightful command and go astray from the path of rectitude, does that make void your obligation to seek its highest good? By no means. But the necessity of the case increases rather than diminishes the obligation to put forth your best effort for the recovery of that child, and for the advancement of its highest interest. So with the relationship of parent and child existing between God and man. His fall increased the necessities on the part of his Maker to seek his highest interest. But this did not grow out of the simple idea of duty alone, but out of the very attributes of his nature, and was in harmony with all his divine perfections. God's visible works declared to the intelligences he had made his wisdom, his ability, the infinity of his resources, and, as Paul sums it up, his eternal power and Godhead; but not one of them as yet spoke to the intelligences of their sphere of his attribute of love; and right here let me add, that attribute compelled him, so to speak, to provide a way of recovery for his entirely dependent child, although he had forfeited his inherent right to his protection and care; so the results were not all on the side of man, for in thus exalting his dependent, though erring child, this act of love toward him, in addition to his visible works, developed a perfectly rounded and symmetrical character which was worthy of a God, enhancing also his declarative glory in the eyes of all holy or redeemed intelligences.

REMISSION.

O. R. FASSETT.

This word has become almost obsolete in our time. We seldom hear it in public discourse by the ministry, nor do we often meet with it in christian writings, and less is it mentioned in exhortation, prayer and praise in social worship. Why is this? It is certainly a Scriptural term, as many texts demonstrate. Is this important word dropped in this age, while forgiveness, pardon, and justification are retained, for any special reason? Is it because it is supposed that its meaning is covered by more familiar terms? or is it to avoid some doctrine of the Holy Scriptures?

We would not charge upon the ministry and church, that it is to obscure any doctrine of the Bible, that it has fallen into disuse, though it does so; but in our charity would regard it owing to carelessness, indifference, and a want of critical study and discrimination between the meaning of words, that the former terms—pardon, forgiveness and justification—are continually mentioned, while the word remission is so neglected. It is an unfortunate thing for Christianity that so important a word should be lost from the christian vocabulary, and not be connected and associated with its companions, to give us the full knowledge of the great salvation in Christ our Lord.

While forgiveness implies the pardon of sinners, so that they are no longer treated as guilty; and pardon means forgiveness and reconciliation; and pardoned sinners are under no obligation to suffer the penalty due transgression; and justification implies forgiveness and pardon; so that sinners justified by the grace of God are treated as righteous persons; remission teaches all this and more, even the release and relinquishment of the penalty due to all sin.

Let us notice its bearing on the great plan of redemption instituted by the love of God for our lost and ruined race. By the original sin, or the first transgression, the whole human family were involved in one common catastrophe—one dread calamity—death. As says Paul: "By the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation." "By one man's offence death reigned by one." "By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men." Rom. 5. "In Adam all die." 1 Cor. 15: 22. "It is appointed unto men once to die." Heb. 9: 27.

Will the living God, by remission of the original sin of Adam, ever release the human family from the penalty inflicted through all the ages and generations, upon all mankind, indiscriminately, both old and young? or does that sin consign to eternal punishment Adam's posterity, their being no relinquishment of the penalty—death—upon the innocent victims "subject to vanity not willingly?"

Why should this subject be questioned for one moment, since the living God, who is the Savior of all men (1 Tim. 4: 10), cannot do so unjust a thing? For wise reasons he may pass one common judgment of condemnation upon all men, that he may make the greater display of his matchless love, mercy, and almighty power in his salvation by remission. Hence, says Paul, "Therefore as by the offence of one, judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life." Rom. 5: 18. "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." 1 Cor. 15: 22.

In the atonement, the remission of "The offence of one" and the sentence "passed upon all men" for that transgression, are provided for; and as "without shedding of blood there is no remission," the righteous Victim of Calvary, "by the grace of God, tasted death for every man." Heb. 2: 9. "Behold the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sin of the world!" John 1: 29.

With justification and remission from "the sin of the world," "unto justification of life," how can our race, any one of them, remain forever under the dominion of the first death, and without a resurrection to the life forfeited in Adam? With "the sin of the world" atoned for, the penalty is remitted; and there will be in due time a releasement of the prisoners in the dominions of death. The curse upon the earth also must be removed, and the forfeited inheritance restored in the final "restitution of all things," when "There shall be no more curse."

"Jesus shall save his people from their sins." Matt. 1: 21. And those who receive abundance of grace, and by the gift of righteousness, shall [notwithstanding their many offences], reign in life by one, Jesus Christ." Rom. 5: 16, 17. Hence, the living God is the Savior, "specially of those that believe." 1 Tim. 4: 10. "He gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3: 16. "And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." Heb. 5: 9.

God has given "knowledge of salvation unto his people, for the remission of their sins" (Luke 1: 77), in the gift of his Son. And "to him gave all the prophets witness, that through his name, whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins." Acts 10: 43. Jesus himself says of the last supper, as he takes the cup to pass to his disciples, "This is my blood of the New Testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins." Matt. 26: 28.

The penalty of God's law, for individua' transgression, is thus announced: "The soul that sinneth it shall die." Eph. 18: 4. "The wages of sin is death." Rom 6: 23. "The judgment of God" is to "render to every man according to his deeds." Rom. 1: 32, and 2: 6. "All have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." All the world is guilty before God." "The gospel of God" announces "justification by his grace, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus; whom God hath set forth to be the propitiation, through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God. To declare, I say, at this time, his righteousness; that he might be just, and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus." Rom. 3.

Will not every one that "believeth in Jesus," and continueth obedient "in well doing," be wholly exempted from the penalty which will be executed upon "the unjust, at the day of judgment"? 2nd. Pet. 2: 9. "He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death." Rev. 2: 11. "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power." Rev. 20: 6. They are ransomed from the power of the grave, and redeemed from death. By the mysterious and glorious change to immortality and incorruption (1 Cor. 15: 51–57), they, through remission, receive the power of an endless life. Surely there is meaning to this important Scriptural term.

Repentance and remission of sins should be preached in Jesus' name, among all nations." Luke 24: 47. "To give the knowledge of salvation unto his people by the remission of their sins." Luke 2: 77.

By the doctrine of remission of sins the resurrection of the dead is established. If there is no resurrection of the dead, there is no remission. See Paul's argument 1 Cor. 15: 12–18. Is it because the resurrection of the dead is questioned and denied, that the doctrine of remission of sins is untaught? We should like to see christian men prove the doctrine of remission, and at the same time deny the resurrection. If there is remission there is relinquishment and releasement from all the penalty of sin.

To deny the resurrection is to deny remission. The ministry and christian world should be brought to see this fact in glaring light. Let the word, which has dropped out of use and become obsolete, be revived among us, and fastened as a nail in a sure place. The ministry must preach the resurrection of the dead, or cease to preach forgiveness, pardon, justification and "remission from all sin." Christ commanded them to preach remission of sins in his name among all nations. Can they or we neglect the great commission? Let us ring out in clear and silvery tones, in all sermons, in the ears of all men, that there is remission of sins, and telling the people what the meaning of the unfamiliar word is. Preach like the apostles, "through Jesus the resurrection from the dead,' and the "restitution of all things" under the curse. For there must be "regeneration" in the full sense of that word as used by Christ. Matt. 19: 27–29; Mark 10: 28–30. That will constitute "the world to come."

The doctrine of "remission of sins" revived will save the hope of the church and the inheritance of the saints from being disbelieved, denied, ignored, despised and rejected by all true believers in Jesus.

THE HEAVENS AND THE EARTH TO COME.

The condition of the world will be wonderfully improved. The curse put upon the earth on account of man's sin and for man's sake will be removed. Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the briar shall come up the myrtle tree. The deserts shall be clad with waving corn; the wilderness shall blossom as the rose, and every land exult in its abundance. The plowman shall overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes, him that soweth seed; and the mountains shall drop sweet wine, and all the hills shall melt. The fruits of the earth will be excellent and comely, nutritious and wholesome, delicious and refreshing. The air will be pure and salubrious and the inhabitant shall not say, I am sick. The light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun; and the light of the sun shall be sevenfold, as the light of seven days. And all the stars shall shine with sevenfold lustre, as brilliants in the crown of night. O, it will be glorious!—Watch Tower.

No man is so foolish but he may give another good counsel sometimes, and no man so wise but he may easily err, if he takes no other counsel than his own. He that was taught only by himself, had a fool for a master.

AGENT.

THE FOUR ANGELS AND FOUR WINDS.

"And after these things I saw four angels standing on the four corners of the earth, holding the four winds of the earth, that the wind should not blow on the earth, nor on the sea, nor on any tree. And I saw another angel ascending from the east, having the seal of the living God: and he cried with a loud voice to the four angels to whom it was given to hurt the earth and the sea, saying, Hurt not the earth, neither the sea, nor the trees, till we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads."—REV. 7: 1-3.

The text is evidently prophetic and symbolic, presenting events in consecutive order. It presents a part of a series of events, divided into segments, each part designated by numerals, from "first" to "seventh;" the numerals expressing the order of their occurrence, like the days of the week; Sunday first and Saturday seventh. The series extend through the gospel age, dividing it into seven parts, making the apostolic period the "first" and the judgment period the "seventh" and last.

To locate the events in the text we must learn to which of the seven periods the symbols belong, and look for the events on the page giving the history of that time.

The symbols of the text are located in the sixth period, or the one extending to the introduction of the judgment. They are seen under the opening of the sixth seal. We wrest the text from its chronological position, given by Inspiration, when we apply its fulfillment to any other period than the sixth.

The sixth period is located by showing what signs, literally expressed, as by Christ and the prophets, would transpire within its limits; so that no doubtful interpretation of symbols should obscure the locating of the period. Christ locates the darkening of the sun—the leading celestial sign—"immediately after the tribulation of those days"—the papal persecution,—which terminated about 1779; therefore the sixth period must have commenced before the close of the eighteenth century, and is not yet ended; for the judgment period has not yet commenced. The events symbolized by the text should, therefore, be looked for within the last hundred years and the remaining time between the present and the end of the world.

What events do the symbols illustrate? and have such events commenced to transpire within the period above defined?

Winds, in the Scriptures, are used as symbols of war. Daniel saw in vision the four winds striving on the sea, and they brought up four beasts. The beasts were explained to mean kingdoms. Waters are explained to illustrate peoples; therefore, as winds agitate waters, so that which agitates the people, establishing and overthrowing human governments, must be represented by the winds, which is war.

Jeremiah uses the symbol as instrumental in the destruction of Elam, and explains it to be "the sword" or war. See Jer. 49: 37. The four winds signify war extending in all directions, or to "the four quarters of heaven," that is, general and not local war. See Jer. 49: 36.

The four angels must represent the agencies which can control war. Literal angels are sometimes represented as doing this, as in the case of Persia, see Dan. 10: 13; but the external manifestations of this power to control war must be through human agencies or rulers. Therefore a Bible exposition of the text demands, for its fulfillment, the combined efforts of the rulers or kings of four govermments to stop or prevent general war among the Roman nations. The angels do not act separately, at different times, but jointly, at the same time, to accomplish the same purpose.

War cannot be held by the angels when there are no forces or influences tending to produce it. The winds must exist in some form or sense to be held. Barns, in commenting upon this passage, says, "The essential ideas, therefore, in this portion of the symbol cannot be mistaken. They are two: (1) that at the period of time here referred to (the sixth period), there would be a state of things which would be well represented by rising tempests, and storms, which, if unrestrained, would spread desolation afar; and (2) that this impending ruin was held back, as if by angels having control of those winds; that is, those tempests were not suffered to go forth to spread desolation over the world. A suspended tempest; calamity held in check; armies hovering on the borders of a kingdom, but not allowed to proceed for a time; hordes of invaders detained by some restraining power not their own, and from causes not within themselves; any of these would be an obvious fulfilling of the symbols." These ideas we believe harmonize very clearly with the language of the text and its parallels.

The important question is, have events transpired within the last hundred years in harmony with these illustrations and their Bible explanations? If no such events have transpired within that period, it would be proof that the exposition is defective in part, at least; but if such events have taken place, just as interpreted, the argument is conclusive that the position is scriptural.

Has a war taken place within the time, affecting the nations in the four quarters of the Roman territory, threatening their overthrow, which was stopped by the combined efforts of four governments? and have those governments continued to exert their power and influence to prevent any general war among the European nations?

Such a war did commence in the last part of the eighteenth century, threatening the overthrow of all those kingdoms, which was most perfectly symbolized by the four winds. That war, the leading actor in which was the great Napoleon, was ended by the battle of Waterloo. That battle was designed by the Allies to end the war; and their alliance was formed for the purpose of stopping the war, so that general peace might be restored and perpetuated. The nations who formed that alliance for those purposes were Russia, England, Prussia and Austria. Just four, as symbolized by the angels. The war was just such a war as the winds foreshadowed. It came at the very time expressed. The same number of kings or nations combined their powers to "hold," stop or control the war, as illustrated by the angels. These circumstances seem thus far to be a wonderful fulfillment of the prophecy.

If those nations are the foretold agencies appointed by God, and directed by four invisible heavenly beings to make such efforts, the collateral proof must consist in their continuing to exert their powers, jointly, in preventing another general European war.

It is a fact that the same four powers which put a stop to the thirty years war, have, from 1814 to the present time, with a few brief exceptions, acted jointly, throwing their collossal powers together, with a professed design to so arbitrate all war-making questions, and intimidate all threatening nations and revolutionary classes, that no general war, which should involve them in the strife be commenced. This quadruple alliance was revived and renewedly proclaimed by Alexander II. at St. Petersburg, in January, 1874, at a Royal Banquet, in the presence of the Emperor of Austria, the Imperial Representative of Germany, and England's Heir, the Prince of Wales, who declared that the four imperial governments would "jointly exercise their powers to keep the peace of Europe."

It seems to us that this language as perfectly expresses the sense of the symbolism—the angels holding the winds—as language can express it. It is a fact, patent to all the world, that the most difficult and responsible diplomatic business of these nations, for the last sixty years, has been to agree among themselves what methods and instrumentalities should be used to hold the various war-making elements in check, so that the terrible clash of arms among the nations and antagonistic classes, which they have seen approaching and have confessed must come sometime in the future, should not take place at present.

It is also a fact that these disturbing questions and elements have been strengthened and intensified every year, for the past sixty years, so that the governments have been more and more perplexed to know what they should do to pacify the excited classes, and keep them from a general uprising and slaughter.

AN ANSWER.

A brother inquires if we know of any proof that the so-called "Mother Shipton's Prophecy" was published in 1488, and republished in 1641 as stated in the Boston Journal.

We have no proof of the correctness of the statement, only that such a statement, we believe, has appeared in other publications. We have never felt interest enough in such doubtful productions to make much inquiry as to their divinity, interpretation or fulfillment. We have sufficient prophecies in the Bible, which have the divine seal clearly fixed upon them, to give us all the light we need upon these great subjects of Christ's coming and the end of the world.

SHOCKING WASTE.

It is no wonder that bankruptcy stares so many in the face, when it is considered how much money is wasted by the American people. It is marvelous that they have endured so long without a total failure. Take just one item,—the money spent for alcoholic liquors. How much would you guess is spent yearly for this terrible enemy to the human constitution? It is said to be seven hundred and fifteen million dollars. But in this estimate, nothing is said about the misery it produces in once happy families, the ruined health, and the fitting of untold thousands for eternal destruction. It would be a great blessing to the nation if the $715,000,000 were burnt up, instead of being spent for the soul-destroying poison. One of the best laws Congress could make to secure national prosperity would be one prohibiting, under heavy penalty, all importation of foreign liquors, and all manufacturing, and use of the same in this country, excepting for mechanical or medicinal purposes. Were this done, what a falling off of crime and its expense would follow. How the sunshine of comfort and happiness would illumine the now desolated and miserable homes. Thank the Lord, in the coming kingdom, there will be no liquor saloons or tobacco filth to annoy the saints of the Most High.

DEDICATION AT PLAINS.

Through the faithful labors of Bro. J. E. Cook and others, a church has been raised up at Plains, Luzerne Co., Pa., to look for the coming of Jesus. A neat chapel has been built, which was dedicated Oct. 15th. Plains is the great coal mining region in Wyoming Valley, where immense quantities of coal are taken from the bowels of the earth. The Wyoming is a beautiful valley; and when seen from Fairview, on the mountain, it presents a rare landscape appearance; also the scenery along the mountain railroad is very wild, reminding one of what may be seen when descending the Sierra Nevada mountains to the plains of the "summer land" of California. From Mauch Chunk, on the Lehi Valley and New Jersey Central railroads, on the mountain, is scenery rarely surpassed for rocky wilderness.

The cry of "hard times" is heard in the mining regions as elsewhere. The wages of the miners have been cut down to a low figure. It is said the "hard times" pressure is still increasing, with no present prospect of improvement. Coal is about $3 per ton delivered.

A SPECIAL EXPERIENCE.

Before reaching Wilkbarre, I learned the train on which I was situated did not stop at Mill Creek Station. I found the superintendent on board, and obtained from him the permission to have the train stopped for my special accommodation, as it would be quite a disappointment, in case I could not reach Mill Creek in season for the dedication. The night was dark and rainy. Between nine and ten o'clock the train stopped for me, and I hurried off, landing on a small platform, which was all the depot in the place. In the distance a few lights in houses might be seen, but all around me was silent darkness. With baggage in hand I thought I would try to reach some house. I commenced my walk, feeling my way step by step, but soon came to the conclusion that it was unsafe to attempt to walk in darkness in a strange place with no road, in the midst of a mining region. I stopped and cried, Halloo! No response. I cried the second time, but no one answered. It began to look rather discouraging. Just at that time, I saw some moving lights in the distance; and I cried out lustily for a light, when the reply came soon. It was a joyful sound to my ears. In a little time the lights drew near, and proved to be torches in the hands of miners. They were Swedes. I inquired for Bro. J. E. Cook, but they knew no such man. I asked them to conduct me to some place where I could stay all night. They piloted me to a saloon, but there was no room for lodging. I then got the saloon keeper to guide me to another place. He took a miner's torch lamp, but the wind and rain soon put it out, and we blundered along some distance to a place closed for the night, but we were let in after knocking. There I found that I had come to the wrong station to find Bro. Cook, who lived about two miles from there, at a Mill Creek station on another R. R. In the morning I was shown the way to Bro. Cook's, whom I found very anxiously wondering why I did not arrive on Saturday evening, and fearing he should be disappointed about the dedication. We rejoiced together in the Lord, and felt thankful that all was well.

"THEREFORE BE YE ALSO READY."

E. A. STOCKMAN.

These divinely uttered words are precautionary. The Master speaks in tones of anxiety. His infinite heart is moved for the safety of his purchased people. His language implies imminent danger of being found unprepared for his return. He knew what sore temptations would befall his chosen, especially towards the end. He had in mind how the message of his coming and kingdom would be met by the disgust of the world and the ridicule of an opulent, easeloving, pleasure-seeking church. He understood the fierce ordeal of disappointment and shame that would try the faith of his waiting, anxious children in the "time of the end." He held in full view the final moment when his mediatorial work will cease, and the door of mercy and hope be closed forever; when penitence and prayer, if possible, will be useless. He felt afresh the weakness of human nature, and was moved with divine solicitude for the security of his own, and sent down to us, who stand face to face with the closing scenes of earth, the solemn injunction, "Be ye also ready."

But what is readiness for the coming of Christ? First, there must be intelligent profound conviction that he will come; and that his coming is future, and will be personal and visible; for, if the second coming is spiritual, it must be present and constant. How can one prepare for the coming of a friend who is already present? No one can be ready for the appearing of Christ who intelligently rejects his coming.

There must also be hearty consent to, and delight in, the objects of his coming. Why has God so variously and emphatically revealed the purposes for which his Son is coming to our world again, if we are not to be concerned about it? How can one be ready for an event in which he feels no interest, but to which he is, at heart, opposed? Are they ready who say my Lord delayeth his coming?

The patriarchs built their faith on the promise of a country and kingdom and died in expectation of possessing both at the second coming of Christ. But how can one be "also ready" for a kingdom, which he believes is now set up in his heart?

Readiness to meet Christ implies moral likeness to him. He is holy. We must have clean hearts. He was separate from sinners. We must come out from among them, and stand apart from the spirit and mannerism of worldly society. The carnal nature must be wholly subject to the reign of grace. Absolute loyalty to Christ must master and hold the entire being. The ensigns of the cross must float untrammelled over every passion of the soul. The inner man must be a recognized reflection of Christ's heavenliness. The spirit that was in him must quicken, sanctify and keep. Consecration must be entire, and often renewed. There must be no implied or mental reservation. Obedience must be complete and constant. Grace, love and power must abound more and more, and the heart must ripen daily for the golden harvest of the Lamb. In view of the imposing evidences which are now passing before our eyes, that the grand consummation is close upon us, we ought to review our relations to God with prayerful scrutiny. The least uncertainty in our condition may prove to be fatal any moment.

LOOKING FOR JESUS."

ASA G. GORDON.

"And as it is appointed unto men once to die but after this the judgment; so Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many, and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." Heb. 9: 27, 28. "For our conversation is in heaven, from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself." Phil. 3: 20, 21. "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world; looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." Titus 2: 11, 12, 13.

Peter, also, speaks of "looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God." He further adds, "Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent, that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot and blameless."

It appears that the church of God have been looking for Christ ever since the days of the apostles. In some sense, the apostles and the primitive church looked for his appearing. In what sense was it? It was according to his promise, "This same Jesus who is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts 1: 11. Did they have any specified time in view, in regard to his appearing?

Some of them, it seems, got the idea from Paul's writings that his coming was at hand. But this error he doubtless showed to them in such a manner that they gave it up. However, the "patient looking for Christ" was not to be abandoned. Notwithstanding they may have been disappointed in the nearness of the event, they were still to look for him, according to the promise made at mount Olivet by the "two men in white apparel." Certain events were to transpire before his coming. How much they understood in regard to the length of time that would be required to fulfil those events may not be known. Whether they expected those events to transpire in their day or not, may not be clearly shown. Be that as it may; one thing is evident, they were enjoined repeatedly to look for the appearing of Christ, for their hope and joy.

Paul says whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him."

We leave the apostolic age, and come down the stream of time, and we find the gospel is preached by the humble servant of God, the same hope is cherished, the same looking for Jesus is enjoined, and as an evidence of true piety, the same expectancy, and the same result to follow the patient waiting for Christ.

As the fulfillment of prophecy, and the signs attending its fulfillment are shown to be in the past, we may look for the Savior in closer proximity than our fathers did. But still, the hope is no better, the intensity of the desire may be no greater, the expectancy no sweeter, or the result any more glorious. "For we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent [or go before] them which are asleep." Looking for Jesus may include more than the mere belief that he will return again. To the apostles, I think, it implied a preparation for his coming,—purity of heart, coupled with an unshaken confidence that when the times and seasons were fulfilled he would come and receive them unto himself. To the church in the dark ages it could imply no more than to the apostles. And unto us who are on the stage of action to-day, it can mean no more nor less than ability of his word concerning his return, and a preparation of heart brought about by obeying the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. Looking for Jesus, I think, is the condition of acceptance, the evidence of preparation, the passport of the church into the kingdom of God.

I think it is a fair inference that unless we look for Christ, he will not appear unto us without sin the second time unto salvation. The apostles looked for him. The early church looked for him, and christians of all ages have looked for him. The church that will be translated will be looking for him. Looking for Christ does not always imply definite time. It does not always imply nearness of the time. It does not always have any clear perception of the length of time.

The apostolic church, probably, had very vague ideas concerning the time of the second advent, yet they looked for the glorious appearing. The church of the dark ages, probably, knew but little about the scenes that would follow, but still, their only hope was the hope of the gospel. The hope of the church, for the last few centuries, has been and will be to the end the coming of Christ. The consummation of the hope of the christians of all ages will be the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ. I think that some may have very incorrect ideas concerning the time and manner of the advent, owing to various influences, and yet hail his appearing with joy.

THE TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, held at its rooms, 144 Hanover Street, Boston, on the 5th of September, 1876, it was voted that the Society make diligent effort to raise the sum of Two Thousand Dollars for the Tract Fund. This is one of the most important departments of our field of labor, and the Society intend to make more earnest efforts than ever before to publish the soul-stirring message of Christ's speedy second advent, and the precious truths connected therewith. To this end the Society solicits the aid of its friends and sympathizers, and hopes that donations to this object may be prompt, liberal, and hearty.

THE LAST MOVE OF THE VATICAN.

The Pope has determined to celebrate the eighth centenary of one of the most remarkable and tyrannical exercises of ecclesiastical power by the famous Hildebrand, who reigned as Gregory VII. The then Emperor of the so-called Holy Roman Empire, Henry IV., offended Hildebrand, and would not conform to his views. Thereupon the Pope stirred up various Princes and potentates against him. The Emperor tried to fight the Pope by summoning a council and ordering the election of a new one: but at last the Pope had the best of the contest, and the Emperor submitted to his haughty opponent. Matters in dispute were to be settled by the Pope in a conference at Ausburg, which the Emperor was to attend as a criminal on trial. The miserable potentate was advised to anticipate the proposed trial and sentence, and for this purpose he went, in the depth of winter, to Canossa, near the Adriatic coast where the Pope had a castle at which he resided, and with him Matilda, Countess of Tuscany. For three days Hildebrand kept the Emporor standing naked, except for a rag round his waist, exposed to the inclement weather, and imploring the mercy of his ecclesiastical tyrant. On the fourth day absolution was given to him; but he was ordered to consider himself suspended from his imperial title and functions, and to await a trial before a Congress. Though snbmissive for the moment he soon rebelled, and then came a movement of the German Princes against him and the election of Rodolph in his place. A long course of violence followed, but what cared the Vatican? Hildebrand had succeeded in the most towering ambition that could animate the proudest prelate, and the Church was exalted above all powers.

It is very curious, and very significant, that the Pope should determine to have an ecclesiastical jollification over the eight hundredth anniversary of such an incident as that of Canossa; and it is reported that he is getting ready a fulmination against the Republic in France. Probably Prince Bismarck will be as jubilant as the Pope requires when the day of his celebration comes. Nothing can suit the Bismarckian policy better than such an exhibition of Papal policy, and the determination of the Vatican to put civil authority under its feet whenever it can. There is a laughable side of such proceedings, but there is also a serious one. They tend to bind the priests together in one huge conspiracy against civilized government. In some countries this may matter little, but it has political importance in France, Belgium and Spain. The French Government does not seem easy under these attacks; and although Marshal MacMahon and the Duchess of Magenta are zealous members of the Church, they will not be able to view with indifference the Papal attempts to corrupt the army and overthrow the Republic. The French ministers do not intend to let the priests have their local dukes to go about as political conspirators, and they intend to put the law in force if the Bishops circulate bulls against the Republic. It is certainly a pretty quarrel the Pope is seeking. Few octogenarians are so lively, and in point of perseverance he may compare with Hildebrand himself.—London Times.

THERE is no doubt that the movement in Spain is part of the great conspiracy which is directed from Rome. If Lord Beaconsfield must have "secret societies," let him look after those by whom the Popish propaganda is now being carried on in Spain and France, Italy, Germany, and England. Cardinal Manning defends this propagandism in his speech at Leeds, and bids us prepare for a conflict for the restoration of the temporal power of the Pope, which "he did not believe had ceased to be." Strange contradiction! But the wily priest goes farther still, and actually defends the persecution in Spain. He does not say so in plain language, because he knows that would be unpalatable to English tastes; but he commends principles that lead to persecution.—London Times.

OPINIONS OF THAT BOOK.

Says Eld. P. W. Hough:—"I found Bro. Sheldon's book, entitled 'Mormonism Examined,' on my table. I was glad to be favored with it, and read it carefully, and expressed a wish that all, both Mormon and anti-Mormon, might read it. It certainly is a book for the times. I have seen a number of books exposing that error, but Bro. Sheldon has written the last one, for there is nothing left to write about. I bespeak a large sale for it."

Says Eld. Frank Burr:—"The book is in paper cover, very neatly printed on tinted paper, and makes a work of 184 pages. It is written in Bro. Sheldon's searching style of criticism, is very interesting, and we think will be largely circulated. We commend it to all who wish to be posted on the fallacies of Mormonism."

Says Eld. D. T. Taylor:—"Mormonism is a stench in the nostrils of heaven, and a stain on the nation's honor. It is a huge imposture, that only deserves to die. Elder William Sheldon, of Brodhead, Wis., has done service to the whole country in exposing the inconsistencies, contradictions, and falsity of the claims of the Mormon founders and leaders, and his book should be widely circulated and read by those who wish our land freed from this polygamous system of error, lying, and lust. Send to the author for his book. His sharp, trenchant pen will interest you. The expose is thorough, and is well done."

Says Eld. A. A. Phelps:—"We heartily endorse this strong notice of Bro. Sheldon's new book. Every liberal minded christian should be interested to study such a subject, even though his own immediate neighborhood might be forever free from Mormon invasions."

Says Eld. Miles Grant:—"'Mormonism Examined' is the title of a new work, by Bro. Wm. Sheldon, Brodhead, Wis., which every Mormon should read; and also every one who wishes to be prepared to show that Joseph Smith was not an inspired man, as claimed by the Mormons, and that the Book of Mormon is no more an inspired book than Robinson Crusoe, or Don Quixote. These facts are made to appear very clearly in 'Mormonism Examined.'"

Some may feel like saying, "The work is not needed." Yet it is. Never was a work more needed in certain localities, yet not extensively enough to meet the expenses incurred; so lovers of truth should purchase to help the author in this good enterprise. We think you will find yourself repaid, even if you never encounter the "ism." Price 50 cts. Send to WM. SHELDON, Brodhead, Wis., or to Crisis office.

SIGNS.

Editor Crisis:—As the "signs of the times" are multiplying daily and rapidly in our midst, and as Christ said there should be "signs in the sun, and in the moon," I thought it might not be amiss to call attention to the singular phenomena which appeared in the last new moon. The moon changed on the 17th inst., but on account of clouds and rain was not visible here till the Friday evening following. The position of the moon was nearly perpendicular; that is, one point was nearly over the other, and on the upper point was a dark or black spot; and from this spot was a dark or black strip extending down the centre, with the same curve of the moon to near the lower point, and the strip itself terminating in a point. Then on the outer curve was another dark strip near the lower point, apparently five or six inches in length. These spots appeared exactly the same, and equally distinct, four nights in succession, with the sky free from all clouds or haze. Since then it has been more or less cloudy and hazy, yet when clear they can still be seen, though less distinct, as the moon grows older and brighter. These spots were noticed by my family and hundreds of others, and excited curiosity and remark. They clearly indicate that the moon is undergoing a change of some kind.

ACTION OF THE MINNESOTA M. E. CONFERENCE

IN THE CASE OF BRO. AND SR. MANSFIELD.

As I understand the matter, Bro. and Sr. D. R. Mansfield were induced, two years ago, by solicitation, to unite with the Methodist church. And in our then tried, distracted and broken condition as a people in the West, and in an hour of temptation with them, they concluded to take this step, thinking that thereby they could reach greater numbers, save more sinners, and thus labor acceptably to God.

Before any union with the Methodists, they showed their credentials. Eld. Mansfield presented his ordination papers, and Sr. Mansfield her license to preach the gospel, received from the Advent body. These were received by the church which they joined, without objection. They were also afterward received into the District Conference. Then, after spending two years in labor in the denomination as Evangelists, and reaping much fruit, and gathering many into their churches by successful revivals, the District Conference proposed to the Annual Conference to receive them on their credentials as they had done, and as was their general custom with ministers from other denominations.

These papers were passed to the Annual Conference, when a sharp discussion arose, in which it was maintained by some, that the Advent people were not Evangelical. A vote was taken, in which the majority decided the Adventists to be unevangelical, and that the ministry ordained by them are not holding holy orders.

In this case Bro. Mansfield would be under necessity of giving up his ordination vows, and receive re-imposition of hands by Methodist ministers. To this, he stated before the Conference, being privileged by the Bishop, that he could not do it. His ordination, he said, came from devout and holy men, and to go back upon them would be to give up thirty years of arduous labor and service in the Master's vineyard and all the work of his life done under his credentials and sanctioned by God, and this Conference could not justly require this of him. Thus remains his decision, while the action of the Methodist Conference excludes them both, on the ground that their credentials, coming from the Adventist church, are regarded by them as worthless.

Since the action of the Methodist Conference, Bro. and Sr. Mansfield have been visited by many sympathizing friends, of whom they have gained very many among the Methodists; and the Presiding Elder has earnestly and kindly requested them to take a supply under him, without any orders, and wait another year. But as they see no hope that their orders, which they regard as sacred, will then be received by the Annual Conference, they decline all appointments.

Being on the same territory occupied by Bro. and Sr. Mansfield, I have been a witness to their devotion, zeal and success in building up the Methodists, and saving sinners. That denomination in this State will lose much by the action, and cannot keep their body in a state of peace.

Our brother and sister should be again welcomed among us, where they belong, and made to feel at home in the body. Old friends, over the whole field of their former thirty years of sacrifice and labor in the noblest cause under heaven, will be glad to learn their present position, which is that of "waiting for the Lord to direct, and for his coming."

Let letters flow in upon them in rich sympathy, kindness and christian love, till their hearts are made to feel that they are one with us in labor and in hope. And this should teach ministers to remain faithful and steadfast in the faith or the work assigned them by the Lord, unto the end. Nothing can be gained by the abandonment of the cause and the people with which God has identified us. We may disfellowship "the unfruitful works of darkness, and reprove them," for we cannot justify wrong or evil; but our post of duty is plain. Let us keep it at all peril.

O. R. FASSETT.

Correspondence.

From Bro. N. Reed.

Dear Editor:—I am so grateful for the light received from reading the Crisis, that I desire to write again. It so encourages and cheers me in my loneliness and advanced age, that I do not see how I can do without it.

I do feel that we need encouragement from each other in these days of peril. I do feel that we are living in the days described by St. Paul to the Hebrews. He said "Cast not away your confidence, for we have need of patience, that after we have done the will of God we may receive the promises. "The just shall live by faith." It seems that the last link of prophecy is about completed.

Now we must live by faith, trust and hope. Although I live lonely, and am surrounded by wickedness, as good old Lot was, I try to sanctify the Lord God in my heart.

I am earnestly striving to live in consecration of all things to Christ. I rejoice that I live in these days, when the prospect is so bright of speedy deliverance. I love to contemplate the blessed hour when we shall see Jesus coming in the clouds, and go to meet him in the air, and be with all the glorified.

What a moment that will be, when we meet all the loved ones and all the dear brethren. Let us try to be faithful a little while longer. Let us pray for each other. When you plead for grace in these trying times, please remember me. I feel that I am a pilgrim and a stranger, as all our fathers were. May the Lord soon come and gather the waiting ones into his kingdom is my prayer.

From Sr. M. A. Wood.

Dear Editor:—Being a subscriber of your paper, I thought I must write a few lines in praise of it. I want to tell you how it cheers my heart and thrills my soul with joy, as I read those grand and sublime truths that explain so clearly the word of God, especially the prophetic word, that reveals the day in which we are living, and what will be in the end of the days. And it rejoices my heart to hear from the dear brethren and sisters; especially dear Sr. Weaver, who writes from her overflowing heart of gratitude and love. Though suffering pain and languishing, there is a peace and joy within that passeth all understanding.

I love to hear from her, and all the dear brethren and sisters. As I read from week to week the beautiful letters in the Crisis from those I met and heard preach at the Alton Bay campmeeting, it fills me with joy, and reminds me of the happy meetings and sweet faces of those endeared ones of God's children who like the apostles of old go forth, not waiting to know how large a salary they are to receive, but go trusting in the Lord.

While at Alton Bay, as I contrasted them with the popular preaching of the day, my whole heart moved within me, and from the depths of my soul I felt nearer and nearer God, and nearer to his children. When I read Bro. Kellaway's farewell letter to the brethren and sisters, expressing his deep and earnest love toward them, I could not help exclaiming, "Behold how these brethren love one another!" And I felt a rejoicing in my heart which leaped forth in praise to God for his great mercy and goodness.

Lawrence, Mass.

From Sr. Sarah A. Mitchell.

Dear Editor of Crisis:—I am a reader of your paper which is a present from Bro. J. Cargile to my husband. I feel a deep interest in the study of God's Word, and am trying to know his will and follow his footsteps. We have been to some extent shut out from the truth. Till within, the last few years the gospel of the soon coming kingdom has not been preached in these parts except by a very few. But those few are God's faithful servants, sounding the alarm, and pleading with sinners to make ready for Christ's soon coming kingdom. O that the people would become more enlightened on these glorious truths! It is my greatest joy to think that our blessed Master will come very soon, and that we have a hope of entering into that rest that remains for the people of God. Everything in this world has become so uncertain that we do feel that we really have no continuing city, but seek one to come whose maker and builder is God. If we could not claim Jesus as our Savior we should be most miserable. But thanks to his holy name, we are striving to enter in at the straight gate and hope that, notwithstanding our poverty in this world, we will have a home in Jesus' kingdom, where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest.

Brethren and sisters, pray for me, for I have many trials and am much afflicted in body, and have poverty and persecution to contend with. O may the Lord be my helper in every time of need. I love your paper very much and wish I could do something for its circulation, but my means are limited.

JEWISH authorities report that the Israelites are fast returning to Palestine, and that the number in Jerusalem has doubled witnin ten years.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Annual Meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Northern Penn. and Southern N. Y., for 1876, was held with the church at Westfield, Penn., Sept. 21st to 24th inclusive. The following ministers were present: Benj. Butler, Ira Slocum, D. D. Hunt, E. C. Cowles, S. E. Moose, A. H. Briggs, E. H. Eggleston, J. H. Sawyer, Wm. Fletcher, H. Ziegenfuss.

The following delegates from churches were present: E. Gardner, Westfield, Pa.; R. Kelsey, A. Mosher, Little Marsh, Pa.; S. E. Moose, Fremont, N. Y.; T. Hunter, Wallace, N. Y.; A. Johnson, Turner Creek, Pa.; Wm. Fletcher, South Creek, Pa.

The following were the officers of the Conference chosen for the year: President, A. H. Briggs; Vice President, D. B. Hunt; Secretary, R. Kelsey; Treasurer, S. Gardner; Business Committee, D. B. Hunt; S. E. Moose, Benj. Butler; Devotional Committee, S. Gardner, R. Kelsey, A. Mallory.

Report of Finance Committee: Have not met with marked success, owing to the stringency of the times and other causes combined. Report accepted. Brn. A. H. Briggs, Wm. Fletcher, and H. Ziegenfuss were continued another year.

The following resolutions were introduced and unanimously adopted:

Whereas, We, the A. C. Christian Conference of Northern Pa. and Southern N. Y., having seen the painful result of pressing definite time, causing division of once harmonious and loving brethren, by denouncing such as do not accept this distracting hobby as being foolish virgins, and disqualified for the kingdom, therefore,

Resolved, That we deem such a course a positive violation of the Scriptures, and persisting therein a forfeiture of christian character; and that such persons are not entitled to membership among us. Also,

Resolved, That any minister holding credentials of membership in any other Conference, shall not be eligible to membership in this Conference. T. T. Farrell, of Smithfield, Pa., was received as an ordained Elder. The right hand of fellowship was given by A. H. Briggs.

This meeting of the Conference was both interesting and profitable to all who were present. The utmost harmony and good feeling pervaded the business, preaching and social meetings. The church and people were very hospitable, and amply provided for all who came. "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver." R. KELSEY, Sec.

JOHN THE BAPTIST AND CHRIST.

To this preaching, to this baptism, in the thirtieth year of his age, came Jesus from Galilee. John was his kinsman by birth, but the circumstances of their life had entirely separated them. John as a child in the house of a blameless priest, his father, lived at Ruttah, in the far south of the tribe of Judah, and not far from Hebron. Jesus had lived in the deep seclusion of the carpenter shop in the valley of Galilee. When he first came to the banks of the Jordan, the great forerunner, according to his own emphatic and twice-repeated testimony, "knew him not."

Though Jesus was not revealed as the Messiah to his great herald prophet, there was something in his look, something in the sinless beauty of his ways, something in the solemn majesty of his aspect which at once overawed and captivated the soul of John. To others he was the uncompromising prophet; kings he could confront with rebuke; Pharisees he could unmask with indignation; but before this presence all his lofty bearing falls. As when some unknown dread checks the flight of the eagle, and makes him settle with hushed scream and drooping plumage on the ground, so, before the purity of a sinless life, the wild prophet of the desert becomes like a submissive and timid child. The battle-brunt which legionaries could not daunt—the lofty manhood before which hierarchs trembled and princes grew pale, resigns itself, submits, adores, before moral force which is weak in every external attribute, and armed only in invisible mail.

John bowed to the simple, stainless manhood before he had been inspired to recognize the divine commission. He earnestly tried to forbid the purpose of Jesus. He who had received the confessions of all others, now reverently and humbly makes his own: "I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me?" The response contains the second recorded utterance of Jesus, and the first word of his public ministry: "Suffer it to be so now, for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness."—Farrar's Life of Christ.

Obituaries.

PLUMLEY. At his home in Agusta, Wis., Sept. 13th, 1876, of consumption, Hurvey R. Plumley, son of J. D. and C. Plumley, and son-in-law of Bro. Carilus Stone, aged thirty-one years.

He leaves a wife and two children, and many relatives and friends to mourn his loss. He was a kind, indulgent father, an affectionate and loving husband, always ready to impart a kind word to all, and ever ready to help in time of need. He possessed a generous disposition, which endeared him to all who knew him. But years ago the enemy marked him as his victim, and now has cut him down in manhood's prime. We have laid him away, sorrowing not as those without hope, for we have the blessed assurance that he is sleeping in Jesus and free from all pain. He manifested great patience and christian resignation, especially during the last week of his sickness. Jesus was very precious to him. While suffering extremely he exclaimed, "O if Jesus would only come! I am ready." But grace was given him to endure, and he patiently said, "I will wait until he calls, and then I will go."

Our home is sad and lonely. We miss him everywhere, and we feel at times that our grief is beyond human words. Still we humbly pray that God may sanctify this deep affliction to our good, and that we may be preserved holy, without spot and blameless unto his coming, and share in the glorious reunion on the resurrection morn. Funeral services by Eld. C. C. Miller, Baptist clergyman. L. W. P.

ROLLINS. In Portland, Me., Aug. 26th, 1876, Sr. Huldah F. Rollins, aged seventy-one years.

The subject of this notice was the widow of the late Eld. Andrew Rollins, a prominent and very able preacher in the Free Will Baptist denomination, and for several years prior to his death pastor of the first F. B. Church in the town of Brunswick, Me. She became a christian when quite young, and always sustained an excellent christian character. She became an Adventist under the preaching of Eld. Wm. Miller, in 1843, and continued "in the faith" until her death. She earnestly desired and longed for the appearing of Jesus, at which time she firmly believed that her beloved husband and daughter would be brought forth to eternal life. She fondly hoped to live until that glorious day; but death came, and she now sleeps beside her loved ones in the cemetery adjoining the little chapel where they had labored together so faithfully for the Master. The church in Portland has lost an excellent member, and while we miss her presence among us, and her kindly admonitions, we sorrow not as "those who have no hope," but feel comforted with the blessed assurance that it is well with the righteous. H. C. F.

TUTTLE. In Fitchburg, Mass., Oct. 12th, 1876, Bro. Timothy Tuttle, aged sixty-one years.

He was born and lived in New Hampshire till the last year of his life. He was converted to Christ and united with the Baptist church in 1844. In 1854 he became interested in the Advent question, and identified himself with those of like precious faith, and continued in the same to the end. He was a man of few words, but his deeds were for God and humanity. His home was a resting place for the pilgrim messengers of the gospel of the kingdom. The last three years of his life were filled with extreme suffering, which he endured with christian fortitude and patience. He took great delight in the Scriptures and in the songs and prayers of those visiting him. His sufferings were so intense that he longed for the time to come when he should sleep till the resurrection morning, when he expected to rise to immortality. He leaves a widow and five children to mourn. God grant they may all meet him in the morning. Words of comfort were spoken by one of the Methodist ministers of this place. J. D. MERRIAM.

ROUNDY. In Stockbridge, Vt, Sept. 13th, 1876, by hanging, Thurman A. Roundy, aged fifty-four years.

For a number of years the deceased lived a christian life, and had the confidence of neighbors and friends up to the time of his death. He was in possession of good health, and his surroundings were generally pleasant. He enjoyed the society of christians, and the Sabbath preceding his death he bore testimony for Christ and his word. His home has ever been a home for the servants of God, the pleasantness of which the writer has himself enjoyed. He proved his love for God and his Word, not only by words, but by deeds. He leaves a wife, two sons, and other relatives who deeply mourn his death. We commend them to God, who comforteth us in all our tribulations, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God. Services attended by the writer. I. DAMMAN.

BRADFORD. In Dalton, Mass., July 24th, 1876, of quick consumption, Winslow Bradford, aged sixty-two years.

Bro. Bradford was a kind and faithful husband, father and citizen. He had for a number of years been interested in the doctrine of the Lord's soon coming. Being very deaf, he did not often meet with God's people in the house of prayer, yet we trust that when the Savior calls he will "hear his voice and come forth unto the resurrection of life." He leaves a wife and four children who deeply mourn his loss. Words of comfort were spoken from Job 19: 25. The Methodist and Congregational ministers of the place assisted in the funeral exercises, after which we laid him away to rest until the Life-giver comes. W. E. HATHAWAY.

COBURN. In Salem, N. H., Sept. 29th, 1876, Ella Chase, daughter of C. G. and Abbie F. Coburn, aged five months.

This is the second time that these parents have been called to drink of the bitter cup of affliction in the loss of dear children. 2 Kings 4: 26 was taken as the foundation of remarks at the funeral, showing that it is or will be well with the child. And if the parents and frends love God and keep his commandments, when the children come again from the land of the enemy, it will also be well with them. W. E. HATHAWAY.

DR. SANDWITH writes from Servia:—"The misery I see around me emboldens me to address you. This country is full of refugees who have fled for their lives from Turkish barbarity. There are various degrees of destitution amongst the fugitives. I specially plead for those who have hastily fled from their villages, leaving behind blazing houses, and too often children spitted on bayonets. These poor creatures are absolutely destitute, some with literally nothing but a shirt, having jumped out of bed and fled for their lives. The Servian peasants are really kind to them. I saw a small cottage the other day, the owner of which had taken in a family of six or seven, and was feeding them. Already the cold nights have killed a number of tender little ones, and the aspect of the winter is enough to make one shudder. I am now much concerned to secure warm clothing for as many of the destitute as possible. Some of the Servian refugees have been very well-to-do people; I mean those belonging to the towns and villages that the Turks have destroyed. A few days ago I saw numbers of blazing villages, and the sight of the crowds of poor women and children weeping over their desolate condition wrung my heart.—Christian Herald.

TURKISH CRUELTIES.—General Tchernaieff, commander of the Servian army, stated on Oct. 3d:—

"Servian prisoners who have been taken by the Turks, and the wounded who have fallen into their hands, are subjected to the most cruel tortures before they are killed. On the evening of the 1st October our troops having retaken from the enemy a position they had abandoned on the previous night, found there the bodies of the wounded who had been taken prisoners, in a condition which the human mind would have believed impossible.

These wretched creatures were found pinned to the earth by hedge-stakes, the hands stretched out, the feet and parts of the body burnt and charred, the toes cut off, the stomachs disembowelled, and the faces distorted by the agony of their tortures. These atrocities were the exploits of soldiers belonging to the regular army. The truth of this diabolical fact is guaranteed by the word of honor of Colonel Preradovitch, Captain Tikchanoff, and other witnesses."—London Times.

INDIGNATION meetings against the Turks are still held throughout Britain; many Conservatives support them, and entirely disapprove of the vituperation heaped by the Standard and other Conservative papers upon such meetings.

The Marquis of Bath, at a recent meeting, said: "The voice of England has declared that it shall be rendered impossible for such enormities to occur again. It is not interference on the part of England that is wanted, but non-interference. England has but to withdraw its support from Turkey, and then Russia will deal with the question, and free its kindred Slavonic races from Turkish despotism. If the alternative lies between leaving Bosnia, Herzegovina, and Bulgaria to Russia or to the mercy of the Turks, then let Russia have them, and God be with her."

NEW YORK, Oct. 23. A Washington special this afternoon says there is a rumor in official circles that our Government is drawing up a note to be addressed to the Spanish Government protesting against the rigid persecutions of Protestants throughout Spain, and demanding that they be accorded religious liberty. According to the same authority this matter has been the subject of correspondence between our Government and Great Britain, and an understanding has been reached between the two Governments that a formal protest shall be made by each, as has been done by Germany.

NEW YORK, Oct 26. A train on the Central Railroad of New Jersey, which left Jersey City yesterday evening, was heavily laden with commuters from New York, who had been delayed by the strike of the railway engineers and firemen. This side of Somerville the train went off the track. The engine was turned upon its side. Two coaches were piled upon the locomotive and three other coaches were thrown from the rails. Three passengers were taken out of the wreck, dead. Five others were seriously wounded, and nine slightly.

Notices.

South Boston.

The brethren in South Boston, believing in the near coming of Jesus and kindred truths, desiring to let their light shine, have leased a Hall corner of Dorchester and National Streets (close by Broadway), where they mean to have "the gospel of the kingdom" preached. They do not mean to ride, or allow hobby riding, but desire a place where the Lord's coming may be kept before the people. They desire the prayers and cooperation of all the lovers of the truth in Boston. Where there are more than three hundred thousand souls, there ought to be a place where those of "like precious faith" can meet together, and where these truths can be proclaimed unmixed with the traditions of men. Pray for this meeting. For the brethren, A. P. MOORE.

NOTICE.—The next Quarterly session of the Middle District of the Massachusett's Conference will be holden with the church at Clinton, Mass., commencing Wednesday evening, Nov. 8th, and continue over the following Sabbath. We earnestly desire that the preaching brethren of the District may be present to labor for the perishing. Also we desire that a goodly number from all the churches be at this meeting, especially the spiritual portion, that good may be done in the name of the Holy One. H. H. TUCKER, Com.

P. S. The church are hoping to see many of the brethren and sisters scattered abroad at this meeting. Come and make their hearts glad by your presence, exhortations, prayers, and labor of love. Provision will be made for all. Whosoever will let him come; and you that cannot come, pray that the blessing of the Lord may attend. For the church, H. H. TUCKER.

NOTICE.—A protracted meeting will commence at Water Village, N. H., Thursday evening, Nov. 23d, and continue as long as may seem duty. Brn. G. F. Haines and M. Stevens are expected to be present and assist in preaching the Word. Brethren and sisters from abroad will be heartily welcomed. Ample provision will be made for man and beast. C. H. SWEET.

NOTICE.—There will be a meeting at North Hermon, Me., in the old meeting-house, commencing Nov. 9th, at two o'clock P. M., and hold as long as the Lord directs. May the Lord send help to this meeting such as is needed.
JOHN F. EMERSON, West Levant, Me.

NOTICE.—The next Quarterly Session of the Eastern District of the Massachusetts Conference will be holden with the church at Wakefield, Mass., commencing Thursday evening, Nov. 2nd, and continue over the following Sabbath. We earnestly solicit the presence of the preaching brethren of the District, and of as many of the brethren and sisters as can attend. J. COUCH, Com.

NOTICE.—Should time continue and the Lord will, I will hold a protracted meeting in West Poland, Me., commencing Wednesday evening, Nov. 1st, and hold over the following Sabbath. A. ROSS.

QUARTERLY MEETING.—A Quarterly Meeting will be held at Brodhead, Wis., beginning Friday night, Nov. 3d. Let us have a general assembly of ministers and members within the district. WM. SHELDON.

NOTICE.—A Protracted Meeting will commence at South Rochester, N. H., Nov. 2nd, and hold over the following Sabbath. A general invitation is given to all lovers of the Lord.
D. F. LEAVITT.
LEVI ALLEN.

NOTICE.—There will be a meeting of believers in the speedy coming of Christ at the Town Hall in Danbury, N. H., to commence Thursday evening, Nov. 2nd, and continuing over the following Sabbath. F. S. RANSOM.

THE church in Wakefield is supplied with preaching the first and third Sundays of each month, by Elder B. Finney. Brethren wishing to appoint for either of the remaining Sundays, please correspond with G. R. Tyzzer, or B. Finney.

THOSE wishing to preach at East Weymouth, Mass., will please correspond with Jos. Hackett, West Scituate, Mass.; or Alonzo Manuel, East Weymouth, before sending their appointments.

G. W. GILLESPIE is corresponding Secretary of Hartford, Ct., Stedman Hall.

Attention All, Please!

I have a proposal to make. Who will help in this matter? Several important facts have come to my knowledge, which leads me to make the following offer. With gratitude to God I learn that the "History of the Second Advent Message" has been put into several college and seminary libraries, where the results are clearly manifest in awakening some of the "faculty" and students to investigate and become especially interested in the doctrine of Christ's coming and kindred truths. They express surprise that such an amount of mission work has been done in this form, and such men of known ability and piety engaged in it while they were ignorant of it. It has also fallen into the hands of several ministers of different churches, where the results are the same. I am convinced that much good can be done by awakening such men as stand in the front of society. I want to sacrifice some to help it along. It is now the special season to make gifts to friends for two months to come. The retail price of the History is $3.50. Postage is now 20 cts. on each. The actual cost of the book to me in publishing was $3.00 each. I now offer one hundred copies of it to be ordered before Jan. 1st, 1877, to any persons who will order to give to libraries of Institutions, or other public libraries, or who will keep them to lend to ministers and other readers, or who will give them to ministers, for $2 50 each, postpaid. No others should expect them at this price, as it is 70 cts. less than cost on each. Address all such orders to I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

A New Edition.

The first edition of "Berean's Casket" is exhausted. A new edition, revised and improved, is now published on excellent paper, and beautifully bound in cloth, ready for all who wish such a help in the study of the Scriptures. Price $2.00. In leather, 2.50. Sold at this office, and by the author.
I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

TWO NEW TRACTS.

We have just published two new Tracts.

"THE DIVINE ARTILLERY."

BY D. T. TAYLOR.

This is a valuable tract, addressed to theologians and thinkers, critics, Bible students and ministers, concerning what the Lord has furnished to be preached to sinners as motives and inducements to repentance, and to saints to induce activity and endurance. The Bible hope is clearly and forcibly stated. Price 50 cts. per one hundred, or 15 cts. per dozen by mail.

"THE FEARFUL OUTLOOK."

BY I. C. WELLCOME.

This attempts to show those who are anxious, perplexed and fearful about what is coming on the earth, that the wars and preparations of the last thirty years, the present distress of nations, and struggle with Popery and Turkey, will result in our Lord's return and the destruction of the nations. This will be read by all. Second edition enlarged. Price $1.50 per hundred, or 30 cts. per dozen, by mail.

Address I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

☞ For sale as above at the Crisis Office.

ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

This is an ably conducted weekly paper, edited by Elder Frank Burr, and published under the auspices of the Western A. C. Publishing Society. It gives prominence to the personal coming of Christ, the resurrection of the dead, the final destruction of sinners, and the eternal salvation of saints on the renovated earth. It also insists on a holy life as essential to an admittance into the coming kingdom. $2.20 a year. Address Advent Christian Times, 91 South Green St., Chicago, Ill.

The World's Crisis and Adv. Chris. Times sent postpaid to subscribers who will take both, at the reduced rate of $4.00 per year in advance for both papers. Address World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Appointments

☞ APPOINTMENTS MUST BE RECEIVED AS EARLY AS TUESDAY MORNING (as our paper goes to press about noon) to insure insertion for the coming week.

☞ The following RESOLUTION was passed at the late meeting of the A. C. P. Society:—

"RESOLVED, That no appointments be published in the CRISIS henceforth for persons unknown to the Editorial Board (by which is understood the Editors, Editorial Committee, and Business Agent), unless satisfactory reference shall be given."

The Committee appointed by the Adv. Chris. Association, at its last Annual Meeting, to advise with the Editorial Board "in relation to the publication in the World's Crisis of the appointments of men unworthy of recognition as preachers," having attended to the duty assigned them, recommended, and the Editorial Board have adopted, and ordered to be published, the following resolution:—

"RESOLVED, That when the Editorial Board is properly notified by any of our Churches, or Ministers, or responsible persons, by a written allegation that a certain minister, or ministers, lack moral character, that they be instructed to notify such minister, or ministers, of the information received as a reason for withholding their appointments till after a proper trial and acquittal."

All communications in relation to this matter should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board—GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass.

ONE THING HAVE I DESIRED, THAT WILL I SEEK AFTER."—Psa. 27 : 4.

One thing have I desired,
And would you wish to know
What 'tis that charms me so?
So sought and so admired?

One faith that lifts the soul
From things of time and sense—
Showing Omnipotence,
And his sublime control.

One Friend on whom to call:
The way, the life, the door,
The same forevermore,
The Savior, Lord of all.

One Spirit of all grace,
Who whispers precious things,
And leads to living springs
Our thirsty, dying race.

One anchor to the soul:
'Tis here my tossing bark
Rides safe amid the dark
Where angry billows roll.

One tabernacle sure,
Where weary pilgrims rest,
While visions of the blest
Their onward steps allure.

One pearl attracts my eye,
The pearl of price unknown:
To make this gem my own,
I'll sell my all, and buy.

"One thing," let others go!
What Jesus prizes most
I'll hold at any cost,
'Tis this that charms me so.

"THY KINGDOM COME.—No. 2.

A WORD TO BELIEVERS.

WM. KELLAWAY.

THE REASONS WHY WE OFFER THIS PRAYER.

"Thy kingdom come"—such is the prayer; and we will briefly go through the reasons why we offer it; that we may show to all that the request is reasonable; that we may refresh our own memories, and henceforth throw more heart into the prayer.

We pray then "Thy kingdom come!" for God's sake. We know that when that kingdom does come, his glory will be much more widely extended than at present. In physical nature his glory is already spread to the ends of the world. The heavens with their hosts declare the glory of God, by showing his handiwork. The institutions of day and night conspire in the utterance of praise. All seasons promote his honor. The world teems it forth; the sea roars it out; the lightnings flash it in the empyrean; the thunders bellow it aloft. But man is stupid, and dull, and ignorant; and how many millions there are who know not God, much less acknowledge the kind hand that protects. But the coming of the kingdom of God would fill the earth with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, of his goodness and mercy; and all would praise God! O, then no heart would be senseless and no tongue still! But the intelligent world of men would attribute honor to him to whom praise belongeth by right. Our prayer is, therefore, firstly, that we might see and hear all men give praise to God; we beseech for his kingdom for his own glory.

We also pray "Thy kingdom come!" for Christ's sake. We remember what he has done for us—the ignominies he suffered, the temptations he was subjected to, the privations he underwent, the sorrows he endured. We remember that, last of all he gave his life for our redemption; a price incalculable, a gift without parallel. He did all for the joy of bringing to incorruption and glory a seed of men to dwell with him and share regal honor for ever in the kingdom of God.

It was a great and philanthropic ambition that caused the sacrifice of the Son of God. And he who has done so much for us we would see honored above every name that is named. O, he is worthy! And so we desire the coming of the kingdom of God upon the earth, that Jesus might reign wherever the sun shines; that the cross might be rewarded with the crown. And therefore pray we, "Thy kingdom come?"

We also pray "Thy kingdom come!" for our own sakes. Through grace we are heirs of God; the inheritance is ours. Desire of possession, therefore, at an early date is only natural. The kingdom is preached to us; and in receiving the gospel we have received a kingdom, that cannot be moved. We have the Father's good pleasure to cause us to inherit stamped into our hearts. We have entered into the name of Jesus, and have been sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise. We have a good, clear title to the land, by virtue, not of birth or nationality, but of Jesus. It is therefore only natural for us to ask that we may go into the land of the promise and live with our Lord and Savior soon. We know that then will be consummated all our aspirations, and joy will rise to the brim of our capacity; in a word, we know that we shall be "satisfied." And therefore we pray for the kingdom.

For the church's sake, for Jerusalem's sake, for the sake of Zion, do we also offer our petitions for the kingdom. Each of these, beautified with its own proper glory, would be infinitely bettered if the advent of the Bridegroom would but come off. And therefore right earnestly do we pray for the revelation of God's kingdom.

For the world's sake we urge our desire. Who is a humanitarian if not the man who prays "Thy kingdom come?" Nations saved are his cheering outlook. Nations walking in the light of God's countenance. The devil driven hence; diseases in their dreadful forms departed; and life and health and peace everywhere present. For man's sake we pray, "Thy kingdom come!"

For the sake of the brute creation do we press the petition; for in the release from the curse, and in the day of the regeneration, tameness and submission shall come back to the ferocious tribes of the jungle and the forest, and they shall be as in Paradise, dwelling among men, and recognizing their lords and rulers.

For the sake of the inanimate inheritance, do we beseech God to establish his kingdom. The pores of earth over millions of miles of its surface are calcined by the burning sun, and need to be converted from their wasteness and wilderness state into gardens of beauty and fertility. Patches of the world are bound up in everlasting chains of ice, and an omnipotent hand is needed to unloose the bands. The earth rocks to and fro through her inward fire; she is convulsed by earthquakes; and a thousand ills, internal and external, prevent our saying, It is all that can be wished for. The thorn and brier disfigure; the upas tree destroys. It is evident that our world needs regeneration. And when the kingdom comes, Genesis the second will be written; not by a Moses, nor upon perishable material; but upon the world of the inheritance itself. We desire with fervor so happy an event; and therefore pray "Thy kingdom come."

And we desire, even for the sake of the wicked and careless, the coming of the kingdom of God. Do not be startled, for we are not about to say that such will have any inheritance in the kingdom of God and of Christ; that is out of the question. But we are sometimes asked, "O, but how can you pray for God's kingdom, knowing that there are so many millions out of Christ, and that the coming of that kingdom would be the certain doom of these individuals?" A solemn question to put, we confess, nevertheless it is actually a reason why we desire the kingdom of God now. We read in the Bible that "Evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse." It is therefore evident that the longer the wicked live the larger will be the store of wrath they will heap up to themselves against the day of wrath and righteous indignation of God. It is therefore a mercy, comparatively speaking, to interfere, and prevent increased provocation. Besides, as every hour witnesses thousands of births, only thirty years will see a largely augmented number of dark, and thankless, and wicked persons; it is therefore positively to be desired that such as are living in Christendom, and are not anxious and seeking to be saved, should be, by an act of judgment, put beyond the capability of producing their species in the same darkness and wretchedness as themselves. If, therefore, the world will not take heed to the gospel and receive its benefits; if it will only grow harder and more wicked because of divine compassion and forbearance; if additional time and opportunity will only result in the production of fresh multitudes in the same godless and hopeless condition as their parents, then the kingdom of God had better come now than even thirty years hence; and so this consideration makes us pray "Thy kingdom come."

Lord, let thy kingdom come! for thine own glory; for the greater glory of thy only begotten Son; for the sake of thy church; for the sake of Zion; for our individual sakes; for the sake of a distressed brute creation; for the sake of man's cursed inheritance; for the sake even of the impenitent. Let thy kingdom come; let the whole earth be filled with thy glory!

THE KINGDOM OF GOD NOT SIMPLY A MORAL STATE.

"The kingdom of God is righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost." This passage is relied on by some, to prove that the kingdom of God is only a state, consisting of certain principles, and not a real substantial inheritance to come; and those who hold this to be the meaning of the phrase "the kingdom of God," affirm that the text written above is proof; hence they unhesitatingly teach that the kingdom has already come to the world. But we give a saying parallel with the apostle's to show that this passage may not be so interpreted as to teach that the kingdom of God is simply a condition of moral being. Some months ago, the French empire was lying in tranquility. Her commercial relations with the other nations of the earth seemed about perfect. Her political situation wore a most serene aspect. No inward troubles convulsed her; she was free from complications with her neighbors. Not a war-cloud, or the vestige of one, darkened the sky of her national and imperial prosperity. All was peace and quiet. All was calm. Then the French Emperor opened his mouth, and his significant words were, "The Empire is Peace!" Wires flashed it hither and thither. Journalists fixed the volatile announcement, and sent it in print to their subscribers.

But did Napoleon III. mean by this that the real Empire, the literal France, the soil of the Franks, had changed from its substantiality into the mere immaterial abstract quality of peace? Did he mean that the soil had lost its solidity and had become a condition? No editor said so. No man thinks so now. All understood the Emperor to mean, that the element that ruled the national life was peace, and that France desired amicable and friendly feelings with all, in order to "keep the peace." So the apostle must be understood. He does not deny the real Kingdom of God; but tells us its main characteristics and most prominent principles. He does not reduce it to a kingdom of conditions; but speaks in the text of the moral and social conditions of the kingdom.

SIGNS OF THE SON OF MAN.

J. P. MARQUAND.

"And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven."—Matt. 24: 30.

This passage of Scripture has puzzled the minds of many theologians, but let us examine it carefully, remembering that God does not want us to be in darkness nor in doubt. The best way to find its solution will be to compare Scripture with Scripture and find the result. The three gospels, Matthew, Mark and Luke, assert the fact of the "powers of heaven being shaken," and right afterwards comes the sign of the Son of man in heaven. Now comes the question, What is it? We answer, It is the rolling of the heavens together as a scroll, which you will find in Isa. 34: 4, Heb. 1: 12, and Rev. 6, 14.

This is the sign as we understand it. The rending of the vail in the temple at Jerusalem was a type of this sign, and thus the prophet Isaiah says in the 64th chapter, "Oh! that thou wouldest rend the heavens, that thou wouldest come down that the mountains might flow down at thy presence." But who can find language adequate to describe this scene, so momentous and grand, which precedes the second advent of our Lord? We are told in the 24th Psalm that when our Lord Jesus Christ entered heaven, the gates were lifted up and the everlasting doors were opened to let in "The King of Glory!" But who shall describe his return to earth surrounded with the shining hosts of angels, with the trump of God, the raising of the sleeping dead, his great power and majesty and the establishment of his kingdom under the whole heavens? Let mortal man be still and confess his weakness to describe these. "But who may abide the day of his coming?"

We are told also that "the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven in flaming fire" to judge mankind. He is coming to take possession of his inheritance, to clear away all the rubbish that sinful man has made for six thousand years, to bring in everlasting righteousness, and reward his faithful ones. Most glorious hour! Then we shall understand all the way in which our feet have been led, the bitter tears we shed, the suffering, groans, the trial of our faith and the days of anguish. Christ our deliverer comes, the gates of hell are thrown down, and the last enemy is vanquished. "Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads." We do not believe the sign of the Son of man to be anything out of the ordinary course of nature, only the parting of the heavens to admit the Son of God to earth; which is the purchased possession bought with his own blood.

We are told by many that Christ's second coming is spiritual and not literal. To this we answer, that Jesus, when he went away, promised to send the Holy Spirit as a Comforter and friend to take his place during his absence, and that this Comforter takes of the things of Christ and shows them unto us, leads into all truth and shows us things to come. But Jesus also told us that he should return to earth again to settle up all matters of government and jurisprudence, and become himself the governor of all the earth. To this end was he born and for this purpose came he into the world. We will now close this epistle by asking, Who will be saved when Jesus appears? Those who overcome shall inherit all things, and be sons and daughters of God. Rev. 21: 7. But who are those that will be lost? Those characters spoken of in Rev. chap. 21st, 8th verse.

Dear reader, to which of these parties do you belong? Are you one of the overcomers that shall inherit eternal life? or are you drifting down the stream with worldly people and loving unrighteousness, and going with the multitude to do evil, and rolling sin as a sweet morsel under your tongue? It is the narrow way that leads unto life. The broad way leads unto death. Only a few travel the narrow way, but many, very many travel the broad way. "Be wise today and kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and ye perish when his wrath is kindled but a little." Psalms 2: 12.

PAUL'S CONFESSION AND HOPE.

O. L. GILLESPIE.

"But this I confess unto thee, that after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and the prophets. And have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust."—Acts 24: 14, 15.

One important feature in the above text is the fact that Paul is the only party who is confessing hope in the resurrection of the dead, "both of the just and the unjust." The clause, "which they themselves allow," has no connection with the resurrection at all. "They themselves" are the Jews who brought a charge of heresy against Paul for preaching the resurrection of the dead.

The Jews were divided into two sects—Pharisees and Sadducees. And by referring to Acts 23: 6-9, we find that Paul was a "Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee;" and when he had so declared, there was a division among the Jews, for the Pharisees believe in the resurrection of the just; but the Sadducees believe in no resurrection, neither angel nor spirit. They utterly ignore any resurrection at all. So, then, neither sect of the Jews could allow what they did not believe, namely: the "resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust." But they did allow something, and something which they believed. And what was it?

When Paul stood up in the council before Felix and King Agrippa, and confessed his hope according to the "promise made of God to our fathers," and reasoned out of the "law and the prophets," establishing his hope in the resurrection of the dead, he asked the question, "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?" This reasoning confounded the Sadducees and made them mad; and being grieved that the Pharisees found "no evil" in Paul, and would not accuse him of "heresy," they "bound themselves together, over forty of them, under a curse, saying, that they would neither eat nor drink till they had killed Paul."

The Pharisees find "no evil" in Paul for preaching the resurrection of the dead, for they believe in the resurrection of the just; hence the charge of "heresy" must come from the Sadducees; for if the Pharisees found no evil in his teaching, they certainly do not accuse him of "heresy;" and Paul says, "after the way which they call heresy, who are they?" Those that accuse him of heresy, the Sadducees. What do they accuse him of heresy for? Why, for preaching through Jesus, the resurrection of the dead; something that they do not believe. Hence says Paul, "After the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers; and have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow."

Now if we can find out what it is that is "allowed," the text will be very plain in its teaching. For convenience, we will put the clause, "which they themselves also allow," in parenthesis; then we approach the true meaning. "And have hope toward God (which they themselves also allow) that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust." And to make the sense of the text more apparent, without doing it any violence whatever, we will leave out that clause, and it will read as follows, which is in harmony with all the apostles, as well as our Savior's teaching: "But this I confess unto thee, that after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets; and have hope toward God, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust."

Thus we find that the "confession and hope" in the text is Paul's exclusively. And for this confession and hope he is charged with heresy, and that by the Sadducees, who do not believe in any resurrection at all. Therefore, it is not the resurrection which they "allow," but rather that they with Paul "have hope toward God," which hope Paul says they "allow." Now their hope "toward God" obtains from their position as Jews, having Abraham for their father, as well as the "law and the prophets," of which they are very tenacious; so much so, that they are self-exalted and so high-minded that they overlook the teaching of the humble Jews and the resurrection. And so they stumble.

Paul obtains his hope by believing all things "which are written in the law and in the prophets;" and as he reasons of righteousness, temperance, and a judgment to come, Felix trembles. In the presence of the governor he denies the charges, saying, "Neither can they prove the things whereof they now accuse me." But this I confess unto thee, that after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets; and have hope toward God (which they themselves also allow) that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust."

THE GREAT MISSION FIELD.

PHILO HITCHCOCK.

We send our teachers to the foreign lands where the people sit in darkness, hoping to elevate some to a knowledge of their true condition, thence to a knowledge of sins forgiven. We do not expect to benefit all, much less to save all. Probably the masses who hear the message we carry will reject it; some will not listen at all. But we go amid tears, toil and danger, go gladly, fearlessly, that we may comfort the few who feel their lost condition, knowing that some will be saved, and the rest made no worse by our visit to them, even though they scorn our proffered help.

The greatest mission "field is the world." God from the throne saw this world in its wretchedness, want and woe. His ever compassionate heart was touched with a feeling of our infirmities. None could work the mission field but his only begotten Son. He assisted in creation, why not in redemption? He lays off the garments of living light, and puts on the robes of poverty and shame. He leaves the companionship of the immaculate ones in heaven, and mingles with the society of earth's fallen sons. He passes his time on earth in sorrow, tears and poverty. From the cradle in Bethlehem to his death on the cross, his enemies clamored for his life. They could not take it away; they did not. He laid it down himself in their behalf. What object in all of this? As Teacher, the majority rejected his message. As the great Physician, they despised his helping hand. They still scorn his gracious mercy and refuse to accept his unfeigned love. Will it pay? Thousands on thousands will be no better off in eternity than as though he had never come. Will it pay?

God, who "sees the end from the beginning," answers, yes, and sends his Son. Angels who escort him to earth, answer, yes, "there is joy in heaven over one sinner that repenteth." Christ from the manger and from the cross, answers, yes. And from the shining plains of earth regenerated shall come the music of redeemed souls, who were once in the bondage of sin, in the darkness of death, exclaiming: "Thou art worthy, for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood." These jewels of his purchase are his reward. These are the spoils he has won in battle. He sees them wearing crowns of never-fading beauty. This rewards him for wearing the crown of thorns. "I lay down my life for the sheep," and "I give unto them eternal life."

But where are the rest? those who took no interest in his great mission work? We answer, Just where he found them. No better, no worse. They would not come to him that they might have life, therefore they must die. If one in ten thousand or a million are saved, it will pay. The rest are made no worse, these are made infinitely and eternally happier. "O that men would praise the Lord for his goodness and wonderful works to the children of men."

WORLDLY-MINDEDNESS.

The popular standard for a christian life sadly needs, at the present day, a most thorough revision. While there are a few in nearly all of our churches who seem to be persistently striving for a higher type of christian experience and christian activity, it cannot be denied that there are many who, if we may judge by external signs, are mostly engaged in the hopeless task of serving two masters. They desire to stand well in the church, and do many things to promote its temporal interests and worldly popularity; yet they cling to the world, its maxims and allurements, with deathless tenacity. With one hand they are quite willing to aid in building up and adorning the exterior, while with the other they make sad havoc of all that is within. They love to be identified with a popular church, or a popular minister, and to keep up a kind of sentimental, Sabbath-day religion, apparently as destitute of spiritual fruitage as that of simple Deism. The fear of losing caste with the world makes them so exceedingly conservative in that direction, that they lose sight of the great work for which the church itself was instituted. The most prominent text exhibited in their moral phylacteries is that notable and fatally interpreted one which reads, "Be not righteous overmuch; neither make thyself overmuch wise; why shouldst thou destroy thyself?" Why should they lose the friendship and pleasures of the world? In all revival work, such men are always pulling backwards. They may have deceived themselves into a belief that, as to such matters, they have become wiser than were the apostles and early christians. But the real fact is, that they are not willing to have it said of them, "Ye are not of the world"—"I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." They want to go to heaven when they die; but they desire to take their worldly pleasures with them.

In the jostlings and rivalries of social life, as well as in business pursuits, people of the world resort without a blush to maxims of duplicity and deceit utterly inconsistent with the inspired mandate, "Speak every man truth to his neighbor." They ignore the emphatic declaration of Holy Writ that the man who deceiveth his neighbor, is like "a madman who casteth firebrands, arrows and death." Are not many church members closely imitating them? They profess a religion which requires absolute sincerity in every word and deed; and yet do they not, in their every day life, following the custom of the world, put forth many pretensions and excuses which are entirely foreign to truth. How many obnoxious social visits and neighborly calls are parried by the fiction of being engaged, sugared over by false assurances of right and friendly consideration?

In the rivalries of social life, how much is there of flattery and false praise of some, and of equally groundless censure of others? Both the church and the world are full of idle, needless, unfriendly and slanderous gossip and tale-bearing. Very few in our churches have largely cultivated that noble charity "that thinketh no evil." Tale-bearing has become, in many churches, a moral nuisance. To it is to be chiefly attributed all the heart-burnings and jealousies which so effectually paralyze all church work. Not only so; the influence and usefulness of many a devout christian worker has by such means been completely undermined and destroyed. Yet it is written, "Thou shalt not go up and down as a tale-bearer among thy people;" and again, "Where there is no tale-bearer the strife ceaseth." This habit in the church, as in the world, springs from inordinate self-love and personal vanity. It is born of the world and must perish with it.

Another characteristic of the world consists in its love of social distinctions, and in its practical repudiation of the doctrines growing out of the fact of a universal brotherhood. The spirit of social caste has been developed in India more fully, perhaps, than in any other part of the world. But it is not by any means confined to the land of the Veda. It has been and still is the curse of Europe;; and it is fast gaining ground in republican America. In India it is the outgrowth of their so-called religion. Not so in Europe, or America. It is the outgrowth in Europe of ancestral pride. But in America it is the natural outgrowth of an overwrought worldly ambition founded in personal pride and vanity. It is not the custom in American society to grade men and families by the rule of merit. Wealth, and the probability of popular influence, are the most available passports to a high social distinction. Personal merit, without one or the other of these passports, must look on at a distance. Vice itself, if properly smoothed over by the possession of wealth or influence, may find the door to the genteel society of the worldly wide open, and receive a hearty welcome. But the unlucky wight who has neither the one nor the other, however bright his intelligence, or pure his character, will find the door shut and strongly barred against him. Yet it has become almost a universal passion among Americans to attempt to climb the social ladder to its topmost round. Hence the universal greed for wealth and office.

The interests of a future life have little charm for social aspirants, whether in or out of the church. Their motto seems to be, "Let us live while we live," for—not to-morrow, but at some very distant period, we must die. It is the present that claims their choice, and not the future.

That this same spirit prevails in our churches to a wide extent, no one can deny. Very many of our churches are divided into small social cliques, whose fraternal sympathies rarely extend beyond their respective members. To the rest of the brethren and sisters they are as strangers. We once knew two professedly christian ladies, belonging to different sects, who worshiped in their common sanctuary fifteen years, sitting all that time in adjoining slips, without ever bestowing upon each other even a nod of recognition. They were nearly of equal culture, and not distant neighbors. But one was the wife of a dealer in money, and the other the wife of a prosperous grocer. They had never spoken to each other during all that time. How much did they know or care for each other's spiritual needs? How much aid did they afford each other in the pathway of life? But this spirit is not confined to our women. It is equally rife in the sterner sex.

In a young and enterprising church, not a thousand miles distant, are two brethren who reside and are housekeepers in the same neighborhood. One is a prosperous merchant, and the other a salaried and highly trusted clerk. On one occasion the merchant was kindly requested to pay some little brotherly attentions to the one who is only a clerk, for the reason that he was beginning to feel that he was not a welcome guest even in the church. The reply was in substance this: "I suppose he thinks I ought to invite him to my house. He has no right to think so, and ought not to expect it." When these brethren get to heaven, and they both expect to go there, if the clerk, as may happen, should be called to an upper seat, and the merchant to a lower one, would he not blush for shame at the remembrance of his petty worldliness and folly?

This spirit often exhibits itself in another form. Men, and even christian men, love to be called, and to call each other, "Rabbi." In looking over the journal of a late ecclesiastical judicature we found upon its roll fifty-three "Doctors of Divinity," seven "Doctors of Law," and fifteen "Honorables," each of whom had affixed to his name, in glowing capitals, the initial letters of his title; and as these men were conspicuous leaders, the entire minutes literally groaned under the burden of titular appendages. For a people professing obedience to the divine command, "Be ye not called 'Rabbi,'" this exhibition, to say the least, was not in very good taste. It was too strongly impregnated with the idea of caste.

We once attended a general prayer meeting, in which the pastor seemed to be governed by a similar spirit. He called successively upon four of his brethren to lead in prayer, addressing each by his popular title of "Judge." After the Judges had all prayed, he called out, "General B., will you pray?" and after the General had finished, he called upon simple "Bro. C." We were strongly tempted to ask this pastor, who was himself a conspicuous D. D., whether he expected to add any weight to these prayers in the court of heaven by telling the Lord that four of them were offered by veritable judges, and the fifth by a General of militia. It may be supposed by some that the mention of these incidents is prompted by envy or jealousy. Not so; for we ourselves have been compelled to submit to an addendum of a much coveted affix. But the fact is, this "daubing each other," in republican and christian America with such "untempered mortar," has become absolutely nauseous; and we are happy to add that no church of the Evangelical Association is responsible for any of the incidents above cited.

That these things are utterly repugnant to a pure christianity needs no proof. Of the Scribes and Pharisees it was said, "They love the uppermost rooms at feasts, and the chief seats in the synagogues, and greetings in the markets, and to be called of men 'Rabbi, Rabbi.'" It was then added, "But be not ye called Rabbi; for one is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren."—Evangelical Messenger.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT.

VIEWS THEREON BY THE REV. DR. RAYMOND.

The Rev. Dr. Raymond, Professor of Systematic theology in the Garrett Biblical Institute at Evanston, having been of late rather severely criticised for alleged heresy on the doctrine of future punishment, deemed it advisable to make a statement to the Rock River Conference, which he did on Saturday, Oct. 14th, at the close of the session. The doctor rose to a question of privilege, and said:

Mr. President:—Several brethren have this morning said to me that, in their judgment, the reports in circulation respecting the instruction given in our Theological Seminary on the doctrine of future punishment required that I should make some statements on the subject, and I have risen to do so. For myself, I have too many gray hairs to be looking after my reputation. So far as I am personally concerned, I hold the whole matter in perfect contempt. But as these brethren, whose judgment I am bound to respect, think that the interests of our Theological School, and, through it, the interests of the Church, require this service at my hands, I consent to it.

I am not a Universalist, I am not an Annihilationist, I am not a Restorationist. I believe sin incurs an infinite peril, and that salvation is made possible only by an infinite remedy. . . .

It is natural to ask, "From what fire comes all this smoke?" "What has been said or done that gives occasion for these reports?" I answer: At the theological Union of last year, Bro. Axtell read what impressed me as a very excellent paper on the doctrine of future punishment. As it seemed to me, the paper evinced much thought on the subject. After the reading, the Chairman called for criticisms and discussions. Because no one else responded, simply to keep matters moving, I rose and proposed to the author of the paper a question, which I thought would lead to a discussion of the subject on its most vital issue. I said, "Postulating that all created existences are kept in being by the constant exercise of God's preserving power, what motive do you think of as probably influencing the Divine Mind to exert his power to keep in existence beings to whom existence has become a curse?" Not to detail what followed in the discussion, it became manifest that some brethren present inferred that the man who could ask such a question was not sound in the faith. Is that inference logical? A man might propose the question as an objection to the doctrine, and he might proprose it to invite an investigation of the strongest objections possible, because of his confidence that those objections could be answered, and of his belief that they ought to be. But, by the way, as to the man who is afraid to have such a question. What about him? Can his fear have any foundation but in the weakness of his faith? If the man who asks the question is a heretic, what is he who is annoyed by the asking?

Again, on the question of Theodicy—entirely apart from all questions of Eschatology the question, How can the existence of evil be reconciled with the goodness of God? I have been accustomed to propose the question to myself on this wise: Suppose I conceive of God as proposing to create an intelligent, sentient being, who should be a companion for himself through the eternal ages. Could God gain the consent of his own mind to bring such a being into existence if he foresaw that to the being to be created existence would be a curse? And my answer is: He could not,—that is, as I think it, any existence that infinite goodness will permit must be better than non-existence. I have never stated this as the doctrine of any church, but simply as the way I am compelled to think on that difficult question. And now, if any one wishes to take my head for so thinking, and has the power to do so, I must consent to be headless, for I cannot think otherwise. However, before I am beheaded I submit that my thinking is in the interests not of a tolerable hell, but of a tolerable God.

Again, at the last Union I said something about "a burden," which saying has been the subject of considerable comment. What phraseology was used I cannot say, as the remark was wholly impromptu, and was incidentally made in the discussion of another topic. My thought was, and is, that the idea of eternal torment is the burden of religious thought; in the sense that it is the most tremendous idea known to consciousness, and the most difficult to realize in thought and feeling; and I say here that if to any one it is not so, I pity the man's intelligence or his sensibility. I have oftentimes said, and have so written it in my forthcoming book, that it is competent to think of God as making hell not as terrible, but as tolerable, as possible. If God punishes sinners, it is because he must. He is vindicatory, but not vindictive. He is a righteous being, and a righteous sovereign, but he is not a malicious murderer. —Chicago Tribune.

GOD IS LIGHT.

FRANCES PLUMMER.

"That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us; and truly our fellowship is with the Father and with his Son Jesus Christ."

All that are living in the dispensation of the blood of Jesus, have an advocate that can cleanse us from all sins, unless we sin willfully. He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins if we confess them. God is light, and in him is no darkness, and if we have the fellowship of the Father and Son we are children of light.

Let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light. Let us take the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God. This is the armor of God, and if we wear it we shall be kept from all of the evil influences that surround us in these last days. The entrance of God's words giveth light. Let us live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God, that our light may grow brighter and brighter unto the perfect day. Let us rejoice in the highness of our God.

An elevated purpose is a good and ennobling thing, but we cannot begin at the top of it. We must work up to it by the often difficult path of daily duty—of daily duty always carefully performed.

SMILES OF GOD.

We love to share the smiles of our friends. How they cheer and brighten our pathway! They infuse indeed into our hearts a wondrous joy, and seem to inspire us with new life. How much of real sunshine and heart felt joy do the smiles of those we love beget within us! They cause our whole horizon of life to become more luminous, as if some new sun had arisen in our skies. Smiles scatter many dark shadows from our pilgrim way and set the bright bow of promise arching over all our heavens.

But the smiles of the Lord are infinitely more cheering and glorious than those of any earthly friend. They transcend by far the smiles of those we most tenderly and dearly love. They scatter, by their illuminating rays, the last shadow from our moral heavens, and cause within our souls the glorious day of God! The smiles of our great sympathizing High Priest are benignant and life-giving indeed! How in this vale of tears, amid griefs, numerous trials, hardships and loss, should we be hopeful and happy without these approving evidences of the divine favor? For "His favor is better than life." How greatly it brightens our darkest days, cheers our poor, sinking hearts, lightens our burdens, animates our footsteps, and beckons us on to the better land of glory! Then let us ever seek and enjoy "The smiles of the Lord, as the feast of the soul."—Christian Advocate.

IS IT SO?

H. PRATT.

Are the winds being let loose? Is the Euphrates drying up? Has the conflict of ages begun? Is the Master about to rise up and shut to the door? O Christ of God, come for thy weary bride! Write the vision and make it plain, for at the end it shall speak." It is speaking now.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 11th. The general impression here is that Russia is on the eve of the long looked for struggle with Turkey. Roumani's Railroad Companies have bound themselves to transport four thousand troops daily for Russia."

London, Oct. 17th. The Pall Mall Gazette contends that Russia is actually at war with Turkey."

The correspondent of the Times at Belgrade says, "Every diplomatic agent here believes that we are on the eve of a great Eastern war." Russia says to the Powers, that "in the interest of humanity she feels bound to march troops into Bulgaria and Armenia," and Austria consents. Italy favors the Russian policy. What will sinners do in that day?

"Trim your feeble lamp, my brother,
Some poor sinner, tempest tost,
Trying now to make the harbor,
In the darkness may be lost.
Let the lower lights be burning,
Send a gleam across the wave;
Some poor fainting, struggling seaman,
You may rescue, you may save."

Servants of God, let the message sound out in the highways and hedges, that his house may be filled.

HINTS FOR THE PRAYER MEETING.

Go from a place of prayer to the place of prayer. Visit the place "where prayer is wont to be made," in the spirit of humble, earnest supplication. Expect to meet your Savior there. Go to the prayer meeting as a contributer. Carry your offerings with you. Be a doer as well as a hearer of the Word. Bring gifts. Think sometimes of this: what would the prayer meeting be if every one did just as I do? Count prayer meeting service a privilege instead of a duty. Be punctual at the hour set apart for the meeting. Punctuality is a virtue. In this little thing show interest. Be sure that the singing is earnest, animated, appropriate and hearty. Observe the time. Make melody. "Sing with the Spirit." There is wonderful power in music. Do not kill the meeting with dismal, minor-keyed dirges. Windham is good, but a prayer meeting is not a funeral. Good singing has very much to do with the interest of the prayer meeting, and so emphatically has poor singing. In praying and speaking, observe religiously these three things, viz.: point, brevity and earnestness. Do not scatter. Catch the key-note of the meeting, and hold on to it. Follow out the line of thought presented by the leader. Make a point. Be brief. Avoid prolixity. Shun details. Do not glory in the grace of continuance. Blessed is the man that does not "enlarge."—Contributer.

Prayer.—Prayer is simply the "offering of our desires to God for things agreeable to his will, with confession of sins and acknowledgment of mercies. The heavenly Father wishes to hold family intercourse with his beloved children, and he promises to hear our confessions when we have gone astray, our thanks when we receive gifts, and our requests when we have wants. He is never so engrossed in the affairs of the universe but that he can sympathize in our sorrows, our joys and our wants.—Christian Observer.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 1094. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1876. VOL. XLIV.—NO. 3.

The World's Crisis, AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,

Issued every Wednesday Afternoon, by the ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, At No. 144 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE: H. V. DAVIS, A. W. SIBLEY, E. A. STOCKMAN, H. K. FLAGG, H. K. CHOATE.

THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

THE HOUR AND THE WORK.

It is night in the shady valleys,
The plains are in darkness still;
But the purple tints of morning
Are tipping each mount and hill.
Rejoice! ye patient watchers,
For the day is coming at last;
But yet there's an hour of trouble
Ere the night is wholly past.

For the hatred of ages has fruited,
And the rivals are stern and strong;
'Tis the conflict of truth and falsehood,
The crisis of right and wrong.
The powers of darkness are massing
For one terrific field,
Ere night her ancient dominion
To the day eternal yield.

Hark to the stirring summons!
"Ye children of God, awake!
Ye champions of truth, be ready
Your place in the ranks to take!"
See how the squadrons muster!
List to the trumpet's blast!
'Tis the war of God Almighty,
Earth's deadliest, and her last.

Up, and at once to the conflict!
'Tis baseness to stand apart;
It is treason to wear the trappings,
And bear not a soldier's part;
The usurper is doomed to perish,
So prophets and sages say;
There is safety and honor in fighting
For the King shall win the day.

Rejoice! but with hearts in tension;
Rejoice! but with chastened mirth,
Like warriors to victory treading
A fire-scorched and blood-stained earth;
For the war will be stern and deadly,
And many a strong one fall,
Ere the armies of darkness perish,
And the sun has risen o'er all.

THE IMPORTANCE OF SACRED PROPHHECY.

D. T. TAYLOR.

The prophets were chosen of God, and their writings were inspired by him. Speaking as they were moved to speak by the Holy Spirit, they became the mouth-pieces of Deity, and we are solemnly warned by the great apostle not to despise their utterances. The prophecies constitute a very important part of the sacred Scriptures. Omit from the canon the sublime books of Isaiah, and Jeremiah, and Ezekiel, and Daniel, and John, and what a blank and loss! Were not all the main events that transpried among men when our Lord came on earth in the accomplishment of his mission of love, subjects of prophecy? We know his birth, the place of his birth, the manner of his death, his rising again, and a hundred other things were long before foretold by the Hebrew seers.

Prophecy is history in advance. It is the church's chart on her travel through this wilderness. It points her onward to the eternal home. It is the window through which she gazes into the holy city. It is also her weapon of defence against the sceptic and the Jew. The lamp of prophecy! how dark is time's path without it! How scanty indeed our knowledge of the grand mysterious future, unaided by the prophetic word. Are not Christ's coming again, with the resurrection, the translation, the judgment, and all concomitants and after-scenes, matters not only of promise but of prediction? Thus while nature's lamp burns dim, and science and philosophy seek in vain to penetrate the veil that hides the future from our yearning vision, prophecy is a "light" in man's dark world—a light that shines until the day dawn.—2 Pet. 1: 19. And just as a lantern lights all our way, so does prophecy illuminate our place, showing us where we are in the great chain of human events, telling the church about how far she has journeyed, and enabling her to know something of the length of the remaining path, and the nearness of the end.

It is not to their credit that in so many pulpits and religious papers prophetic expositions find no place, it having become a fashion to despise them. Every thing else in the Bible is talked of and written about save those portions that are prophetic. All other matters engage the pen of the popular writer, all subjects are discussed by the denominational editor, all texts chosen by the preacher save the prophetical. Prophecy's strict fulfillment to the letter is our Gibraltar against rampant infidelity, yet how seldom do christians enter into this fortress of strength. Why should editors, preachers, teachers, neglect the old prophecies? Was not the first discourse by the holy apostle Peter at Pentecost an exposition and application of prophecy? Acts 2. Was not Jesus a prophet indeed? Matt. 24. Did he not for our information foretell the course of this age even to its end?

The soundest, best men of the church in the past loved the sacred prophecies. Wickliff explained and applied them; Luther and Melanchthon studied Daniel and John; John Knox used to preach on the book of Daniel. So intensely earnest would he get, we are told by his biographer, that it seemed as if he would pound his pulpit to pieces and fly out of it. Sir Isaac Newton spent two whole years in close study of the prophecies of Daniel and of John. Bishop Newton was a standard sober expositor of the great prophecies. The brightest lights in England and on the Continent have delighted to read and explain them. One of Mr. Moody's best discourses is on Daniel, and includes an exposition of the prophecy in the second chapter. Dr. Stephen H. Tyng, called some years ago to give an address before a learned literary society, gave an exposition of the five universal monarchies of the earth, from the second and seventh chapters of Daniel. Bishop Henshaw did not despise them, but wrote a book on the sacred prophecies. We could name hundreds of others who have had interest in this mighty theme.

Brethren, suppose you try your hand a little at expositotory studies, and preach the prophecies. You need not be fanatical, nor dispute over dates, nor presume to know all times and seasons, whether hidden or revealed. But trim your lamp betimes, O preacher of God's Word! "All Scripture is profitable." Prophecy is not a dark lantern. It is a light that shines. Let it shine. "Light is sown for the righteous." Psa. 97: 11. Does it illumine your path touching the nearing marvels of the august day of the resurrection from the dead, and the solemn judgment to come?

At present prophecy seems rapidly and wonderfully fulfilling before our eyes. It seems to be almost becoming exhausted. Close students of the Bible and human events see and feel this. Would it not stir the church to greater zeal, larger benevolence, and intenser activity to make more and better use of this God-given light? She is walking in the "dark place," and certainly needs it. It is "night,"—yea more, it is "midnight." Rom. 13: 12; Matt, 25: 6. Who knows but there may be a mine of joy, a vein of knowledge, a tower of strength, and a new spur of consecration for the preacher in the direction I am inviting? Could you be made to see that the day of wrath for sinners impends, and the era of jubilee for saints draweth nigh, it might prove a fresh and mighty motive to holy action, and impart to your ministry a greater earnestness than you ever previously exhibited.

I confess I never rise from a perusal of the sublime predictions of Daniel and John without a feeling of awe. It seems as if I had been in contact with eternal verities. The great day looms up in faith's vision, and my spirit thrills with expectation and admiration. We are none of us more than half awake, and surely wisdom invites the use of every lawful method by which our watchfulness may be increased, our pace quickened, our love and zeal made stronger and our courage more unfaltering in the service of the good Master. "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets" (Amos 3: 7), while in every generation he has had his chosen ones who cried in the ears of an evil and unbelieving world, "This is that which was spoken by the prophet." Acts 2: 16. To be such an one is a high honor. To begin at Moses and all the prophets and expound them, is to be like the great Teacher. Luke 24: 27, 44.—The Armory.

THE POWER OF HIS RESURRECTION.

[The substance of an address given by Dr. Horatius Bonar, of Edinburgh, Scotland, before the Mildmay Conference, London, June 29th.]

"That I may know him and the power of his resurrection." Phil. 3: 10. This was the summing up of the apostle's longings; it ought at all times to be the summing up of ours. The Master, ere he left the earth, said, "Father, I will that they whom thou hast given me may be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory." That was the summing up of his longings for his church; it ought to be the summing up of our longings for ourselves; and it is for this that we gather together to-day—that we may behold his glory.

The knowledge here spoken of is a lifetime's, an eternity's knowledge. It is the knowledge of Christ crucified that justifies us, and it is the knowledge of Christ in the varied stages of his life, his character, and of his work, that we are to prosecute from day to day. These are the daily studies of the christian. But it is specially of the power of Christ's resurrection that the apostle here speaks. The power manifested in raising Christ from the dead is always spoken of as passing wonderful, but it is not that to which he here refers. It is the power proceeding from a risen Christ, the power deposited for the church in the hands of a risen Christ.

I fear we have too seldom considered the subject of power, as connected with the Christ of God. We generally associate power with God himself, the Creator, and forget how in Scripture, almost from first to last, power is associated with the Christ of God. We teach our children that it was God the Father who created all things. Does Scripture say so? "He hath created all things by Christ." "Without him was not anything made that was made." And as you pass on you find the power of the eternal Word, the the Son of God, all through Scripture. God has taken special pains to show that power is associated with his only begotten Son.

We find power connected with the whole life of Christ. We sometimes miss this in not noticing that the word translated "virtue" in the Gospels is literally "power." "There went virtue out of him and healed them all," means there went power out of him. His cross was the combined manifestation of weakness and power. "I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." Here is the irresistible, attractive power of the crucified One. In his grave we have power manifested. In his resurrection we have the first great and special manifestation of power; and hence the apostle thus connects power with the resurrection. As the risen Christ he is specially the depository of divine power.

For God's purpose from the beginning was to deposit the power of the Infinite Jehovah in the person of a man, and that man the Christ of God. So, when about to leave this earth, he used these words: "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth." On high it is still the power of the man Christ Jesus; he is seated on the throne, and from that throne he exhibits his power down here among the children of men. His intercession is the exhibition of his power as the risen Christ, and the whole of his present government of this world at the Father's right hand is an unfolding of his risen power in connection with the church, with the world, and with the Father's purpose and will. "Sit thou at my right hand until I make thine enemies thy footstool."

But it is hereafter that the fullest manifestation of his power is to be seen. When he cometh for his own, we shall then see his resurrection power exhibited in the resurrection of his church. . . . . . "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first," etc. There is the power of the risen Christ, and then shall be fulfilled the words, "I will ransom them from the power of the grave; oh death! I will be thy plagues; oh grave! I will be thy destruction."

Then shall we see the power of the risen Christ revealed in the overthrow of the man of sin, in whom concentrates the power of earth and hell, of science, of philosophy, and of all human error. He shall destroy the man of sin with the breath of his mouth and with the brightness of his coming. Then shall come to pass also what is written, "Death and hell were cast into the lake of fire." Thus shall the power of the risen Christ sweep away all the evil which has overflowed the earth for six thousand years. Then the voice of the risen Christ is heard, "Behold I make all things new." There shall be a new heaven and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness; and the deliverance of creation from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God, we shall owe to the power of the risen Christ, deposited in him first for the redemption of his church, then for the overthrow of his enemies, and ultimately for the renewal of this earth, over which Satan, as the great adversary, has had dominion these six thousand years. Then shall we know what the power of his resurrection is, and the power going forth from him who died, was buried, rose again, and who shall come in his own glory and in his Father's glory, and with all his mighty angels.

It is to this power that we are indebted for everything. We speak of his love, but we must not forget his power—not merely in connection with the future history of the world and the church, but in connection with their present history. Men of science speak of God; do they ever speak of Christ? We speak of men of science as atheists; some of them I mean—those who deny the existence of Him who created all things. We forget that there is another crime to be laid to their charge; they are deniers of the Christ of God. We speak of modern science as opposing God; it opposes Christ. And all the controversies which have arisen of late years in connection with science, are controversies in connection with the Christ of God. We have perhaps narrowed them to the one point of controversy in connection with the existence of God, but they are controversies in connection with the Christ of God, whom God hath made King and Lord, Ruler of all things in heaven and in earth. It is against him that not only the kings of the earth are fighting, but the philosophers are contending. And it is with regard to all those opposers of the Son that the second Psalm was written, and the gracious, loving message, "Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way when once his wrath is kindled but a little." For the wrath of the Lamb is the most terrible of all.

Our daily life is connected with this power of the risen Christ; our power for service, our spiritual life, our ability to contend against the innumerable foes within and without. It is to him that we flee in the day of temptation and conflict. We are to be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might. Have we used this power as we ought, for our own growth in holiness, for the quickening of our divine life? Have we used it in his service?

The time is coming when the universe shall recognize this power. As we read the twenty-ninth Psalm I felt myself, verse after verse, applying them to the Christ of God. His voice is that which is heard speaking there; it is the voice of Christ that shivers the cedar, that makes Lebanon bow, that makes the nation travail. It was the same voice that on earth said, "Come unto me, all that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." That voice shall be heard again. . . . . And at the last this shall be the song which they sing: "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ; and he shall reign forever and ever. Hallelujah, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth."

(Among the requests for prayer presented at the close of this address was one that God would overrule the events happening in the East for hastening the second coming of Christ.)—Messiah's Herald.

To love Christ and to abide in him, is the only way to bring forth much fruit. Does the branch of the vine find it difficult to bear sweet grapes? Is it necessary to compel it to do so by commanding and threatening? No, the whole process takes place quietly, easily and naturally.

"THIS GENERATION SHALL NOT PASS."

The connection in which these words of Christ are used makes it clearly apparent that they are designed to be impressed upon the mind of a certain generation with great emphasis. Matthew, Mark and Luke each record them as having been used in immediate connection, and associated with the signs—the immediate precursors of our Lord' second advent "in the clouds of heaven," to judge the world and establish his kingdom. Each of these evangelists record these words of Christ as immediately following "Verily I say unto you, this generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled;" and with those emphatic words, "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away."

There can be no doubt—and we think no one will question the point—that Christ referred to some particular generation. To suppose that a class or race of men were meant is inappropriate and inconsistent, if not absurd, in view of the point evidently designed to be impressed upon the mind. And to suppose that the generation living at the time he spoke the words were meant, would be no less inconsistent and absurd, in view of the general scope and intent of the prophecy.

That our Lord referred to the particular generation which should witness the signs of his coming is evident from his introducing the parable of the "fig tree," as a sign of approaching summer, to impress the point under consideration more deeply on the minds of those referred to. Now, if our Lord's great prophetic discourse, recorded in Matt. 24th, Mark 13th and Luke 21st, refers to his second coming "in the clouds of heaven," then he addresses, in those chapters, a generation particularly that should see certain specified signs in the heavens, and that they would not all "pass away" or die, till they should witness his own personal "coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory."

That the generation living in 1780, when the first in the series of the great preternatural signs occurred, namely, the darkening of the sun, is the one referred to there can be no reasonable doubt in view of the explicitness of the language employed in setting forth the sublime subject. Also that one hundred years is as long as the generation under consideration can. exist appears reasonable, in view of the fact that so very few of the human family ever live to that age. But if it is necessary that living witnesses should remain unto the coming of the Lord, who saw the first great sign in the heavens, then it would appear that in order for such witnesses to retain a distinct recollection of the event, their age at the time should be five years, at least. A very few are now alive who saw the darkening of the sun and moon in A. D. 1780; and the number every year grows less.

In view of the facts before us, the magnitude of which can hardly be overestimated, it is clearly established that the judgment of the great day is hanging over us; the awful curtain is about ready to drop, and the world to be arraigned before the awful tribunal of the Great Judge of the living and the dead. I do not see how it is possible for many months more to intervene before we witness the sublime, glorious, long looked for and ardently expected event, even "the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ. The great prophetic measurements, covering specified powers of earth, according to the evidence resulting from the closest scrutiny that human sagacity can apply to data, are nearly ended. Those who mean to be ready for the great decisive "moment" have no time to lose, but must awake immediately to a preparation to stand before the judgment seat of Christ.

The great specific proclamation of the angel-message has been sounded forth to the nations of the earth and to an unbelieving church for forty years, but has failed to arouse either to a sense of their danger and the awful doom awaiting them. But there is a remnant—the called out assembly—who have ears to hear the message, and with transports of joy are waiting the grand signal of their final and everlasting deliverance from this state of mortality, sin and death. And now as they behold "the beast and the false prophet" about to be overwhelmed in their final overthrow, and see the events now transpiring in the great agitation and conflict raging and extending, and that is yet to involve the whole world in the great "time of trouble," they rejoice to see these sure premonitions of the final deliverance of all whose names are "found written in the book." Gold takes a sudden rise, while stocks and securities go tumbling down. The great staples of life are seized in the great centres of trade throughout the world, by the merchants of earth, who are wild with excitement while receiving the glimpses of the awful conflict about to break forth in the East, and involve the whole world in the war of that great day of God Almighty. I tell you, my brethren, there can be no doubt that "the day of the Lord's vengeance" is about to break forth; the Lord says, "Come near, ye nations, to hear; and harken, ye people: let the earth hear, and all that is therein; the world, and all things that come forth of it. For the indignation of the Lord is upon all nations, and his fury upon all their armies: he hath utterly destroyed them, he hath delivered them to the slaughter. Their slain also shall be cast out, and their stink shall come up out of their carcases, and the mountains shall be melted with their blood. [As we understand it—the mountains around Jerusalem.] And all the host of heaven shall be dissolved, and the heavens shall be rolled together as a scroll: and all their host shall fall down, as the leaf falleth off from the vine, and as a falling fig from the fig tree. For my sword shall be bathed in heaven: behold, it shall come down upon Idumea, and upon the people of my curse, to judgment. The sword of the Lord is filled with blood, it is made fat with fatness, and with the blood of lambs and goats, with the fat of the kidneys of rams: for the Lord hath a sacrifice in Bozrah, and a great slaughter in the land of Idumea." Isa. 34: compare with Isa. 63: 1–5.

The "fifth" and "sixth" great woe trumpets have long since sounded in the scourges, or judgments of God on the apostate Papal Roman Empire, by the Saracenic and Turkish invasions and devastations; the same as the "king of the south pushing at him," and the king of the north coming "against him like a whirlwind." But these judgments of God failed to produce repentance in the Catholic nations of Europe. So God has left them for destruction, which is about to come upon them in the "third woe," he having taken out his people in the great protestant reformation. God's "holy hill of Zion," —the place of his "rest or habitation," the "throne of Jesus the great king"—is about to be justified. The sway of the Turk, and of the Gentile powers is about to be overthrown, and Jerusalem become the throne of the Lord. The one thousand three hundred and thirty-five and the two thousand three hundred years, reaching to the resurrection of the holy dead, and the justification of the "holy mountain of Jerusalem," are almost ended.

And now we behold "the king of the north," or Turkey, almost in her last death throes; the great final struggle that will end her existence already moving rapidly onward, despite the wailings of the London Times or the efforts of the Western Powers of Europe to stop it. Jehovah, our king, has the work in hand, and he can send all the iron clads of the English navy to the bottom of the Mediterranen Sea as easily as, by one angel, he could lay dead 185,000 soldiers of the king of Assyria in one night. Let no one dream that this great struggle in the East is going to stop in its onward march till God vindicates his own truth, those great predictions of his, so long sneered at by an ungodly church and an infidel world.

The tenor of the dispatches from Europe leave no room to doubt that the great northern powers of that continent, Russia, Germany and Austria, are in close alliance on the Eastern question. Therefore the barkings of England will not stop the progress of the fixed purpose and destiny of Russia in moving down on Byzantim, the capital of the Greek Roman Empire. Already she is concentrating her forces at the southern shores of the Black Sea and the Caucasus, with the co-operation of Persia. Thus Turkey is menanced from the East as well as from the north. An avalanche of military forces is being marshaled, both from the east and from the north, against her. These will cause her to "go forth with great fury," or literally, to go out with great heat, "to destroy and utterly to make away many;" that is, the great multitude that is being marshaled against her. But all to no purpose; her destiny is a fore-gone conclusion. She must "plant the tabernacle of her palace," or the tent of her camp, "between the seas in the glorious holy mountain" (Dan. 9: 16), and there come to her "end" with "none to help" her.

This is the destiny of the Turkish power drawn by the prophetic pencil more than twenty-three centuries ago. And the prophetic utterances have been so interpreted by the Greek church before, and the Protestant church since the great reformation. All have looked for the overthrow of the Turkish empire by the Russians. There is evident agreement in the prophetic outline in Dan. 11: 40–45, and Rev. 9: to Saracenic and Turkish history, in predictions of a great northern power, which in the last days would come down with a great multitude in a great and final conflict with this "king of the north," to end in the "holy land." To this great, grand result, not only prophecy points with unmistakable precision, but the signs of the times in the aspect of nations, particularly for the last century, have also pointed out this result, as all our statesmen and politicians declare. With what emphasis, then, should the words of Christ at the head of this article come home to our hearts.

THE BRIGHT SIDE.

Look on the bright side. It is the right side. The times may be hard, but it will make them no easier to wear a gloomy and sad countenance. It is sunshine and not the cloud that gives beauty to the flower. There is always before or around us that which should cheer and fill the heart with warmth and gladness. The sky is blue ten times where it is black once. You have troubles, it may be. So have others. None are free from them; and perhaps it is as well that none should be. They give sinew and tone to life, fortitude and courage to man. That would be a dull sea, and the sailor would never acquire skill where there was nothing to disturb its surface.

It is the duty of every one to extract all the happiness and enjoyment he can within and without him; and above all, he should look on the bright side. What though things do look a little dark? The lane will turn, and the night will end in broad day. In the long run, the great balance rights itself. What appears ill becomes well —that which appears wrong, right. Men are not made to hang down their heads or lips, and those who do, only show that they are departing from the paths of true common sense and right. There is more virtue in one sunbeam than in a whole hemisphere of clouds and gloom. Therefore, we repeat, look on the bright side. Cultivate all that is warm and genial—not the cold and repulsive, the dark and morose.—Arcana.

THOUGHTS ON MAN.

BY A BAPTIST.

Another objection which I have heard urged against the doctrine of the extinction of conscious being is, that it does away with the opportunity of appealing to man's fear of punishment, in order to induce him to accept the substitution of Christ. In answering this, I would simply appeal to their sense of propriety, and their observation of the general outworkings of human nature. In appealing to an individual's fear of punishment, as a motive to dissuade him from one course of conduct and induce him to adopt another, would there not be a better prospect of success if they described a punishment that commended itself to their intelligence, as growing out of the proper relation existing between God and man, as Father and child—one whose love is tender and long-suffering, and whose justice must be maintained inviolate, than there would be in describing a punishment that did not thus commend itself to their intelligence, but altogether beyond their comprehension as applicable to such relations? The adaptability of which, if our expostulators themselves were requested to explain, they could only do by saying, "Well, God is an infinite being, the Maker of all things, and has a right to do as he pleases with his creatures, without rendering any reason to them for his dealings with them. Would not such teaching have a tendency to impress the mind of the one you sought to influence by the idea of future punishment, that God was an arbitrary and powerful despot, rather than the kind and loving Father the entire Scriptures represent him to be?

The great scheme of redemption as revealed in the Word of God is the unfolding of God's great love for man, and in its nature is admirably adapted to beget a love in man for God and his government; and unless that love is begotten in him, there is no reason to believe that he will be benefitted by all that has been done. If a person thinks of getting to heaven because he is afraid of going to hell, is it not safe to conclude that he will be found with the foolish virgins when the Bridegrom comes?

Another question: Is love the legitimate fruit or offspring of fear? or, in other words, will a fear of God's justice lead to or produce love to him and his government? But, as before stated, if good results are to be expected from appealing to a person's fear of punishment, it appears to me that the prospect is much better when a punishment is described which is in keeping with the nature of the relations sustained between the parties concerned. If the death penalty of the law—construe it as you please—failed to influence man and keep him from transgressing when he was sinless, what results are to be expected from the same cause when "the heart of man is fully set in him to do evil"?

In Christ's first reply to the tempter, he says, "It is written [Deut. 8: 3], man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Does not the term "live" in that passage mean conscious being? Does he not teach that obedience to God's command is as necessary to that being as is food? And is not the conclusion that disobedience results in death, a legitimate one drawn from that language? In the 9th chapter of Deut. Moses, in addressing the people of Israel in reference to their passage over Jordan and possession of the promised land, after destroying its inhabitants, uses this language: "Understand therefore this day, that the Lord thy God is he which goeth over before thee. As a consuming fire he shall destroy them, and he shall bring them down before thy face; so shalt thou drive them out, and destroy them quickly, as the Lord hath said unto thee."

Was not the destruction of the Canaanites typical of the destruction of the finally impenitent? and were not the Israelites commanded to utterly destroy them? If their destruction was not typical of the destruction of the finally impenitent, why does the writer to the Hebrews in the 12th chapter, after contrasting the two covenants, and showing the superiority of the second over the first, and then of the danger of refusing "him that speaketh from heaven," close up both argument and warning by repeating the language of Moses, "for our [not your] God is a consuming fire."

Some of the class of persons who hold to the doctrine of eternal torment, and who tell us that death, or cessation of conscious being, under the circumstances described, is no punishment, but rather a favor, when the subject of the death punishment in human government is discussed, stoutly advocate its abolition, on the ground that it is inhuman in every respect, a relic of barbarism, and destitute of every element of christian civilization.

There is another class who cannot conceive of punishment only as it is represented by physical, as well as mental suffering; and yet they stand aghast at the thought of returning to the Jewish or Roman mode, as practiced in the day of Christ, and as inflicted on him; or even going back to the "blue" code of Connecticut, and introducing the whipping post. But when the principle is applied to the divine government, they can only see its propriety when inflicted on mortal being, until it reaches the outer rim of God's almightiness and infinity, both in severity and continuance. I marvel at such inconsistency, and yet, no doubt, the holders of such views regard them as jewels of immense value.

If the language in which the penalty of the law is stated,—if the figures used in Scripture to represent the execution of that penalty on the guilty,—if the particular instances in which the nature and principle of God's government of the race in this state of being, which I believe are generally acknowled to be typical of his government in the world to come, such as the destruction of the old world, and the salvation of Noah and his family; the total destruction of the cities of the plain and their inhabitants, except Lot and family; the salvation of his chosen people at the Red Sea, and the utter destruction of their enemies; their miraculous passage of the Jordan and not one of the chosen people swept into the Dead Sea, from which there was no visible outlet; and then the destruction of the Canaanites to make room for his chosen people;—if all these combined do not convey to the mind the utter and complete destruction of the finally impenitent, I am unable to conceive of any language, figure or type that God could use to convey that idea. And as our first parents did not believe God when he said "Ye shall surely die," but did believe the tempter when he said "Ye shall not surely die," neither has the practice of sin by their descendants for nearly six thousand years developed any new tendency in them to accept his word as final.

But you may, perhaps, be horrified with the thought that I am an annihilationist, which is not the fact. When man transgressed as the federal head of the race, if there had not been provision made for his redemption, justice could not have postponed the execution of the penalty for the violation of law in the least degree; consequently the race would have been entirely cut off and destroyed; or, if you please so to call it, annihilated; and in that case there could not have been a resurrection, "for as by man [the first Adam] came death, by man [Christ the second Adam] came also the resurrection;" so then the destruction of the incorrigible, for the purpose of moral purification, does not in any proper sense amount to annihilation.

In writing to the Galatians, Paul says, "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit, shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." When is reaping time? Is it not the other side of the resurrection? I answer yes. Now can the terms life and "corruption," and "life everlasting," by any possibility be construed to mean the same as to state existence itself, differing only in condition or circumstance? Do they not convey to our minds the idea of opposite states? Is it either Bible or reason to construe corruption to personify either unending existence or its conditions? Does it not rather personify unconsciousness?

When God took the descendants of Abraham from Egypt, through whom to make known to a lost race his plan of redemption, their intellectual status was low, and their ideas so crude that teaching by object lessons was a necessity. So he not only gave them the ceremonial, or typical law, but also incorporated the great principles of redemption in their political economy, as in the right of redemption, and the year of jubilee, with many others. In educating that people he used the terms life and death in the same connections, and in the same sense that he had used it in all communications with the race from Adam down to that time.

Under the Jewish Theocracy there were violations of law, the penalty for which was death; and in executing which, all the congregation were to take part in the stoning. Lev. 14: 14. Now when that congregation were engaged in executing an offender, did they regard themselves as occupying the same relation to the guilty party that Satan did to Job, when he had full liberty to torment him to his heart's content, but could not take his life? Or did they, as is the case at the present time, have a theological and a political definition for the term death, which were exactly antipodal in meaning? If they defined death politically as not to be, and theologically as unending existence in torment, how did they understand the prophet Ezekiel, when God required him to "say unto them, As I live saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that the wicked turn from his way and live. Turn ye, turn ye, from all your evil ways, for why will ye die, O house of Israel?"

Now if the above solemn asseveration made by God to man. was made by his existence, then it must apply to man's existence, for the term "live" in each member of the declaration must necessarily have the same meaning; so also if the term "live," as applied to man in the above passage, means the circumstance or condition of his being, and not of the being itself, then the asseveration made by God must have been made by his circumstance or condition, and not by his being. In that case, then, it would be proper to read the prophet as saying, "As I am happy, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the torment of the wicked; but that he turn from his way and be happy;" and yet I apprehend it is a long way to the scholar who would give it that translation, and vouch for the truth of its being a correct image of the original text; therefore, the only logical conclusion at which we can arrive is that God made the solemn declaration by his own existence, and in reference to man's existence; and as death is the opposite of life, the one must mean to be, or exist, and the other to cease to be, or exist.

It could not have reference to death in this world, which David calls "the shadow of death," for the reason that all classes pass through that shadow; the turning from evil ways not exonerating them from that journey.

WE seem to have done with the Word as it has passed through our ears; but the Word will never have done with us till it has judged us at the last day.

THE FOUR ANGELS AND FOUR WINDS.

(Concluded.)

"And after these things I saw four angels standing on the four corners of the earth, holding the four winds of the earth, that the wind should not blow on the earth, nor on the sea, nor on any tree. And I saw another angel ascending from the east, having the seal of the living God: and he cried with a loud voice to the four angels to whom it was given to hurt the earth and the sea, saying, Hurt not the earth, neither the sea, nor the trees, till we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads."—REV. 7: 1-3.

The two most grave and threatening questions, during this period, have been that of the rightful and admissible status of the Pope's authority at Rome, and the Sultan's at Constantinople. These questions are purely religious, involving the question of how much civil authority shall these functionaries be allowed to exercise over religious classes opposed to their established creeds.

As the discussion of these questions progresses, the antagonism increases, which constantly increases the war spirit, and requires more power to hold it from open collision. These circumstances are constantly increasing the probability that a great religious war is impending.

Germany has led, among the peace-makers, in holding in check the intolerant power of the Pope in the West, while Russia has stood in the front rank to oppose and hold the Sultan in the East. England and Austria have not been so established in opposition to the great apostasies, so far as curbing their power and stopping their overbearing intolerance, as Russia and Germany; therefore, their national interests and the sympathies of their subjects have caused them to vacillate more upon the issue of the great religious questions. England has about twice as many Mohammedan subjects in India as her home population. The subjects of Austria are strongly Catholic, therefore these nations fear exceedingly to be plunged into a religious war.

The last two years have more fully developed these things, and tested the relative strength of the contending forces, than anything which has preceded it. When the rebellion commenced in the little province of Herzegovina, there was a clear manifestation of the real religious antagonism destined to produce the last great battle; and the fact that it was seen to be a part of the explosive of a vast magazine which they had long feared, caused the well-posted, far-seeing statesmen to arouse with great earnestness, to stop the flames before they should reach the centre of the mine.

From a human stand-point it seemed as if those collossal empires would hush the rebellion to silence in a week. The crowned Heads met at Berlin, Ems, and other places, unusually often. The great Chancellors have also met in secret council, all for one object, viz: to devise some plan by which a threatened general war might be prevented.

These facts appear to us to correspond exactly with the divine interpretation of the symbols. The peace-making powers of these nations were never more severely taxed to hold the war elements from bursting into a terrific clash of arms than they have been the last year. All now agree in one conclusion, the rulers and political savants, that if the Great Powers do not succed immediately in establishing peace between the antagonistic religious classes, there must speedily occur a more general and destructive war than ever reddened the soil of earth with human gore. The nations were never before so prepared for swift and terrible destruction of property and life as now. The warring classes were never so filled with settled jealousy, revenge, and the determination to triumph over all opposition or perish, as now.

The classes to be held are Mohammedans and Christians. The first prophetic feature of the last war, or four winds destroying the earth, is a war between these two classes; and how could it be otherwise, seeing the Mohammedans were destined to tread down the Holy Land during the last centuries of the Christian age, where the last battle is to be fought? The Gentiles, last treading down the land, must be a party in the last battle fought upon its soil.

The Mohammedans in all countries number about 250,000,000, and every man of them, of suitable age, is under a solemn religious covenant to rally under the "green flag" whenever it is raised, signifying that their religion is threatened and must be defended. They are taught that in these "holy wars," when they fight to perpetuate or extend their religion, it is their sacred duty to destroy as much property and as many lives of both the combatants and non-combatants as possible. They are also taught that if they fall in the holy war they will enjoy superior glory in Paradise; and these sentiments produce in them great ferocity and boldness in battle, and great fear and consternation in the victims of their triumphs. They have been the fear and scourge of the Christian world for more than twelve hundred years, and will not die without a terrible storm, a bloody cyclone, such as earth has never experienced.

The other great prophetic class are Christians. These, of all churches and nations, are a little more numerous than the Mohammedans, but lack in harmony. They are divided into three general classes—Roman Catholics, Greek Catholics and Protestants.

Of the four angels, Russia represents and defends the Greek Catholics and Germany the Protestants; while the Roman Catholics have no imperial Roman representative. The Roman woman is a widow, having no husband. The Pope religiously represents about 175,000,000, the Czar 125,000,000, and the Protestants 100,000,000. If the Christians were all united in the anticipated struggle, they would be much stronger than the Mohammedans; but they are sadly divided. The Roman Catholics are evidently inclining to the Turkish side in the present struggle, for there are no classes they hate so much as the Christians who do not agree with them.

The English nation is far from being a unit; the present government feeling compelled, from national interests and former pledges, to advocate the continuance of the Turkish government at Constantinople, while a large majority of the people desire the removal or extermination of that government.

All the European governments, in a religious war, would be greatly weakened by dissentions in their own ranks, excepting Russia, which is more nearly than any other a unit.

These facts, with many more of the same kind, produce one of the most unmanagable snarls in human associations ever witnessed by man. All of this is directly involved in the settlement of the "Eastern Question." That question involves antagonistic interests connected with all these religious classes, and its settlement directly tends to produce war in the four quarters of the world.

Such disturbing influences have produced nearly all the wars in the Old World for the last hundred years. Every additional outbreak has increased the difficulty, and produced a greater strain upon the Great Powers to control the combative elements.

The present emergency has far exceeded any other, and it has now become very doubtful if the four nations will be able to hold the "winds" any longer. If they do not, and the Great Powers, instead of holdback, as they are now doing, should attempt to settle the "Eastern Question" by the arbitration of the sword, then we should be compelled to believe that the "four winds" were blowing, and the last great battle had commenced.

The subject from the prophetic stand-point is awfully grand and impressive. Mighty classes of our race are becoming angry, and fearful preparations for slaughter are made, and the hearts of kings and their counselors quake with fear of approaching tempests.

Surely the divine index points to dark and bloody scenes for our fallen world. If these interpretations and applications of symbols are correct, it follows that the sealing angel has commenced and nearly finished his ecclesiastical work in the church.

THE SEALING ANGEL AND HIS WORK.

The fifth or sealing angel in the text must represent an ecclesiastical, human, agency; for the work is gospel work, affecting the members of Christ's Church. It evidently represents the same class as the angel publishing the gospel in the fourteenth chapter of Revelations. Each of these symbols clearly illustrate an agency which will be active upon the stage at the ending of the gospel and commencement of the judgment. They must represent a class of Christ's servants, preaching the last special message of gospel truth to the last generation. The chronology and nature of their work is proof of this.

THE SEALING.

To seal is to make safe, secure; to put beyond doubt or question. The sealing of the Spirit is to produce confidence, assurance of acceptance with God, a witness that Christ saves. The sealing in this case is something specific, to be received by God's servants subsequently to the general sealing of the Spirit. Mr. Barnes explains it thus: "What this (sealing) would be, whether a profession, or form of religion, or the holding of some doctrine, or the manifestation of a particular spirit, is not here designated; the design of sealing the persons referred to seems to have been to SECURE their SAFETY in the impending calamities. Thus the winds were held back until those who were to be sealed could be designated, and then they were to be allowed to sweep over the earth."

This learned Commentator has very forcibly expressed the sense of the symbols. The four angels would "hold in check calamities;" "armies," "not allowed to proceed for a time;" that is, war would be postponed, and while this work would be progressing, God's servants would manifest some specific characteristics of "profession," "doctrine," or "spirit."

If these ideas are correct, we should expect to find in the Scriptures a description of the profession, doctrine or spirit, necessary to secure the seal exempting God's people from the calamities of the last great battle, and a special developement of them during this prophetic period.

If we can find any parallel cases in the past history of the church, in which there was the same developement, securing a class from impending judgements, and those cases declared to be examples of this, we shall certainly find in them the exhibitions of the profession, doctrine or spirit required for the protection offered.

The foretold judgments of the flood and the burning of Sodom are stated by Christ to be parallel cases, and the very principle under consideration is the one he specifies in the parallelism. In both cases he presents two classes; one delivered from the approaching calamities, the other destroyed by them. Noah and Lot were sealed, or made safe, by a "profession" of faith in the prophetic announcement that destructive judgments were at hand. They secured their safety by believing and proclaiming the "doctrine" of a speedily coming flood and a firey doom. They accepted and were led by a spirit which led them into truth—present dispensational truth—and caused them to to make special preparation for events anticipated.

Christ said of the unsealed ones who were destroyed, that they "knew not until the flood came and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. Then shall two be in the field; the one shall be taken, and the other left." Matt. 29: 39, 40.

The case is distinctly stated. When the last battle is fought and Christ comes, two men (representatives of the two classes) will be in the field; one will be taken (caught up into a place of safety) and the other left to perish. They will be like men at the flood; those who "knew not" that the flood was coming secured no place of safety, and were destroyed; while those who did "know" secured their safety, or sealing, and were protected.

Noah and Lot were sealed, or made safe, by receiving and obeying the prophetic "doctrine" of approaching judgments. So it will be, according to Christ's testimony, when the four winds blow or the last judgment comes. It appears certain, therefore, that the sealing angel's work will be to proclaim a prophetic judgment message, offering to men a knowledge of the truth that the four winds are about to blow, devastating the earth with a terrible war.

Is such a message now being proclaimed, while the nations are making unparalled efforts to hold in check a threatened war? For half a century such a proclamation has been sounding in the four quarters of the earth, teaching the doctrine of Christ's speedy coming, and the bloody scenes of the last great battle.

This solemn message, we devoutly believe, flows from the fountain of inspired truth, and is echoed to the world by men of all theological schools, castes and classes, and received by the most devout of all denominations. It is the sealing doctrine of the age; and men, who look upon it as unworthy of their study or scoff at its thrilling announcements, peril their safety in the day of coming wrath.

This is truly "an age on ages telling." The mighty past pours the virus of the wicked generations down at our feet. The curse is intensified and concentrated here. The reserved forces of evil are sweeping over the field with deadly fury. Satan howls like a caged lion, as the appointed hour of his execution approaches. The converging rays of sacred truth fall upon a focal point before our eyes. The grey dawn of the last Jubilee morning is brightening to a heavenly day. Here is where hope and fear join hands; for as the increasing sounds of roaring tempests excite our fears, the swelling note of speedy deliverance thrills the devout heart with heavenly joy. The morning and evening have truly met, for the sun of earthly glory is setting, while the orb of eternal day is rising.

O hour of sublimities and period of destiny! How feeble is human thought when attempting to comprehend the events before us!

THAT "HISTORY."

What history? History of the "Advent Message." The subject narrated is more interesting and important to our world and race than anyone recorded by human pen, or spoken by angel tongues. To us, as a christian people, it is the alpha and omega in our faith and hope; the redemption of a holy race and the restitution of a fallen world.

We profess to believe that God has called us to make the proclamation of this message a specialty in our christian work, in harmony with thousands associated with other denominations, and if the work is of God, a faithful record of the doctrines promulgated, the messengers advocating them, the proofs adduced to sustain them, and the general characteristics of the movement, should be very interesting to every lover of Christ's appearing.

The only historic work devoted to this great subject is the "History of the Advent Message," by I. C. Wellcome. The more we read this book and contemplate the subject and facts narrated, the more we are impressed with its importance to keep in memory the surviving gray-haired veterans of the cause, their holy calling and vivid experiences in the sacred work, and to teach our younger brethren the deep wrought convictions of their fathers and mothers upon the sacredness of this specific message. A copy of the work should be put in the hand of every minister of the gospel and teacher of theology who has a heart to read it. We can most heartily commend it to the prayerful perusal of all christian people. See advertisements. ED.

WAR NEWS.

The news from the Eastern War has been very interesting during the last week. A great battle has been fought, in which the Servians were badly defeated and driven from some of their strong fortifications which were taken by the Turks. This news aroused Russia's ire, and caused the Czar to notify the Porte that if he did not agree to an armistice of two months and a cessation of hostiiities in forty-eight hours, diplomatic relations between the governments would be broken. The armistice has been signed, and hostilities have ceased. An effort is now being made to hold a Conference of the Great Powers, at which a last and final effort will be made to settle the question of the present difficulties, ending the war and establishing peace.

This is clearly a mighty struggle by the four angels to hold the four winds. If they succeed in stopping this war and establishing conditions of future peace, then the church will have to wait a little longer for the return of her Lord; but if they cannot do that, we shall look with great confidence for the last battle, and the glorious triumph of God's people.

The few coming weeks will be a time of the most wonderful suspense we have ever seen.

THE PROSPECT.

If time is continued a few years the following will show what may be expected:

ROMANISM EXAMINED.

The New York Tablet (Romanist) of July, 1867, has this view of religious liberty: "No self appointed missionaries of self-created societies have any rights against the national religion of any country, and no claim even to toleration. The Catholic missionary has the right to freedom because he goes forth clothed with the authority of God, and because he is sent by authority that he has from God the right to send him. They (the Protestants) have as Protestants no authority in religion, and count for nothing in the church of God. They have from God no right of propagandism, and religious liberty is in no sense violated when the national authority, Catholic or Pagan, closes their mouths and their places of holding forth."

Bishop O'Connor, of Pittsburgh, said: "Religious liberty is merely endured until the opposite can be carried into effect without peril to the Catholic world." The Archbishop of St. Louis said: "If the Catholics ever gain—which they assuredly will—an immense numerical majority, religious freedom in this country will be at an end." The Catholic Review stated: "Protestantism of every form has not, and never can have any right where Catholicity has triumphed; and therefore we lose the breath we expend in declaiming against bigotry and intolerance and in favor of religious liberty, or the right of any man to be of any religion, as best pleases him."

Father Hecker, in New York, said: "The Catholic church numbers one-third the American population, and if its membership shall increase for the next thirty years as it has for the thirty years past, in 1900 Rome will have a majority, and be bound to take this country and keep it. There is, ere long, to be a State religion in this country, and that State religion is to be Roman Catholic."

Father Hecker in the Catholic World of July, 1870, said: 1. "The American Catholic is to wield his vote for the purpose of securing Catholic ascendancy in this country," 2. "All legislation must be governed by the will of God unerringly indicated by the Pope." 3. "Education must be controlled by Catholic authorities; and under education the opinions of the individual and the utterances of the press are included, and many opinions are to be punished by the secular arm, under the authority of the Church, even to war and bloodshed."

The New York Tablet, the organ of Cardinal McCloskey, says in its issue of December 25th, 1869: "We hold education to be the function of the Church, not of the State, and in our case we do not and will not accept the State as educator."

The New York Freedman's Journal (Romanist) of December 11, 1868, speaking of our common schools, said: "Let the public school system go to where it came from—the devil. We want Christian schools—and the State cannot tell what Christianity is."

The Catholic Telegraph, organ of Archbishop Purcell, makes this bold declaration respecting the public schools: "It will be a glorious day in this country when, under the laws of justice and morality, our school system is shivered to pieces."

The significance of a recent article in the World is very strong and direct: "It is the duty," says the writer of an article on this subject in the September number of that periodical, "to oppose to the Pagan error that the State is master of education, the Christian truth that the Church alone is endowed with the power to educate the young."

This is practically the official utterances of Cardinal McClosky, whose special organ the Catholic World was Aug. 29, 1875.

Mark that expression of the Catholic World: "The church alone is endowed with the power to educate the young." Romanists are determined not only to "shiver to pieces" the free public school system, but after that is accomplished to establish in its place a Romish public school system.

The Catholic Telegraph, Bishop Purcell's official organ says: "The forty-seventh and forty-eighth articles of the Syllabus have authoritatively settled for all time that the exclusion of religious instruction from daily education is a damnable religious error, which Catholics cannot approve without denial of faith and commission of sin. Legislation does, therefore, as far as Catholics are concerned, interfere with the subject of religion. The State has no inherent authority to exclude religion from public education."

General Lafayette, himself a nominal Catholic, once said that "if ever the liberty of the United States was destroyed, it will be by Romish priests."

Father Stack, a Romish priest of Pennsylvania, amended the saying of Lafayette by adding that "if our liberty was ever destroyed, it will be by Romish bishops."

And who, in the light of these facts, can doubt it?—Rev. J. Lerch, in Evangelical Messenger.

The foregoing shows the only conversion of the world that can be expected before the coming of Christ. This "little horn" power is to prevail till the coming of "the Ancient of days," as declared by the prophet Daniel, Dan. 7: 21-22. M. G.

TURKISH ARMY.—The Turkish army is said to be composed of 285,000 men. The first class of reserves number 129,600; the second class, 100,000. Both classes are now called out. These make in all 514,600. The Grand Vizier recently observed, "It is a life and death struggle, and every available man will be hurried to the front."

Many years since, some of their prophets published a sheet containing a dark picture of the last days of Mohammedanism. It says, "The Turkish dynasty will end with a Sultan named Murad; that after thirty battles by land and sea, the Turks will go down." M. G.

CORRECTION.—In the notice of the dedication at Plains, Pa., it should read "Plains is in the great coal mining region in Wyoming Valley"; instead of Plains is the great coal mining region. Also read Wilksbarre, instead of Wilkbarre. M. G.

IMPENDING DOOM.

D. T. TAYLOR.

He must be blind indeed who does not see that great events impend in the East. They concern Pope and Turk, and may burst any day. It almost takes one's breath away to think of them. God's will alone holds them back. Unquestionably Mohammedan Turkey is the last desolator of the sacred mountains of the sanctuary land ere the set time to favor Zion arrives. Psa. 102: 13-16. At the end of the treading down, the Lord will appear in his glory. This latest North-King is exhibiting his devilism, his abyss-begotten origin. Rev. 9: 11.

Think of sixty thousand old men, women, and children massacred! It makes one shrink with horror. We have had no such martyrdoms of a christian people, since more than a century ago. The nations are on fire with anger about it. Surely the cup of this blood thirsty, lustful people must be full, and her doom near. A thrill of indignation fills the world to-day. But "he shall come to his end," Dan. 11: 45, is no mere decree of the world-powers, it is the mandate of the King of kings. "Moreover, at that time shall rise up Michael," is Winkle's translation of the next verse of Daniel. It connects the "end" foretold with angelic interposition. Let the arch-angel arise. The growing earth the Lord and his hosts. The universal madness now seen, the jealous dread and hate among the nations, are foretold. Rev. 11: 18.

It may be as it is now feared, that the Turk's final, utter extirpation of "many" is not fully accomplished. Tidings of blood and death, such as will make men's ears tingle, may yet be borne on the wires that gird the flow of the sea. The signs are ominous. Things cannot remain as they are. Reformation is not foretold, and the shivering blow must soon be struck. What a wonder that Jehovah does not speedily let drop the bolts of his wrath on the heads of the desolators of the earth! O; it is sublime to live and see these last tremendous days! Assuredly,

"We are living, we are dwelling
In a grand and awful time!"

The christian can say with Luther, "Let Him come with his last judgment; I will stretch out my neck, the thunder shall burst forth, and I shall be at rest." Amen.—Bible Echo.

STAND FOR THE TRUTH.

GEO. A. STREETER.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—In reading Bro. Munger's article in Crisis of Oct. 11th, my heart said, Amen. You may say, Why? Because of the truth uttered. I thank God for the Advent truth. It is the beacon light to the church of Christ.

Bro. Munger cites us back to Bro. Miller's day, when he set the ball rolling anew in this part of the land. I find that prior to that time the idea of Jesus' second coming had been lying in a dormant state in the church. Through Bro. Miller it was revived. When God led the Israelites out of bondage he established the passover as a memorial feast, to be kept in honor of his lead ing them out of bondage. This was to be observed in all coming time by them as a people. Every one that was born on the way to Canaan had to accept it, and in do ing so it of necessity took them back to that time.

So with us. Bro. Miller was in harmony with heaven's great plan and doing God's will, or he was not. It was "meat for the household" in due season, or it was not. Which will you have it? We, as individuals, are called upon to take a stand on one side or the other.

I believe Bro. Miller was doing God's righteous will. It does me good to hear those old veterans call up those days. I am glad to hear from Brn. Boutell, Bachelor, and Brewer. The Lord keep these veterans in the field, if it is his pleasure, until Jesus shall come. What if some that started have fallen to lusting after the things they had prior to their starting? What if some have come in among us and borne our name, and have grown proud, and gone off and connected themselves with those who disown this advent faith? What if some have gone into fanaticism? Shall all this prove a barrier? It is the same old story that Jesus told when upon earth: "If I go away, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also.' Glorious promise! Just as sweet to the children now as it was then. I stepped out long ago into this truth, and in doing so I did not embrace an appearance, but the real thing; and I expect to preach it as long as I have strength, or until Jesus comes; and also the great Bible truth of entire consecration to the Lord. I made a full consecration sixteen years ago, when I had the call to go and declare his Word. I then put my all on the altar; my talent, time, voice, and reputation. I am there now. I am willing to go anywhere in the vineyard, and to do any kind of work, only let me know that I am the Lord's, and all is well. "But I keep under my body and bring it into subjection, lest that by any means when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway." God bless you, my dear ones! Do be valiant! This is no time for amalgamation. No neutral ground here.

BRO. I. E. WELLS, of Ontario, N. Y., has been sick for some weeks, has lost his infant child, and is in deep affliction. He desires the prayers of God's people that he may recover his health again, so he can labor for Christ and feed the flock of God. M. B. MILES.

THE TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, held at its rooms, 144 Hanover Street, Boston, on the 5th of September, 1876, it was voted that the Society make diligent effort to raise the sum of TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS for the Tract Fund. This is one of the most important departments of our field of labor, and the Society intend to make more earnest efforts than ever before to publish the soul-stirring message of Christ's speedy second advent, and the precious truths connected therewith. To this end the Society solicits the aid of its friends and sympathizers, and hopes that donations to this object may be prompt, liberal and hearty.

CHRIST OUR HOPE.

H. W. SARGENT.

"When He who is our life shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory."—COL. 3: 4.

Glorious are the privileges and honors of God's people in this world, but greater honors await them in the world to come. For the enjoyment of future glory they are not, at present, prepared. They could not bear its manifestation. Divine grace is infused into their hearts in this world, and has its transforming and elevating power. But grace is only the bud of glory, to be expanded hereafter. When Christ comes he will perfect all that he has promised concerning his people. "When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory."

First our life: This character is frequently given to him. "In him was life, and the life was the light of the world." He is also called the Life-giver. He says, "I give unto them eternal life."

This character is represented figuratively. Christ is the head, believers are his body. Eph. 4: 15, 16. Also Col. 1: 18, which reads, "And he is the head of the body; the church." This teaches first, that Christ is the author of our spiritual life. The life of a sinner is carnal, worldly, wicked, and ends without hope. But Christ, by his Word and Spirit, regenerates the entire being. If we receive from him the spirit of regeneration, we are new creatures in Christ Jesus, we are begotten unto a lively hope; we have passed from death unto life; we are dead to sin, but alive unto God. The things we once loved we now hate.

Christ is the author of our justified life. This is stated in Acts 13: 38, 39. The apostle says, "Be it known unto you therefore, men and brethren, that through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins, and by him all that believe are justified from all things from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses." Hence we are freed from condemnation; and if our hearts condemn us not, then, brethren, we have peace through our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. But let us seek to be justified by Christ, and not by ourselves, nor yet by one another. Rom. 8, 1: "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." Also 5: 1, "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." He is their resurrection life. "Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." Also Romans 8: 11. "But if the Spirit of him that raised up Christ from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies, by his Spirit that dwelleth in you." How different, then, will the body be when fashioned like unto Christ's glorious body. Now our bodies are marred with sin, with mortality, with marks of decay; but in that eventful morning, this mortal will put on immortality; this corruptible will put on incorruption. Christ is the author of eternal life. Rom. 6: 23. "For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord." Brethren, this life is for all them that are among the well doers and the seekers for eternal life.

We will now notice the appearance of Christ to judge the world and glorify his people. This may be argued from reason, from the justice of God, from the unequal distribution of things. But the voice of the Word of life is sufficient. Enoch, the seventh from Adam, says, "Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints, to execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them, of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him." Jude 14: 15. Says Job, 19: 25, 26: "For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth. And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." Says the Revelator 1: 7, "Behold he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him; and they also that pierced him; and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him." Again 22: 7, "Behold I come quickly: blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book." And, "Behold I come quickly; and my reward is with me: to give every man according as his work shall be."

Yes, brethren, he is coming. But O how unlike his first advent! He will come in shining apparel, in great glory, in the greatness of his strength, to be the light of his people in dazzling splendor. Not only so, but our Christ will account it in honor, when he appears in glory, to have all his redeemed with him.

It will be the day for the manifestation of the sons of God. They shall come from the East, West, North, and South, from Africa's sun and Lapland's snow, an innumerable company of all ranks and conditions; the rich, the poor, the bond, the free, the high and low, all that have accepted Christ as their Life-giver and Savior, from the King to the beggar, will appear with him in glory. And they will illustrate the power of his grace, the efficacy of his blood, and the greatness and glory of his salvation. "He shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe." They shall appear in his glorious likeness.

Their bodies shall be fashioned like unto Christ's glorious body. They will appear with him in glory as the participant in his honor, joy and felicity. Whatever gladdens him will gladden them. Then will he realize "the joy set before him." They will appear with him in glory publicly, before angels, demons and mankind, to receive the approval and the reward of his grace, and to inherit the kingdom prepared for them from the foundation of the world. And he will say unto them, "Enter into the joys of thy Lord." They shall appear with him in glory, while sinners shall be clothed with shame and everlasting contempt, and will call for rocks and mountains to fall on them, and hide them from the face of Him that sitteth upon the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb; for the great day of his wrath is come, and who will be able to stand.

AN APPEAL.

In view of our critical condition, and after consulting a goodly number of brethren from different parts of the State, I am persuaded to make this appeal.

For a few years past a majority of the Advent people of Iowa have been conscious of a dangerous condition of the church, and feel very sensibly that the cause is suffering, and like one of old they cry, "Lord, what shall we do to be saved? Lack of interest in our meetings, want of harmony among brethren, have caused some to become disheartened, and they are tempted to retire from the work.

Let us meet again on common ground, put our shoulder to the wheel, and all lift together, and the car of salvation will move again.

O for the gatherings of twenty years ago, when souls were converted and angels rejoiced, when the Spirit of Christ was the test of fellowship and hobbies were left at home! Come brethren, from far and near, and unfurl to the breeze the gospel banner. Let us devise some means of relief. Come and give us your ideas. Come, and thus say that your hearts are with the cause of Christ. Come filled with the Spirit, and you will surely do good. Come, and I trust we shall find some way to unite our efforts, revive the cause, and thus God be glorified. Let every one interested be present. Let every church be well represented by as many as can possibly come, that we may work for the good of all.

This state of affairs and the love of the cause of Christ has induced a few of us to make an effort toward gospel progress. We wish as lay members, to hold a State Convention, and at that Convention select a committee of devout men, from different parts of the State,—men who will act for the church and its interests.

This call is made especially to the laity, but the invitation extends to all who love the Lord. The harvest is ripe, laborers few, and time is short. The trump of God and the voice of the archangel is next in order. What we find to do let us do quickly.

In accordance with the wishes and best judgment of the brethren, this Convention will be held at Raymond, Blackhawk Co., Iowa, commencing in the 24th of Nov., 1876, and continue as long as may be profitable. This place being easily accessible from all parts of the State, we expect a general gathering, and a meeting that will result in great good.

USEFUL HINTS ON PREACHING.

Mr. Spurgeon was present at the laying of the foundation of Ned Wright's new hall in South London recently, and gave an address in which he said: "I deny altogether that the working classes are less frequent in their attendance at the house of God than any other class. The main portion of my congregation are working people, though some persons cannot believe it, because they are so respectably dressed. I know there are very many thousands of people living in the suburbs round London, having large incomes and fine houses, who do not attend church any more than many of the working people do.

Let us look at the objections people urge to going out on Sunday. Some say their clothes are not good enough, but they are good enough if they have been paid for. Then you find people who say they don't go. because of the heat and the bad air. To all sextons and chapel keepers I would give this wrinkle—open your windows often.

I often preach in country chapels where the people get packed like herrings in a barrel, and I have tried to get the windows opened, but they wouldn't, for they never had been opened. I went into one of these places once, and it was so hot that I asked every gentleman near a window to smash a pane or two. There was soon a grand smash, but then the beautiful fresh air streamed in. I paid the bill afterwards like an honest man; but it was much better to do that than bear the cruelty of preaching in such an atmosphere, or forcing people to listen when they were in an atmosphere which was intensely oppressive.

Some people say, too, that they do not go to the house of God because they cannot understand what is said. I have often wished that if men have anything to say worth being heard, they would speak out. Preachers should use plain language.

Some men occasionally stay away from communion because their wives have a large little family, and these poor women cannot leave the children. I should like to whisper in the ears of some christian young women that they might go and take care of the children for a Sunday, and let the mother get out. As for the husbands, I don't think they always take their fair turn with their wives, for I see some christian men out on Sunday whose wives never get out for a month together. I think, too, that people have a good deal to do with the filling of the churches, and that they might bring friends when they can."—Christian Herald.

Correspondence.

From A. C. Hawes.

Dear ones in Jesus:—I so love to read the testimonies for the dear Savior written by those who love him, and published in the Crisis, that I feel prompted to add my feeble testimony to the list.

Jesus only knows how often I long to meet you face to face again. Some of you I saw at the Springfield campmeeting, and I was greatly rejoiced to take those of like precious faith by the hand, and hear voices that I may never hear again testify to the love of Jesus. Oh! how I long for the great meeting to come, when we shall not only see those dear ones we loved in this life, but we shall see the dear Savior whom we all love, and that will be better than all of our meetings here, for it will never break up.

When we meet together in such meetings as the one at Springfield, some of us, like Peter, wish we could stay always, but we have to part. Our Father thinks it best; and so we comfort ourselves with the thought that in "the sweet bye and bye" we shall all meet each other on that "beautiful shore."

Cheer up then, dear friends, and let us always be faithful to each other, and to our blessed Master, for he is soon coming to crown the faithful with immortal beauty and eternal life. Then we shall dwell forever with him in our eternal home.

There are but very few of like precious faith in this place, though I hope there are many who will be saved. I often wish that some one would come and preach those precious truths to the people here that I heard at Springfield. There is no Advent preaching nearer than ten miles, I think, and we cannot attend there very often, so we have to be content with what we have at home.

It is hard to feel left, as it were, alone to battle with error all around, but I am willing to trust Jesus for all, and through all, for I know that his grace is sufficient for me. I desire your prayers that I may be faithful to the the end, and finally meet you in the coming kingdom where there will be no parting, no dying, no weeping; but all will be peace, love and joy forever. May God bless you all, dear friends, wherever you are, is the prayer of your brother in Christ.

Enfield, Mass.

From Bro. B. Spaulding.

Dear Bro. Editor:—I am here at Chester, Vt. I am doing my usual work, visiting, exhorting, comforting, instructing and giving lectures as I have opportunity.

I have been at Keene, N. H., and at the cheese factory, Chester, Vt., and in another neighborhood, and I have had very interesting meetings, good attendance, good order and attentive hearing. My health and spirits are good.

Oct. 25th. I am now in Andover, and have some appointments here. I have had very interesting meetings and visits in Chester and North Springfield. I am nearly seventy-seven years old, and I have many of the infirmities of age upon me, yet I feel as though I wanted to do a little more in this blessed cause. I have been grieved to see so many divisions and contentions among our Advent brethren. It does seem to me, that there ought not to be so much contention about outside questions, such as age to come, seventh day Sabbath, non-resurrection of the wicked, the thousand years in the past, and trine baptism. I claim the right to think for myself, and I allow others the same right. Salvation does not depend upon our theories. It depends upon our repentance and faith in Jesus Christ. A faith that will affect the life, work by love, purify the heart and overcome the world. Such a faith will bring salvation, though one may be imperfect in knowledge and may have errors.

Love each other with pure hearts, be pitiful, be kind and courteous, and God will bless you. Overlook each other's imperfections, and walk together as heirs of the grace of life, looking for and expecting Jesus' coming. Keep your hearts in order and wedding garments on as servants waiting for the coming of their Lord.

Obituaries.

BRYANT. In Boston, Mass., Oct. 22d, 1876, of consumption, James M. Bryant, aged fifty-six years and four months.

Bro. Bryant will be remembered by many in Boston and vicinity as an earnest worker in prayer and conference meetings, where his voice was heard glorifying God's grace in his own redemption from sin and moral degredation, and recommending it to others. He built on the foundation—Jesus Christ, and he and all who build on this foundation will receive a reward for all the good they have done, with due allowance for any imperfection that clings to us here. His funeral was attended at his house, 212 Endicott St., by Elder Davis, Missionary 102 Commercial Street. The friends who contributed towards his funeral expenses receive the thanks of those who became responsible therefor. WM. HOBBS.

HOLMES. In Bucksport, Me., Oct. 15th, 1876, Mrs. Sarah P. Holmes, aged fifty-eight years.

Funeral sermon by the writer from Matt. 5: 4, "Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted." A kind neighbor, a loving and faithful mother has fallen asleep in joyful hope. F. A. BAKER.

ROBERTS. In Salisbury, N. H., Sr. Hannah Roberts, aged about seventy years.

There are several children left to mourn. May they all live so as to meet her in the kingdom of God when Jesus comes. Words of comfort by the writer. SIMEON ROBY.

TEFFT. My dear mother, Sarah Tefft, died in North Adams, Mass., Aug. 15th, 1876, aged ninety years.

Mother retained her mental powers in a remarkable manner. She has gone to the grave like a shock of corn fully prepared for the harvest. Dear mother experienced religion at the early age of seventeen years, and was a member of the Baptist Church for seventy-three years; but of late she had sympathized with us in believing that the coming of Jesus was very near, and she hoped to live to see him come in the clouds of heaven. But she sleeps, and we are left to mourn, but not as those that have no hope. Her funeral was attended at the Baptist church, Rev. Dr. Annable officiating. MRS. O. A. HILL.

Sister Page had for many years been a consistent follower of the Lord Jesus Christ, and a firm believer in his speedy and glorious return to earth; and after enduring a painful sickness she fell asleep in Jesus, in full assurance of soon coming up to die no more. She leaves devoted children, and may the Lord comfort and sustain them in their deep affliction. Services by the writer. T. E. LANG.

STEWART. In Exeter, N. H., Oct. 25th, 1876, of diptheria, Mabel Alma, aged one year and nine days, daughter of Eld. Wm. C. and Sarah E. Stewart.

A tide of affliction seems to have set against our brother and his household. His three surviving children are suffering from the same fearful disease, and himself prostrated from repeated hemorrhages (vocal). Pray for him and his.

"Since thy Father's arm sustains thee,
Peaceful be!
When a chastening hand restrains thee,
It is He!
Know his love in full completeness
Fills the measure of thy weakness;
If he wound thy spirit sore,
Trust him more." E. OWEN.

THURSTON. In Brentwood, N. H., Oct. 23d, 1876, Eddie S., aged three years and seven months, only child of Bro. and Sr. N. K. and Anna R. Thurston.

That fearful scourge diptheria, after four days of suffering, thus puts out the light of another dwelling.

"To his own thy Savior giveth
Daily strength;
To each trembling soul that liveth,
Peace at length.
Weakest lambs have largest share
Of this tender Shepherd's care;
Ask him not then when? or how?
Only bow." E. OWEN.

JOYCE. In Rockport, Me., Aug. 12th, 1876, Sr. Matilda Joyce, aged seventy-four years.

Sister Joyce was a faithful christian from early life, as we learn from friends who knew her. In 1843 she fell in love with the soon coming of the Just One, and that faith was a comfort to her all through the changing scenes of this life, and gave her full assurance of eternal life through the resurrection of the dead. She rests in hope. A. H. WALKER.

MERRILL. In Kennebunk, Oct. 7th, 1876, Mary Merrill, aged seventy-two years.

Our sister was of a modest, retiring disposition, but a lover of hospitality, and for many years feared the Lord. She leaves a large circle of friends to mourn, but not without hope, for we expect to see her again when the jewels of our Master are made up. W. H. MITCHELL.

AMES. In Portland, Me., Oct. 22d, 1876, Annie F., adopted daughter of Asa L. and Mary E. Ames, aged twelve years, six months.

"It is well with the child." May the grace of Him who will soon bring little Annie from "the land of the enemy," rest upon all who mourn her loss. R. R. YORK.

WILLIS. In Brewer, Me., Sept. 26th, 1876, of diptheria, Henry Willis, only son of Willis and Jennie Newcomb, aged four years and six months.

Sermon by the writer from John 11: 35, "I am the resurrection and the life." F. A. BAKER.

FOREIGN NEWS.

London, Nov. 1. The following telegram has been received at the Japanese Embassy, some portions of which are unintelligible to the Embassy itself, but it indicates that serious disturbances have occurred:

"The Kumamotto Shisjokus (Sameure class) revolted on the night of the 23d of October, killing many officials. They were soon subdued. The imperial troops also fought and overcame the Akitsouki Shisjokus near Kokoura. Hundreds surrendered. The Yamagutsi Shisjokus rose and escaped. Orders were issued for their arrest."

DOMESTIC NEWS.

New York, Oct. 31. Jamaica dates of the 19th state that at the islands of St. Martin, St. Barts and Arguilla, much damage has been done by gales.

At the former several vessels stranded, one schooner, the Mott Bedell, sunk at her moorings, the crew escaping on shore.

Great havoc is reported, especially in the French quarter. As many as 215 houses were destroyed in that part alone.

At St. Barts and Arguilla the destruction of property was great and much distress prevails among the poor. At St. Barts some forty houses were blown down and 160 injured.

A severe cyclone passed over the Central American States on the 3d and 4th of Oct, destroying about seven hundred houses and $5,000,000 worth of property.

The increase of crime in New England, in spite of all our churches and school-houses, our circulating libraries and Sunday schools, our revival meetings and temperance societies, is somewhat alarming.—Boston Herald

There was a shocking railway collision near Goldsboro', Pa., yesterday, on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railway. A coal train telescoped two passenger cars, killing five persons and wounding thirteen.

Slade, the American Spiritualist, who has been before the London Police Court for some time, was yesterday sentenced to the House of Correction at hard labor for three months as a vagrant. He appealed and is out on bail.

A disastrous rain storm commenced at Orleans, Ky., last Saturday and continued until Monday, flooding the town and drowning horses, cattle, etc, and destroying large quantities of household effects. The loss will amount to $100,000.

TWO NEW TRACTS.

We have just published two new Tracts.

"THE DIVINE ARTILLERY."

BY D. T. TAYLOR.

This is a valuable tract, addressed to theologians and thinkers, critics, Bible students and ministers, concerning what the Lord has furnished to be preached to sinners as motives and inducements to repentance, and to saints to induce activity and endurance. The Bible hope is clearly and forcibly stated. Price 50 cts. per one hundred, or 15 cts. per dozen by mail.

"THE FEARFUL OUTLOOK."

BY I. C. WELLCOME.

This attempts to show those who are anxious, perplexed and fearful about what is coming on the earth, that the wars and preparations of the last thirty years, the present distress of nations, and struggle with Popery and Turkey, will result in our Lord's return and the destruction of the nations. This will be read by all. Second edition enlarged. Price $1.50 per hundred, or 30 cts. per dozen, by mail.

Address I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

☞ For sale as above at the Crisis Office.

THE BIBLE BANNER.

This is a large, illustrated, monthly paper, devoted to a critical exposition of Bible Truth and an earnest advocacy of Bible Salvation. It is the aim of the publishers and editors to make it liberal in spirit, vigorous in tone, sound in theology, free from hobbies, and radical in maintaining a positive and saving religion. The Banner is now edited by A. A. Phelps, Wm. Sheldon, and D. T. Taylor. Terms: One Dollar a year, strictly in advance. Subscriptions may begin with any month. Liberal terms to agents. Sample copy free. Address Bible Banner, Vineland, N. J.

Notices.

South Boston.

The brethren in South Boston, believing in the near coming of Jesus and kindred truths, desiring to let their light shine, have leased a Hall corner of Dorchester and National Streets (close by Broadway), where they mean to have "the gospel of the kingdom" preached. They do not mean to ride, or allow hobby riding, but desire a place where the Lord's coming may be kept before the people. They desire the prayers and cooperation of all the lovers of the truth in Boston. Where there are more than three hundred thousand souls, there ought to be a place where those of "like precious faith" can meet together, and where these truths can be proclaimed unmixed with the traditions of men. Pray for this meeting. For the brethren, A. P. MOORE.

NOTICE.—The Philadelphia Advent Christian Conference will hold its semi-annual session in Philadelphia, Pa, at the Advent Christian Church, Eighth Street, above Noble, commencing Thursday evening, Nov. 23d, and continue over the following Sabbath. It is earnestly requested that all preachers and churches within the limits of this Conference will be represented at these meetings, either personally, by letter, or delegates. We want to hear from all, that we may know what is being done for the spread of gospel truth. All letters of communication to be addressed to Edwin King, 1716 Francis Street.

WM. ASHMAN, President.
E. KING, Secretary.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.—The Fourth Meeting of the New Hampshire A. C. Conference will be held with the Church in Rye, N. H., commencing Thursday, Nov. 23d, 1½ P. M., and hold over Sunday, Nov. 26th. We hope there will be a general gathering in the name of the Lord, therefore we extend a cordial invitation to all, both ministers and people, to come with the whole armor on to work with the Lord.

Com: N. Wheeler, C. E. Hurd, C. H. Fletcher.

NOTICE.—The next meeting of the East Maine Second Advent Christian Missionary Association, for gospel labor, will be held with the church at Rockland, commencing Nov. 16th, at 7 o'clock P. M., and hold over Sunday, and as much longer as thought best. Let preachers and others come prepared to work for the salvation of sinners. Call on A. C. Worth and Stephen Clark.

J. CARR, for the Committee.

NOTICE.—At the last annual meeting of the Vermont Conference, a resolution was passed to encourage the churches to take up collections once in four weeks to aid the State Missionary work. Let this work be attended to.

H. B. QUIMBY, Recorder.

NOTICE.—A protracted meeting will commence at Water Village, N. H., Thursday evening, Nov. 23d, and continue as long as may seem duty. Brn. G. F. Haines and M. Stevens are expected to be present and assist in preaching the Word. Brethren and sisters from abroad will be heartily welcomed. Ample provision will be made for man and beast. C. H. SWEET.

NOTICE.—There will be a meeting at North Hermon, Me., in the old meeting-house, commencing Nov. 9th, at two o'clock P. M., and hold as long as the Lord directs. May the Lord send help to this meeting such as is needed.

JOHN F. EMERSON, West Levant, Me.

CONFERENCE.—The Third Quarterly Meeting of the A. C. Church, known as the Washington County Conference, is hereby called to meet with the Church at Sherman Centre, Washington Co., Kansas, on Friday evening, Dec. 1st, at 6 30 P. M., and hold over Sunday. We expect a goodly number of preaching brethren to be present. There will be business of importance to transact, and it is hoped every church will be represented by properly accredited delegates. Homes will be provided for all who come. Sherman is in south side of county. J. W. HAYWORTH, Pres.

NOTICE.—The next Quarterly session of the Middle District of the Massachusett's Conference will be holden with the church at Clinton, Mass., commencing Wednesday evening, Nov. 8th, and continue over the following Sabbath. We earnestly desire that the preaching brethren of the District may be present to labor for the perishing. Also we desire that a goodly number from all the churches be at this meeting, especially the spiritual portion, that good may be done in the name of the Holy One. H. H. TUCKER, Com.

P. S. The church are hoping to see many of the brethren and sisters scattered abroad at this meeting. Come and make their hearts glad by your presence, exhortations, prayers, and labor of love. Provision will be made for all. Whosoever will let him come; and you that cannot come, pray that the blessing of the Lord may attend.

For the church, H. H. TUCKER.

NOTICE.—There will be a Protracted Meeting in Haverbill, N. H., at the Advent Church, commencing Saturday evening, Nov. 25th, and hold as the interest demands.

G. M. LITTLE.
D. W. DAVIS.

NOTICE.—There will be a Protracted Meeting at Rome, Me. (Town House), commencing Nov. 9th, and hold over the following Sunday.

F. E. BLAISDELL. A. R. STURTEVANT.

NOTICE.—There will be a meeting of days, commencing Wednesday evening, Nov. 15th, at Newark, Vt. I. K. LOMBARD. J. G. SMITH.

Attention All, Please!

I have a proposal to make. Who will help in this matter? Several important facts have come to my knowledge, which leads me to make the following offer. With gratitude to God I learn that the "History of the Second Advent Message" has been put into several college and seminary libraries, where the results are clearly manifest in awakening some of the "faculty" and students to investigate and become especially interested in the doctrine of Christ's coming and kindred truths. They express surprise that such an amount of mission work has been done in this form, and such men of known ability and piety engaged in it while they were ignorant of it. It has also fallen into the hands of several ministers of different churches, where the results are the same. I am convinced that much good can be done by awakening such men as stand in the front of society. I want to sacrifice some to help it along. It is now the special season to make gifts to friends for two months to come. The retail price of the History is $3.50. Postage is now 20 cts. on each. The actual cost of the book to me in publishing was $3.00 each. I now offer one hundred copies of it to be ordered before Jan. 1st, 1877, to any persons who will order to give to libraries of Institutions, or other public libraries, or who will keep them to lend to ministers and other readers, or who will give them to ministers, for $2 50 each, postpaid. No others should expect them at this price, a it is 70 cts. less than cost on each. Address all such orders to I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

A New Edition.

The first edition of "Berean's Casket" is exhausted. A new edition, revised and improved, is now published on excellent paper, and beautifully bound in cloth, ready for all who wish such a help in the study of the Scriptures. Price $2.00. In leather, 2.50. Sold at this office, and by the author, I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

NOTICE.—Preaching brethren wishing to preach for the First Christian Advent meeting in Dover, N. H., will please correspond with the following committee,

JOHN W. FELKER.
H. S. PINKHAM.

ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

This is an ably conducted weekly paper, edited by Elder Frank Burr, and published under the auspices of the Western A. C. Publishing Society, at gives prominence to the personal coming of Christ, the resurrection of the dead, the final destruction of sinners, and the eternal salvation of saints on the renovated earth. It also insists on a holy life as essential to an admittance into the coming kingdom. $2.20 a year. Address Advent Christian Times, 91 South Green St., Chicago, Ill.

The World's Crisis and Adv. Chris. Times sent postpaid to subscribers who will take both, at the reduced rate of $4.00 per year in advance for both papers. Address World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Appointments

☞ APPOINTMENTS MUST BE RECEIVED AS EARLY AS TUESDAY MORNING (as our paper goes to press about noon) to insure insertion for the coming week.

☞ The following RESOLUTION was passed at the late meeting of the A. C. P. Society:—

"RESOLVED, That no appointments be published in the CRISIS henceforth for persons unknown to the Editorial Board (by which is understood the Editors, Editorial Committee, and Business Agent), unless satisfactory reference shall be given."

The Committee appointed by the Adv. Chris. Association, at its last Annual Meeting, to advise with the Editorial Board "in relation to the publication in the World's Crisis of the appointments of men unworthy of recognition as preachers," having attended to the duty assigned them, recommended, and the Editorial Board have adopted, and ordered to be published, the following resolution:—

"RESOLVED, That when the Editorial Board is properly notified by any of our Churches, or Ministers, or responsible persons, by a written allegation that a certain minister, or ministers, lack moral character, that they be instructed to notify such minister, or ministers, of the information received as a reason for withholding their appointments till after a proper trial and acquittal."

All communications in relation to this matter should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board—GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass.

"THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY," 144 HANOVER STREET.

Persons purchasing from the following list, help in so doing to sustain the English Repository.

BIBLICAL PSYCHOLOGY. Written by an English Lawyer now deceased. An almost incomparable book on the nature of Man and his state in death. Our Preachers should secure it. Only a small remnant left. Published at $5.25; reduced to $2 50; postage 16c.

EARNEST WORDS FOR HONEST SKEPTICS. By the author of "Bible Triumphant." If possible, it even excels that work. Very interesting. 75 cts; postage 5c.

DURATION AND NATURE OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT. Fifth edition. By Rev H. Constable, M. A., late Prebendary of Cork, Ireland. A standard book. $1; postage 8c.

HADES, OR THE INTERMEDIATE STATE OF MAN. Second edition. 367 pages. Also a standard work. It contains vastly more than the first edition. $1 25; postage 7c.

RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS—the "all things spoken of by the Prophets who have been since the world began." Not restoration of the wicked. A capital book to read, or give away. A good supply is on hand for this purpose. 16 cts; postage 2c.

DISCUSSION ON THE STATE OF MAN IN DEATH. An interesting debate, with double propositions, and affirmations as well as negatives on both sides Held between Bro. W. Kellaway and a Congregational minister. Useful to scatter. Good supply. Cloth 50 cts., postage 5c; paper cover 30 cts, postage 3c.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a Reply to an Infidel Work entitled "144 Self-Contradictions of the Bible." Has sold long, is well known, and still much called for. Needs no recommendation. Cloth 70 cts., postage 4c; paper cover 50 cts, postage 3c.

REPORT OF LARGE CONDITIONAL IMMORTALITY MEETING held in London May 15th, 1876. Only a few copies. 25 cts; postage 2c.

HELL ACCORDING TO SCRIPTURE. By S. F. Pells. With Notes by W. Kellaway. For thoughtful readers. A good supply. 10 cts; postage 1c.

HOPE OF LIFE ETERNAL. By G. Greenwell, Ph. D. 25 cts; postage 2c.

CATHOLIC APOSTOLIC CHURCH (Irvingism): Its Pretensions and Claims considered in connection with the facts of its history, and the teaching of the New Testament and early Christian Antiquity. Cloth limp, 65 cts.

REASONS why all Christians should read God's written Word in Greek. 25 cts.

SPUR AND ENCOURAGEMENT to the Study of the Greek of the New Testament. 18 cts.

CHRISTIANITY, and its Relation to Judaism. By G. Greenwell, Ph. D. 25 cts.

Tracts.

We have for some time been unable to supply orders for some of the following Tracts, which are so well suited for plentiful distribution; but have now a large quantity on hand. It will be seen too that there are many new ones in the list.

A VERY OLD SERMON, preached in England fifteen hundred years ago. It teaches that we go to Christ "after our resurrection." Old style of spelling. Three copies, postpaid, 10 cts.

THE NEW JERUSALEM: Poetry, a Criticism, and Scripture. By W. Kellaway. Envelope size. Enamelled wrapper. Six for 25 cts.

"THY KINGDOM COME!" or, the Kingdom of God not yet established on the Earth. By W. Kellaway. Same style as the foregoing. Six for 25 cts.

THE DEEP IMPORTANCE OF THE RE-STANDING from the Dead. By R. Ashcroft, Congregational Minister, England. Six copies for 40 cts.

CHAOS, KOSMOS, THE KINGDOM OF DARKNESS and the Kingdom of God. By E White, M. A. Our Earth's history from beginning to end. 5 cts.; postage per dozen 3c.

WHO ART THOU THAT JUDGEST? A Letter addressed to one, but applicable to many. By Joseph Stratford, Minister of the Gospel. A Rebuke with Doctrine of such as are cruel in their treatment of Christians holding life in Jesus. 5 cts.; postage per dozen 3c.

SCRIPTURE DOCTRINE OF A FUTURE LIFE. By W. Leask, D. D. 12 copies for 50 cts.

LIFE EVERLASTING. By W. Leask, D. D. 12 copies for 25 cts.

DIALOGUE between a Predestinarian and his Friend. A lot of valuable extracts. 12 copies for 25 cts.

LIFE AND DEATH.—Extract from Archbishop Whateley's "Future Life." 20 copies for 25 cts.

IMMORTALITY. Extracts from numerous authors on Life and Immortality by the Lord Christ. By H. Constable, M. A. Enlarged by Bro. W. Kellaway. 20 copies for 25 cts.

IMMORTALITY ONLY IN CHRIST. A concise presentation of the truth stated in its title, in twenty-three paragraphs and extracts from Fathers. 20 copies for 25 cts.

THE UNDESIRABLENESS OF DEATH. By D. T. Taylor. With "Death and Immortality," by W. Kellaway. 20 copies for 25 cts.

The four Tracts immediately preceding are very valuable, and we have some thousands in hand to meet demands.

Business.
